ANDREW MELLON SENDS CHECK TO JAMES COUZENS

Public Pays in Tax Feud Windup.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 8.—[Special.]—What it cost the taxpayers of the United States for ringside seats at the heavyweight championship tongue lashing bout between Battling Jim Couzens and Kid Andy Mellon, both members of the Multi-Millionaires' club, back in 1925 became known today. It was a trifle over $3,000,000.

With the decision of the board of tax appeals against it, the treasury abandoned its fight to collect $30,000,000 in additional taxes from Senator James Couzens [Rep., Mich.], and others on the sale of their minority Ford Motor company stock to Henry Ford in 1919, and complied with that part of the decision which held that in reality these minority stockholders were entitled to a refund from the government of $3,000,000 in profits taxes that had been exacted from them.

Couzens Gets a Check.

Senator Couzens, whose wealth is estimated at $40,000,000 or more, on opening his mail this morning found a government check for $989,883, his share of the $3,000,000 refund. The check was signed on behalf of the government by Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon, reputed to be the third richest man in the world, the other two being Henry Ford, who bought Senator Couzens out, and John D. Rockefeller, whose oil makes the Ford buzz wagons buzz.

Thus ended the famous controversy between Senator Couzens and Mr. Mellon, with complete victory for Mr. Couzens and with the taxpayers footing the bill.

The altercation between the two millionaires over Mellon's administration of the income tax law arose not long after Couzens entered the senate in 1922. Couzens got himself appointed to the senate finance committee, and forthwith began prying into the secrets of Uncle Sam's publicans.

Foments Senate Inquiry.

He professed to be shocked by what he discovered, and as a result the senate ordered an investigation. The inquiry was conducted by a subcommittee of the finance committee, with Senator Couzens chairman.

For several months the committee investigated the Mellon administration of the income tax law. The committee discovered that a number of Mellon corporations had received enormous tax refunds and had been allowed extraordinary deductions and other favorable treatment. Mellon, in defense, asserted that these dispensations had been granted by the outgoing Wilson administration just before he came into office in March of 1921.

The Couzens committee made a report which raked the Mellon tax administration fore and aft. It charged that the Mellon régime reeked with special privilege for rich and influential tax payers. Couzens assailed the Mellon tax reduction proposals as unduly discriminatory in favor of the rich and against the poor. Mellon defended himself with spirit. Soon the altercation descended to personalities. By the spring of 1925 Couzens and Mellon were firing broadsides at each other almost daily.

Tax Suit Follows.

Suddenly Mellon struck Couzens a body blow. He caused the treasury department to demand $30,000,000 additional taxes from Couzens and the other former Ford minority stockholders. The demand made on Couzens alone was for the payment of $11,000,000.

Senator Couzens asserted and Secretary Mellon denied that the sudden action was in retaliation for the attacks the Michigan senator had made on the Mellon administration. The ground for the charge was that the information upon which the treasury sought to collect the $30,000,000 additional taxes had been in its possession for four years, but was not made use of until Couzens had roused Mellon's anger by his repeated attacks.

Couzens and his associates sold their minority stock to Ford in 1919. They paid profits taxes to the government computed on the basis of a valuation of the Ford stock at $9,000 a share in 1913. That valuation was fixed by Daniel C. Roper, commissioner of internal revenue at the time.

Transaction Is Questioned.

In 1921, shortly after the Harding administration came in, and again in 1922 memoranda were filed with the treasury department by interested parties in which the claim was set up

YOUNG INTERNE GIVES UP LIFE IN VAIN FOR CHILD

Dr. Sergius Felix Arquin, 25 years old, interne at the county hospital, died yesterday afternoon after the medical chiefs of the hospital had fought for more than an hour in an effort to save his life.

Dr. Arquin, who began his interneship at the first of the year, had been placed in charge of the department of contagious diseases a week ago. At that time there were seven cases of spinal meningitis in the ward. On Tuesday 6 year old Joseph Poskanka, 5445 South Justine avenue, was admitted as a charity patient. Dr. Arquin administered anti-meningicoccus serum, but the child died. On Thursday evening Dr. Arquin became feverish. He continued at his duties on Friday, but complained of a sore throat and his case was diagnosed as influenza.

Yesterday his condition was pronounced critical and Dr. Frederick Tice, chief of the hospital's medical staff, summoned three colleagues for consultation. Throughout the morning they treated him for influenza, but at 2 p. m. a test of the spinal fluid showed he was suffering from meningitis, contracted, it was believed, while injecting serum into the child. An hour later Dr. Arquin was dead, despite double serum injections.

Dr. Arquin had been married only four months. He was graduated from the University of Illinois college of medicine in 1927 and was a member of Alpha Omega Alpha, honorary medical fraternity, and of Sigma Psi, honorary society for those distinguished in research work. His parents live at 2729 Hirsch boulevard.

King's Health "Much Safer;" No Operation

BULLETIN.

LONDON, Sunday, Dec. 9.—(U. P.)—It was learned at Buckingham palace that the king "was resting quietly" at 2 a. m. today.

LONDON, Dec. 8.—(AP)—A most encouraging statement was issued semi-officially tonight at Buckingham palace on the condition of King George. It was said that his majesty was certainly in a safer position than he had been a week ago. The statement read:

"The king has been on the upward grade today after a slightly downward turn yesterday. Progress is being made, but it is necessarily a slow and laborious progress. During the last week there was great anxiety due to the fact that the infection involved the whole system. Now the physicians are dealing with a localized infection.

"At the same time, the position is still one of difficulty because the king has been ill for nearly three weeks and his recuperative powers, therefore, are less strong than they were.

Admits Life Was in Danger.

"During his long illness the life of the king has been at times in danger, but his majesty is certainly in a safer position than he was a week ago, because the doctors are dealing with a local rather than a general infection involving the whole body.

"There must be an ebb and flow in an illness of this kind, which must necessarily be prolonged and tedious. In the last 24 hours there has been more flow than ebb. Both the needle exploration and X-ray examination on Friday showed that there was no appreciable pleural effusion and, therefore, there is no object in an operation. The five doctors who signed tonight's bulletin were in consultation for more than 90 minutes. Two bulletins will be issued tomorrow."

Passes Quiet Day.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Dec. 8.—Tonight's official bulletin from Buckingham palace, issued at 8:30 p. m., read:

"The king has passed a quiet day, with some sleep. The raised temperature persists because the inflammation of the lung must of necessity be slow in its progress toward repair."

Considerable gratification is felt by the fact that in recent bulletins no mention was made of heart trouble, which last week caused considerable anxiety. This is taken to indicate that the heart is no longer giving trouble.

Prince of Wales Sails for Italy.

PORT SAID, Egypt, Dec. 8.—[U. P.]—The cruiser Enterprise sailed for Brindisi, Italy, at 11:20 p. m., carrying the prince of Wales on his record-breaking trip home from Africa. The prince had stopped briefly in Cairo and then was taken by special train to Port Said. From Brindisi the prince will speed across Europe on a special express, with all traffic cleared in front of it. The latest information was that the prince would arrive in London about 10 a. m. Wednesday.

MR. KELLY GOES COASTING WITH WAYWARD STEER

When Sergt. Michael Conway and his detective bureau squad saw James Kelly, 3522 Emerald avenue, coasting on the seat of his trousers in South Morgan street at West 35th street yesterday, they went to his assistance. Kelly was holding to the end of a lasso, thrown around the neck of a steer which had escaped from the Illinois Packing company, 911 West 37th place.

Patrolman Edward Canaven and Frank Greene seized the rope and Kelly, tired of acting as a brake on the steer's progress, let go. Canaven and Greene ran after the steer, until they came to a telephone pole, then snubbed the rope around the pole, and the steer was halted.

THREE KILLED WHEN AIRPLANE WING CRUMPLES

Long Beach, Cal., Dec. 8.—(AP)—Three persons were killed when a wing of the airplane in which they were flying at an altitude of 2,000 feet crumpled and the plane crashed near the Long Beach Municipal airport late this afternoon. The dead are: Earl Daugherty, 35, veteran pilot; W. E. Monfort, 43, city editor of the Long Beach Press-Telegraph, and Elmer M. Starr, 32, engraver.

Girl Shot by Dry Raider Will Sue for $50,000

Lorain, O., Dec. 8.—(AP)—Louis Cicco today resumed his duties as a member of the Lorain police force. He was suspended about ten weeks ago following the wounding of Miss Betty Heywood of Elyria, a British subject, when officers fired at an automobile they believed was hauling liquor.

Cicco was tried for the shooting, but the jury convicted him of assault and battery, for which he was fined $5. Lawrence H. Webber, attorney for Miss Heywood, said a $50,000 damage suit against members of the former Lorain dry squad would be filed.

O'Brien's Garage Shaken by Bomb Explosion

A black powder bomb shattered the front entrance of a garage owned and operated by State Representative Lawrence O'Brien, at 312 West Elm street last night. Windows in adjacent building were also broken. The bomb was placed at the front door of the place. No one was seen leaving the scene following the explosion. Lieut. Joseph McGuire of the Chicago avenue station questioned several persons in the vicinity but made no arrests.

Bomb Rocks Naperville; Coal Office Is Wrecked

A bomb was exploded late last night in the coal yard of Henry H. Zaininger at Naperville, destroying the scales and the small frame office. The explosion was heard in all parts of the town. Mr. Zaininger, who is a member of the Du Page county board of supervisors and once a candidate for mayor of Naperville, said the only explanation he could advance was that perhaps political enemies had taken this means of revenge.

REPORTS OF AID TRAIL MEETING IN MORGAN BANK

Prices Crumble in Wild Market.

New York, Dec. 8.—[Special.]—The New York World tomorrow will say that a conference was held in the Morgan offices lasting all afternoon after the close of the stock market today.

The conference was attended by four partners in the Morgan house and six other powerful financial figures.

No information was given out regarding the conference, but the World will say a report was current that leading banking interests were considering plans for organized support of the market.

Earlier in the day, just at the close of the wild exchange session, there were reports that powerful banking interests had met with a view to bringing some new buying power into the market. Those present were said to have agreed on a course of action, based on the theory that stocks in many instances have been driven below their real value.

RADIO LEADS PLUNGE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Dec. 8.—[Special.]—The big bull market came crashing down today. The two hours of frenzied finance were as violent as any of which the present generation in Wall street has recollection. It was the heaviest selling ever concentrated on the stock exchange.

Only the roughest of estimates can be made of the staggering losses, but millions of dollars were added to the billions sheared from stock values in the last few days of vanishing paper profits.

A 72 point break in the shares of Radio corporation clipped $83,188,800 from the open market value of that stock alone, while the rest of the list followed Radio in its plunge. The whole market crashed under the weight of a gigantic load of stocks—both good and bad—thrown overboard without regard to prices in one last effort to salvage something.

Saturday Trading Record.

Between 10 o'clock and noon 3,749,890 shares were dumped upon the market for what they would bring. It was a record for Saturday trading. The bargain hunters were able in almost every instance to name their own prices.

With Radio wholly demoralized, the net declines in the main body of stocks ranged from 4 to 61½ points. Losses of from 3 to 25 points studded the list. The decline in General Motors represented a loss in paper value within two hours of $87,000,000 on the 17,400,000 shares of the stock outstanding.

International Harvester went plunging and its 61½ points net loss represented the shearing of more than $66,000,000 from the market value. Wright Aero dropped $7,739,290 of its paper value.

Some of the Wide Declines.

In the following table are shown some of the widest net declines that took place today:

	Close.	Net Loss.
Anaconda	95⅛	2⅛
American Can	96⅛	2⅛
Chrysler	114½	7⅛
General Motors	187½	5
Gold Dust Corporation	127⅞	2⅛
Greene Cananea	135	6⅛
Hupp Motors	70	3
Kolster Radio	57	17
Mexican Seaboard	49½	8½
Montgomery Ward	340	24
Nash Motors	93⅞	7⅛
Packard Motors	131	6½
Sears Roebuck	158⅞	9⅞
Sinclair	35½	1⅞
Union Carbide	180	6⅛
Union Pacific	205	1⅛
U. S. Steel	151⅞	⅛
Victor Talking Machine	114	6
Western Union	175	6
Warner Brothers	106½	6½
Western Electric	115½	4½

Radio had a bad start, opening at 361, off 7 points over night. Then it started its tail spin and all support vanished. Slipping along under a rush of selling orders it declined abruptly to 325 a share.

The specialists found themselves swamped. Radio dropped like a runaway elevator to 305 a share and then after a moment's hesitation plunged over the brink to close at 296. At times the stock was selling on the floor 30 points below the price recorded on the lagging ticker.

The stock was offered in large blocks. A 20 point break came in the last half hour and many frantic trad-

Reed Guilty of Bomb Murder; Life Sentence

BULLETIN.

Rockford, Ill., Dec. 9.—Sunday—(Special.)—Paul Reed was found guilty of murder by the jury at 2:40 o'clock this morning and his punishment fixed at life imprisonment. Reed took the verdict stoically, never changing color or moving from the position in which he has sat for five days. Asked to comment on the verdict, he said: "Nothing to say now. Nothing to say."

BY ROBERT WOOD.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Rockford, Ill., Dec. 8.—[Special.]—State's Attorney William D. Knight went before the jury here tonight to demand that Paul Reed, the quiet youth who said he "never went around with girls much before he met Ivy Plager," pay with his life for the murder of Vernon Plager, Ivy's husband.

When the state's attorney pointed an accusing finger and directly charged him with planting the infernal machine that blew Plager to his death Reed dropped the cool composure with which he has heard 43 witnesses pile up circumstantial evidence against him. He paled, squirmed in his seat, and turned his back to the crowd.

Defense Assails Ivy.

Defense Attorney Charles H. Linscott in his plea for the defendant admitted that Reed had stolen the dynamite and admitted all the evidence introduced by the state to show his love affair with Mrs. Plager.

"I do not condone the conduct of the defendant, but I question which of the two were the least moral," he said. "Ivy Plager took the bonds of matrimony and broke them. There is no evidence to show that Reed at any time forced her to do anything against her will."

The state's evidence he characterized as a rope of sand, which fell far short of proving that Reed placed the dynamite in Plager's car. "Nothing has been covered up regarding Reed's conduct," he declared. "He told the wide world that he wanted dynamite."

Sister Backs Alibi.

Linscott earlier in the day brought a surprise witness to the stand to strengthen Reed's alibi for his activities on the night before the murder. It was Mrs. Bessie Weaver, Paul's sister, who testified that she drove from her farm near Polo that night to attend a band concert in Oregon.

Walking along the street across from the courthouse, she said she saw Paul drive by within some fifteen feet of her, proceeding toward the north. "The side curtains were off and I could see him plainly," she said positively. "I didn't speak to him."

The sister's testimony was regarded as a strong point for the defense. This morning Reed had been rather vague in recounting his activities the night before Plager was killed.

Unmoved by Slaying Relics.

Closing his direct examination, defense counsel Linscott put this question to the defendant: "Did you place any dynamite in Vernon Plager's car in such a way that stepping on the starter would cause it to explode?"

Reed's staring eyes dropped to the twisted bits of steel and wood and fabric piled at his feet and covered with the tattered, bloody rag that was Plager's jacket. The court room was hushed and the eyes of 600 spectators followed his glance to the clerk's desk where stood the two sticks of dynamite that were found in the basement of Reed's rooming house. He shook his head. "No," he said. "I did not."

Then followed four hours of sharp, searching cross examination by State's Attorney William D. Knight, but Reed emerged from the ordeal with his cool composure undisturbed. Occasionally he grinned when the state pointed out discrepancies in his testimony.

BOLIVIANS AND HOOVER VOICE AMITY PLEDGES

Friendship Meeting Held on Warship.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
[Copyright: 1928: By The Chicago Tribune.]

ANTOFAGASTA, Chile, Dec. 8.—President Elect Herbert C. Hoover welcomed nearly 100 Bolivians on board the U. S. S. Maryland today in a brilliant function. They came from La Paz, the "city in the clouds," nearly two days' journey away. The spirit of Simon Bolivar, the liberator of South America, was invoked by Mr. Hoover as one of the bonds between the peoples of the two republics, and as something which enters the lives of the children of both countries.

Alberto Palacios, Bolivian foreign minister, was the chief dignitary of Bolivia to greet Mr. Hoover. His message to the American good will mission, briefly, was as follows:

"We regret that in the shortness of your time you are unable to climb the Andes to Bolivia, but the mountain, interpreting the Arabian legend, comes to offer you a cordial welcome in a portion of your own territory.

An Historic Moment.

"You, Mr. Hoover, a perfect engineer, are not a foreigner to Bolivia, a mining country, and it is certain you understand better than any person of different mentality. Your trip here marks an historic moment in the friendly relations between both Americas, giving new standards of comprehension and understanding of the spiritual and material aspirations within Americanistic ideals.

"Many and complex problems which affect us may be solved according to the simple, humane and practical methods which rule the high political circles of your country. These new methods will push us on to the future with constructive tendencies that are real and not fictitious. This attitude has been the basis of optimism in your country which is the creating force of its own activities, and translates itself into the vigorous literature and formidable economic expansion and physical and moral development of your countrymen. This method only was used by the sons of old Greece.

Has Created New Ideology.

"This optimism has created also a new ideology, a new attitude in relations between different countries, bringing out original formulas to solve eternal problems. Isolated Belgium, with all its resources exhausted, was aided to salvation by the man, Hoover. After the war Germany was destroyed financially, and to remedy this the notable economist, Charles Gates Dawes formulated his famous plan, applied it to reality, and the country came up from ruins.

"The sad experience of the world war put all thinking men of the world to work finding out a way to save humanity in the future. Again an American, Charles Evans Hughes, found the key to the world problem. The present secretary of state, Frank B. Kellogg, with similar sincerity, found solutions for many problems apparently insoluble. Your visit cannot but make flourish in Spanish-America those ideals of optimism and sane comprehension."

Praises U. S. Envoy.

Señor Palacios highly commended the work of David E. Kaufman of Pennsylvania, United States minister to Bolivia. He said Mr. Kaufman had immensely improved the relations between the nations and rendered great service.

The warship Maryland sighted land at dawn today, and at breakfast time we were close to the great brown hills that hide the nitrate plateau which is one of the greatest wealths of Chile. The sea and climate deposited here through the ages inexhaustible fields of fertilizer, which also is used for explosives. The coast line was bare and gloomy, with no green in sight, as the ship swept in to anchorage.

The city is on a beach, under the shadow of great bare hills plastered with advertisements. A fog over the hills and a strong breeze from the sea kept the morning cool and gray. A Chilean cruiser and a British freighter also were in the harbor. The ship band played the national anthem, and a salute came from the cruiser.

May Be Called to Aid.

One problem of Bolivia in which Mr. Hoover may be called on to aid is the acquirement of Arica as a seaport, thus settling the long standing controversy between Chile and Peru, which brought on the war of 1879 and which Gen. John J. Pershing and others failed to settle later.

The proposition is that Bolivia pay indemnity for the port. Bolivia has no outlet to the sea now, and is quite willing to borrow money to make this payment.

There is fear on the part of some government leaders that too much borrowing from the United States will lead to financial domination. The English and others are ready to step in and loan money as the country has immense potential wealth. American mining engineers on the ground advise that it is best to let the country develop its own resources to a greater extent and struggle out its own problems.

American investments in Bolivia now total $100,000,000, with the Guggenheims and Standard Oil interests in the lead.

Has Conference with Minister.

Mr. Hoover had a long private conference wth the foreign minister while the other guests were taken over the Maryland to inspect the ship, guns, and quarters. There were many women on board, and Mr. and Mrs. Hoover insisted that they stay for the buffet lunch which was spread on the quarter deck under awnings and decorations. Muzzles of the great guns in the after turrent poked their noses over the tables.

Mr. Hoover's visit was received at its face value—good will—and is considered a great thing for the country.

Hoover's Reply.

U. S. S. Maryland, Dec. 8.—(AP)—Herbert Hoover, replying to Foreign Minister Palacios, said:

"I wish to express deep gratitude for your tribute to my country. The friendship between Bolivia and the United States has become fixed in the traditions of our countries. They have been cemented on many occasions throughout our history, and it is indeed emphasized by the great effort which you have undertaken in order to give me the pleasure of your acquaintance. In this appreciation and gratitude my country will join.

"I desire greatly that you should convey to President Siles my infinite regret that the inexorable limitations of time prevents my having the great pleasure of a journey to La Paz and a personal call upon him. I should have deemed it a great privilege to have made his personal acquaintance and to add to my reading an actual visualization of Bolivia and its great progress.

Grateful for Meeting.

"I regret that I have but a few weeks available before I shall need to take up actively the question of organization of my own administration. Since as the time is I am grateful for this meeting, as it will enable me to have a better understanding.

"I trust that you will convey to the president not only my personal respects but my gratitude for sending so important a group of representatives to meet with me.

"Bolivia is especially implanted in the hearts of our people because all of our school children learn to associate the great name of your country with the great liberator, Bolivar. I should desire no better foundation for national esteem than that the builders of our country should stand equally high in the minds of your school children. It would indeed be a high compliment to me if you would convey to the president and people of Bolivia that friendliness and good will which the people of the United States hold within their hearts."

BOLIVIA SENDS ENVOY OF PARAGUAY HOME, DUE TO BORDER BATTLE

LA PAZ, Bolivia, Dec. 8.—(AP)—Elias Ayala, the Paraguayan chargé d'affaires, was given his passport and started under guard for Peru today while President Hernando Siles suspended the municipal election in La Paz because of the situation created by the Bolivian-Paraguayan frontier clash. Congress met in secret session and a commission was appointed to take charge of the situation.

Popular demonstrations took place in the capital with thousands of citizens parading through the streets. Three cavalry squadrons were placed about the Paraguayan legation.

The government's action followed an official report that 25 soldiers led by Lieut. Galindo at a small border fort "Vanguardia" had been attacked by a much greater number of Paraguayan troops, who killed most of the Bolivians.

Paraguayan Press Urges Calm.

ASUNCION, Paraguay, Dec. 8.—[U. P.]—Newspapers here today urged the public to take the reported Bolivian-Paraguayan frontier clash calmly. No official statement on the situation has been issued by the government. Members of the Liberal party met and decided to support any policy the government decided to follow.

TORTURE ROBBER IS SLAIN AS HE FLEES WITH LOOT

Two robbers fled from a third floor room of a house at 4508 Drexel boulevard last night after they had stripped three men and tortured them with lighted cigars until they gave up more than $2,500.

But as the robbers ran down the stairway, one of the nude victims of the stickup seized a high powered rifle, took careful aim over the banister and fired. One of the bandits, later identified as Harry Montgomery, 26 years old, 5838 South La Salle street, was killed. The other escaped with nearly all the money.

Gain Entrance by Ruse.

The robbers gained entrance to the place, operated as a rooming house by John Gildea, through a ruse. The taller of the pair, with a drawn revolver, rang the front door bell. He had his partner by the collar. The smaller man was simulating terror.

"I'm a police officer," said the tall one. "I found this man trying to steal a car out front and I want somebody to come with me to the station and place a complaint."

It was Charles E. Bartell, who described himself as a business man, to whom the remark was addressed. Bartell, who lives on the second floor, told the robber he believed the car was the property of J. F. Bell, residing on the third floor. He led the bandits to Bell's quarters.

Torture Victims with Cigars.

With Bell was Ayn E. Schwab of Detroit, an automobile mechanic. As Bartell stepped into the room with him, the two robbers dropped their pose. The little man, who was Montgomery, drew a pistol. The tall one addressed Bell.

"We know you drew $2,500 bucks out of the bank today," he said. "We want it."

Bell denied having the money with him. The robbers then compelled all the men to disrobe. Then they placed the lighted cigars they held against the ears of Bell and Schwab until Bell weakened and surrendered the money. From Bartell they had taken a watch and $40. Schwab's loss was $11.

"Now crawl under the bed—all of you," the tall one commanded.

Seizes Gun and Shoots.

He was obeyed. While he was under the bed Schwab's glance fell on a rifle that had been concealed by the door until the bandits departed. They had closed the door as they fled. Schwab seized the weapon and drew an accurate bead on Montgomery.

After shooting the smaller man Schwab ran to the front of the hall and fired at the other on the street. This time he missed.

On the way to a hospital, where he died within a few minutes, Montgomery gasped that his companion was Joseph Randell, also of 5838 South La Salle street. The dying man also said his home was at Momence, Ill. His last words were:

"Moonshine liquor did this to me."

LADY ROSS WINS DIVORCE ON THE THIRD ATTEMPT

EDINBURGH, Scotland, Dec. 8 —(AP)—After a fight spread over more than four years, Lady Ross, daughter of Andrew Ellison of Louisville, Ky., has obtained a divorce from Sir Charles Ross of Balnagowie.

Lady Ross began suit against her husband in 1924. The case was adjourned and during 1925 the court dismissed her petition on the ground that Sir Charles had proved his domicile in New York.

In June, 1927, the court declared that misconduct had not been proved and dismissed another action, but today Lady Ross was successful. A now dead New York woman was cited as co-respondent.

Husband's Suit Too Late.

Tucson, Ariz., Dec. 8.—[Special.]—A divorce decree is expected to be granted within the next week to Sir Charles Ross, big game hunter and sportsman, it was revealed here today.

JOE MAY SERVE SENTENCE; WHEN? ONLY JOE KNOWS

Now that State's Attorney Swanson is in office, a large part of the police department has been transferred, the county board has "gotten religion," and the beer business is reputed to be getting more and more precarious, Joe Saltis, so it is reported by some of his underlings, is contemplating surrender.

The theory of this, it is explained, is that Joe feels that business is getting less profitable and he can afford to serve that sixty day bridewell sentence for gun toting imposed two years ago and then affirmed by the Illinois Supreme court. Joe has been dodging that sentence for 202 days now, and in spite of the police he remains at liberty.

Federal marshals have also been searching for him for some time, but they have done no better than the police.

PATTEN'S DEATH CLOSES EPIC OF THE GRAIN PITS

Wheat King Passes Away at Age of 76.

Mourning was general yesterday over the death of James A. Patten, the wheat king of twenty years ago.

Mr. Patten, who won fame and millions through his mastery of the grain markets, died yesterday morning at 10:25 o'clock in his home at 1426 Ridge avenue, Evanston. Pneumonia ended his life of 76 years.

Vice President Charles G. Dawes, long time friend of Mr. Patten and his fellow townsman, was notified in Washington of his friend's passing. He said:

"James A. Patten was a friend of all mankind, and his generous heart responded to any call for service, however humble or great. In our home community of Evanston, to which he was a great benefactor, to the city of Chicago, and to his country, his death means a great loss."

University Head Pays Tribute.

Dr. Walter Dill Scott, president of Northwestern university, to which Mr. Patten made gifts amounting to $1,500,000, paid this tribute:

"Every member of Northwestern university feels that he has lost a friend. Mr. Patten possessed those human qualities that endeared him more and more with the passing of years. His honesty, his sincerity, his wisdom, his generosity were such that he commanded the respect and the affection of all of us who had the privilege of associating with him."

The president of the Chicago board of trade, Samuel P. Arnot, said that while Mr. Patten had been in retirement for many years, he nevertheless retained his interest in the development of the grain markets.

"He was a constant companion of progressive policies and gave splendid service in the work of improving the marketing machinery and in making the exchanges more useful to the farmer," Mr. Arnot said.

Funeral to Be Tomorrow.

Funeral services for Mr. Patten will be held tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 o'clock in the First Presbyterian church, Lake street and Chicago avenue, Evanston. The Rev. Dr. David Hugh Jones will conduct the services. The doors of the church will be open at 1:30 o'clock.

On Tuesday the body will be taken by automobile to Sandwich, Ill., for burial in the family vault in Oak Mound cemetery.

Mr. Patten died as calmly and stoically as he lived in the days of 1908 and 1906 when he held the great markets of wheat, corn, oats and cotton in the cup of his hands and juggled them about to win millions.

On the Saturday before Thanksgiving Mr. Patten attended the West Point-Nebraska football game, and became chilled. A few days later he developed a cold, which he was unable to shake off. On Nov. 30 his physician, Dr. George F. Dick, was summoned, and when he learned Mr. Patten was suffering with bronchial pneumonia, he ordered the capitalist to his bed immediately.

Two Other Physicians Called.

Mr. Patten did not rally under treatment, and on Friday night Dr. James B. Herrick and Dr. Paul S. Rhodes were called into consultation by Dr. Dick. They knew then he could not live, but the news was kept from the patient.

Mr. Patten read the newspapers until Friday evening. He conversed, weakly, with his nurse and his family.

Ten minutes before he died he asked for a drink. It was his last request. He swallowed the liquid, turned his face comfortably on the pillow, and died. In the room were his widow, Mrs. Amanda Buchanan Patten, whom he married 43 years ago, and his son, John L. Patten. His secretary, Ralph W. Olmstead, Dr. Rhodes, and a nurse also were present.

The Pattens' daughter, Mrs. Agnes Patten Wilder, is en route from her home at Santa Barbara, Cal., where she was notified of her father's serious condition two days ago. She will arrive in the city this morning.

Over at the old Board of Trade building the old time traders were standing around, talking about how queer it was that "Jim" died just a day after that old building, in which he had spent nearly all his business life, was given to the wreckers.

"Jim marched in here with the rest of the boys 43 years ago last April, when we opened the building," one of the veterans remarked. "He was a young fellow then, only three years on the board. It seems like they were fated to go together—the old building and Old Jim."

Generous Giver to Colleges.

Mr. Patten was a philanthropist, a generous but a quiet one. Many small colleges owe their continued existence to him. Lean years came to some of them, and they would have closed their gates but for a sizeable check from the grain king. But nobody ever heard about it. He never could be gotten to talk about those things, his friends said, and probably Mr. Patten himself could not have estimated the sum thus expended.

And he loved politics. Years ago he ran for alderman in the Chicago council. He was beaten, and he never sought office again until he was induced to become mayor of Evanston in 1901. But he gave generously to the coffers of the Republican party, of which he was a devoted follower. In 1912 he gave $50,000 to defeat Theodore Roosevelt's campaign for the presidency.

Fights to Elect Swanson.

Even into the last years of his life, Mr. Patten kept in close touch with public affairs. He battled for the election of State's Attorney John A. Swanson, and for the downfall of the Crowe-Thompson machine, and he gave largely of his private funds for the struggle.

But the real life of Patten was his grain trading. He was credited with being the only man ever to corner all four markets of wheat, oats, corn and cotton. Of late years, Mr. Patten had denied he ever cornered any grain.

"A man's a fool to try it," he said. "I simply set out my lines for information on crops and markets and the general supply and demand, and I traded according to my best judgment of what was bound to happen.

"That wheat market of 1908-'09, which they have said I cornered, would have been high whether I bought heavily into it—which I did—or not. It just happened that because I went into that market, and kept the grain here, America was saved from a wheat famine which would have resulted otherwise, with the grain exported abroad."

At times feeling ran rather high against Mr. Patten's grain speculations. Shortly after his spectacular gains he went abroad and chanced to wander into the grain market at Manchester, England. Angered British traders, suspecting he had come to play the game against them, drove him out with a shower of bricks.

Comes to Business from Farm.

Mr. Patten entered the grain business in 1874, a shy young man, fresh from the Patten farm near Somonauk, Ill., where he was born on May 8, 1852. His uncle, John Beveridge, was governor of Illinois, and helped the nephew to a job on the state grain inspection staff at $6 a week.

For four years Mr. Patten stayed at that task and then joined the Board of Trade, trading as a clerk for the G. P. Comstock company. His elder brother, George W. Patten, had followed a similar course. Early in the '80s the Pattens joined with H. J. Coon to form the firm of Coon & Patten Bros.

Later the Patten brothers branched out for themselves. Then George died. The brothers' father, Alexander Robertson Patten, descendant of the old Patten family, the first record of which is found in Sussex county, England, in the year 1119, had died of tuberculosis when James was a boy. George, whom James revered as his mentor, also was a victim of that disease, some ten years ago, and ever since Mr. Patten had been most generous in endowing battles against the white plague. He gave $500,000 to the cause shortly after his brother's death. Later he founded the Chicago Fresh Air hospital, and donated freely to other such institutions.

Since the death of George, Mr. Patten had been a silent partner in the firm of Bartlett, Frazier & Co., of which both brothers for a time had been very active members. He went down to business daily, watched the market interestedly, although of late years he had only dabbled, where two decades ago he plunged boldly and confidently.

In 1908, with associates in Bartlett-Frazier and company, Mr. Patten ran his famous corn market to a glorious—for him—finish. He and his associates bought in over twelve million bushels of corn and sold it out at a great profit. The same season he ran a corner in oats, holding several million bushels of that grain.

After he had bought and bought in corn and oats, there came a July—1908—in which it rained for days at a time. Nearly a month of rain, and the farmers couldn't get into their fields to harvest their grain, and if they did they couldn't get it to market over the muddy roads. Grain was scarce, and Patten and his associates, owning millions of bushels, sold it at millions of dollars above what it cost them.

Then came the famous wheat market. Patten and his friends started buying the grain in the early fall of 1908, and when the market ended, in May, 1909, they owned twenty million bushels. The price had been forced skyward from 88 cents in the fall of 1908 to $1.34 in the spring, and the profits were Patten's.

The cotton corner came next, but while it was successful, it had a depressing aftermath. Patten and three men associated with him in the cotton market were indicted by the federal government for conspiracy. He elected to pay a $4,000 fine and was given that privilege. The other defendants fought through a trial and were acquitted.

Since the cotton corner Mr. Patten had cut down his operations to a minor scale, and had branched out in his activities to become a leader in civic affairs, and a financier in other businesses.

129 CHICAGOANS BACK 1933 FAIR WITH $1,000 EACH

Rufus C. Dawes, president of the Chicago world's fair centennial celebration for 1933, yesterday announced that 129 persons have paid $1,000 each for founder memberships. It was first intended to limit these memberships to 100, but there have been so many applications, Mr. Dawes said, that it has been decided to take in 1,000 such members.

The work of enrolling these members is in charge of a subcommittee of the fair's finance committee which includes Abel Davis, vice president of the Chicago Title and Trust company, and Stuyvesant Peabody, head of the Consumers company.

DAVIS TO LAY CORNER STONE OF AIR MEMORIAL

Washington, D. C., Dec. 8.—(AP)—Secretary of War Davis will lay the corner stone for the national memorial to be erected at Devil hill, near Kitty Hawk, N. C., Dec. 17, to commemorate the first flight in an airplane by Orville and Wilbur Wright.

The corner stone will be laid at the celebration in honor of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the first successful flight, at which Orville, the surviving brother, will be the honor guest.

Many notables will attend the event, including delegates to the International Civil Aeronautic conference, probably a congressional committee, and famous aviators and air enthusiasts, including Col. Charles A. Lindbergh.

YOUTH, 21, GETS $6,000,000 GIFT ON HIS BIRTHDAY

Huge Fortune Is Present from Grandfather.

A 21 year old youth sat in his suite at the Drake hotel yesterday and contemplated a $6,000,000 birthday present, the gift of his grandfather, F. W. Matthiessen, late manufacturer of La Salle, Ill. The boy was confronted with the problem of how to spend approximately $1,000 a day, the income from the estate over which he has absolute control.

One year ago, Philip Challenger, the heir, was a Chicago newspaper reporter, loitering about police stations in search of news. His salary then was $18 a week. Before that, he had been a bank clerk in Los Angeles. His parents are Dr. and Mrs. P. C. Challenger, of Santa Barbara, Cal., who helped him celebrate his 21st birthday in Chicago yesterday.

Assigns Control to Father.

Young Challenger's first act was to assign control of his estate to his father. He will receive the income, but the principal may not be touched by him. Next, he voiced his plans for enjoying his fortune.

For five years Challenger will tour the world, visitng out-of-the-way places with Norton Stewart, curator of the Museum of National History at Santa Barbara.

He will visit New Zealand first, according to his plans, and engage in research work with Stewart. The boy has become especially interested in archaeological work, his father declared. Young Challenger was modest about his ambitions, preferring to talk about the sport he will encounter in his travels. He was enthusiastic in discussing big game hunting.

No Lucky Girl, He Says.

When he returns from abroad, the youthful millionaire will be 26 years old. What he will do then, he could not say. There are no matrimonial ideas in his head, he asserted.

Mr. Matthiessen, who deeded the fortune to Challenger, died in February, 1918. He was a partner with Edward C. Hegeler in the Matthiessen & Hegeler Zinc company plant at La Salle, which was one of the largest in America. Mr. Hegeler was the father-in-law of C. Bai Lihme, whose daughter, Anita, married Prince Edward Lobkowicz of Hungary in 1925.

HIT-RUN DRIVER KILLS VICTIM, 73; FIVE OTHERS DIE

Police last night were seeking a motorist who struck John B. Le Bel, 73 years old, 2008 Ogden avenue, and left him dying in the street at Oakley boulevard and Fulton street. The body of the elderly man, who was a cabinet maker, was found a few minutes after the accident and taken to the county morgue.

This death and five others during the day raised Cook county's motor toll for 1928 to 986. The other victims:

Nick Masny, 46 years old, 13243 Houston street. Killed when his car was struck by a train while he was driving across the Pennsylvania railroad tracks at 134th street.

Mrs. Anna Kubiak, 58 years old, 1016 west 31st street. Struck by an automobile last night in front of 823 West 31st street. The driver was Peter Stocka, 4424 Maplewood avenue.

Anthony O'Donnell, 8 years old, 712 South Tripp. Died of injuries suffered Nov. 28, when he fell from an ash truck upon which he was "hitching" a ride, and was run over by a trailer.

George Neuschutz, 15 years old, 2115 West 36th street. Died of injuries suffered Thursday night when he was struck at Halsted and 48th streets by an automobile driven by Charles Evans, 444 West 31st place.

Christ Moe, 48 years old, 1527 Wicker Park avenue. Died of injuries received Friday, when he was struck at Western avenue and Harrison street by a car driven by Frank McBride of Bellwood, Ill.

In Michigan City, Ind., Louis Ericson, 65 years old, an employé of the Pullman company, was killed by a Michigan Central train that struck his auto on a grade crossing.

ARENDS IS HELD AS PEDDLER OF STOLEN WATCHES

Abandoned by Friends in Latest Scrape.

Left in solitude in a detention room at the detective bureau last night while awaiting police interrogation concerning a stock of stolen watches, Abie Arends conducted a personal examination of conscience. After treading three hours down the soiled corridors of his memory Abie emerged gloomy, with the admission that he's an abandoned soul.

Now and then as Abie sat bowed on the bench, his hands clasped over his bald pate, a sigh welled up from 'way down in his tan spatted boots, creating a sparkle in his diamond stud as his chest heaved to release it. Recollection, it seemed, was carrying him back over the glories and shames of his career to the heyday when 22d street was his domain and there were lost women to earn him profits in small coin.

Becomes Fight Promoter.

Abie was young then and life was beckoning with bright promises, some of which were fulfilled. For shortly after Mayor Busse cleaned out the 22d street dives Abie oozed his way into pugilism—not as a fighter, for Abie's fistic talents were negligible—but as a promoter, or so he says.

Came the day when Abie was able to run down to Florida for a holiday and a round of sport—not the sport he had trafficked with in the past—but real sport on the golf links. Came too the rise of William Hale Thompson, a politician to whom the erstwhile divekeeper hitched his star.

At first it was just a casual appearance at a fight benefit sponsored by the mayor. Then, and with increasing frequency, a trip on one of the mayor's junkets, where Abie, who had picked up skill as a toady, distinguished himself as hizzoner's boot licker.

America First Leader.

Followed Mayor Thompson's retirement after his first two administrations and a hiatus in the Arends' career. But another campaign was coming and Abie was ready to blossom forth as chief bouncer and maestro of song at America First campaign meetings.

While Abie awaited an interview with Deputy Police Commissioner Stege last night, some one recalled that for all his sterling loyalty to the Thompson cause, Arends never got on the pay roll.

"Naw, the campaign didn't get me nothing," he observed mournfully. "I didn't want nothing. I'm as clean as a hound's tooth and nobody ever found me on a pay roll."

Abie's declaration on the hound's tooth provoked a question on the status of the case wherein he was charged with attacking a 13 year old girl at his summer home near Crown Point, Ind.

"Bum rap, bum rap," insisted Abie. "I went down there and beat the rap on a disorderly charge."

Now About the Watches.

But Deputy Stege was by this time ready to interview Arends concerning those stolen watches. No, Abie didn't know the timepieces were part of a $50,000 stock lifted from the room of E. J. Schulze, New York jewelry salesman, when he was stopping at a St. Louis hotel. Abie had 24 of the watches and could account for every one of them.

About six months ago, it seemed, he met up with one Joe Firestone, an habitue like himself, of the Comedy club over Lindy's restaurant in Randolph street. Comedy was bred there, it developed, for Mr. Firestone, known to the police as a fence, asked Abie to join him in the jewelry business.

Well, times were dull and the modest melody entitled "Big Bill the Builder" was only a whispered memory. So Abie agreed and took 24 of Mr. Firestone's watches. He went among his friends and those he thought his friends.

Health Commissioner Kegel wouldn't buy, but an employé of his, Dr. Joseph B. Sonnenschein, 5443 Eastview avenue, took five at $100 apiece. Others Abie peddled along the Rialto, among his acquaintances of the ring and the footlights.

A police detail was sent to the Hotel Davis to nab Mr. Firestone. Meanwhile Arends sat alone, abandoned, for not even a bondsman appeared to bail him out on a charge of receiving stolen property.

FOUR CHRISTMAS TREES TO HERALD HOLIDAY SPIRIT

Start Work Tomorrow on Tribune Giants.

BY KATHLEEN McLAUGHLIN.

Christmas—count the days—will soon be here and THE TRIBUNE is starting tomorrow to help along the holiday spirit by erecting a community Christmas tree in Grant park, opposite Madison street. Not an ordinary tree of the time worn type, but one that will sparkle and glitter in a modern manner and with a greater beauty than ever before, in the opinion of the experts who have planned it.

Downtown Chicago will get the benefit of the Grant park tree, but north, south, and west are to share in the fun, for each of these sections of the city is to have one like it. The Midway, indeed, will have a replica of the lake front beauty.

All Will Be Ready Soon.

North siders will gather about a tree to be erected at the North avenue entrance to Lincoln park. The west side's Yuletide emblem will be at the Washington boulevard entrance to Garfield park, and south siders will see their tree set opposite the Fountain of Time, on the Midway. All will be completed in the next few days.

Architects, illumination experts, electricians and builders have contributed to the plans and specifications for these trees. They have given time, study and effort to insure their charm and enhance their beauty. And they are eager as youngsters to see the realization of their plans.

More than a score of trees cleverly massed to present the illusion of one mammoth tree, will make up the Grant park emblem of Christmas. The main or top tree alone is forty feet in height, and will be topped by a star measuring thirty inches in diameter.

Plan New Decorations.

For the tinsel and glitter so essential to the gala attire of this forest monarch, there will be the newest of Christmas tree decorations—spangles measuring ten inches across, large colored balls and artificial icicles that will shimmer and gleam with every movement of the branches.

The most radical departure in this Christmas tree will be the absence of the usual colored light bulbs strung through the limbs. Instead, colored flood lights will be concealed below and at a short distance from the tree, playing upon it every color of the rainbow, and reflecting these colors in the glitter of the ornamentation. The entire tree will be sprayed with a solution of chemicals to make it appear frosted. This effect, the builders promise, will provide an entirely novel sight for those who visit the tree in Grant part, and also the one on the Midway.

Because they are under the supervision of the park boards to the extent of illumination the Garfield park and the Lincoln park trees will utilize the usual colored lights as well as carry an array of brilliant ornaments.

Architect Is Designer.

Pierre Blouke, architect, designed the arrangement and the ornamentation for the Grant park and the Midway trees. He worked with a committee headed by Gearhardt Meyne, chairman, who, with E. D. Tillson, illumination expert for the Commonwealth Edison company, H. H. Lovell of the Illinois Bell Telephone company, and a number of others, have given their time to make Christmas happier through the beauty of THE TRIBUNE trees.

Musical programs are being worked out in the various neighborhoods and will be held during the holidays around these community centers as has been related in the Metropolitan section of THE TRIBUNE.

BOY SCOUTS WITH 14,000 MEMBERS SET NEW RECORD

The membership of Boy Scouts in Chicago reached a new high total of more than 14,000, it was reported from headquarters last night where last minute registrations were coming in too fast for auditing. More than 2,000 new memberships have been received, and several hundred more were expected.

The campaign for new members will reach its climax on Friday and Saturday at a scout jamboree at the Coliseum, where they will be sworn into the Chicago council in a public demonstration. James E. West, chief scout executive of the national organization, and Walter W. Head, president of the national council, will swear in the new members in the presence of 11,000 Boy Scouts of the city, their parents and friends.

In addition to the campaign for new memberships, 350 boys, in an advance in rank competition, have earned second class rank, and 175 first class rank. Troop awards will be presented at the jamboree.

WAR ON CANCER EARLY, PLEA OF DR. CHARLES MAYO

Woman's Club Opens War on Disease.

The prevalence of cancer which is curable only when caught at its earliest stages was discussed yesterday by Dr. Charles Mayo, renowned surgeon and head of the Rochester, Minn., clinic, who urged that people be taught to recognize the danger singals of cancer and to consult a physician before the disease gets beyond control.

Dr. Mayo was one of a group of noted specialists who addressed the meeting of the Chicago Woman's club, which held the forum as its first step in a campaign to fight cancer "with knowledge."

Dr. Mayo spoke of the lengthening of the average life of an individual by the eradication of various diseases, and said he hoped these facts would stimulate warfare against cancer, which kills 125,000 Americans a year. "There are other diseases which occur with greater frequency but none which is so generally fatal," he said.

The history of the cancer movement was reviewed by Dr. Frank Billings. He spoke of the cancer clinic appointed here last October by Dr. Mayo and predicted that it will do useful work.

"There are already four great medical research laboratories in Chicago," Dr. Billings said, naming Chicago, Illinois, Northwestern, and Loyola universities. "I am certain these institutions, backed by the energy and enthusiasm of the Woman's club, can accomplish great things in the future."

Dr. Franklin Martin, president of the American College of Surgeons, advised that the question be looked at in a large way, and said any plans made by the Woman's club should be based upon a thorough study of the needs and opportunities.

Advanced Cases Fatal.

According to Dr. George A. Soper, former managing director of the American Society for Control of Cancer, the prevalence of cancer has never been accurately estimated. "We know only that every advanced case of cancer that has come to the notice of medical men has proved fatal," he said. "We do not know how many persons with the beginnings of cancer, or cancer in an arrested form, have died from other causes before the disease was discovered."

"The chief opposition in solving the problem of cancer," according to Dr. M. L. Harris, president-elect of the American Medical association, "is the attitude of some misguided persons who disapprove of animal experimentation." Dr. Harris said every important surgical discovery had been made by experimenting on animals.

Solution Is Inevitable.

Dr. Irving S. Cutter, dean of the Northwestern Medical school, said every medical center is engaged in trying to solve the problem of cancer. "Probably each laboratory approaches the question in a different manner, but with combined scientific effort, it is inevitable that a solution will be found," he said. "Doctors are incurably optimistic," he asserted. "They keep striving, always feeling the solution is just around the corner."

The Chicago Medical association has responded to the lead taken by the Women's club, and under the combined auspices of the two organizations, Dr. Soper will repeat his lecture, "The Present Status of the Cancer Problem," next Wednesday afternoon. The hour and place have not been announced.

EMPLOYES FLEE BOUL. MICH. FIRE.

HUSBAND, FACING DIVORCE, FIGHTS FOR OLD IDEALS

Pits Tradition Against "Modern" Ethics.

A matrimonial problem of middle age was revealed yesterday by Ralph Fisher, a consulting accountant of 327 South La Salle street, in his answer to a suit for divorce brought against him by Mrs. Emily A. Fisher, 115 Kedzie street, Evanston. They were married in 1899 and both are more than 50 years old.

Mr. Fisher alleges that in the last few years his wife has conceived ultramodern views, antagonistic to matrimony as an institution. Two years ago, when they separated, she requested a "trial divorce," he avers. His formal answer, drawn by the law firm of Socrates & Davis, quotes what purports to be a part of her letter to him as follows:

"I know you would have been much improved if you could understand anything pertaining to the church. As for myself, I have cut out church and all pertaining to it. You have been the direct cause, so you might pray a little over that.

Asks "Trial Divorce."

"If you will agree to a divorce, a trial one, for a year, then at the end of the year, if I think anything of you, I will remarry you. I am greatly in favor of this, as we won't be together and at the end of a year will know more."

Mr. Fisher has not agreed to any divorce. He is fighting her efforts to get a decree. His pleading says he was reared to regard marriage as the foundation of our social system and that he still holds to the orthodox doctrines. He relates that he and his wife maintained "an old fashioned American home" in Evanston for many years, and that he does not want her to cut loose from the restraining influences of matrimony and left to nurture radical social theories.

Cites Effect on Children.

The possible influence of Mrs. Fisher's teachings upon their three children is cited by her husband as another reason she should not be granted a divorce. The pleading refers to "so-called social progress and social reform of these modern days of extremities, which are conducive of immorality and social instability." The children are Bartlett, 22 years old; Warren, 15, and Cynthia, 11.

Mrs. Fisher, in her bill, charges cruelty and asks for alimony, listing her husband's annual income at more than $20,000. He denies the cruelty allegations.

NO POLITICS IN THIS JOB, SWANSON TELLS HIS 12 POLICEMEN

The twelve policemen assigned to the office of State's Attorney Swanson reported for duty yesterday morning. The men were taken to the prosecutor's office by Deputy Commissioner John P. Stege, who warned them that unless they do their work efficiently they will be immediately transferred.

"This is not a political office," State's Attorney Swanson told the policemen. "No one will be able to pull you off your work and I expect you to do your duty at all times. I will protect you in whatever work you are doing regardless of any interference by politicians."

Prosecutor Swanson said he will not have forty or fifty policemen assigned to his office as former state's attorneys have done. He will expect the police department to take care of ordinary investigations, he said.

97 DIE OF FLU IN LOS ANGELES IN SEVEN DAYS

Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 8.—[Special.]—Ninety-seven deaths occurred and 4,084 cases of flu were reported here during the first seven days of December, according to figures announced today by Dr. George Parrish, city health officer.

The totals in the last twenty-four hour checkup were 16 deaths and 525 new cases. The death rate of the disease has increased from 1.69 per cent during November to 2.32 per cent in December.

There are supposed to have been 30,000 recognized cases of flu since the epidemic became a source of Los Angeles' concern early last month. Many of the cases, Dr. Parrish said, were not reported to the city health offices.

State and county health commissioners have made headquarters in Los Angeles for several weeks, and have brought in a corps of assistants to combat the epidemic.

Jean Hersholt, film star, is one of the week-end flu victims.

MINNEAPOLIS CHICAGO ST. PAUL

ANDREW MELLON SENDS CHECK TO JAMES COUZENS

Mr. Public Pays in Tax Feud Windup.

that the value of the Ford stock sold by Couzens and his associates was only $2,500 a share in 1913 and that, therefore, their profit was much greater than had been estimated and that a much greater profits tax was due the government. One of these memoranda was filed by Senator James E. Watson [Rep., Ind.].

The treasury department paid no attention until 1925, when Couzens and Mellon were engaged in their controversy. Suddenly Mellon gave the word to go after Couzens. The demand for the additional taxes was made the day before it would have been outlawed by the statute of limitation. And the demand was based on the memoranda of 1921 and 1922.

Couzens Wins Refund.

Couzens and his associates went before the board of tax appeals and spent $1,000,000 defending the suit. How much the government spent in the effort to collect can only be guessed at. Eventually the board decided that Mellon's demand for additional taxes was not justified. The board held that instead of the stock being worth only $2,500, or even $9,000, in 1913, it was in realty worth $10,000 a share. Couzens and his associates, therefore, had not made so large a profit as Roper had estimated in 1920, and thus had paid a larger profit tax than the government was justified in exacting. They were found entitled to a refund of $3,000,000, which the government paid today.

The acrimonious controversy between Couzens and Mellon long ago died away, though its echoes linger on. One of these is a resolution by Couzens, pending in the senate, providing for an investigation of the action of Mellon in ordering the tax exaction proceedings against Couzens and his associates four years after the information on which the treasury acted was received.

MAN FOUND SLAIN IN ROAD; MAY BE VICTIM OF 'RIDE'

The bullet riddled body of John LaPazza, 27 years old, 139 North 25th avenue, Melrose Park, was found yesterday at 17th avenue and 23d street, North Riverside. Apparently he had been "taken for a ride" by his enemies.

Chief of Police Arthur Beltz of North Riverside said that the position of the body indicated that LaPazza, unconscious, had been placed in the road and that his killers then fired into his body. Identification was made by Chief of Police Rocco Passarella of Melrose Park, who arrested LaPazza several months ago on a charge of attacking a young woman.

Chief Passarella's theory was that relatives of the girl may have taken personal revenge. He denied that the man who was slain was engaged in the alcohol business. From other sources it was learned, however, that he was a truck driver for an alcohol ring. He attended the funeral of Tony Lombardo, underworld chieftain who was killed in the loop, and the federal authorities are said to have been seeking him.

ROBBER SLAYS POLICEMAN IN PISTOL BATTLE

Duel to Death in Store as Customers Look On.

Patrolman Michael Lynch, 38 years old, 7756 South Ada street, was shot and killed late yesterday afternoon in a battle with a Negro holdup man in the Atlantic and Pacific Tea company store at 458 East 37th street.

It was Lynch's reckless disregard of danger in an attempt to protect the employés and customers of the store that caused his death. During the last few weeks a gang of robbers had been preying on shops in the neighborhood and special guards had been assigned from the Stanton avenue station to get them. Lynch's orders were to remain concealed and to shoot from cover at any robbers.

Negro Holds Up Manager.

He was in a rear room, at a vantage point that permitted him a view of the store, when the bandit entered. The robber's pistol was drawn and without delay he stepped over to the manager, William Ennis, and commanded that he raise his hands. Robber and victim stood so close together that the policeman could not fire without endangering Ennis.

So instead of firing from cover, he ran into the front part of the store with his own pistol ready. As the Negro fell back from Ennis, Patrolman Lynch fired. He missed. The Negro fired back. A bullet struck Lynch in the heart. As he fell, dying, the robber fled. A second bullet from the policeman's gun, fired as he plunged to the floor, also missed.

Three Customers See Duel.

The battle was witnessed by Miss Louise Dorsey, 426 South Park way, a clerk, and three customers, all colored. Several suspects were taken into custody during the evening, but the witnesses failed to identify any of them.

Patrolman Lynch had been on the police force for seven years. Most of his service was on the west side. Three months ago he was transferred from the Maxwell Street station to Stanton avenue. He is survived by his widow and four children.

CHICAGO WOMAN LAWYER MEETS PHILANTHROPIST

'Twas in Paris; She Loses $6,000, Cash and Rings

BY HENRY WALES.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
[Copyright: 1928: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, Dec. 8.—A former assistant state's attorney of Cook county, Mrs. Bess Sullivan Heptig, sister of Judge Philip Sullivan of Chicago, yesterday was the victim of one of the cleverest pair of crooks operating in Europe. She was swindled out of 30,000 francs (about $1,200) and jewelry worth 125,000 francs (about $5,000).

Mrs. Heptig will sail for America tomorrow on the steamer Paris. She identified the crooks from police photographs today.

Mrs. Heptig came to Paris a month ago and was living in a fashionable hotel in Rue Scribe. A couple of nights ago she went to the lounge after dinner for a cigaret. When her lighter would not work a tall, distinguished looking man offered her a match. The affable stranger said he was an Austrian named Fred Wacl, had lived in Chicago, and mentioned the late Charles Erbstein and others.

Another Stranger Appears.

The next day Mrs. Heptig encountered Wacl in the lobby of the hotel and they strolled on the boulevard. As they walked along a man just ahead dropped a bunch of keys when taking his handkerchief from his pocket.

"Look, that man dropped his keys," remarked the woman lawyer. Wacl picked them up.

"Thank you very much and God bless you," said the stranger in a rich brogue. "They are extremely valuable because they unlock my safety deposit boxes. I am so thankful I want you and your wife to have an aperitif with me right away."

Announces He's a Philanthropist.

"Pardon, but this lady is not my wife, just an acquaintance," interjected Wacl.

"It doesn't make any difference. She resembles my poor dead sister, Mary, who died of tuberculosis eight years ago, and I am now en route to Rome to give the holy father £1,000 [about $5,000] to say masses in her dear memory," the stranger said.

The trio had an aperitif and decided to have lunch, while the newcomer explained he was John Hogan, from Dublin, whose father died leaving an estate of $15,000,000 with instructions for the son to help worthy charities all over the world.

"Father told me to select thrifty, reputable people I could trust to aid me in distributing the funds in foreign lands," said Hogan as he showed newspaper clippings recounting the death of a Hogan in Ireland who had left an enormous estate.

"Perhaps you would undertake to help me distribute funds to worthy charities in your country," he told Mrs. Heptig. "I would like to distribute a couple of thousand pounds there. Whatever amount of money you show me, I will double, as my donation."

Wacl opened a wallet showing what seemed like 1,000 franc notes.

"I have a little over $1,000," Mrs. Heptig said.

"I will go to the bank, get some money from the vault, and meet you here in an hour," said Hogan.

A Little Black Valise.

The trio met at the appointed time. Hogan carried a little black valise.

"There is £3,000 (about $15,000) inside," he remarked.

Then turning to Mrs. Heptig, he said: "I want to tell you first about my dear sister, Mary, now deceased; Heaven rest her memory," and recited a long story of her life.

Finally Hogan said he must telephone and asked Wacl to show him the booth, requesting Mrs. Heptig to watch the valise containing the money.

Half an hour later, when the couple did not return Mrs. Heptig became suspicious, looked in her handbag, and found her cash and three rings she had placed inside were missing. The police told her Wacl had robbed her handbag while Hogan was telling the story of his sister. Hogan's valise contained a bunch of old newspapers.

[Copyright: 1928: By the New York Times.]

HAVANA, Dec. 8.—The amphibian air yacht Liberty narrowly escaped destruction at 4 o'clock this morning when a thirty knot wind suddenly whipped up the sea in Havana harbor, resulting in collisions of lighter craft due to dragging anchors.

Chief Engineer Charles J. Sutter and Radio Operator J. Russell Roe, who were sleeping aboard the air yacht, crawled out of the salon hatch in their pajamas and groped their way through the darkness and spray to the wing tip pontoons to ward off collisions with nearby craft.

Suddenly a dark hulk came drifting across the water toward her. It was a fifty foot pleasure launch with a dead engine and dragging anchors. The oncoming craft struck the bow of the left wing tip pontoon, but Sutter was able, with a boat hook, to push the airship out of the path. The movement, however, started Liberty's anchors dragging and the airship began drifting down wing across the harbor. Sutter and Roe started the port engine. Sutter took the controls and keeping the ship on the surface taxied into the wind and avoided further collisions.

J. M. Patterson, owner, and his daughter, Mrs. Alicia Patterson Simpson, were unaware of Liberty's nocturnal adventure until informed by the pilot and crew.

JUDGE WILL QUIZ OIL OFFICIAL IN TAXICAB HEARING

Evidence that J. L. Stone, an official of the United Petroleum company, received one and three-quarter cents for each gallon of gasoline sold to the Checker Taxi company was submitted to Master in Chancery Thomas J. Peden yesterday at the federal hearing into charges of graft against the taxi company officials. Charles E. Gauwer, president of the petroleum concern, who gave the testimony, stated, however, that the commission was for bringing in business to the company. The petroleum company had an exclusive contract to furnish gasoline to Checker drivers, Gauwer said.

Stone, whose reluctance to testify on Friday concerning his commission caused him to be taken into the custody of the marshal's office, was released yesterday by Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson. He will appear in court on Monday for examination by Judge Wilkerson.

Edward R. Litsinger, member of the board of review, notified the court of his appearance as associate counsel with Edgar J. Cook and Arthur Albert, who represent the taxi company.

Upheaval of Mexican Labor Only Sham, Portes Gil Says

BY JOHN CORNYN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 8.—The excitement raised by the labor leaders, headed by Luis Morones, former minister of commerce, labor and industry, in the ninth labor convention here for the last three days was a tempest in a teapot and had no national or social significance, according to a statement by Provisional President Emilio Portes Gil this morning.

The president said the labor convention, instead of discussing labor problems of the nation, for which it had assembled, busied itself exclusively with politics and laying a trap for former President Plutarco Elias Calles.

"Leaders Have No Followers."

President Portes Gil made light of the war paint and gestures of defiance to the government, saying the labor leaders had no followers outside of their immediate crowd, and that all the independent labor organizations throughout Mexico and numerous local branches of the C. R. O. M., or Mexican Federation of Labor, had signified their adherence to the Mexican government, and their intention of supporting the provisional president.

"The pretension of the C. R. O. M. to have more than 2,000,000 members within the labor organizations is absurd on the face of it," he said. "Such a claim would not be made in the United States, where the labor organization has been far expanded. I have official figures showing that the C. R. O. M. has less than 150,000 bona fide members on its roll, and these are confined almost exclusively to cities and the larger towns. Of the 3,000,000 or more agrarians, none belong to the C. R. O. M.

"Throughout the extensive oil regions the C. R. O. M. has not even the pretense of a labor organization or influence, nor in all the states, some of vast extent and large population. The railway organizations of the country have 14,000 miles of lines and thousands of employés. None belong to the C. R. O. M., and even in the factories probably less than 40 per cent of the workmen are C. R. O. M. members."

Independent Organizations Formed.

Contrasting the C. R. O. M. organization with independent labor organizations, President Portes Gil said that the independent organizations were organized so that funds which came into them were used to build labor headquarters and give insurance, and each member has a personal interest in the organization through his shares in it, whereas nothing like this has been done by the C. R. O. M. leaders, who formed a more or less autocratic government of the few.

The president admitted the possibility of organizing the independent labor units into a great labor organization which would be governed by the new labor bill now being discussed by the mixed commission, and which is intended to make possible the amicable working together of labor and capital.

Will Call Convention.

A prominent independent labor leader of national reputation admitted this morning that the independents would call a convention in Mexico City early next year to form such an organization, which would back the government. He said the premature closing of the ninth convention of the C. R. O. M. last night indicated the complete defeat of Señor Morones and the coming disruption of the C. R. O. M., which never would be able to exist without the government's moral and financial support.

Speaking of the attempt of the C. R. O. M. to force Gen. Calles into labor politics, President Portes Gil said:

"I am sure the Mexican nation is capable of understanding the real intentions of the labor leaders, who tried in the last few days to divide the revolutionary party for personal, selfish interests. Gen. Calles' declarations in this morning's press show clearly the underhanded tricks of the labor leaders in taking advantage of the presence of Gen. Calles in the C. R. O. M. convention to make him appear a party to the violent attacks made by Señor Morones and other C. R. O. M. leaders on the government.

Has Workers' Welfare at Heart.

"My government has at heart the welfare of the laboring classes of the republic, but I personally do not believe the way to help them is to sow discord and hatred in the bosom of the labor organizations and hearts of the masses for political ends. Notwithstanding the attacks upon the government, I am following the line of action laid down in my inaugural address of Nov. 30 for fair play to all parties. I expect continued support from the nation, as I had up to the present."

INAUGURATION OF EMMERSON SET FOR JANUARY 14

Assembly Convenes Jan. 9; Dates Are Late.

BY PARKE BROWN.

Dates for the convening of the next Fifty-sixth Illinois general assembly and the inauguration of Louis L. Emmerson as governor of the state are the latest possible under the state constitution. Both houses of the legislature are to meet on Jan. 9 and the governor elect will be inducted into office on Jan. 14.

These facts are considered of general interest because of a widespread assumption that the new administration would take hold immediately after New Year's day and that the lawmakers at the same time would take up the grind of their weekly sessions. But the chances are that the legislature, except for preliminary steps, probably will not get into action until after Gov. Emmerson is on the job.

Constitution Fixes Dates.

The dates of Jan. 9 and Jan. 14 are fixed by the constitution. It provides first that the general assembly shall convene on "the Wednesday next after the first Monday in January" and that the governor elect "shall hold his office from the second Monday of January next after his election."

Not since 1901, when Richard Yates, now congressman at large, was installed governor, has there been so late an inauguration. But the assembly of 1907—the second session of Gov. Charles S. Deneen's first term—was thrown back to Jan. 9.

One other interesting legal fact in connection with the opening of the new régime is that Mr. Emmerson, as secretary of state, will call the house of representatives to order at noon on Jan. 9, and will preside until a temporary presiding officer is chosen from among the members. At the same time, the senate will be organized with Lieut. Gov. Fred E. Sterling as its president, in the chair.

And right at this point the cautious prophets hesitate about going ahead with their forecasts. They know that the organization of the two chambers will probably depend upon the party caucuses of their members the night before, the evening of Tuesday, Jan. 8.

Shanahan New Speaker?

Even though he will not yet have become governor, it is recognized that Mr. Emmerson will have a powerful influence in the majority or Republican caucuses, and he has not tipped his hand concerning the important elective positions in either house, any more than he has about his own cabinet appointments. It is presumed that he is studying both subjects closely between rounds of golf at Excelsior Springs. He will return home next week.

The best bet in the whole layout is said to be an indicated certainty that Representative David E. Shanahan, who was one of the big men of the Emmerson campaign, will be almost the unanimous choice of the house Republican caucus for speaker. But there isn't even this degree of certainty about the senate organization.

BEG YOUR PARDON

In an item last Monday it was stated that "a citizens' committee" on the county jail had presented a bill for $4,448 for its services. The bill was not from the body headed by Joseph R. Noel, known as the citizens' committee on the new jail and criminal courts building, but from a committee of architects and engineers who inspected and reported on the project for the county.

* * *

Prof. L. L. Thurstone of the University of Chicago made no comparison of the relative intelligence of rich and poor families, as was stated in a recent item. Other investigators believe children tend to be brighter when they are brought up in favorable economic circumstances, but Prof. Thurstone says his study did not consider that aspect of the problem.

SWANSON TO DIG UP OLD HABITUAL CRIMINAL LAW

Orders Staff to Enforce Act Rigidly.

Stringent enforcement of the Illinois habitual criminal act, which is in some respects as severe as the Baumes law in New York, was ordered yesterday by State's Attorney John A. Swanson. The new prosecutor instructed Assistant State's Attorney John Elliott Bryne to start immediately preparing for a rigid enforcement of the act, which, though on the statute books since 1883, has been seldom used.

Under this law, for a second conviction of robbery or burglary, the two most frequent crimes, a sentence to life imprisonment is mandatory.

"We do not need any other laws," said Judge Swanson. "If the habitual criminal law is strictly enforced it will do just as much good as the passage of a new law patterned after the Baumes act of New York. We may need a few changes as to procedure to make it a little less difficult to prove previous convictions, but the law as it now stands is all right."

Frank J. Loesch, new first assistant to Swanson, joined in the movement for the enforcement of the old but forgotten law. He pointed out that it will give the prosecution the advantage during trial of showing that the defendant has had a previous record.

With the raising of punishment by the last legislature for the crime of automobile stealing the penalty for a second conviction means a 20 year sentence. Third offenders for grand larceny, forgery or counterfeiting are punished by fifteen year terms.

The habitual criminal act has not been used because of the amount of work entailed in proving past records.

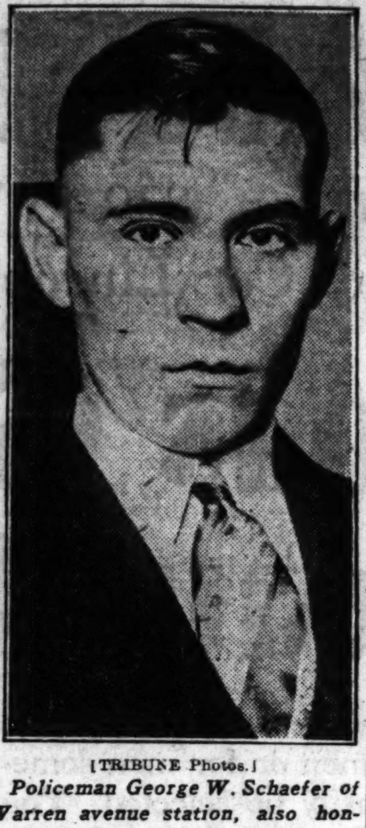
TWO POLICEMEN, ONE FIREMAN WIN HEROISM AWARDS

Risked Lives in Line of Duty; Get $100 Each.

Two Policemen and Fireman Given Hero Awards

Policeman John Murphy of Woodlawn station (left) and Lieut. John Enright of fire engine company 33, two of three given $100 bravery awards by Tribune for November.



[TRIBUNE Photos.]

Policeman George W. Schaefer of Warren avenue station, also honored for bravery by Tribune.

Two Chicago policemen and one fireman, who distinguished themselves by acts of exceptional bravery during November, will have an extra $100 apiece to spend for Christmas this year. THE TRIBUNE, recognizing the valor displayed by all three, triples its usual monthly hero award of $100.

The winners are: Lieut. John Enright, assigned to fire engine company 33; Policeman George Schaefer, Warren avenue station; and Policeman John Murphy, Woodlawn station.

Each of the uniformed men deliberately risked his life to perform a perilous act of duty. Enright entered and reëntered a flaming building to rescue two trapped persons. The policemen shot it out with gunmen caught while engaged in holdups. Enright was given honorable mention by Fire Commissioner A. W. Goodrich. Schaefer and Murphy were cited for extra compensation by Police Commissioner W. F. Russell.

Bravery Is Spectacular.

Any one of the three acts, in particular those of Enright and Murphy, would furnish enough drama for a scene in a movie or a chapter in a novel. Schaefer's performance, although less spectacular, demonstrated courage of the highest order. He got his man.

The story of Lieut. Enright's act was related in an official report by Division Marshal John P. Stahl.

Enright, on Nov. 26, was assigned to engine company 4, located at 1244 North Halsted street. At 4 a. m. the company answered an alarm from a two story garage at 720 Blackhawk street. When the firemen arrived, the building was in flames and shouts for help warned them that somebody was trapped in the flat above the garage. Lieut. Enright dashed into the hallway, but was driven back with his clothing afire. On his next attempt firemen kept a stream of water playing on him and he was able to carry Julius Gimber, 50 years old, to safety. Unable to penetrate the flames again, the lieutenant then mounted a ladder, climbed through a window and brought out Gimber's mother-in-law, Mrs. Grace Surgse, a woman of 80.

Is Fourth Citation.

Three times before Lieut. Enright has been cited for bravery. In 1926 he received the Carter H. Harrison medal for a rescue similar to that of Nov. 26.

Policeman Schaeffer was a probationary officer, having been on the force only five months prior to the night of Nov. 27, when, while walking his beat, he noticed a commotion in the Perantakos restaurant at 425 South Western avenue. He entered and found a holdup in progress. The robber and the policeman, each with gun in hand, saw each other simultaneously, but the policeman was quicker on the trigger. His bullet wounded the robber fatally. The bandit was identified as Walter Zajac, 21 years old, 1828 North Rockwell street.

Commending Policeman Murphy, Capt. John L. Hogan declared that "the quality of courage displayed by Officer Murphy marks him as an example for other members of the department."

Fights Three Bandits.

Shortly before 5 p. m., Nov. 28, three bandits attempted to take the $7,000 pay roll of the Lambrecht creamery at 10 East 70th street. They ordered a dozen employés to face the wall, cut the light wires, throwing the place in darkness, and ordered the manager to open the safe.

Murphy, assigned to pay roll duty, was due to arrive at 5 p. m. to guard distribution of the cash. Promptly at the stroke of 5 he arrived.

Drawing his revolver, he walked into the darkness. He was met by a blaze of shots. Murphy fired back at the flare of the guns and a free for all pistol affray ensued—one policeman against three bandits. The policeman scored first, hitting one of the gang in the leg with the last bullet in his weapon. The other two ran out through a side door while Murphy, knowing his gun was empty, approached the wounded man and disarmed him. He quickly reloaded his gun and fired after the fleeing couple, but they escaped in the darkness.

Accuser of Red Grange Sues to Divorce Husband

A suit for divorce was filed yesterday by Mrs. Helen Morrissey Flozek, a checkroom girl, who charged Harold (Red) Grange, former Illinois football star, with paternity of her 7 months old daughter. The defendant is Leo Flozek, from whom she has been separated for four years. The bill alleges he deserted his wife two years after their marriage. The case against Grange was dismissed for want of prosecution after a reported settlement out of court.

JEWS CELEBRATE CHANUKAH; PLAN LARGE SERVICES

One of the largest local services connected with the festival of the Lights of Chanukah, which is being celebrated until next Saturday by Jews all over the world, will be that at the first annual Chanukah banquet and laymen's religious rally which will be conducted tonight by the Chicago conference of Temple Men's clubs at the Palmer house. Judge Hugo Friend will speak, and Rabbi Louis Kopald of the new North Shore Israel congregation will deliver his first public sermon.

A public celebration of Chanukah, open to all, will take place this afternoon at 3 o'clock at the Anshe Emes temple, Pine Grove avenue and Grace street. In addition to the kindling of the lights of the Menorah, a play will be given by the children of the congregation. Motion pictures taken by Rabbi Philip A. Langh during his recent visit to the Holy Land will be shown.

PUBLIC HEARING WILL CONSIDER BRIDGE NUISANCE

Alderman Invites Owners of Boats to Attend.

Ald. Guy Guersney [6th], chairman of the city council committee on harbors, wharves, and bridges, issued invitations yesterday for a public hearing next Thursday on the proposal to keep Chicago river bridges down and open to traffic except during the early morning hours.

Among those asked to send representatives were seven river shipping companies which operate craft, shown by Harbor Master Charles Agnew's being worked on the many persons ble for bridge openings and the resultant loss of time and inconvenience to the street traveling public.

Seven Companies Invited.

These seven companies are:

American Sand Gravel Co.
Lake Sand Corp.
Construction Materials Co.
Great Lakes Transit Corp.
Canada-Atlantic Transit Co.
Interlake Steamship Co.
Manitowoc Cement Co.

The first three concerns named operate respectively the American, the Gilbert, and the Sandmaster, sandboats, which make almost daily trips through the main branch of the river. During the last four months the Gilbert forced the opening of the Michigan avenue bridge 241 times, keeping it open a total of 15 hours. The records of the American and the Sandmaster were about the same.

Calls Situation Unjust.

"I am in full sympathy with the move to keep the bridges down," said Ald. Guernsey. "It should be plain to anybody that a great injustice is being worked on the many persons using the streets for the benefit of the few shippers who use the river. I hope that we will at least be able to lengthen the bridge closed periods as a result of our hearings."

Ald. Guernsey pointed out that the sanction of the war department must be obtained to any change, in view of the government's control over navigation. He said he would ask the local army engineer to send a representative to the hearing Thursday.

PRIESTS ORDERED BY POPE TO QUIT BANK BUSINESS

Crash of Big Concern Brings Demand.

BY DAVID DARRAH.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
[Copyright: 1928: By The Chicago Tribune.]

ROME, Dec. 8.—Following the removal of all directors of two of the biggest Catholic banks, the Piccolo Credito of Ferrara and Credito Meridoniale of Naples, Pope Pius today sent a circular to all bishops in Italy. The pontiff urges that all priests who are members of the governing councils or directors of Catholic banks or agricultural savings banks, shall retire from such positions.

The difficulties a number of other Catholic banks are experiencing in Italy now are said to be due in part to the recent rise in their shares on the Italian stock exchange. These banks, which for a long time had been unable to speculate, took advantage of the sudden opportunity, and now face the possibility of being left high and dry. The speculation resulted in the crash of the Ferrara bank, whose administrator was sent to "confino" for five years.

Government Offers Aid.

The Bank of Italy, under government advice, has agreed to help out the Catholic banks if the Catholic managements are dispensed with. Hence the pope's circular was said to be inspired by a desire not to see any more Catholic directors removed. He prefers them to retire of their own accord.

Whether the new managements gain the confidence that the former parish priests enjoyed as bank directors remains to be seen. The first effects, it is feared, will be a decrease in savings deposits until small investors have recovered from the shock.

Calls Banking Situation Sound.

It was announced today that the Italian banking situation generally is so firm that Sig. Stringher, governor of the Bank of Italy, has decided not to renew the $125,000,000 credit which was obtained a year ago to back the stabilization of currency at 19 lire to the dollar, and resume gold payments. This credit will be allowed to lapse on Dec. 20.

Bandits Raid Branch Bank in Columbus, O., of $6,000

Columbus, O., Dec. 8.—[U.P.]—Four bandits, one of them armed with a machine gun, held up the Linden branch of the Citizens Trust and Savings company here today and escaped with between $6,000 and $7,000. Eighteen customers in the bank were forced to a rear room. Employés were compelled to lie on the floor.

MOVE TO STEM STOCK CRASH IS REPORTED IN N. Y.

Bankers Hold Parley in Morgan Offices.

ers who had placed orders late will not know until Monday whether they were executed. The total turnover in Radio was 52,600 shares. It has dropped from a high of 420 a share on Wednesday for a net loss of 124 points in three days.

Just what happened to Radio is not known. The stock has been breaking for two days along with the rest of the market. Many speculators in Radio had been of the opinion that directors were preparing to recommend a five-for-one split up and the inauguration of dividends. The directors met last Friday but failed to act on the subject. Part of the selling may be traced to disappointment of speculators.

Tape Watchers Nervous.

Throughout the financial district the brokerage houses were crowded today, but there was an entirely different atmosphere from that which prevailed during the rise. The tape watchers were nervous and solemn faced as they saw their profits melt away. For the last three days the customers' rooms in the brokerage houses have been packed as tightly as the case of a watch.

Last night margins calls went out by the thousands. The response was poor and big brokerage houses reported that the margin demands issued today will meet with even a larger percentage of refusals.

Brokerage houses did not hesitate today to sell out customers who failed to come through and a part of the trouble was attributed to this forced selling.

"Pets" Are Hard Hit.

Today's break as measured by the combined averages published in THE TRIBUNE was not as wide as that of Thursday but it was wider in individual issues which have been regarded as the "speculative pets." The averages covering 50 representative stocks showed a net loss today of $5.47, compared with a loss of $6.20 on Thursday.

The averages embracing twenty-five industrial issues showed a larger decline today then ever before, $9.49, against $8.96 on Thursday. The rail averages, also covering twenty-five stocks, were down $1.45 today, against $3.45 on Thursday. The combined averages at their low today showed a decrease of $22.44 from the high for the year set on Nov. 30.

The industrial averages at their low today were off $35.32 from their high of the year, established also on Nov. 30, while the rail averages at their low showed a decline of $10.03 from the year's high, reached on Nov. 27.

EXPECT WALL STREET TO PAY 100 MILLIONS IN BONUS CHECKS

New York, Dec. 8.—[Special.]—At least 100 million dollars, it is estimated, will be paid this year end in bonuses to the staffs of banks and brokerage and security houses in Wall street. Last year something like 50 million dollars was paid out.

Perhaps the largest distribution announced last year was a full year's extra pay to employés of one brokerage house. The grapevine telegraph in the financial district now reports that at least one firm contemplates a 100 weeks' salary.

This virtual equivalent of two years' pay may well be duplicated by other concerns in a year that has seen stock trading carried to unprecedented heights.

The index of prosperity in the brokerage business is the amount of trading on the stock exchange. Throughout this year records in trading have been broken repeatedly.

Total trades this year on the stock exchange already have gone well over 830 million shares, while for the same period last year exchanges amounted to something over 530 million shares.

Sues to Block Elimination of Calumet Harbor Fund

Henry W. Lee, publisher of the Calumet Record, and a member of Mayor Thompson's citizens' committee on the Calumet harbor project, filed a bill in the Superior court yesterday to prevent the $1,200,000 Calumet harbor fund from being eliminated from the January, 1928, appropriation bill. The pleading asks that County Clerk Robert M. Sweitzer be directed to ignore the city council's amendment of Nov. 21, which eliminated the harbor appropriation to avert a deficit in the corporate fund.

COLORED WOMAN ENDS LIFE.

Blanche Baker, colored, 38 years old, was found yesterday hanging to a tree in the rear yard of her home, Fifteenth avenue and Roosevelt road, Broadview. She had committed suicide.

"Bishop's—Furriers since 1860!" Grandma will tell you that way back, when grandfather bought her a sealskin dolman for Christmas, there was only one place to buy fine furs—Bishop's!

Today . . . when the complexities of the fashionable furs make it even more essential that you select from a furrier with an established reputation for reliability . . . women still insist on Bishop's furs! Here you will find all the newest Parisian modes, all the newest furs . . . marked reasonably and accurately, with the correct name of the true pelt on every coat. All sizes—for children—misses—women—and the larger woman, who also wants to be smartly dressed.

What could make a finer and more acceptable gift for "Her" than a fur coat from Bishop's?

It pays to trade where you trade in safety

THE UNITED STATES AND BRITISH SEA POWER.

It is easy to sympathize with any apprehensions, definite or vague, which Great Britain may have of American naval potentialities. Even our big navy men know that the United States is not purposely seeking control of the sea, but the British could hardly trust implicitly to that for the future, and probably they do not know it there as well as it is realized here.

The United States could afford, without much strain, to build the ships. It could increase its navy without greatly pinching the taxpayer until numerically it was supreme, and if a navy, well manned and intelligently commanded, can control the sea, it would have control. The effort which would be required for Great Britain to meet competitive building might be exhausting.

It has been Great Britain's experience and observation that since the days of the Spanish armada, whenever another nation has seen an opportunity, half an opportunity, or even a fighting chance to challenge for sea control, there has been a fight for it. Thus the challengers have been the Spanish, the Dutch, the French, and, in our own day, the Germans. The whole future of Great Britain as an empire and as other than an insular kingdom of diminishing importance has been at stake in each fight.

The British experience, then, has been that whenever there was a naval potentiality there has been an ambition to develop it and assert it as a dominant fact in the world. The prize has been too tempting to be resisted. The American people, in spite of their great inland preoccupations, are not strangers to the sea. They have had their maritime greatness. Their wealth increases. They are seeking markets abroad. They are making investments abroad. Their money is flowing around the world. They are seeking raw materials everywhere. Their imperium is a commercial and industrial one. All this points to control of the sea, to a great navy.

The British must at least wonder if for once logic is to lose its inevitability. Is America to give them their first experience with a nation not accepting its opportunity, putting it aside as negligible, and going its way without disturbing the naval equation? If this should be true as to the present, is there a guaranty of it for the future? The British look at the question with realistic eyes. Americans do not. They have not had much experience with cause and effect on the sea. They may know that the lack of a navy threatened to ruin them in one war and that the possession of one was instrumental in saving them in two, but they do not in these days directly relate their well being and even their subsistence to their ability to keep their overseas trade going all the time, in war and in peace and regardless of what tries to stop it.

An appreciation of that relation is always dominant with the British. They see their ships come in and go out and they know that if the power to send them and to bring them back were taken away Great Britain might continue to exist, but it would be in vastly different conditions.

The United States shows no signs of seeking control of the sea. Almost always it keeps its naval program down to the minimum needed for the defense of its shores. It rarely considers even the adequate protection of its trade as a neutral when other nations are at war. It seems to rely on the idea that other nations would regard it as undesirable to offend when it wanted to be peaceable. That was not true in the late war, either as to Great Britain or as to Germany. Nevertheless, it remains the American reliance and nevertheless the British can hardly take their eyes off the possibilities. When the two nations approach the naval question it is in two moods, one of rational doubt, the other of unreasoned confidence.

QUESTION PESTS.

From a young man in Indiana with a thesis to write and a bachelor's degree on the horizon, comes a questionnaire on numerous intimacies and details of THE TRIBUNE'S business. It is a polite paper and the author would appreciate comment and statistics that would take several hard working newspaper men, from the publisher to the auditor's clerk, several hours of careful attention. From other young men, and many not so young, come other questionnaires and query programs. They pile up on the desks of administrators, executives, business men and workers, and the million marchers toward degrees—A. B., A. M., Ph.D., et cetera, et cetera—wait hopefully and sometimes get replies.

Over the nine hole course of learning America advances. Up hill and down, to high school, to college, to the freshman year, to sophomore, junior, senior, bachelor, master, doctor, and to even greater altitudes of standardized glory the learners go in regular procedure, and the questionnaire is carried on in some form over them all. It is a club for middle distance. It is a solemn instrument and a tool for ordinary minds that gets a few results, perhaps of more or less importance. It standardizes certain kinds of data, but its faults are great, and its value in constructive research usually is doubtful.

The questionnaire is a kind of "get-rich-quick" research plan that often throws upon a scattered group the burden of a job that should be done directly by the scholar or assistants under his control. Sometimes it is justified, but more often it is but a broadcast interview and the answers may mean many things. Too often the questionnaire is the refuge of helpless and amateur scholarship that has no other resource.

Pests appear in modern times with singular persistence, and the questionnaire ranks high among the major pests today. Advancement brings its penalties, and with new learning and invention come their correlated pests. Though no one denies that the works and businesses of this day should be studied carefully with all the facts collected, executives and business men in general will sign up en masse in the anti-questionnaire society.

FRENZIED VOLSTEAD.

The minutes of the house appropriations committee giving the record of the testimony of James N. Doran, prohibition commissioner, when the bureau's budget for 1930 was under consideration, will interest any American who is watching this experiment in sumptuary law. Dr. Doran said that if congress wanted to engage in the police business successfully it would need an appropriation of 300 million dollars and a new system of United States courts covering the land. Otherwise the government must continue to give such enforcement as it has, whether that be regarded as a failure or not.

Mrs. Willebrandt, assistant attorney general in charge of liquor prosecutions, admitted in the annual report of the department that efforts to stop even the imports declared through the Canadian customs were mainly futile, the traffic having grown to over 1,000,000 gallons the last year of record.

Dr. Doran said the policy of complete federal policing and prosecution was for congressional decision. He could say what it would cost. Congress could say what was to be done. For nibbling at the problem, as in the past, the prohibition bureau wants approximately $36,000,000, and promises nothing much more than has been done heretofore. About $19,000,000 of the coast guard appropriation is intended for the support of the healthy, young, quick shooting killers who, under government inspiration and protection, already have an impressive Tombstone record, including the innocent along with professionals of the purveying trade.

Does any citizen quickly put his finger on any other law of the United States which would require $300,000,000 a year and a country-wide system of new federal justice mills to enforce? Not even the fourteenth and fifteenth amendments would need that. They could be put in effect merely by sending the army south again on its usual subsistence charge.

By the free statement of the chief of prohibition enforcement, who is for and not against his job, it would take a congressional convulsion to give anything that the government would regard as enforcement. Shall we say that this represents the extent of criminality in the United States? It couldn't. If it did there wouldn't be any United States if in addition to everything which hitherto has been regarded as lawlessness there were a new phase of criminality which required $300,000,000 a year and a new network of judiciary to put it down.

Prohibition enforcement is dealing with crime only in the most restricted sense. It is encountering a resisting citizenship, otherwise orderly and lawful, to whom the Volstead act is offensive in principle and in practice. It is contrary to their inherited ideas of the proper function of government. Their tradition and consequently their idea has been that an American adult citizen of good intent and good character was an individual with a conscience, with the power of self-control and self-discipline, and that it was his right to decide as to most of his personal habits for himself, to be checked in them if he did wrong and not on the theory that with his freedom he might do wrong.

The eighteenth amendment has not stamped this fundamental principle out of a large body of citizenship, and consequently the Volstead act fails as no other law in the country fails. No other law so rests upon a denial of the doctrines of law. The explanation of the conditions which Dr. Doran admits and describes is simple and transparent.

The remedy likewise is plain. It is to repeal the Volstead act before the frantic fanatics who see it fail upset the whole system of American government trying to enforce it.

Editorial of the Day

THE LAW OF THE TYRANT.

[Battle Creek, Mich., Enquirer-News.]

THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE continues to be exercised about the Michigan law.

This fact renews the suggestion that THE TRIBUNE might find enough situations in Chicago and in Illinois to engage its attention and absorb all the nervous excitement it is able to work up.

The fault found with the Michigan situation is that a man has been sent to the penitentiary for life for having a pint of booze.

THE TRIBUNE says this is "the law of the tyrant." These are big words.

Reduced to simple terms, the Michigan situation is that, under the "habitual criminal" act, a man automatically gets longer sentences the more felonies he commits.

The man in question has committed four felonies, and this gets him a life sentence.

The Michigan law designates as felonies things which are not, in their very nature, felonious.

The solution would seem to be simple enough to make unnecessary the large amount of attack that has been made upon Michigan's law and Michigan's institutions.

The solution apparently is to change the classification of felonies, now that the punishment for felonies has been made so severe.

AM I IN LOVE?

BY THE REV. W. B. NORTON, PH. D.
[Religious Editor Chicago Tribune.]

Multitudes of the married, the affianced or those contemplating becoming engaged are pondering the question seriously, Am I really in love, or am I simply the victim of a temporary infatuation or merely of a pleasing fancy?

Multitudes of others are wondering whether they truly love God and have a genuine experience of fellowship with him, or whether their religion is a matter of form, self-interest or conformity to custom.

I desire in this editorial to help both classes of those puzzled, for I believe that love, human and divine, may be tested by the same general principles. "Love is of God," said St. John, and we believe this is true whether it is the mother's love for her child, or the love between husband and wife, or between lovers who are dwelling in that ecstatic state which precedes marriage.

The first test of love is delight in the person and not in his or her possessions.

One of the beautiful things in the last hectic presidential campaign was said by Mrs. Smith, wife of Gov. Alfred E. Smith, just before election day. She was asked where she expected to live after election and after her husband was no longer governor. "I don't care where I live so long as the governor is with me," she replied. A love that depends on wealth, a palatial home, automobiles, grand opera, trips to Europe and that would fade if these luxuries once possessed were taken away is not real love.

When Satan tempted Job he told the Almighty that if Job were stripped of all his possessions he would no longer serve him. The test was applied. Job lost cattle, lands, health and children. Finally his wife in despair demanded of him, "Curse God and die." The reply of this steadfast lover of God was, "Though he slay me, yet will I trust him."

Another test of love is interest in the circumstantial.

A love letter is not read simply for information. It is a poor love letter that will not bear several times reading and then be carried near the heart to be read again. This is why a ribbon, a flower, any trifle, is cherished. There are no little things between lovers; everything is important, a smile, a frown, every changing mood.

This I believe also is the explanation of God's words, "But the very hairs of your head are all numbered," "A sparrow shall not fall to the ground without your Father." God shows his love for us by his interest in every circumstance of our lives, just as a young father and mother go into ecstasy over baby's first tooth. Unless the Bible is God's love letter to us and we read it again and again with pleasure and not by compulsion, we are not deeply in love with God.

A third test of love is joy in sacrifice.

Many persons are called to suffer, even for the sake of others, who do so because there is no way they can escape. The sacrifice is one of misery, not of joy. Where there is true love, sacrifice is a thing of gladness. Did you ever see a lover afraid of rain, snow, heat or cold, if by braving them he could meet or serve the object of his love? Men and women have crossed oceans and continents, endured sickness, pain and poverty and done so smilingly for the sake of human love.

This likewise has been and is true of divine love. Bunyan, whose 300th anniversary the world is now gratefully observing, accepted the sacrifice of years in Bedford jail because of his love for God, and "Pilgrim's Progress" has gladdened millions of human hearts because of its Christian optimism. Paul and Silas sang when in the dungeon and the other prisoners heard them. Of the early disciples it was said, "They took joyfully the spoiling of their goods." Of the Christ, the Son of God, it was said that "for the joy that was set before him he endured the cross, despising shame." "The love of Christ constraineth us," said Paul. Love was in him like a dynamo driving him on to almost unbelievable and continuous sacrifice. His recital of what he suffered has sometimes been called Paul's salary. Here it is summed up in II. Cor., xi., 24-28, "Of the Jews five times received I forty stripes save one, thrice was I beaten with rods, once was I stoned, thrice I suffered shipwreck, a night and a day have I been in the deep; in journeyings often, in perils of rivers, in perils of robbers, in perils from mine own countrymen, in perils from the gentiles, in perils in the city, in perils in the wilderness, in perils in the sea, in perils among false brethren; in labor and travail, in watchings often, in hunger and thirst, in fastings often, in cold and nakedness. Beside those things that are without, there is that which presseth on me daily, anxiety for all the churches."

A sure and final test of love is pain at separation.

It is easy to go to the train where mere friends depart on a journey, wave your hand good-by, smile and wish them God speed with all sincerity and then go about your own work or pleasure with a mind at ease and a heart undisturbed. But when true lovers separate there is pain. It seems as though a part of one's self has been torn from the body. The cold sweat will come on the brow. Nature looks drab and the heart refuses to be comforted. It is a good test of lovers to be separated for a while. If interest dies as time goes on, delayed letters cause no anxiety, the thought of a reunion produces no exultation, it may be rightfully inferred there is no real love.

Separation from God is the chief sorrow to one who truly loves God. If the only dread of the future is fear of punishment, if the only thought of heaven is a desire for peace, rest and freedom from pain, the underlying motive is selfishness. The Presbyterian catechism says, "The chief end of man is to glorify God and enjoy him forever." To the child of the world this is a barren prospect, but to one who believes that the greatest of the commandments is, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind," and that the greatest spiritual attainment is to know the love of God that passeth knowledge, the prospect of loving God forever is more glorious than pearly gates or streets of gold.

This pain at separation is the only explanation of the cry of agony which came from the Christ as he hung upon the cross, "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" It was not a cry of physical pain but a heart cry which recognized the love and presence of God as the one supreme good. We think this was only a temporary sense of separation, for the Christ had just said to the malefactor by his side, "This day shalt thou be with me in paradise," but it was a shadow that passed over his soul that seemed to hang like a veil between him and his Father. Pain at separation is the final test of love, human or divine.

FAVORITE HYMNS

BY A. J. GORDON.

My Jesus, I love thee, I know thou art mine,
For thee all the follies of sin I resign;
My gracious Redeemer, my Savior art thou;
If ever I loved thee, my Jesus, 'tis now.

I love thee because thou hast first loved me,
And purchased my pardon on Calvary's tree;
I love thee for wearing the thorns on thy brow;
If ever I loved thee, my Jesus, 'tis now.

I will love thee in life, I will love thee in death,
And praise thee as long as thou lendest me breath;
And say when the death dew lies cold on my brow,
If ever I loved thee, my Jesus, 'tis now.

In mansions of glory and endless delight,
I'll ever adore thee in heaven so bright;
I'll sing with the glittering crown on my brow,
If ever I loved thee, my Jesus, 'tis now.

MILK SICKNESS.

PROF. A. A. HANSEN thinks there is considerable milk sickness, especially among farmers in the upper Mississippi valley. The disease is not recognized, being called ptomaine poisoning, acute gastritis, or other kinds of digestive disturbance. People do not recognize it for what it is because they have heard a lot about ptomaine poisoning and almost nothing about milk sickness. The doctors do not recognize it because they are never told about it in medical college and medical books do not mention it. If a physician should report a death as due to milk sickness, the registrar would hold up the certificate because his official list mentions no such cause.

In a report of 23 cases of milk sickness, some of which were fatal and many of which were serious, the physicians in attendance had correctly diagnosed 12. Among the other 11 were most of the mild cases, some of whom had not called in a physician.

The reason city people who drink country produced milk do not suffer from it is because they use mixed milk from a large number of cows, produced on many farms. This is another of the dangers of using milk from a single cow. The poison is carried in butter and other products as well as in the milk itself.

While it is most in evidence in August and the latter part of the summer, it may be caused by milch cows eating hay that contains the poisonous plant, and it has resulted from their eating frozen plants. When a farmer gets sick, particularly during July, August, and September, with symptoms that suggest food poisoning, Prof. Hansen thinks milk sickness should also be suspected. He should figure out how much milk he and his family have been drinking. He should send some one out to see whether the stock are sick or have been sick recently. The dry stock, cows, bulls, and steers and the sheep and calves, should be examined for evidence of trembles and diarrhea. Cows in milk stand the poison better than dry cattle because they throw off much of it in the milk. The calf may be getting some part of what the mother cow throws off.

He should next send some one to the pasture to look for white snakeroot and see if it has been grazed. The inspection should include the cut hay if any is being fed. Finally, specimens of milk, butter, and weeds should be sent to some laboratory to be examined for tremetol.

RASH ON HANDS.

D. J. M. writes: 1. For nearly two years now, I have had a rash on my hand. It is very itchy. I am told it is eczema. Will sulphur ointment cure this? I have used it for some time without success.

2. I am underweight and would like to gain some weight. Would my condition be the cause of this rash?

REPLY.

1. Most persisting rashes on the hands are caused by exposure and by reason of occupation. What is there in your work that poisons your hands?

Sulphur ointment is good for eruptions caused by parasites. Why do you use it, especially since you have had no success with it?

2. Being under weight is not the cause of the rash.

To put on weight: Go to bed early and sleep nine hours. Do not worry or fret. Cultivate calm. Eat plenty of wholesome, substantial food. Eat a bowl of sugared rice and milk at bedtime.

AFRAID OF T. B.

E. S. writes: 1. I am a girl 17 years old and I have been told by my doctor that my pleura and pericardium are bound together. I have a continuous pain over my left breast. This pain is not severe.

2. Can tuberculosis result from this?

3. What is the treatment, if any?

REPLY.

1. If this is an old condition and is now inactive it is of no particular importance.

2. Many cases of consumption start as a tubercular pleura. If your pleura was tubercular, your lungs are in some danger. Your physician can advise you as to that.

3. No treatment is called for.

WANTS SETTLEMENT.

Chicago, Nov. 27.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I gave a district manager of a firm a sum of money for which I was to receive sample cases. He has left town keeping the money, and left me no sample cases. The firm writes that he was their district manager all right but that they know nothing of the transaction between him and me. I would like to know if I can collect the sum paid to the manager from the firm by which he was then employed?

H. J. W.

Depends on all the facts as to whether he was held out as being an independent contractor or as agent for a firm. The latter appears more probable. We advise you to employ an attorney if the amount involved is sufficient to make court proceedings worth while.

STREET HOLES REPAIRED.

Chicago, Nov. 23.—[Friend of the People.]—There are two holes in the paving in front of our house and our neighbor's on West 105th place, which have been there for over a year.

They were made when they put up our houses and, as I understand it from the builders, they have written in several times to have this repaired and there has never been any action taken on this.

Will you kindly let me know who I shall get in touch with regarding this matter?

E. W. S.

Report is made that necessary repairs have been made to the asphalt pavement in the 1600 block on West 105th place by our vehicle tax repair forces.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Rumors generally credited but unconfirmed are in circulation that Gen. Pleasanton has been appointed to command the Army of the Potomac in place Gen. Meade. It is reported that Gens. Sedgwick and Warren were tendered the command but declined to accept the appointment.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—I. N. Arnold of Chicago served notice in the house that he will introduce a bill to prohibit slavery forever in the territories included in the President's emancipation proclamation. Mr. Washburne of Illinois offered a resolution presenting the thanks of congress to Maj. Gen. Grant and his army and providing that the President cause a medal to be struck for Gen. Grant in the name of the people of the United States.

CHICAGO.—Myron W. Baldwin of Rockford, Ill., and Elizabeth, second daughter of A. H. Hoge of Chicago, were married on Dec. 8 by the Rev. J. B. Stewart. Friend W. Lowell of the Chicago bar and Miss Eliza J. Leesley were married at the home of the bride's mother in Bowmanville on Dec. 6 by Judge Bradwell. In Rockford, Ill., W. W. Clark of Chicago and Miss Isabel A. Burton of Rockford were married by the Rev. A. P. Mead.

CHICAGO.—Mayor Harrison, according to a credible report, has two of his aldermanic friends acting with the boodle gang in council in connection with the fifty year street railway franchise ordinance. When the time comes, however, they will vote the right way and then will furnish evidence to send to the penitentiary all who have committed crimes against their oaths. With these "pigeons" and the Municipal Voters' league aldermen who have remained steadfast to their ante-election pledges, the mayor will have enough votes to sustain a veto. A detective watching the gang said: "The mayor has the gang aldermen just where he wants them. They can't get away with the goods. In two or three days pressure will begin to come. Wives of more than one alderman will be told that if their husbands vote for the ordinance they will go to the penitentiary."

CHICAGO.—Ferdinand W. Peck, commissioner general of the United States to the Paris exposition, was given a banquet at the Auditorium hotel by representative business and professional men of Chicago.

SAN FRANCISCO.—The jury was completed in the trial of Mrs. Cordelia Botkin on the charge of having murdered Mrs. John P. Dunning, otherwise known as Elizabeth Dunning, by means of poison candy sent through the mails from San Francisco to Dover, Del.

TREVES, Rhenish Prussia.—A battalion of American infantry has entrained at Treves and left for Coblenz, a four hour run, to maintain order ahead of the arrival of the main third army forces. They are scheduled to arrive today at noon. The last German forces will cross the Rhine today.

PARIS.—Premier Clemenceau may act as president of the French delegation to the peace conference. It is reported that the presence of President Wilson as head of the American delegation had led to this decision.

CHICAGO. — Employés of Marshall Field & Co. honored twenty-one of their co-workers who gave their lives in the war. More than 4,000 of the employés held a memorial at the Auditorium theater where a twenty-one gold starred flag was raised. Executive heads, including President John G. Shedd, Vice Presidents James Simpson and John McKinley, Treasurer Fred H. Reynolds, and Secretary Kersey Coates Reed, occupied boxes. Dr. Frank Gunsaulus delivered the memorial address.

CHICAGO.—Attorney James H. Wilkerson of Glencoe has been appointed a member of the state public utilities commission by Gov. Frank O. Lowden, to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Fred E. Sterling of Rockford, state treasurer elect.

NO CHANGE.

Chicago, Nov. 28.—Is there any reason why cab drivers should not be equipped with money changers and have an adequate amount of currency to cover normal needs?

The cab riding public too often hears that old gag, "Sorry, but I haven't any change," and submits to this mild form of larceny—ranging from one-quarter to one-half of the actual fare—being in a hurry and, therefore, unwilling to wait until change is procured by the driver.

The arrangement suggested would result in an increase in the use of taxis, and thus eliminate the change racket. I do not advocate the abolishment of tipping, but the size of the tip should be left to the judgment of the cab user, considering that very often his salary is no greater than that of the driver.

ARTHUR L. CHIAPPE.

CONCERNING DOGS.

Chicago, Nov. 30.—Differences of opinion make horse racing, the stock market, and political parties, so may I not be permitted a word in behalf of that urbane and kindly breed which the American Kennel club chooses to regard as "the shepherd dog," and which the public calls generally by its college title of "police dog," and which a recent writer chose to regard as "Kreig Hunden"! The frank French speak of them as "wolf dogs."

I see no shame nor cause for fright in such ancestry, because, after reading Darwin's "Descent of Man," a good deal of the works of Nietzsche, apropos of the "Blond Beast," and some of the narratives of Suetonius, there seems to be no particular reason for a human being to be uppish toward the descendants of wolves.

Von Stephanitz, a founder of the German Shepherd Dog society, writes of "dogs suitable for export," and I am moved to suspect that a recent writer in the Voice of the People must have been peculiarly favored with obtaining dogs of that strain.

Any one who will take the trouble to raise one of these dogs, or who will take reasonable care in selection of a grown one, or who will observe the dignity of these dogs as some of them walk through Chicago's loop, will realize the absurdity of the statement that they are naturally ferocious, or that they will become so at the age of 2 years. President Elect Hoover has one, and he has no penchant for the ferocious. Certainly the breed that is the most popular in Europe and America cannot be a breed of man eaters by preference.

THE DEPTHS OF MODERN CRIME.

THE SOUTH.

Vicksburg, Miss., Nov. 29.—The writer marvels that so able and great a paper as THE TRIBUNE should permit itself to indulge in the doctrine of hate for any section or any wing of any party. THE TRIBUNE is known throughout the south for the bitter editorials it sometimes publishes about the south.

The writer has a sister-in-law who for many years has lived near Chicago who thinks THE TRIBUNE is a great paper. She is of the old south, reared in its best traditions, and recks her lineage of the south's best. How she can be so fond of THE TRIBUNE, whose guns, belching across hundreds of miles, so often rake her own section with withering fire, is a mystery to the writer and the writer's wife, her sister.

PAUL M. POLK.

DEFENDS NULLIFICATION.

Oak Park, Ill., Nov. 27.—The impression one gets from reading THE TRIBUNE'S editorials leads one to believe that the south is all in the wrong regarding constitutional representation. You take the stand that it would be far better if representation were based upon the voting strength of the several states rather than upon their population. I agree that it would be fairer representation—at least it would be representation by the people interested.

An abstract viewpoint considers that nullification of the fourteenth amendment encourages class rule and bourgeois aristocracy, but it is better, though admittedly unconstitutional, than to submit to the domination of local government by the ignorant voter and the disruptive and criminal forces. I believe in protecting the legal status of the Negro and foreign nationals, and giving them an equal chance to make a living, become educated, and enjoy freedom and happiness if they are so inclined, but not to give them preponderant strength at the polls.

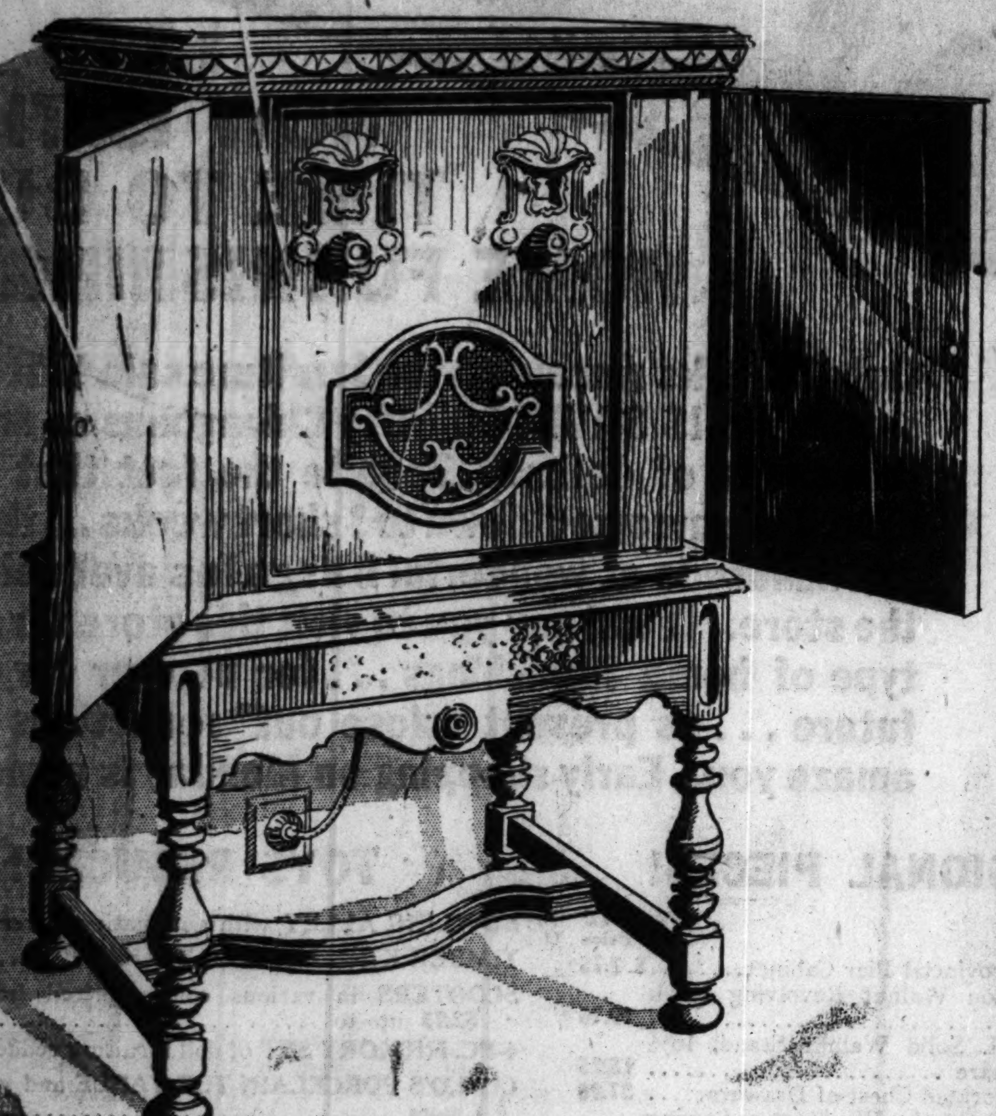
"The Aristocrat of Radio"



New RCA—Radiola 62

A. C. Electric 8-Tube Superheterodyne with RCA Dynamic Loud Speaker

Like the Rolls Royce in the field of motor cars, so the RCA Radiola stands out in the world of radio—the unquestioned leader, the aristocrat of the air. And now, just in time for Christmas, Hartman's present the latest achievement of the Radio Corporation of America—the Radiola 62, A. C. Electric 8-Tube Superheterodyne, in a magnificent cabinet with built-in RCA Dynamic Loud Speaker. A more perfect and more superb combination of highest-type receiving and reproduction apparatus can hardly be imagined. The enormous power emanating from the 9 radiotrons (1 rectifier tube), the unbelievable selectivity of the superheterodyne principle and the marvelous reproductive qualities of the RCA Dynamic Speaker combine to make this unquestionably "the last word in radio." It is an outfit, truly worthy of the magnificent cabinet (illustrated above), at which it is offered.

The price for this RCA Radiola 62, complete with cabinet, built-in RCA Dynamic Speaker, but less radiotrons, is $375

New RCA Radiola 60

A. C. Electric 8-Tube Superheterodyne

Here is a new RCA feature offered by Hartman's in time for Christmas. It is the drastic price reduction on the new RCA Radiola 60, 8-Tube Superheterodyne. The Radio Corporation of America is the only manufacturer producing the A. C. Superheterodyne, and this is the first time that an A. C. Electric Superheterodyne has ever been sold for less than $150. Not by virtue of its 8 powerful A. C. Radiotrons alone, but also because of many new features in design, Radiola 60 outperforms other radio receivers with sensitivity, selectivity and tone fidelity, that is amazing. Its distance-getting ability is so great that you can easily reach stations far away from the United States.

Up to this time, Radiola 60, as illustrated above, was priced, less radiotrons, at $175. Now you may obtain this great receiver, less radiotrons, at $147

Eight radiotrons and one rectifier tube are priced at $35

The new RCA Loud Speaker 103, of artistic appearance and marvelous tone quality, is priced at......... $37.50

HOW U. S. GRANT FELT WHEN HE LOST HIS RICHES

Philadelphia, Pa., Dec. 8.—(AP)—For the first time since the financial crash that sent Gen. U. S. Grant from a mansion home to a modest cottage for the remainder of his life many years ago, the inner feelings of the former President are revealed in a letter he wrote to his friend, the late George W. Childs, Philadelphia publisher.

The letter is one of a collection of rare manuscripts, letters and historic documents to be sold at auction here Monday.

Finds Surplus Gone.

Written in the hand of Gen. Grant and dated May 15, 1884, the letter reads:

"The events of the last few days are much more disastrous than I supposed when the failure first occurred. The night before the failure I supposed the firm of Grant & Ward had a surplus of about $2,400,000 over and above the original capital of $400,000, as Ward reported, and the books of Grant & Ward at the time showed it, and that we were credited at the Marine bank with more than $660,000.

"Myself and my three sons had all that we possessed except real estate in the bank. We also believed that there was $1,300,000 of unpledged securities in the vaults.

In Different Living Style.

"The catastrophe throws us all into a different style of living. Fred and I have taken a little house in Morristown, N. J., where we will live together. U. S. Jr. also has taken one there. My Long Branch cottage will, therefore, be for rent. If you have a friend who wants it, I will be glad to let him have it. I do not want it to go to other than a pleasant neighbor.

"I could bear all the pecuniary loss if that were all, but that I could be so long deceived by a man whom I had such opportunity to know is humiliating. Then, too, to have my name and that of my family associated with what now proves to have been nothing but a fraud for at least two years back. When you met me in the office the day before the doors were closed, I believed Ward to be worth $1,000,000 himself alone."

Mrs. Poyer, Pioneer in Maine Township, Is Dead

Mrs. Matilda Poyer, for 75 years a resident of Maine township, died on Friday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Louis Wolfram, 689 Laurel avenue, Des Plaines. She was 88 years old. Born in New York, she came with her parents to Maine township, where she married Lewis Poyer, a homesteader. Since his death, 22 years ago, Mrs. Poyer has made her home with her daughter. She is survived by another daughter, four sons, twelve grandchildren, and eight great-grandchildren. The funeral will be held tomorrow at 1 p. m. at the Congregational church, Des Plaines, and interment will be in the Town of Maine cemetery.

DEATH NOTICES

In Memoriam

BESIO—John William Besio. In sad but loving memory of our Jack.

One year ago our dear baby son left us
To be with the Father above.
Sweet are the memories of his prattle and laughter,
But sad are our hearts for the one we so loved.
FATHER, MOTHER, AND BROTHER.

BLOCK—Mary Block. In memory of our beloved mother, who died three years ago today, Dec. 9, 1925.
LOVING DAUGHTERS, EDITH SENSKE AND HARRIET BEXTINE.

DORAN—Frederick Charles Doran. A tribute of love in memory of our dear grandson and nephew, son of Fred S. and Minnie Doran, nee Brueshaber, who left us five years ago today, Dec. 9, 1923:

Ask us do we miss him;
Home is such a lonely place;
Oft we think we hear his footsteps
Or we see his smiling face.
Around his grave we often linger
When the sun is setting low,
Thinking of the home that's lonely
Without the boy we treasured so.
THE FAMILY.

MAYER—Anna Mayer. In memory of our dear mother who passed away one year ago today.

Mother, dear, you have journeyed onward,
Left us lonely, that 'tis true.
In silent grief we watch and wait,
Looking into the heavens of blue.
YOUR LOVING HUSBAND AND CHILDREN.

Fraternal Notices.

Why "Hursen" Funerals Lead

Hursen's 3 "funeral-homes" in Chicago make up the largest and most remarkable institution of its kind in America.

Hursen has built up this business giant on truth in advertising. Often, stabbing with his trenchant pen, he let daylight through the ribs of the old "combine."

He firmly established his independence. He did it alone. He won, because he told the truth. There was no shadow-boxing. He did not fight an imaginary foe, nor imaginary evils, and set himself up as a crusader. He did not imitate. He originated. He engaged in no libel. He mentioned no names. His advertising was clean.

Clean, true advertising reflects the man behind. Wherever Hursen attacked and criticized he was ready with the remedy.

His remedy was lower prices than ever before, higher quality, no graft, an unheard-of personal service brought to unexcelled perfection, elegant and peaceful surroundings, big space, quietness, no gloominess, employes of worth and refinement, and automobile equipment that has no equal in America.

The most elegant funerals in Chicago are "by Hursen," Chicago's independent funeral director.

Call Hursen, of course!

Greater Volume Now Brings Lower Prices on the

New Frigidaire

The unprecedented public acceptance of the New Frigidaire has resulted in the greatest increase in volume in the history of the business.

Quiet operation, surpassing beauty and lasting economy have further increased an already overwhelming preference of buyers everywhere.

This tremendous volume has resulted in further production economies. In accordance with the fixed policy of General Motors these economies are being passed on to the public.

Savings as great as $90

We therefore announce a sweeping reduction in the prices of household models, amounting to as much as $90, effective December 10th.

A comparison of Frigidaire value, with any other electric refrigerator will emphasize the importance of this further reduction of prices.

We are glad to make this announcement at the present time for it will enable many additional thousands of homes to have the advantages of Frigidaire Automatic Refrigeration for Christmas.

The New Frigidaires, and details of prices and terms are now available at Frigidaire display rooms everywhere.

MAN SHORTAGE WEAKENS NAVY, WILBUR ASSERTS

Blames Congress for Drop in Enlistments.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 8.—[Special.]—Secretary of the Navy Wilbur today informed President Coolidge that the fighting efficiency of the United States fleet has been impaired during the last year by a serious shortage in enlisted strength.

Summing up the general personnel situation in his annual report on the state of the naval establishment, Mr. Wilbur stated frankly that the man power supplied by congress is inadequate for the efficient operation of the navy in peace time and insufficient to insure the proper state of preparedness for war time expansion.

Mr. Wilbur warned that the personnel situation is acute and that the efficiency of the fleet will continue to drop unless steps are taken to remedy it.

Loses 8,000 Men.

Figures produced by the secretary disclosed that the personnel strength of the surface navy has suffered a loss of 8,000 men during the last five years. The present naval enlisted strength is 85,250.

The growing demands of the air navy for additional personnel, both commissioned and enlisted, the commissioning of new vessels and the failure of congress to supply funds for maintaining a larger enlisted strength were cited by Secretary Wilbur as major causes for the present shortage in both commissioned and enlisted strength. He pointed out that six thousand men had been transferred from the surface navy to the air army in the last five years.

Not only is the navy short of officers and men, but Mr. Wilbur reported that the tactical training of the fleet has been handicapped by the lack of 10,000 ton cruisers and aircraft carriers.

He reported the material condition of the fleet, with the exception of vessels being modernized, as much the same as a year ago when many vessels were in unsatisfactory condition. The secretary reported the ammunition reserve situation and the naval reserve situation as less satisfactory than a year ago.

Only in the field of aviation did Secretary Wilbur find cause for optimism. The secretary reported that marked advances had been made in the naval air arm during the last year. Mr. Wilbur said commissioning of the giant aircraft carriers, Lexington and Saratoga, had trebled the actual aircraft carrying capacity of the fleet and had greatly increased the usefulness of the naval aircraft.

In his discussion of the personnel situation the secretary emphasized the growing need for additional officers and enlisted men.

He urged the authorized ratio of officers to enlisted men be increased from the present 4 per cent to 6 per cent.

"The personnel allowances for ships and stations for the fiscal year 1928 were inadequate," Mr. Wilbur said. "During the last few years the personnel has been gradually reduced from 86,000 to 83,250.

"The minimum peace time requirement of the navy, in respect to personnel, is the maintenance of a force sufficient in number and of the highest professional attainments to provide the officers and men necessary for current operating plans of the fleet.

Cites Emergency Needs.

"Further provisions must be made for the rapid and great expansion of naval forces in the event of emergency. This expansion must be based upon the trained naval reserve and upon nucleus crews withdrawn from the regular navy for units of the emergency navy.

"The navy may be operated in peace time with a shortage of personnel, but at a cost of either reducing the number of vessels in commission below that necessary for the varied peace time activities of the navy and for the maintenance of a balanced fleet, or of reducing the personnel on board the individual vessels below the point where the efficiency of the ships can be properly maintained.

"A shortage requiring the reduction of vessels' allowances of personnel below the point of efficiency exists during this current fiscal year, and will increase in the future unless adequate measures are taken to forestall it."

Commissioned Men Short.

Referring to the shortage of commissioned personnel, Mr. Wilbur said it will be 1930 or possibly 1931 before the number of officers can be raised to the allowed strength of 5,499.

"This allowed strength is too small for further need," Mr. Wilbur continued.

"The ratio of officers to enlisted men was fixed at 4 per cent by the act of August, 1916, in contemplation of the navy then existing and in prospect. In the meantime, conditions have changed radically and the ratio of 4 per cent no longer meets the needs of the service.

"The rapid development of aviation and the increased proportion of smaller vessels in the fleet, combine to require a materially greater percentage of officers to men than did our navy in 1916.

"The authorized ratio of line officers to enlisted men should therefore be increased to 6 per cent."

Naval Aircraft Helps.

Mr. Wilbur reported progress in protecting battleships and cruisers against enemy aircraft. He also stated that the offensive strength of American naval aircraft had been improved. Modern, efficient anti-aircraft batteries for use against bombing and torpedo planes have been installed, he said, on the Maryland, West Virginia, and Colorado.

Similar batteries are ready for installation on the Tennessee and are in process of manufacture for the California, Oklahoma, and Nevada. Mr. Wilbur added that experimental tests are being conducted to develop a machine gun defense against low flying high speed airplanes.

200,000 PAID $10 EACH TO JOIN KLAN, SAYS INDIANA REPLY

Indianapolis, Ind., Dec. 8.—[Special.]—Two hundred thousand Indiana men have become members of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, paying a "Klectokon" of $10 each, since the order was admitted to the state, it was revealed in a statement of figures filed in the County court today by klan attorneys.

The statement was in answer to the action of Arthur L. Gilliom, attorney general, to dismiss the klan from Indiana and revoke its charter.

The petition of the attorney general contained many questions on klan activity, particularly in the period when it was headed by D. C. Stephenson.

The assertion was made that the political activities of the klan in Indiana were conducted separately from the Atlanta klan national headquarters, and the words "Don't Know" followed many of the queries on that point.

BREAK WINDOW, ROB SHOP.

Burglars threw a brick through the window of the Rose Dress shop, 4736 Sheridan road, early yesterday and escaped with dresses valued at $600.

GARY MERCHANT IS CONVICTED OF RECEIVING LOOT

Louis Goodman, owner of the principal department store in Gary, Ind., and of several small stores, was found guilty of receiving stolen interstate goods by a jury yesterday in Federal court at Hammond, Ind. Judge Thomas W. Slick will impose sentence Dec. 26.

Four witnesses for the government testified they stole the goods in the summer of 1925 and sold it to Goodman. The witnesses, who were convicted and served terms for the theft, are: Otto Scheichtel, operator of a store across the street from Goodman's; John and Neal Nordstrand and Lawrence Fay.

Goodman came to Gary soon after the founding of the town in 1906 and amassed a fortune by expanding his store, gaining a controlling interest in several others, and acquiring heavy real estate holdings.

Citizens' Board on Transit Holds First Meeting.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

Henry A. Blair and Frederick H. Rawson, receivers for the Chicago Railways company—the north and west side surface lines—will petition Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson tomorrow morning for the authority to purchase 100 new street cars at an estimated cost of $1,725,000, it was announced yesterday.

The receivers recommend a design of car new to Chicago, of front entrance center exit type, seating 61 passengers as compared with 51 in the most recent type of street car used in Chicago. It is planned that 60 will be bought by the west and north side lines and 40 by the south side company, and that the cost shall be met out of the special equipment fund established by the Illinois commerce commission in 1920. While this fund has insufficient cash at present, it is expected to be adequate when the cars are delivered.

Price of Cars Goes Up.

The average cost of 496 cars previously purchased was $13,289, as compared with an estimate of $17,250 per car for the new ones. A model of the design of the car proposed is scheduled for completion the latter part of this week.

In their petition the receivers relate that no cars have been acquired since 1926 and that the number of revenue riders in that time has increased about 17,000,000 annually.

While it is not related in the petition, the records show that since 1915 the increase in cars owned has been approximately 18 per cent, while the total rides on the system have gained about 45 per cent.

Perhaps a better method, however, would be to compare revenue rides with number of seats. In 1915, a year after the state utilities commission assumed supervision of the service to be supplied by the street car lines, the companies carried 627,731,550 revenue passengers in 3,230 cars with an aggregate of 137,985 seats. There were 4,548 paying passengers for each seat.

More Passengers Per Seat.

Now there is one street car seat for each 5,473 paying patrons, after more than a dozen years of state supervision of the service. The north and west side surface lines have been in the hands of receivers for approximately two years. In that period conditions have become worse so far as revenue passengers per seat are concerned. Just before the receivership the companies had one seat for each 1320 revenue passengers, while now the number is 5,473.

The ratio of more than 5,000 revenue riders per year for each street car seat appears to have been established as a policy. No alderman has made a serious effort to lower that ratio in the last two years when a petition to the federal court might have received serious consideration. In 1920, when tens of thousands of dollars were being spent from the city treasury to lower streo car fares and improve service, there were 5,494 revenue passengers per seat.

Franchise Plan at Standstill.

Aside from this proposal for immediate improvement in street car facilities, the negotiations for a new franchise to one company combining both surface and elevated lines were on a dead center yesterday. The only development was a statement from James Simpson, chairman of the citizens' advisory committee on transit, to Ald. E. I. Frankhauser and Ald. Oscar F. Nelson in which he said:

"The growth of Chicago is being strangled by the failure to settle the traction problem; and we might as well stop talking about the world's fair in 1933 and throw it in the ash can, unless this important question is settled."

The citizens' committee, which was appointed by Judge Wilkerson to aid in a transit settlement, held its first meeting yesterday in the judge's chambers. Col. A. A. Sprague was elected vice chairman.

It was announced authoritatively, as forecast last Friday, that the committee will refuse to serve unless it is given official standing by council action.

It is now tentatively agreed that the citizens' committee will act in about the same capacity as did the river straightening committee, which was also headed by Mr. Simpson. The aldermen are to attempt to reach an agreement on a franchise, referring to the citizens' committee points on which a settlement cannot be obtained.

FISHERMAN SAYS DRUNKEN DRYS FIRED ON HIS BOAT

Admiral Billard Orders an Immediate Inquiry.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 8.—[Special.]—Investigation of reports that a drunken coast guard cutter crew had deliberately fired with machine guns and a one pounder on a Lake Erie fishing smack several days ago has been ordered by Rear Admiral F. C. Billard, commandant of the coast guard.

Lieut. Martin W. Rasmussen, commander of the Buffalo, N. Y., district, was directed to proceed to Toledo, O., at once as a result of the protest lodged with Admiral Billard yesterday by Representative W. W. Chalmers [Rep., O.].

Mr. Chalmers produced a letter written to him by R. E. Mills, president of the Toledo Fish company, complaining that one of his boats had been fired upon by the crew of the cutter 219, one of the flotilla assigned to Volstead law enforcement. Although the incident is reported to have occurred on Nov. 24, Admiral Billard declared he first heard of it from Mr. Chalmers.

Fire Without Warning.

According to Mr. Mills' letter, the cutter crew, without any warning, opened fire with its machine guns on the fishing vessel, which quickly hove to and submitted to a search for liquor. When no liquor was found the cutter headed away, but in less than 10 minutes returned again to reopen fire.

"Now, to t op it all off," Mr. Mills wrote, "the greater part of the crew were drunk. One of them fell into the water trying to board our boat. Another jumped from the patrol boat on the deck over the motor of our boat and fell flat on his back, hitting his head on the anchor.

"They admitted they were drunk, that they had 'knocked off' a load a week ago and had been drunk ever since. They also informed our men they had fired a belt and a half of machine gun bullets and two shots from the one pounder."

Too Drunk to Aim Shots.

According to Mills' letter, when the cutter, returning for the second time, was only a few hundred yards away, the one pounder was trained directly on his boat, which would have been sunk "had it not been for the gunner being so drunk that when he was going to fire he fell over on the breech of the gun and this raised the muzzle up so that the shot went into the air."

Only a week ago, Lieut. Rasmussen investigated the killing of Carl Anderson and the wounding of Edmund Sahr by coast guardsmen. Anderson and Sahr were members of the crew of a small boat on Lake Ontario. No liquor was found on the boat.

Factory Tries to Identify Plane Tire Washed Ashore

Akron, O., Dec. 8.—(AP)—Officials of the B. F. Goodrich company are of the belief that part of an undercarriage and tire of an airplane washed up on the Irish coast is from the plane Endeavour, in which Capt. Walter Hinchliffe and Elsie Mackay were lost when they attempted an east to west flight across the Atlantic last March.

FIND DRY SOUTH IS WETTER THAN WET CHICAGO

Doran's Yearly Report Gives the Figures.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 8.—[Special.]—Figures indicating how wet the "dry south" really is are included in the annual report of Prohibition Commissioner James M. Doran made public today. It discloses that more than one-half of the 216,611 wholesale distilleries, household stills, stillworms, and fermenters seized by prohibition agents during the fiscal year ended June 30 were seized in the thirteen southern states.

The report also shows that 21,223 of the 75,307 arrests made by federal agents for Volstead violations were made in these same states.

Dr. Doran's compilations reveal that, notwithstanding its reputation as one the wettest sections of the country, the Chicago enforcement district, comprising Illinois, Iowa, and southern Wisconsin, yielded only 16,002 distilleries, stills, and fermenters.

During the year a total of 4,404 arrests were made in the district for all sorts of liquor law violations. According to the report a total of 352 persons are carried on the Chicago district pay roll and a total of $864,052 was spent in salaries and other costs of enforcement.

The wets expect to stress the contrast between the results credited to 769 persons in the Chicago and New York districts, at a total cost of $1,927,713, and what was accomplished by 748 dry bureau employés scattered over 13 southern states, where a total of $2,227,595 was spent.

U. S. PROSECUTOR AIDS SEARCH FOR CHIEF'S SLAYERS

Gives Names of Three He Suspects as Killers.

More help toward the solution of the slaying of Police Chief Leroy Gilbert of South Chicago Heights was given to state authorities yesterday by the government. Assitsant United States District Attorney Daniel Anderson, who has been in charge of an investigation of the Chicago Heights alcohol syndicate, furnished State's Attorney John A. Swanson and Highway Chief William Collins with the names of men suspected of the killing.

Then Mr. Anderson issued the following statement:

"The hoodlum element has been in complete control of the city of Chicago Heights for over four years. Police and city officials have lacked the honesty and courage to make a move or give an order without first obtaining the approval of the gunmen and alcohol racketeers, who were in control of the town. Chief of Police Gilbert was slain because he showed a determination to fight this hoodlum element in his village."

Mayor Denies Charges.

To which statement Mayor Daniel Bergin of Chicago Heights replied as follows:

"I am taken aback by the viciousness of Mr. Anderson's charge. My policy when in office has always been law enforcement. I can only say the charges of Mr. Anderson are utterly groundless. Since 1918 conditions in Chicago Heights have been more or less turbulent. Whether this is due to the so-called alcohol ring or not I cannot say. When I went into office I said if crime was due to any alcohol ring I would do all I could to smash such an organization."

The mayor then cited figures showing that in recent years there has been a decrease in the murder record of his city, to three last year and but two so far this year. He said every suspected place in the city has been systematically searched for liquor.

It was Mr. Anderson's belief that Chief Gilbert was killed to remove him as a witness against Joseph Rossi and Joseph Arini, whom he arrested while they were transporting alcohol. The federal prosecutor believes the two men stayed in jail on Thursday night, instead of giving bond, to have an alibi when Chief Gilbert was killed. Mr. Anderson gave the names of three men who he said are the employers of Rossi and Arini. He said he had reasons to believe two of the men are members of a gang of killers.

TEN YEARS LATER SLAYER TO BEGIN LIFE TERM AGAIN

Missing Year, New Crime Leads to Arrest.

CRIMINAL COURT.

William Mack, burglary, sentenced to 1 year to life in the penitentiary; Shelton Edmonds, burglary, sentenced to 1 year to life in Pontiac reformatory, by Judge Frank Comerford.

Edward Barry, larceny, sentenced to 1 to 20 years in Pontiac reformatory by Judge Harry B. Miller.

Louis Pilarski, manslaughter, sentenced to 1 to 14 years in the penitentiary by Judge Marcus Kavanagh.

George McCormick, robbery, sentenced to 1 year to life in the penitentiary by Judge Robert Gentzel.

Modest Strickland, rape, sentenced to 10 years in Pontiac reformatory by Judge Charles A. Williams.

Ten years ago, Joseph Chapman shot and killed Orville Travis when the latter resisted the robbery of his store. Chapman was captured, pleaded guilty before Judge Robert E. Crowe, and sentenced for life.

He went down to Joliet, presumably to remain, but his lawyers were diligent. Denied several pleas for pardon or parole, the lawyers made a searching examination of the record in the killer's case.

Their labors were finally rewarded. The record, they discovered, failed to include the legal phrase, "And the defendant persisted in his plea of guilt." So the lawyers went before Superior Judge Charles A. Williams, suing for a writ of habeas corpus.

Disappears After Hearing.

Chapman, on Dec. 22, 1927, was brought up from Joliet for the hearing. At its conclusion, he walked out of the courtroom, free to spend Christmas with his wife and brother, Henry. But Judge Crowe since elected state's attorney ordered an assistant, Q. J. Chott, to carry the appeal to the state Supreme court.

In February, the Supreme court heard Chott's argument, ordered Judge Williams' decision expunged from the record, and issued a mandamus for the return of Chapman to Joliet. But the killer, it developed, having other matters in view, vanished and was not heard of again until Nov. 26.

On that date, three employes of the City National Bank and Trust company of Dayton, O., in the Dayton police station, identified the photographs of Joseph Chapman and his brother Harry. These two and a third, the witnesses said, were the bandits who entered the bank at noon the previous day, bound the clerks and three customers with piano wire, and escaped with $29,000.

Caught in Flat Here.

Two Dayton detectives and a Chicago police squad went yesterday to a flat at 844 Montrose avenue. When the police burst in, Joseph leaped from his seat beside the radio to seize a repeating rifle. He was overpowered and handcuffed with his wife, Helen, and his brother, Harry.

In the flat was found a sack of the Dayton bank containing $1,900 cash and bank books showing that the brothers had within the last week deposited $2,500 in each of nineteen Chicago banks. At the detective bureau, Joseph protested he had "gone straight" since the day he walked out of Judge Williams' courtroom. Harry protested he had always "gone straight."

Despite these protests, Harry will go back to Dayton today to stand trial for bank robbery. Joseph, according to the Supreme court mandate, will be returned to Joliet to resume his interrupted life term. Several police officials were heard expressing regret that the brothers must separate.

Flowers on Water Honor Memory of Marquette

354th Anniversary

Father Marquette, the French Jesuit explorer and missionary, was remembered yesterday on the 354th anniversary of his coming to Chicago. Students of Loyola university, St. Xavier college, and Rosary college boarded a tug at the Michigan avenue bridge at noon and traveled up to Robey street, dropping flowers on the waters to mark the course paddled by Father Marquette in his own birch bark canoe.

Marquette, the first white man known to have visited Chicago, came here in 1674 as a missionary to the Indians. He camped from Dec. 4 to 12 near the site of the present Tribune Tower before travelling up the river where he built his hut. Flowers were also placed by the students at the base of the cross which marks the site of his winter home.

GERMAN HARVEST BEST SINCE WAR, BUT PRICES RISE

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Dec. 8.—Official reports show that in 1928 Germany had the best harvest since 1913, a record year in its agricultural history. Statisticians say this year's crops are better than those of 1913, because the "imperial counting method usually bloated the figures, while the Republican system has a tendency to minimize them."

Prices for food in Germany are higher for consumers than ever before and yet the German farmer is worse off than ever before.

This was proven in this week's reichstag discussion by all the German parties. Even those who make it a principle to knock the farmer, realized the seriousness of the situation. Each party had its pet improvement schemes and they brought in 146 motions on how to better the farmer's lot and enable him to grow enough to feed Germany.

Scarcely half a dozen of these motions proved of practical value after experts of the different groups got through sifting them. Minister of Agriculture Hermann Dietrich promised a credit of $5,000,000 a year for the next five years to teach the farmer how to grow produce of standard quality which will fetch better prices, and to improve his selling methods.

Meantime, 2,000 of the biggest farming estates in northern Germany, mostly in Pomerania and East Prussia, are in bankruptcy and creditors are unable to obtain money they advanced because nobody wants to buy the farms. The creditors seized the crops and gave the owners a small amount to attend to part of the fall sowing, but no cash or credit for fertilizer, without which northern German soil yields next to nothing.

These farms are victims of the high rate of interest and the bankers are pressing them out.

The smaller farms, on which members of the family help till the soil, are much the same as they have been in the last centuries and they are better off than the big farms which tried to invest in modern and practical machinery on expensive credit.

MUSSOLINI CHARY OF KELLOGG PACT; TELLS ITALY TO BE READY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, Dec. 8.—The twenty-seventh Italian legislature and the last which will be chosen in Italy under democratic universal suffrage expired tonight at 6 o'clock in a memorable sitting with 320 deputies wearing black shirts—out of 560 elected four years ago—rising and singing the national Fascist hymn, "Giovanezza." The galleries joined in the chorus.

The demonstration was followed by an oration by Premier Benito Mussolini.

"In foreign affairs," said the dictator, "we are at peace with all the world. We have signed the Kellogg pact—so sublime that it could be called transcendental—" he added ironically. "If other pacts like it are presented we will be disposed to sign them."

Again he said, "We do not want to disturb the European equilibrium, but we want to be ready. We will be prudent in giving our friendship to any one, but once it is given we will follow it in a straight line."

Here all the new books and all your old favorites keep company with rare treasures from four continents and seven seas. It is pleasant to know that many gifts can be bought where you naturally go to buy all the books on your Christmas list.

Shop Once ~ and for All ~ at BRENTANO'S

Books ~of course

We could write a full page proving that books are the ideal Christmas gift, for though they are not furniture, there is nothing that so beautifully furnishes a home. To illustrate, just view the new books —fiction, biography, travel, drama, poetry, science, religion, history, art —any household or any life may be enriched by any one of them. On the basement floor in our foreign department there are many, many, charming gift books in French, German, Italian, Spanish. Foreign Christmas Cards, too.

OLD & Rare

Books of interest to the collector and to all of discriminating taste are to be found in their quiet retreat at the rear of the main floor. Here you can find the choicest of Christmas gifts ranging in price from five to five hundred dollars. Gifts beyond the possibility of duplication.

Periodicals

In the lobby of the Pittsfield Building you will find the entrance to our immense periodical department, where you can subscribe to all of the American or European magazines. See the special Christmas issues. Why not give a subscription?

¶ Christmas Cards are now an institution, and Brentano's selection of cards will enable you to remember every friend with just the right greeting in the right taste.

Smart Stationery

Domestic and imported papers in every tint with tissue-lined envelopes attractively boxed for Christmas. Desk Sets in bronze, brass, and gold tooled leather. Photograph Frames—Bridge Sets—Book Covers. All the charming accessories of the desk. There are Book Ends and Library Fixtures in bronze, brass, and fancy metals. Diaries for your heart's secrets. Fountain Pens that are colorful. Dinner Favors that are distinguished.

For the CHILDREN!

Give the youngsters books for Christmas. All the new books and all the old favorites, many beautifully illustrated, await them here. There is a particular book for every particular child. Maps & Globes that are decorative and entertaining. Toys—some that resist destruction. Games, Puzzles, Tricks and a suggestion of magic.

CHICAGO GREETS VERDUN BISHOP; AIDS HIS CHAPEL

City Donates $10,000 for War Memorial.

In war days a chaplain in the trenches and in peace a "missionary of remembrance," the Rt. Rev. Charles Ginisty, bishop of Verdun, arrived in Chicago yesterday to make a plea for funds for the international war memorial chapel erected on the heights at Douaumont, near Verdun.

The bishop was greeted at the La Salle Street station by Brig. Gen. Abel Davis, whom the visitor had last seen in one of his daily trips among the soldiers in combat. Gen. Davis told him that a check for $10,000 was awaiting him for the fund. It was presented later in the day.

Honor Visitor at Luncheon.

With the business of his visit attended to, the prelate was able to turn his attention to his social engagements, including a luncheon given in his honor at noon yesterday by Gen. Davis and a reception by French societies of the city afterward. Speakers at the luncheon included Gen. Davis, who commanded the 132d infantry in France; Maj. Gen. Paul E. Malone, and M. Pierre Etienne Flandin, vice president of the French chamber of deputies, formerly minister of aviation, who is a visitor at the air show.

Also among the guests was Brig. Gen. Joseph B. Sanborn, commander of the 131st infantry, A. E. F. The troops commanded by Davis and Sanborn relieved the 408th French infantry near Verdun before the Meuse-Argonne offensive, in which the Chicago troops fought over approximately the present site of the memorial chapel, near the famous Trench of Bayonets.

It was by way of comforting the poilus who fought there that Bishop Ginisty promised them that no soldier who died at Verdun would be left unburied nor without a monument.

Memorial Nears Completion.

Already the memorial is nearing completion, a huge tower inclosing four chapels of the four faiths of the soldiers—Catholic, Protestant, Jewish, and Mohammedan. Approximately $140,000 more is needed. America's part is to provide the tower and chimes, above which the flags of the two nations will float.

FINDS WARNING FOR CHICAGO IN KING'S ILLNESS

King George's illness and the smoke problem were linked yesterday by Health Commissioner A. H. Kegel, who pointed out that smoke, soot, and fog in London's atmosphere probably is a partial if not the major cause of the king's ailment.

According to the official bulletins, the British monarch is suffering from inflammation of the lungs and an attack of pleurisy, the affection having centered in the lower part of his right lung. Identical cases are common in Chicago, the commissioner said, adding that hundreds of Chicagoans are sent by their physicians to New Mexico, Arizona, and elsewhere to escape the city's polluted air.

Four hundred tons of soot fall on every square mile of London annually, reports obtained by Dr. Kegel stated. Heavy fogs, suspending the particles of carbon near the earth, augment the health menace, he said.

"I see by the news dispatches that one unusually foggy night the king's doctors caused floodlights to be placed in his room," the commissioner continued. "That was simply an effort to produce artificial sunlight, a vital health element, shut out by fogs and smoke. Wherever sunlight is shut out you have a contributing factor to bronchial diseases."

Dr. Kegel recently displayed in his office two pairs of lungs, one of a Chicago citizen and one of a person who lived outside of Chicago. The latter pair were light grayish color, while those of the Chicagoan, heavily coated with carbon particles, were almost coal black.

Wife Obtains Separation from Wilson Naval Aid

New York, Dec. 8.—(AP)—Mrs. Helen Edson Comfort of Vineland, N. J., obtained a decree of separation in Brooklyn Supreme court today from Commander Roland W. Comfort, one time naval aid to President Wilson. Mrs. Comfort charged that a suit for annulment filed in 1924 by her husband constituted cruelty.

CHICAGOAN PUTS BIBLE ON HIGHEST PEAK IN AFRICA

First Yankee to Reach Top, 19,323 Feet.

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Dec. 8.—W. J. W. Roome, secretary for the East and Central Africa British and Foreign Bible society, has arrived in England, after placing a Bible in a cave on the summit of Kilimanjaro, in Tanganyika, Africa's highest peak, near the equator, which towers 19,323 feet above sea level. He was accompanied by J. W. S. Stauffacher, American missionary, whose home is in Chicago and who is a member of the African inland mission.

"I had long wanted to ascend Kilimanjaro," Mr. Roome said, "and in the latter part of July, when I was crossing the plains at the foot, finding a few days to spare, my son, Mr. Stauffacher and I decided to try to get to the summit.

"At 11,500 feet we began to suffer from mountain sickness, and we rested two days to acclimatize ourselves. Fifteen hundred feet above this all was barren, rocky, and wild, a point which few climbers pass. All but four of our bearers succumbed and we proceeded with a minimum of supplies.

"The ascent here was gradual, but the rarefied air made us rest every few feet. Finally we reached the mighty ice wall at the summit. I had fallen, dazed, 500 yards from the top, but the bearers dragged me up. The ice wall is 200 feet high, half a mile wide and five miles long, and the crater is two miles wide and three miles across. Here we left the Bible in a steel box, in a sheltered cave, and a native boy, Erika, who has been my servant for twelve years, led in prayer in Swahili."

Mr. Roome was the fifth Englishman to reach the summit, and Mr. Stauffacher was the first American.

ROTHSTEIN'S PAL CAUGHT WITH 2 MILLION IN DOPE

Arrested on Train on His Way to Chicago.

New York, Dec. 8.—[Special.]—The seizure of two large trunks containing $2,000,000 in drugs by federal authorities at the Grand Central terminal last night as an offshoot of the alleged connection of Arnold Rothstein, the slain gambler, with an international gang of drug smugglers, led today to the revelation that two men and two women had been arrested in connection with the drug conspiracy.

Joseph Unger, alias Meyer and Klein, was arrested last night on the Twentieth Century limited after the train had been halted by government narcotic agents east of Buffalo. Mrs. June Boyd several hours later was arrested by another group of agents in Chicago, in which the agents later were alleged to have reported to United States Attorney Tuttle in this city they also had seized another trunk containing $50,000 in drugs.

Held as Principals.

Unger and Mrs. Boyd were accused of being principals in the drug conspiracy and Mr. Tuttle said he expected the federal grand jury to return indictments against them Monday, partly through evidence obtained by narcotic agents in the last three days through investigation of some of the Rothstein secret correspondence in the office of the slain gambler and through information which had been gathered in connection with the alleged conspiracy in the last year.

Coincident with the arrest of Unger, a former intimate of Rothstein, and Mrs. Boyd, another group of narcotic agents late last night and early today took into custody as material witnesses Mrs. Esther Meyers, 26, a lingerie manufacturer, at the Hotel Hamilton here and Samuel (Crying Sammy) Lowe of the Hotel American.

Mrs. Meyers, who was reported to be a friend of Unger, subsequently was committed by United States Judge Coleman to the Jefferson Market women's prison in default of $5,000 bail, while Lowe was unable to provide the $10,000 bail and was committed to the Tombs.

Tip from Rothstein Papers.

The leads which the agents used in bringing about the arrests of the four and which Mr. Tuttle expects will result in the arrest of many others in the drug conspiracy were obtained from ten folders which they seized in the files of the Rothmere Mortgage corporation, owned by the slain gambler.

In the folders, it also was learned, the federal agents came across documents referring to Miss Dorothy King or Keenan, a former "Follies" girl, who was strangled to death in her apartment in the building owned by Rothstein in West 57th street on March 15, 1923. The murder was for robbery.

Other papers in these folders revealed Rothstein's close connection with drug peddlers and distributors.

NARCOTICS SEIZED HERE

Shipments of morphine and cocaine, alleged to have been sent to Chicago by the associates of the slain Arnold Rothstein, New York gambler, were seized yesterday by police and narcotic agents with the arrest of Mrs. June Boyd, in the North Sheridan hotel at 928 Sheridan road. Mrs. Boyd waived an examination before United States Commissioner Edwin K. Walker and was entrained immediately for New York with Col. William D. Allen, chief of the Chicago narcotic bureau, where she will be questioned concerning Rothstein's activities.

The apartment of Mrs. Boyd has been under surveillance by narcotic agents for ten days.

Narcotics estimated to be worth $50,000 were found in the apartment. Two suitcases containing nearly 100 ounces of morphine and cocaine were found hidden in a closet. In a large wardrobe trunk, 50 more ounces were found.

Two men, arrested in their flat at 874 Sedgwick street after federal narcotic agents had bought an ounce of morphine from them, are believed to have been associated with Mrs. Boyd, whose apartment was said by agents to be a distributing plant where the vendors obtained their supplies. The men, Albert Fausco and Anthony Lupe, were taken to the Chicago avenue police station and held for arraignment Monday.

Deans of Women Pick Officers for Year

Left to right: Miss Frances E. Napier, Bloomington, Ill., secretary; Miss Alice Hungerson, Galesburg, Ill., treasurer; Miss Olive L. Austin, Jacksonville, Ill., vice president, and Miss Elizabeth Packer of New Trier High school, Winnetka, president, as they appeared after election of officers of Association of Deans of Women yesterday.

From New Trier

Miss Elizabeth Packer, dean of girls at New Trier High school, Winnetka, was elected president of the Illinois Association of Deans of Women at their ninth annual conference, attended by 150 delegates from all parts of the state, at the Oak Park-River Forest Township High school yesterday. Miss Packer succeeds Miss Mary Richardson, dean of the Chicago Latin School for Girls.

Miss Olive L. Austin, dean at the Illinois Women's college at Jacksonville, and Miss Frances E. Napier of Illinois Wesleyan university at Bloomington were reëlected vice president and secretary, respectively. Miss Alice Hungerson of Lombard college, Galesburg, was elected treasurer to succeed Mrs. Julia B. Hensel of the Northern State Teachers' college at De Kalb.

Deferring pledging of students by sororities until the second semester was advocated by Mrs. Edith Morton, dean of women of Monmouth college.

$56,000 Already Collected for School Children's Aid

Collections in the public schools for the School Children's Aid society will reach a higher total than ever before, according to Frederick K. Lane, executive secretary for Supt. William J. Bogan. The fund is raised annually during the month preceding Thanksgiving and is used to provide shoes, food, and clothing for needy pupils. This year's total is now $56,000 and several schools are to be heard from, Mr. Lane said.

COLON, Panama Canal Zone, Dec. 8.—The cruiser Galveston is standing by here, ready to proceed to Santa Marta, Colombia, scene of the banana strike disturbances which are affecting some American properties. Rear Admiral Harley H. Christy, commanding the fifteenth naval squadron, has received no instructions, though it is known that the situation at the United Fruit company's 100,000 acre banana plantation at Santa Marta is approaching a most serious stage.

An American business man who arrived from Santa Marta this morning said that unquestionably bolsheviks stirred up the normally contented peons, who had been satisfied with conditions. They averaged about half a week's work, which was enough for them, as half a week's pay provides for their needs, and they can loaf the rest of the time.

Russian agitators, who speak Spanish, first enter Mexico and then drift southward, to stir up the usually poorly paid and housed peon classes. The situation at Santa Marta, however, is different. There the fruit company produces 50 per cent of its crop and buys the balance from small planters, many of whom have become rich.

The Colombian government should deport the Russian agitators, the American said, otherwise a soviet uprising is possible.

1,000 Troops Face Strikers.

The total known deaths as a result of yesterday's clash with Colombian troops at Cienaga, 20 miles toward the coast from Santa Marta, is thirty-five, but numerous others believed to have been killed at interior farms were not reported. At present 1,000 Colombian troops are handling 20,000 strikers, but reinforcements are expected Sunday from Barranquilla. It is not believed that the United Fruit company will request intervention, which would upset the relations between them and the Colombian government, which have been amicable for many years.

A United Fruit company official said there are 400 Americans and Britons in the employ of his company and 20,000 natives. The law prohibits West Indian labor. Americans from every state of the union are employed, as well as many Canadians.

One American Wounded.

New York, Dec. 8.—(AP)—The United Fruit company, whose banana plantations in Colombia have been affected by strikes in Magdalena province, announced today that reports to its offices here indicate no British or American employés have been killed, although one American was slightly wounded. M. C. O'Hearn, vice president of the company, said available reports were that some buildings had been burned, railroad bridges destroyed, and some damage done to plantations.

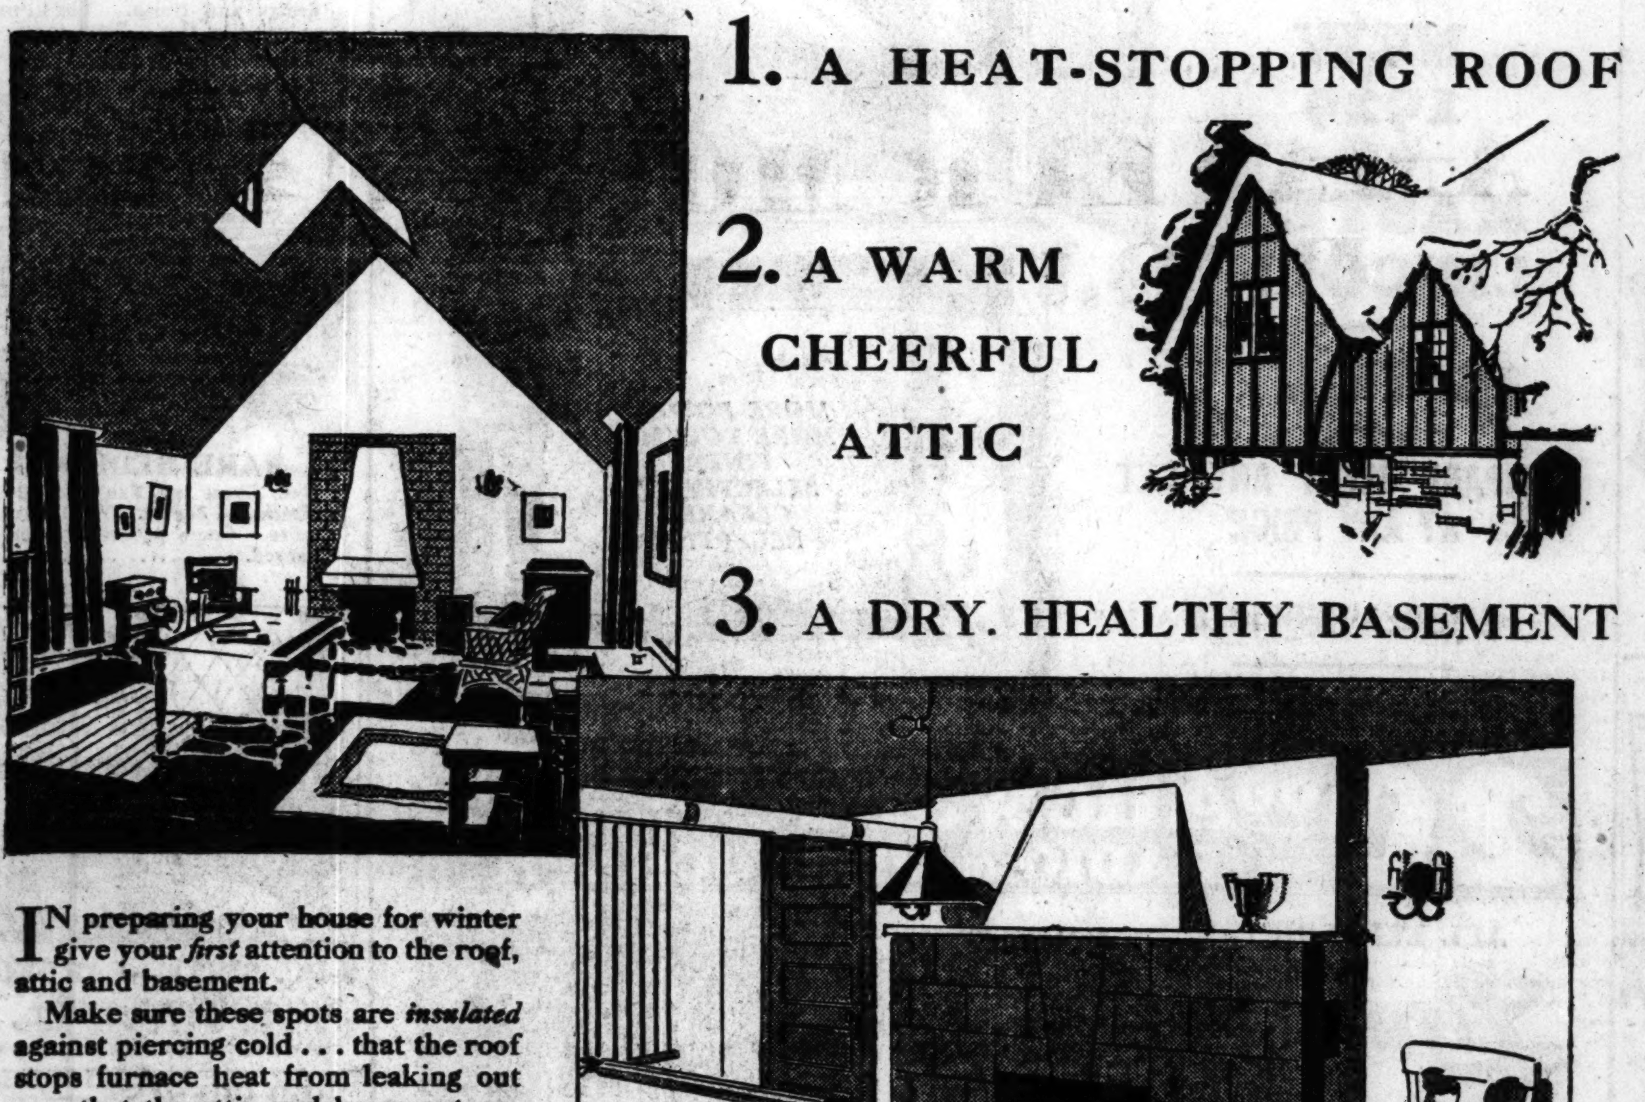
"Our reports indicate that the Colombian government has the situation under control," Mr. O'Hearn said. "We are convinced that only this prompt action by the government prevented great loss of life and possibly a serious internal crisis."

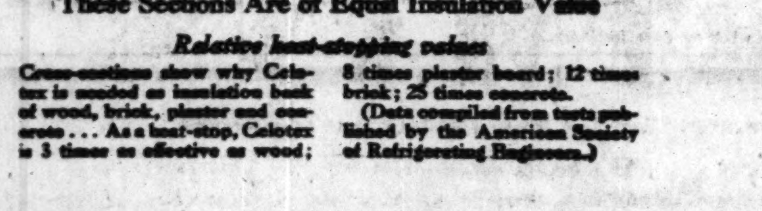
OUR OWN AURORA IS ART CENTER OF U. S., CONNOISSEURS SAY

New York, Dec. 8.—[Special.]—Aurora, Ill., is the art center of the United States in terms of individual art ownership and art appreciation, according to assertions by the directors of the Grand Central Art Galleries here.

"It has been definitely indicated by deductions covering a period of ten years," the statement said, "that the actual center of art appreciation in terms of per capita ownership of works of art is the thriving and wide-awake little city of Aurora, Ill., forty miles west of Chicago."

Each year the Grand Central Galleries manage an exhibition of art in Aurora and each year, they state, the population comes to it, not only to see but to buy.





Enjoy new winter comfort by giving your house . . .

1. A HEAT-STOPPING ROOF
2. A WARM CHEERFUL ATTIC
3. A DRY, HEALTHY BASEMENT

IN preparing your house for winter give your first attention to the roof, attic and basement.

Make sure these spots are insulated against piercing cold . . . that the roof stops furnace heat from leaking out . . . that the attic and basement are warm and healthy . . . are free from dampness, chill and draughts.

The easiest and most economical way of insulating the home you are now in is by repairing and remodeling it with Celotex.

Celotex keeps furnace warmth where it belongs—inside walls and ceilings. It reduces fuel bills twenty-five per cent or more . . . protects health and increases comfort by keeping your home at a more even temperature.

With Celotex you can turn unused space into playrooms and extra living quarters that are snug and warm in winter and delightfully cool in summer.

You can change basements into sitting or recreation rooms where dampness cannot penetrate. You can convert open porches into pantry rooms, sleeping porches and sun parlors, enjoyable all year 'round.

Millions of tiny sealed air cells give Celotex such a high insulating efficiency that it is used in modern refrigerator cars and household refrigerators, as well as in nearly a quarter of a million American homes!

Celotex is made from long, tough fibres of cane. It comes in big, strong boards that add extra bracing strength to walls. And the natural tan color and delicate fibre texture of the boards make an attractive interior finish for any home.

Ask your contractor, architect or lumber dealer, or write direct to us, for more information about the home comfort qualities of Celotex Standard Building Board and Celotex Lath.

CELOTEX WOOD PLASTER BOARD BRICK CONCRETE
These Sections Are of Equal Insulation Value

Relative heat-stopping values
Cross-sections show why Celotex is needed as insulation back of wood, brick, plaster and concrete . . . As a heat-stop, Celotex is 3 times as effective as wood; 8 times plaster board; 12 times brick; 25 times concrete.
(Data compiled from tests published by the American Society of Refrigerating Engineers.)

NOW'S THE TIME TO RALLY ROUND, GOOD FELLOWS

S O S Call Goes Out for Chicago's Poor Kids.

BY THOMAS WREN.

Good Fellows! This morning THE TRIBUNE's Good Fellow department is sounding the S O S call in behalf of Chicago's poor children.

Appeals received yesterday from the children were overwhelming. The Good Fellow recruiting pace dropped behind the registrations of the poor kids. To cope with the situation the appeal is sent out to the Good Fellows of Chicago. Proper response will mean a merry Christmas for the children whose parents cannot afford to supply them with the things that make all children happy.

Help Fill the Empty Stockings.

A basket of foodstuffs, a few toys, and a supply of candy and nuts and oranges will prevent some poor children from awakening on Christmas morning to the disappointment of empty stockings. With your coöperation the Christmas cheer problem for the children can be solved. Good Fellows, you will assure yourself a real Christmas by lending a hand to cheer up the poor kids on the greatest day in the year for all children.

The Good Fellow drive is now starting down the home stretch. There are thousands of appeals from the children still on file. This year's campaign will not be considered successful unless each appeal is given to some Good Fellow to answer.

Union Responds to Call.

One Good Fellow unit responded yesterday with reinforcements to drive away the care and hunger that lurks in the homes of tenement children. Application for the names of thirty more poor families were made by members of Local No. 9 of the electrical workers. Other members of the organization have agreed to supply Christmas cheer to approximately 100 families.

"Officials of the union expect to hear from other electricians early this week," said Irwin Knott, business representative of Local No. 9. "Their coöperation will probably enable Local No. 9 to set a Good Fellow record in caring for the little kids of unfortunate environment. The members realize, too, that every penny is spent in behalf of the families."

Families Like This Await You.

Families such as this are waiting for you, Good Fellows:

Harold, 9 years old, had to stay home from school because he had no shoes. Walter, 2, is kept in bed most of the time, because the house is so cold and he has outworn his baby clothes and has no others.

Harriet 6 years old, wears a patched and oddly shaped dress made from the remnant given to her mother by a neighbor. There are two other children, David, 8, and Albert, 4. The mother tries to earn a living for them by washing, sewing and cleaning. They live in cheap quarters between an iron works and a coffee roasting plant.

It is families like this that you can help, Good Fellows.

GOOD FELLOWS!

Here's a Form to Fill Out. It Will Aid You in Stating Your Plans for Helping Poor Kids.

4 MILLIONS FOR NEW BUILDINGS AT WEST POINT

West Point, N. Y., Dec. 8.—[Special.]—An ambitious era of enlargement and construction involving more than $4,000,000 in appropriations for the United States military academy, was forecast by a recommending committee of congress here today. The committee had just completed an investigation of buildings, curriculum, and general conditions at the academy.

Erection of cadet barracks costing nearly $1,000,000 soon will be started. Enlargement of the gymnasium, doubling its capacity, costing $500,000 will be approved. Officers' apartments will cost $600,000 and enlisted men's quarters will run to another $500,000.

Divorces Mate Because He Used Her $5 for His Wave

Indianapolis, Ind., Dec. 8.—[Special.]—Because her husband used $5 of her $10 savings to get a permanent wave for himself, Mrs. Ralph H. Klise received a divorce here today.

FASCISTI FORBID POLITICAL FOES RIGHT OF DEFENSE

Terrorism and Secrecy Rule of Duce's Regime.

[This is the first of a series of articles on tyranny in Italy.]

BY HENRY JONES JR.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

NICE, France, Dec. 8.—Another outburst of apprehension and fear of Fascist methods has been fomented throughout Italy among those who still withhold endorsement of the Fascist régime by the execution at the hands of a Blackshirt militia firing squad of an Italian anti-Fascist named Della Maggiora last month.

Della Maggiora was found guilty by the special military tribunal for the defense of the state of murdering two Fascists and was executed eighteen hours after sentence was passed on him. The king has the right of pardon in these cases before the military tribunal, but there is no appeal. Della Maggfora's appeal for grace never got as far as the king. It was the first capital execution in Italy for sixty or more years.

Not Executed for Murder.

While there is no feeling of condonement of Maggiora as a murderer among the independent Italians, it was pointed out that the death penalty, which was imposed not specifically for murder but for activities subversive to the state, may go far, and increases the menace to any one who has any kind of an altercation with a Fascist, whatever may be the provocation.

American people are, perhaps, still unaware that after six years of the Fascist régime, the Italian people are still deprived of such fundamental liberties as free press, free speech, free right of assembly, freedom from all censorship, or freedom from domiciliary search without a warrant. An Italian once told me that the only right he had was to keep silent.

Those who do not accept the Fascist régime are watched and tracked down, inside and outside Italy, by the over-recruited Fascist professional and amateur police.

Hundreds Sent to Exile.

Those suspected of anti-Fascist activities, if arrested, are tried by the special military tribunal and sent to the prision islands in the Mediterranean sea off the coast of Sicily. Others suspected merely of not being sympathetic to Fascism are likely to get the same dose.

Especially during the past few months the special tribunal has condemned large groups of anti-Fascists, in most cases calling them communists. Even a person who finances the defence of an anti-Fascist runs the risk of being condemned himself.

The exact number of people on the islands is not known. No one is ever allowed to approach the islands. Several hundred sentences this year have swelled the already large number of prisoners on the islands and no one knows just how many there are. Premier Mussolini said two years ago that there were fifteen hundred there under sentence for political activities. Some other estimates put the number as high as 200,000. From the rate at which the tribunal works, it does not appear that Premier Mussolini's figures are correct.

Given 50 Cents a Day.

On the island political prisoners are given 50 cents a day to support themselves and they are confined with all sorts of other criminal malefactors.

Incidents, arrests and trials behind closed doors go on ceaselessly in Italy. Because of the censorship and the fact that relatives fear to speak, news of it is suppressed.

In Turin the distinguished professor and senator, Ruffini, had his lectures in ecclesiastic law broken up by Fascist roughs, protected by the militia, according to advices which have reached here. Three or four thousand people are reported to have been arrested as the result of the bomb plot in Milan last spring.

In Rome lawyers who defend those tried before the special military tribunal for the defense of the state must watch their step or they get into a mess themselves. Their right to practice law may be withdrawn if they are too energetic. A lawyer named Casanelli was severely disciplined last summer because of the vehemence of his pleading in behalf of a defendant.

By Premier Mussolini's own admission there are 100,000 professional policemen in Italy. There are many more in plain clothes.

Fascists Urged to Spy.

All good Fascists are urged to report anything they know or hear of which might seem subversive. In this way the police penetrate every nook and cranny of Italian life. The secret police, in fact, is regarded as one of the strongest, if not the strongest, prop of the Fascist régime.

OPTIMISM MARKS ILLINOIS MINE WORKERS' REPORT

Springfield, Ill., Dec. 8.—[U. P.]—Optimism was voiced in a statement issued here today by state headquarters of the Illinois mine workers on the trend of the mining industry.

The statement declared that since the new wage scale became effective Illinois coal has regained many of the coal markets lost when it could not compete with the nonunion fields.

The opinion is expressed that steadier work and better times are in store for both the miners and operators.

It is pointed out that the problem of the coal industry is overdevelopment during the world war. The statement says that the trend is now in the opposite direction and the industry is drifting back to normalcy. Productive capacity and consumption generally are getting closer together, which results in increased benefits for the operators, the miners, and those with whom they deal."

The Truth About That Fourteen Count

Referee of Tunney-Dempsey Fight Tells His Story

BY DAVE BARRY.

[Copyright: 1928: By The Chicago Tribune.]

I've been taking the razz on that Tunney-Dempsey fourteen count for fourteen months. Personally, I think I've stood up under it damn well. So please pardon me while I emit a few howls of protest.

I can't howl as loud as the wolves who have been on me. My voice is a whisper as compared to the oratory of that great sportsman and pool shark, Leo P. Flynn, who was Dempsey's step-manager. But you, in fairness to a gent who has held his tongue for fourteen miserable months, ought to put on your ear phones while I, for the first time, broadcast my slant.

What Jack Threatened.

When you've heard me through I'm confident you'll agree that I was more friendly to Dempsey than to Tunney. Why, if I hadn't enforced the Illinois athletic commission's rule which sent Dempsey to a neutral corner he would have socked Tunney while he was down in that wild seventh round.

Jack was as completely out of his head as was Tunney the first instant Gene hit the canvas. Jack's judgment was gone. I could see what his instinct was leading to. If I hadn't chased him to a neutral corner he never would have waited for the champion to get to his feet. It would be as reasonable to expect a tiger to wait while wounded prey scampered up a tree.

I would have had to save Jack from his own frenzy even if it had not been my duty to enforce the Illinois athletic commission's knockdown rule. The rule had been emphasized and the interpretation had been agreed upon by the principals.

Jack Would Have Fouled Gene.

If the rule hadn't been in effect or had been ignored, Dempsey would have brutally fouled a fallen man. The fight would have ended and there would have been a hell of a merry time getting the challenger and his handlers out of the arena alive.

The mob instinct was running high at that moment. I tremble every time I think of what would have happened if Dempsey had been permitted to hit Tunney while he was down—or if he had behaved as he did in the Firpo fight.

I admire Dempsey when he is himself. Possessed of his rational faculties he's one of the greatest battlers the ring ever has known. But I was conscious of the moment when he was swept from man to tiger—when he clipped Tunney and sent him to the floor. I had no alternative. I would not alter my procedure if faced with the same emergency a thousand times.

BACK TO THE START

But I'm getting ahead of my story.

Fourteen months ago—on the night of Sept. 22—I stood one of three men in a ring at which 145,000 persons stared. One of those three lay, stupefied, on the resin sprinkled canvas floor of the ring. Another swayed to and fro, a few feet behind the victim of his pile driver attack. I, the only other occupant of that focal point, stood between the man on the canvas and the man with the clublike arms.

Fourteen was counted off. I counted nine. How, why, and with what results is the burden of what I have to say here.

Silent Ever Since.

I have kept silent since that fated September night while press associations, newspapers and magazines were carrying to every hamlet and town in the county, innuendos, scurrilous attacks, falsehoods, wild conjecture and ridicule of my conduct during that seventh round of the now historic Tunney-Dempsey fight at Soldier field in Chicago.

No referee of any fistic battle of importance ever has been subjected to a cross-fire of abuse and ricidule equal in intensity to the barrage that has been fired at me.

Beginning the morning after the fight, and continuing constantly, that attack has become more vicious as the picture of the fight became less vivid in the minds of those who saw what actually happened.

Nature of the Attack.

At first the attack was centered in anonymous telephone calls to my home and in anonymous letters. The telephone calls were so numerous and the messages so malicious that my mother was afraid to answer the phone. When I was absent even she became the target of the tirades.

I paid no attention to these anonymous foes and sought to carry on as a referee of less important bouts in Chicago. I figured that as time wore on the howling would cease. I thought folks would be fair. I assumed that after the public had time to calmly review the facts I would be vindicated.

In the fourteen months I have refereed some 50 bouts in Illinois. Not a one of them has failed to produce a chorus of catcalls, climaxed with the monotonous chant—"One!" "Two!" and on to "Fourteen."

"Bitter as Gall."

"Fourteen Count Barry." Is that title to cling to me all my life? Will it compose my epitaph? The razz may seem great sport to the boys on the outside of the ropes—they are cloaked by the smoky haze of darkened arenas. But the chant is bitter as gall to me.

I am now happy at this opportunity to tell every man who has participated in the chant of the Fourteen Count that he is a coward. In the fourteen months not a one of these inspired sportsmen has had the guts or the fairness to assail me face to face.

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Dec. 8.—Freddie Spencer and Franco Georgetti, two industrious wage earners, rode home in front of the other 16 riders at the conclusion of their week's work in the six day bicycle race at the new Garden this evening as a snowbound crowd looked on from well filled lower tiers and sparsely populated upper galleries. They had covered 2,290.9 miles on the ten lap pine rim erected around the Garden floor and finished one lap ahead of their fellow employés of the Garden firm, Letourner and Brocardo.

Third place went to a tie in the matter of mileage between the teams of McNamara and Van Nek and Walthour and Deulberg and therefore was awarded to the first named pair of toilers on the basis of a superiority in the number of points scored in the sprints. Both teams had ridden 2,290.7 miles, but in the sprints McNamara and Van Nek had scored 690 points to 359 for Walthour and Deulberg, the youngest riders in the race.

There had been eleven teams on the track during the final afternoon, but two were ruled off as hopeless trailers. These were Brocco and Raffo and Kockler and Hanley.

McNamara Gains Two Laps.

Walthour and Deulberg gained one lap by hard riding in the last hour of continuous sprinting, but lost one place in the order of finishing. Going into the last hour they were third, but McNamara and his partner gained two laps, picking up a sufficient gain in points to finish third. This sent the juveniles to fourth position.

Inasmuch as the riders all were hired by the day on a six day term of employment, each at a stipulated wage like so many stevedores, it was surprising to see such enterprise as they manifested in the hard work of the last hour. There are no announced prizes for the winners or other leaders, so it seemed that the boys were merely driving harder in a simple-minded but earnest effort to reach the end of the road with the least possible delay.

The upper berths of the Garden began to fill late in the afternoon in anticipation of the ending of the race. Maurice Brocco, the aged Italian who has been riding around and around the pine rims of a hundred stadiums in Europe and the U. S. A. for so many years that he thinks in circles, if at all, stirred the early attendance by stealing a lap on the field.

Cheers Turn to Boos.

Once more, as of old in the now dismantled and eradicated old Garden, the sharp, crackling yelp of "Brocco," singularly like "socko" boomed around in the high vault of the roof. Time was when Brocco was the toast and also the Chianto of Cherry street, a quaint, old world neighborhood, where the dried octupus dangles appetizingly in the delicatessen windows even as the herring in the delicatessens of Hester street.

But the Latins of Cherry street are a whimsical lot and the time came when, for no established reason, they mentioned Brocco only to boo him. So it was reminiscent of old times when the steerage trade, seeing the little bobbing figure with the protuberent green rear whirling around the track with his soiled white skull cap jerking frantically, came up from their seats and yelled "Brocco" once more.

Sensing the great social and dramatic significance of the last hours, when Mr. Tex Rickard's dress clientele, including, as he often says, the best dam

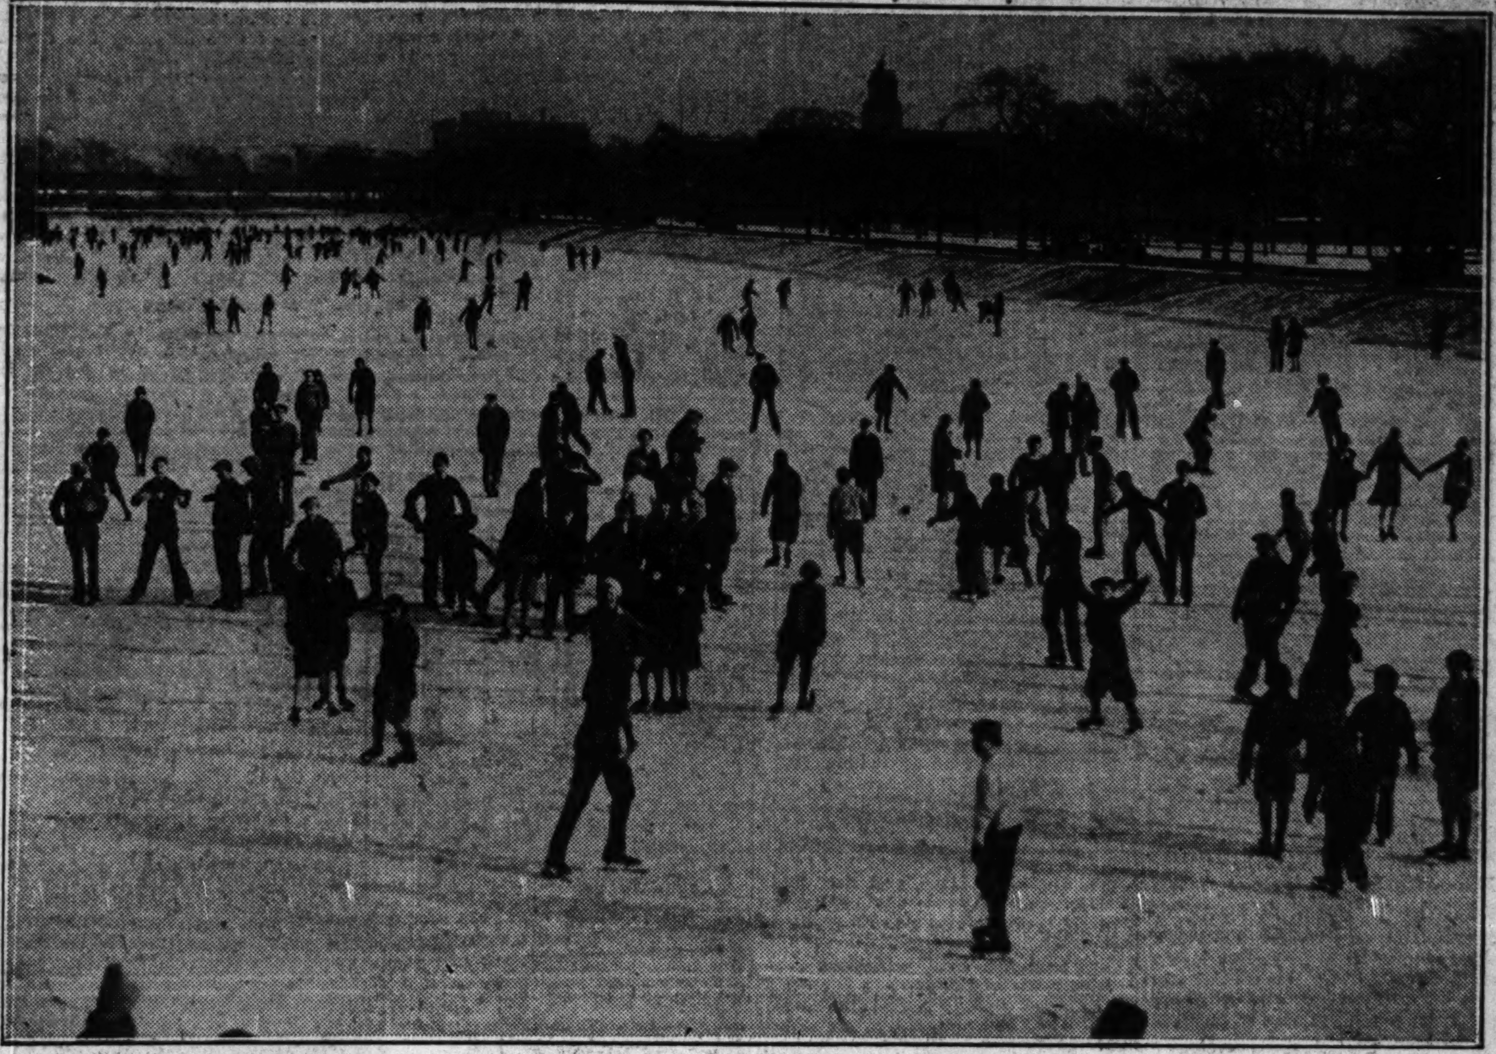
AT LAST! WINTER'S HERE



Chicago's youth enjoyed the first skating of the season yesterday. The south side children wasted no time donning their blades and hurrying to the Midway. The south parks also opened rinks at Fuller, Hamilton, Foster, and Ogden parks and Mark White square. Thousands are expected today to enjoy the first Sunday of skating. The toboggan slide for children at Ogden park also was opened yesterday.

Tilden Whips DePaul, 12-0, for City Title

Led by Dick Lutz, fleet half back Tilden Tech yesterday won the city high school football championship by trimming De Paul academy, 12 to 0, at Soldiers' field. More than 30,000 saw the game and at its conclusion virtually all were convinced the public school eleven was the superior team.

The agile Lutz, whose kicking helped to keep the ball in De Paul's territory throughout most of the game, was the key man of Tilden's offense. He sliced off tackle, hit guard and circled the ends in a brilliant exhibition of ball carrying and although there were times when he was thrown for a loss, he shone every minute of the contest.

It was a 32 yard run by Lutz that enabled Tilden to score its first touchdown in the third quarter. He broke through the line, dashed off to the right and was run out of bounds on De Paul's 3 yard line. Then Lehnhardt, who rarely failed in his line smashes, carried the ball over on his second attempt to penetrate the north siders' forward wall.

Score on Blocked Punt.

The other score came in the final period. McWilliams, De Paul full back, attempted to punt the ball out of danger, but the fast charging Tilden line men rushed in and blocked the kick. The ball bounded into Kostbade's hands and the Tilden left end raced ten yards to the goal line.

Both attempts for the extra point failed. After the first touchdown Lutz tried to skirt left end, but was stopped three yards short of the goal. Following Kostbade's touchdown Lutz tried a drop kick, but the ball sailed beneath the bar.

Passing was expected to be De Paul's chief offensive weapon, but its gains via the overhead route were almost negligible, for the passer never was allowed time to get set for a toss. The north siders completed one pass in five attempts, all in the second half.

Tilden Completes Five Passes.

Tilden completed five passes out of eleven. Four of the successful tosses netted short gains, but one aerial, Lutz to Morehead, brought 35 yards. De Paul's gain via the air was only eight yards.

De Paul received the opening kickoff and after losing ground on two plays, punted to Tilden's 40 yard mark. With Morehead and Lutz galloping around the end and Lehnhardt ramming through the line, the Techs carried the oval to De Paul's 24 yard line. Two line plays failed to add yardage, two passes were grounded and the north siders took the ball.

De Paul Advance Halted.

Then De Paul took its first turn making first downs. Huppert sailed around left end for ten yards. A penalty and two plunges netted another ten yards. The march stopped near midfield and De Paul was halted for the rest of the half.

In the second quarter a 60 yard punt by McWilliams sent the ball deep into Tilden's territory, but the Techs carried it back, only to be balked on penalties. During this march Lutz made a 22 yard run in addition to several short gains, and Morehead and Lehnhardt chipped in with yardage. But a 15 yard penalty called a halt to the progress and De Paul finally took the ball on its 26 yard line. McWilliams' punt rolled to Tilden's 37 yard line as the half ended.

Tilden's first touchdown came early in the third period. De Paul kicked off and the ball was returned to Tilden's 27 yard mark. After two line plays Lutz tossed a 10 yard pass to Morehead, who was thrown on De Paul's 40 yard line. After Lehnhardt had made five yards on two bucks, Lutz broke through the line and carried the ball to the three yard stripe. Then Lehnhardt plowed over.

After Lutz's punt had rolled over the goal line, De Paul's offense came to life. With the ball on the 20 yard line, McWilliams and Napolilli made a first down and McGuinn circled right end for 14 yards. McWilliams added eight yards, but Huppert was stopped and De Paul was penalized. De Paul then missed first down by inches and the Techs took the ball on their 45 yard line.

Penalty Halts Tilden.

A few minutes later an exchange of punts gave Tilden the ball on its 42 yard line. The Tech backs reeled off a first down, and then a penalty and a stubborn defense forced Lutz to kick, the ball going out of bounds on De Paul's 22 yard stripe. On fourth down, Kemp, who relieved Napolilli at quarter, made first down by inches. A pass followed, but it was incomplete.

McWilliams then went back to punt, but before he could get the ball away the kick was blocked. It was an easy matter for Kostbade to pick it up and scamper over the goal line. During the final minutes De Paul attempted passes, but Tilden's defense always was on the alert.

School Board O. K.'s Tilden Grid Trip to San Francisco

Tilden high school is awaiting word from the coast that will complete negotiations for a contest with Lowell high school at San Francisco Dec. 22. Permission for the city champions to invade the west has been received, but acceptance from the coast school is being withheld pending a meeting tomorrow. At that time it will be decided whether or not Lowell can meet Tilden's demand that expenses of 27 players be paid.

Northwestern Beats Wabash Five, 35 to 20

Northwestern started the basketball season auspiciously at Patten gym last night before 3,500 fans. The Wildcats defeated Wabash, 35 to 20, by the process of flashing some dazzling passing early in the game to take a long lead and then slopped through to the finish.

The Little Giants were no match in height, in speed, in passing, or in shooting, and the Purple rolled up 13 points before Wabash got even so much as a foul throw. At the half Northwestern led, 24 to 6.

Rut Walter, Northwestern's center, received a broken nose in one of the clashes in the early minutes. He continued to play throughout the game and ended with the total of five baskets and two free throws for 12 points. The break isn't likely to keep him out of any games. Lineup:

INDIANA LOSES, 31-30.

Bloomington, Ind., Dec. 8.—[Special.]—A desperate last minute rally fell one point short, and Indiana university basketball team lost the initial game of the season here tonight to Washington university of St. Louis. The score was 31 to 30.

Washington, coached by Don White, former Purdue all-conference floor guard, led, 17 to 12, at the half. The game opened Indiana's new $300,000 fieldhouse. Approximately 4,000 witnessed the game.

GOPHERS LOSE BY POINT.

Minneapolis, Minn., Dec. 8.—[Special.]—The University of North Dakota's veteran five upset the dope here tonight when it defeated the Gophers, 25 to 24. Both teams played a defensive style of game, the score at no time alternating by more than four points.

What do players talk about when they go into the huddle?

This question has been asked so many times that I believe it is of interest to those who follow the major intercollegiate sport. The answer explains why so-called half backs are placed at quarter back and quarter backs in the full back's position on honorary elevens.

In the old days of football, it was absolutely necessary for the ball to pass through three sets of hands before it could be advanced beyond the line of scrimmage. In those years the quarter backs was the first to receive the oval from his center. He then fed it to one of the backs or passed it to a tackle or end on sweeps off the other side of the line.

Old Quarters Were Field Generals.

Various methods of putting the ball in play were employed. In some instances the center handed it back to the outstretched hands of his quarter back. In others the pivot player shot the ball back to the pit of the stomach of his quarter back. As a general rule, the quarter back was a small player, seldom weighing more than 160 pounds. He called the signals but seldom carried the ball. He was the field general and given the responsibility of directing his team's attack.

Later the rule regarding putting the ball in play was changed. The alteration permitted the player who first received the ball from the center to advance it beyond the scrimmage line, provided he crossed the line at least five yards out from his center. This change marked the beginning of the end of the quarter back. Direct passes to ball carrier supplanted the old form of starting a scrimmage. The quarter back was used in the interference and it was soon discovered that heavier and more powerful blocking men were needed to clear a path for the ball carriers.

A few years later the restriction forcing a player to cross the scrimmage line at least five yards out on either of his center was removed. This permitted straight plunges into the line by players who received the ball directly from the center. It also brought about the quarter back sneak in which the quarter took the ball from his center and then dove straight ahead to make short yardage.

Seek Well Rounded Back Fields.

The second change went still further toward sounding the death knell of the quarter back. The coaches soon took advantage of the second alteration and well rounded back fields were developed. Instead of the small, non-ball-carrying quarter back of the old days, slashing backs were uncovered. Men were sought who could hit a line, drive off the tackles, or run the ends.

The players in the back field were numbered. On one formation, the number one back would carry the ball and on another he would lead the interference. Plays also were numbered, so that the players knew exactly just what positions to take on every signal. Starting signals were used then as now.

As the game grew in popularity and attracted larger crowds costly fumbles resulted because the players could not hear the signals because of the cheering. This condition brought about the huddle, the surest method of calling plays in a football game. At first this style of giving signals was considered amateurish. Many coaches scoffed at the idea and called it "kid's play." It was not long, however before nearly every team in the country adopted the system.

Under the present rule, no town meetings are permitted in the huddle. Players can remain together for only fifteen seconds. Instead of the quarter back giving the signals, as in the old days, a lineman may call the play, or an end or a back may call it. Whoever calls the signal will designate the next play by number. Players will shift in such a manner as to reach their objectives as soon as possible. Other players except the ones calling the plays have little to say in the huddle. Some may suggest the ball carriers cut in just inside of tackle or slide off a certain player. The same is true of end runs, when the runners will be told to swing wide or dart back through the scrimmage line.

When the huddle first was used the players used to argue about the next play. Coaches soon put a stop to this practice by commanding their players to listen to only one man and to do as he directed. This change brought about better team play and resulted

Who's Player of Most Value to His Team? Fans Disagree

BY HARVEY WOODRUFF.

Whatever the ultimate vote of THE TRIBUNE'S committee may show as to the Big Ten player of greatest value to his team during 1928, there is a wide diversity of opinion on the part of the public who have written letters on the subject. While these letters may directly influence only two votes, in the past they have been a pretty good criterion of the probable choice.

TRIBUNE FOOTBALL TROPHY.

That has not been so this year because there is such a variety of choices that no one or even two players stand out in the public mind. No team in the Big Ten has failed to receive mention for some one of its men. In several instances there are two or three on the same team mentioned in these letters as desirable choices. Probably there has not been a year when there was so much interest because of the uncertainty of the result. All this may be changed when the official votes begin to arrive, but just now it is an open field.

22 Men Determine Award.

Award of THE TRIBUNE trophy is determined by a vote of twenty-two persons—all Big Ten coaches, ten officials (including Walter Eckersall), Commissioner John L. Griffith and the writer. First choice counts two points and second choice one point.

In the letters sent to this committee, in which members were invited to coöperate in making a fair and impartial award, coaches were told: "We do not ask you to name the 'greatest' player, but the player who has been of greatest all-around value.

"We ask you to name your first and second choices. You are privileged to name a member of your own team, in fact, we hope you will be able to do so for either first or second choice, the other choice to be a member of some other conference eleven."

Many Names Suggested.

Thus it could happen that if each coach named as first choice a member of his own team, and the other first choice votes divided equally, the award might be determined on second choice votes. That would be a pretty fair method, too, for it would indicate the value of the player chosen in the minds of a majority of the committee. In the four awards previously made, however, it has happened, even in the closest contest, that first choice votes have determined the result.

Among the public suggestions so far are Nagurski and Hovde of Minnesota; Cuisinier of Wisconsin; Brown, McLain and Glassgow of Iowa; Mendenhall of Chicago; Pommerening and Gembis of Michigan; Barratt and Eby of Ohio State; Welch and Hutton of Purdue; Randolph and Bennett of Indiana; Nowack, Humbert and Crane of Illinois; Holmer, Anderson and Bruder of Northwestern.

Members of Committee.

The committee which THE TRIBUNE has invited to assist in the award of a sterling silver football, actual size, consists of:

A. A. Stagg, Chicago [Yale]; Robert C. Zuppke, Illinois [Wisconsin]; Richard E. Hanley, Northwestern [Washington State]; Dr. C. W. Spears, Minnesota [Dartmouth]; Glenn F. Thistlethwaite, Wisconsin [Earlham]; Burton A. Ingwersen, Iowa [Illinois]; Elton Wieman, Michigan [Michigan]; James M. Phelan, Purdue [Notre Dame]; E. C. Page, Indiana [Chicago]; Dr. J. W. Wilce, Ohio State [Wisconsin].

John J. Schommer [Chicago], Fred H. Young [Illinois Wesleyan], C. E. Eldridge [Michigan], Frank E. Birch [Earlham], Col. H. B. Hackett [West Point], Joe Magidson [Michigan], H. L. Ray [Illinois], James Masker [Northwestern], J. J. Lipp [Chicago], Walter H. Eckersall [Chicago], Commissioner John L. Griffith [Beloit], and Harvey Woodruff [Chicago].

in every player carrying out his assignment.

In their quest of players to take the place of the small quarter back of the old days, coaches sought versatile performers. Since the coming of the forward pass in 1906, the player who can kick, run or pass has been in demand. Ordinarily such a player has proved to be an excellent blocker and strong defensive man. The more deception in the back field, the stronger the attack.

Sloan at Quarter Back.

For these reasons Claire Sloan of Nebraska has been placed in the so-called quarter back position on the mythical all-western eleven. The Cornhusker, who still has one more year to play, weighs 180 pounds. He can run, kick or pass. His general play all season has been consistent, while his defensive work has been equally brilliant. Even in the Army game, which the cadets won, Sloan played his usual strong game and was easily the star performer of his team.

Fred Miller of Notre Dame, although captain of a team which lost four games, is honored with the left tackle position. Miller has been one of the main cogs in Coach Rockne's machine for the last three years. He seldom has been injured, although in the thick of nearly every scrimmage. He is a strong defensive player, hard to box and keep out of plays. He tackled effectively, and it was not an uncommon occurrence to see him down under punts as fast as his ends.

When Notre Dame defeated the Navy early in the season, it was Miller who paved the way for his team's only touchdown. The Navy was forced to kick in its own territory. Miller drove through and made Lloyd, the Navy kicker, boot the ball out of bounds eight yards in advance of the scrimmage line. It was fourth down and the ball reverted to Notre Dame. From this point Notre Dame made a successful march to the Navy goal line for the only touchdown of the game.

Big Ten Wins 8 Places.

Tim Moynihan of Notre Dame, a greatly improved player in a year's time, is placed at center. Tim played almost faultlessly in the Army and Navy struggles. He knew when to play his hole in the line and when to function in a roving position. He frequently guessed opponents' attacks and he always managed to reach the danger points in time to help smash the interference or tackle the runner.

The other eight places are awarded to the same players who were honored a week ago in the all-star western conference elevens. From every angle of the game, it would be hard to improve upon their positions. There were some players, however, whose playing all season entitled them to positions on the second and third elevens.

Churchill of Oklahoma, a great all around athlete who was a member of the American Olympic team which competed in Amsterdam, Holland, last summer, is placed at left end on the second eleven. McMullen of Nebraska is given the right guard position on the same eleven, while Lyon of Kansas Aggies is honored with the right tackle berth on the same team.

Brazil, half back on the undefeated Detroit eleven, is given the left half back position on the second team. Brazil was the keyman of the Detroit attack and a dependable ball carrier. Holm of Nebraska is placed in a guard position on the third team, and Brown of Missouri at end on the same eleven. With the exception of Cuisiner of Wisconsin, who was placed on the second all conference eleven and moved back to the third all-western team, the remainder of the back field is made up of Howell of Nebraska, Gebert of Marquette and Nesbit of Drake.

Maine Township Defeats Arlington Heights Cagers

Maine Township High of Des Plaines invaded Arlington Heights last night to win two cage contests. The heavies took a 19 to 17 decision and the lights copped, 19 to 13. Ziehn scored 11 of the lights' points and Christianson led the heavies with 8.

J. P. I. GIRLS WIN.

The J. P. I. girls' basketball five won its fourth consecutive victory of the season last night by defeating the Entre girls' quintet, 27 to 10, on the winner's floor.

Georgia Tech Clinches Grid Title of South

Atlanta, Ga., Dec. 8.—(AP)—Georgia Tech's Golden Tornado swept to undisputed championship of the southern conference today by crushing its ancient rival, the University of Georgia, 20 to 6.

The Georgia Bulldogs, however, provided sufficient thrills. Thirty-five thousand saw Maffett, Georgia end, take a pass over the Gold and White goal line in the first period to give his team a 6 to 0 lead. It was the first time this season any team has held a margin over Tech.

Stumpy Thomason, half back, and Lumpkin, sophomore full back, however, could not be denied. It was the ramming, battering Lumpkin who made a three yard dive for a touchdown in the second quarter and in the next period he rammed over left guard for another six pointer.

Thomason, after giving the crowd a wonderful exhibition of broken field running and pace changing, added the third touchdown in the same period. He ripped center for four yards and a touchdown. This march started on Tech's own 42 yard line when Thomason took Harvey Hill's punt and ran it back to midfield. From there, he led a drive, aided by Mizell and Lumpkin, across the goal line.

Tech Takes Offensive.

Tech was on the offensive most of the way. From the outset Lumpkin, Thomason, Mizell, Dunlap, and other backs dashed frequently for telling gains, while Frank Waddey, end, snagged several passes.

Georgia's only touchdown came in the first period when Peter Pund, Tech center, made a poor pass to Mizell, who failed to pick up the ball. Palmer, Bulldog end, recovered on Tech's 17 yard stripe and ran five yards. Then, after three line plays had failed, Hooks passed to Maffett over the goal.

Tech scored first in the second quarter when McCrary's fumble gave the Tornado the ball on Georgia's 18 yard line. Lumpkin finally went over.

Tech Scores Again.

Tech scored soon after the third period opened. After taking the kick-off Georgia failed to gain and Hill punted to Thomason on Tech's 40 yard line. The whirling half back ran the punt back three yards and on the next play broke away around left end and raced to Georgia's 15 yard line, where he was forced out of bounds by Hooks. Mizell and Lumpkin together reeled off a first down to Georgia's three yard line and from there Lumpkin went over.

Then came Thomason's score, after which Coach Bill Alexander ran in substitutes freely. Lineup:

TENNESSEE, 13; FLORIDA, 12

Knoxville, Tenn., Dec. 8.—(AP)—The Volunteers of Tennessee scuttled the southern conference championship hopes of Florida today in a thrilling climax to one of the greatest Dixie gridiron seasons.

Tennessee with a scrappy, fast, charging line and three sensational sophomores in the back field, ripped into the defense of the country's highest powered scoring machine, tore it apart in the first half with a bewildering attack and had the stuff to turn back Florida's desperate counter thrust that fell only a single point shy of squaring the count.

Tennessee's final margin was 13 to 12, so close that chills were running up and down the spines of Volunteer partisans as Florida darkened the air with passes in the final part of the game.

North Carolina Beats Duke, 14-7, for State Grid Title

Chapel Hill, N. C., Dec. 8.—(AP)—The University of North Carolina football team won the undisputed championship of North Carolina today by defeating the Duke university Blue Devils, 14 to 7.

GIANTS SIGN NIEHOFF.

New York, Dec. 8.—(AP)—The New York Giants have signed Bert Niehoff, former Philly second baseman, and Arthur Devlin, former third baseman of the Giants, as coach and scout, respectively.

FENGER LIGHTS WIN.

Fenger won and lost in its games at West Chicago High school last night. The Fenger lights triumphed, 19 to 18, but the heavies dropped a 22 to 19 decision.

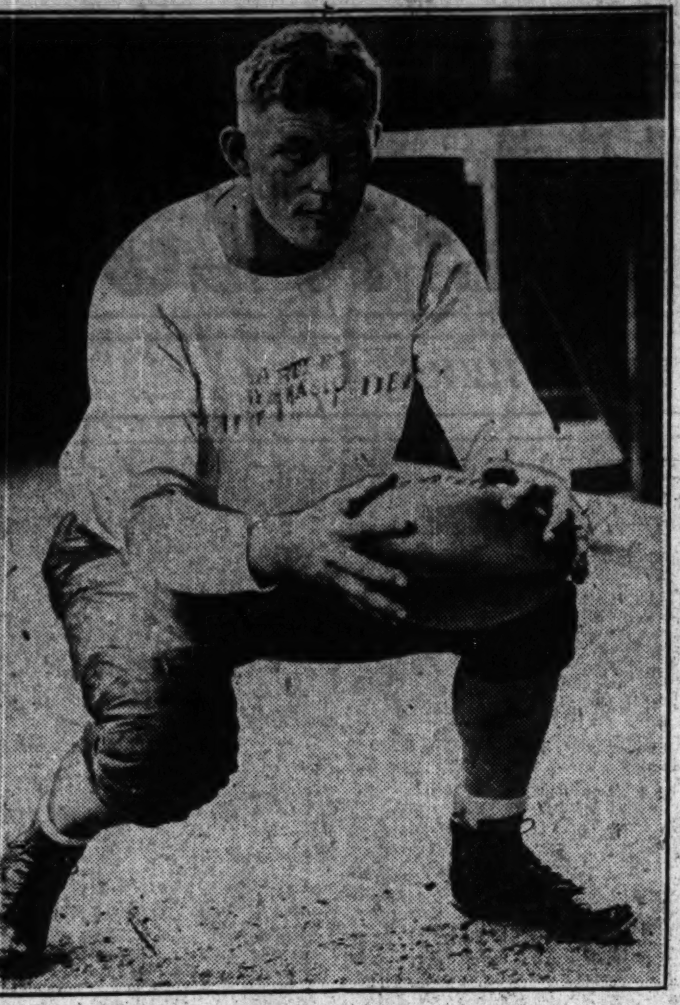
IOWA STAR BANNED



Mayes McLain, Iowa's gridiron star, was ruled ineligible for further play yesterday by the Big Ten. He played two years at Haskell and last season for the Hawks, completing the three years allowed by conference rules. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Big Ten Bars McLain from Further Grid Competition

Mayes McLain, the former Haskell institute player who was a member of the University of Iowa football eleven during the season just closed, was barred from further western conference competition by the eligibility committee of the Big Ten at its meeting yesterday.

The committee ruled that McLain had played two years at Haskell previous to entering the Hawkeye institution. The eligibility committee ruled that the two years of competition at Haskell counted against him and that in reality McLain has competed in intercollegiate athletics for three years. Three years is the limit for Big Ten eligibility.

Rule on Two Others.

At the same session, the eligibility committee cleared Alan Holman, the Ohio State quarter back, and Bud Foster the Wisconsin basketball player. Holman's status was questioned because he left Iowa State with a condition in his studies. Under the strict interpretation of the Big Ten rule, the Ohio quarter back should have been in residence at Columbus for two years instead of one before being declared eligible. Holman's breach of the rules was so technical that the committee ruled he was eligible for last fall's Ohio eleven. He will not be eligible next fall.

Foster played on a local basketball team in a contest in which money was charged at the gate. The Badger took part in the game without knowing that admission fee was charged. Wisconsin officials pleaded his case with the result the committee did not think the infraction of the rule sufficient to declare Foster ineligible for further conference competition.

The eligibility committee of the faculty is composed of Prof. G. A. Goodenough of Illinois, Prof. O. F. Long of Northwestern, Prof. Thomas E. French of Ohio State, and Prof. Luis Pelzer, secretary of the conference faculty committee is also secretary of the eligibility committee.

Complete Grid Schedules.

Following the two days' session, most of the football coaches completed their 1929 schedules. The slates call for ten intersectional struggles. All but two of these contests will be played on the gridirons of Big Ten schools. The games arranged between teams of different sections are Army and Illinois, Wisconsin and Colgate, Vanderbilt and Minnesota, Navy and Ohio State, Pittsburgh and Ohio State, Michigan and Harvard, Indiana and Colgate, Chicago and Princeton, Chicago and Washington, and Mississippi and Purdue. The Chicago-Princeton game will be played on the latter's field while Ohio State will go to Pittsburgh to battle the latter team.

Army Leaders Pleased.

Biff Jones, coach of the Army football eleven and Maj. Fleming, athletic director, had nothing but commendation for the faculty committee because of the latter's action in exempting the two service elevens from any consideration when the eligibility status of nonconference football teams is considered.

"It was a pleasant reflection upon the eligibility rules of the Army and Navy," Coach Jones said yesterday in commenting on the action of the faculty representatives. "While it is true we use former college and university players, our rules in other respects are similar to those of the western conference. We are leaving for home today satisfied that we have received the finest kind of treatment from the conference. Next fall when our team meets Illinois at Champaign, I hope we will reward the spectators with as fine a game of football as any eleven which has ever come out of the east has played in the west."

CREIGHTON BEATS MARQUETTE, 9-6, IN GRID FINAL

Bertoglio Sprints 82 Yards for Touchdown.

Milwaukee, Wis., Dec. 8.—[Special.]—A place kick from the 15 yard line that just rolled over the goal post late in the third quarter was the margin that gave Creighton university of Omaha, Neb., a 9 to 6 victory over the Marquette Golden Avalanche in a post-season football game here this afternoon.

Merle Hunt, Creighton back, booted the kick.

The Bluejays, displaying a fine offense and a smooth working defense against Marquette's choicest plays, scored midway through the first quarter, when Jimmy Bertoglio, half back, took the ball on his own 18 yard line, cut through center, and then out past left end for an 82 yard run to the goal line. Hunt missed the kick.

Although Marquette threatened twice earlier, the Avalanche did not score until the final quarter. The Hilltoppers had the ball in midfield, from where Gil Corbett tossed a 10 yard pass to Capt. Swede Gebert, playing his final game, and theb londe athlete went 38 yards for a touchdown. Radick missed the kick.

Georgetti and Spencer Ride to Victory Before Snowbound Bike Fans in N. Y.

people in town, would be on hand to watch them ride to the finish of a misspent week, the boys on the velocipedes exerted themselves more than usual during the afternoon.

Trainers Keep Busy.

The trainers, stationed at the cots along the flat margin of the track, were bobbing vigorously over bicycle pumps, crowding wind into the narrow pneumatics, tinkering with spare mounts, of which each team had three or four parked upside down beside the little bunk house, and lugging in trays of food. The alternate riders, resting in the bunks, merely reclined but did not seem to be stitching the raveled sleeve of care.

The presence of the gathering crowd and the fact that their bunk shelters are open faced structures, exposing the occupants to public scrutiny, probably had nothing to do with this, as the boys are accustomed to public sleeping, both mounted and abed. They were merely taking such ease as they could while standing by to relieve their partners in the event of untoward competition by some individualist.

Price of Tickets Goes Up.

There was gossip of a disquieting nature around and about the building, which tended to reflect on the fair name of six day bicycle riding. It was reported that when Georgetti and Spencer stole a lap Friday night the judges looked out the window as the phrase goes and did not see this gain which would have put the boys two laps in front of Letourner and Broccardo and would have tended to loosen the competition, spoil the race and alienate patronage on the final night when the top prices are $5 at the box office and from $8 up across the street. When the competition for the lead remains close, most of the customers are compelled to buy their tickets across the street.

Just why chickens and tickets cross the street will always be a puzzle.

Songs Make Ban Sound Sweeter.

At 9 o'clock an unidentified gentleman burst into song before the microphone down by the band, which had been horning away in the infield for six days and nights. Hurled through the big funnels of the amplifying apparatus, it sounded like a lot of policemen chopping down a door. Instead of neutralizing the sound of the band, the unidentified singer's voice merely complicated the sour uproar and the band sounded sweeter when the singer got through and the musicians carried on as before.

The subject of bands which play at sports events, such as the world series, the pennant hoistings and race tracks, has served as a topic for many idle discussions during the closed season. They used to have a middling awful band down at the Pimlico race track, but it disappeared on Preakness day last spring when the house committee decided to have the music discoursed by a phonograph with an amplifying attachment. There was a pretty bad band over at the Brooklyn ball yard a few years ago, too. But the music at the six day bike races is something special. Apparently the boys get bugler's lip after several days and nights of it, and this ailment, corresponding to shin-splint in a marathon runner or dyspepsia in a marathon quail eater, causes a limping effect in the music that can't be achieved in a single concert.

Come In to Escape Storm.

The infield was filling with a mixed gathering and those who could not find room to lean on the green painted pine rail stood about the stone floor stork fashion, easing first one hip and then the other, like ball players around a hotel lobby during the winter deliberations of the magnates. Some one ought to start a standing around marathon. Standing around in full winter equipment of overshoes, overcoat and muffler is much more punishing than riding a bike or six day dancing.

An enterprising snowstorm was going on, by the way, and this probably drove some of the customers indoors a little earlier than they had intended.

Somebody offered $100, cash and not an insurance policy, for a sprint of five laps, and the nine representatives of the nine remaining teams tore away at the crack of the gun. Cecil Walker, the Australian, took the lead and whirled off the five laps to win the $100 eased up. Cecil is of pure Scotch ancestry.

Walthour-Deulberg Gain Lap.

Somewhere along in here the team of Walthour and Deulberg won back one of their lost laps, pulling up within three laps of the leading team of Georgetti and Spencer. Walthour is a pallid, immature boy with circles beneath his eyes and a wearily drooping mouth. He is 18 years old. He seems to have been foredoomed to a life in the animal cage for the pleasure of twentieth century bear baiters, as his father and his uncle and a cousin rode bikes before him.

Some of the dress suit trade had shown up in the track side seats, looking quite stiff in various senses of the word in their open faced jackets.

Society Joins Crowd.

There were some inspiring individuals on view, including one in an ermine maintop with a pair of emerald sash weights dangling from her ear lobes. John Cordes, the detective who caught Big George McManus by appointment in the celebrated case of Arnold Rothstein, who committed suicide by proxy, was observed moving among the best people.

At 10 o'clock the final hour of the race set in and with it an hour's series of one mile sprints. There are ten laps to the mile and—as each sprint ended another began.

The singing had ceased by popular consent and the musicians seemed to have stepped across the street to the Dutchman's. Only the excited clangor of the bell signal for the last lap of each sprint and the shrill, rising yip of the crowd as the riders arched over their handlebars in these final sprints could now be heard.

LOTT TO BATTLE JENNINGS FOR CITY NET TITLE

George Lott, who was forced to relinquish his city tennis championship because of his activities on the United States Davis cup team last summer, tonight, at the Rainbo fronton, will attempt to regain his laurels. He will face George Jennings, Armour Tech southpaw star, in the finals of the first city indoor tournament. The match will start at 8 o'clock.

Lott, who ranks second in the national list, reached the finals yesterday by beating Gordon Braudt, University of Illinois youngster, 6-0, 6-2. Jennings gained the final bracket by downing Ellis Klingeman, 6-4, 6-1.

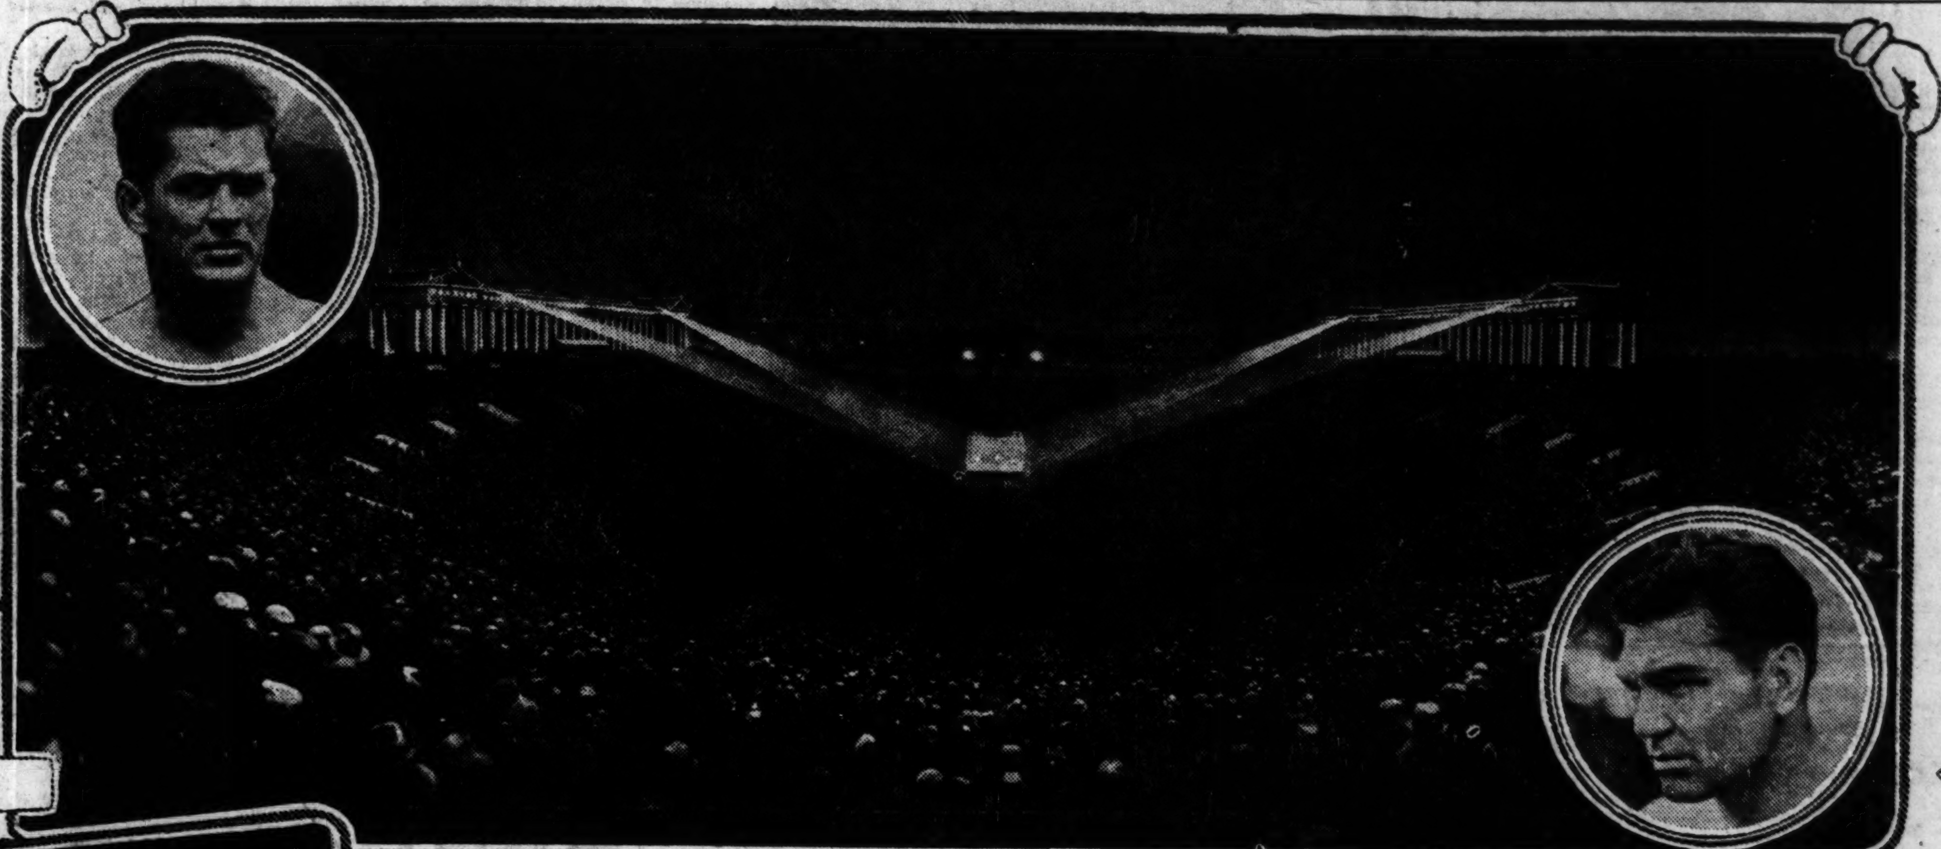
The Truth About That 14 Count

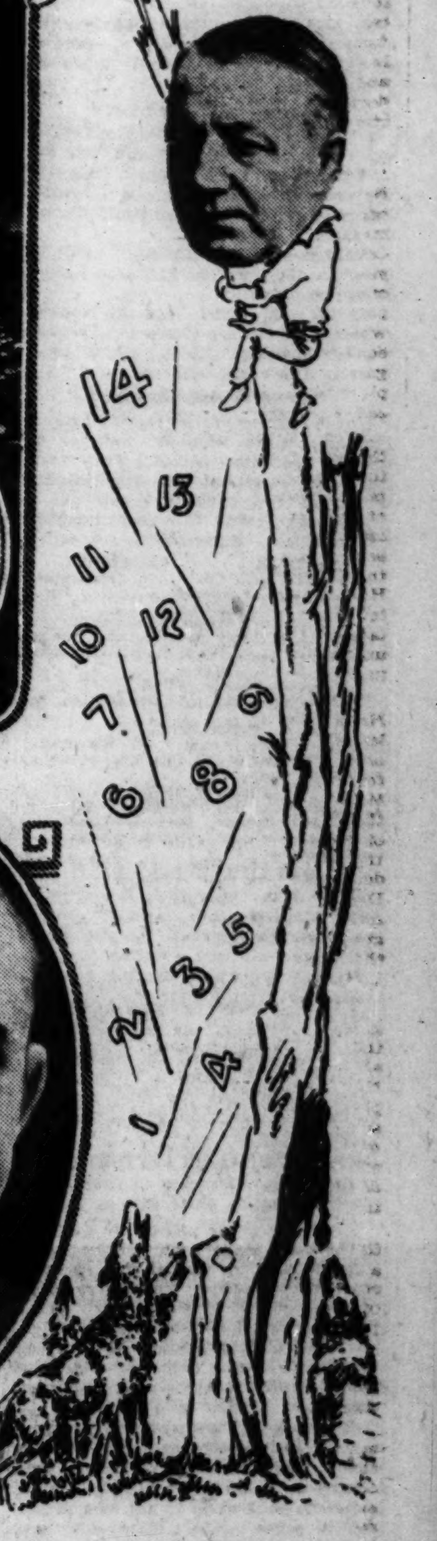
Dave Barry, Referee of the Tunney-Dempsey Fight, After 14 Months of Silence, Tells How Jack Beat Himself

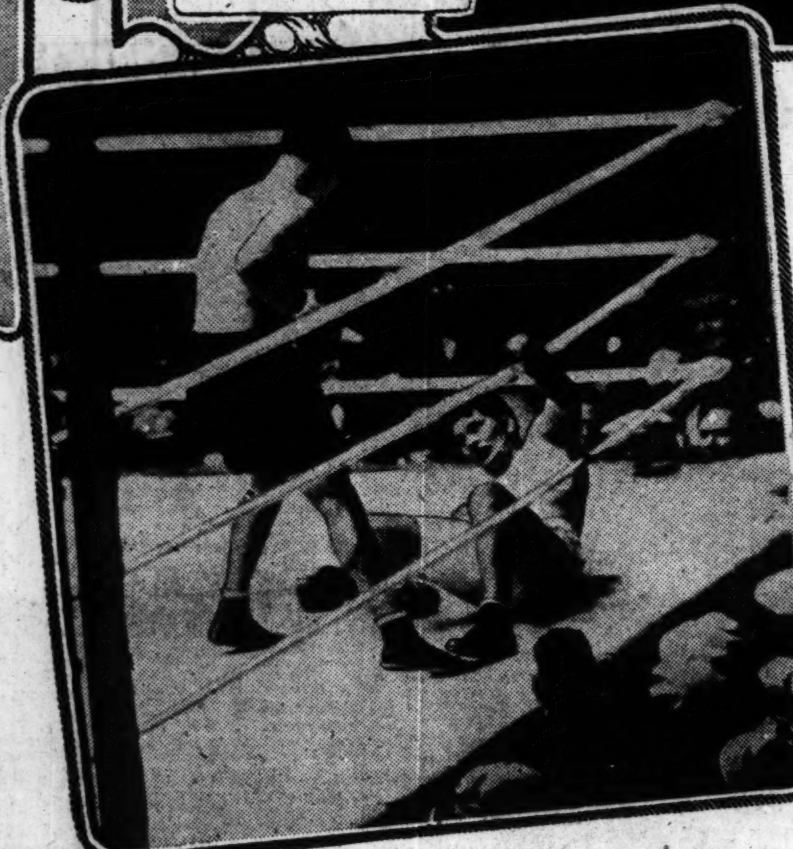
PRINCIPALS AND SCENES IN FAMOUS RING DRAMA

Two views of Dave Barry in the days before he became a referee. Barry fought in the lightweight division for six years and then jumped from the ranks of professional boxing to a place on the football team at Northwestern university. He played in several conference games, but later was lost to the squad through enforcement of the rule against pros.



Above—The ring at Soldiers' field, where the famous "fourteen count" was made. Eyes of 145,000 persons were focused on this scene on the night of Sept. 22, 1927. It was the largest crowd at a sports event in this country.

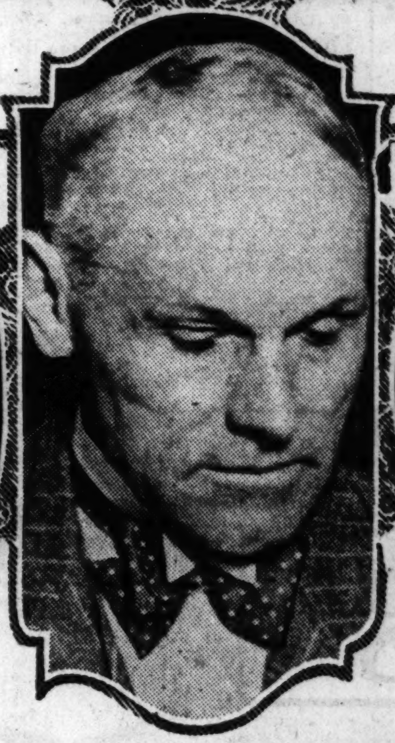




The historic knockdown in the seventh round. Tunney, the champion, has been floored by a series of Dempsey's sweeping blows. Dave Barry sized up the situation instantly. His first job was to get the frenzied challenger into a neutral corner. Here was the setting for the "FOURTEEN COUNT."

Dave Barry—no longer a fighter, no longer a football player. He was 45 years old Sept. 22.

Oswald Huncke, first chairman of the Illinois athletic commission.



John Righeimer, chairman of the Illinois athletic commission at the time of the fight.

Paul Prehn, now chairman of the Illinois athletic commission and a member at the time of the fight.

a man identified with the prize fight racket. You may say, "Barry is attempting to make a martyr of himself. He's trying to alibi. He's a hoodlum and what the hell does he care? He got his."

Well, let's see:

I was born in Montreal, Canada, Sept. 22, 1883. My granddad was born in Brooklyn and so was my father. Their folks, like all the Irish Barrys, came from County Cork. My mother was a Feron.

I got my earlier schooling at Mt. St. Louis college, Montreal. When I was 12 years old my family moved to Chicago, and there I continued school work at Lewis institute.

During my senior year at Lewis I boxed in the gym with Lloyd Hogg, who later became one of the world's greatest middle distance runners, and Louis DeGroot, our football coach and physical director. DeGroot, you may remember, was a famous football player at Harvard.

One night old Thunderbolt Smith—barber to most of the Lewis students—was putting on one of his regular stags at the old Illinois Cycling club and I attended with Hogg. We went as spectators.

During the show Smith came to us in a panic. "I'm in a hell of a fix," he said. "One of my boys has failed to show up. Will one of you take his place?"

I urged Hogg and Hogg urged me. The upshot was that I went on, loudly applauded by fellow students in attendance at the show.

One of my first blows floored my adversary. I was in the fight game from then on.

Whom Barry fought.

For the six years following I boxed as a lightweight in virtually every city in the country. My big engagements included two bouts with Joe Gans—one in Detroit and one in Bakersfield, Cal. Kid McPartland, now a New York referee, but at that time a leading lightweight, was another of my opponents on the big time.

My fighting career was suspended because of a near fatal attack of typhoid-pneumonia.

Urged by my mother to quit the boxing game for ever, I took up the study of medicine at the American College of Medicine and Surgery in Chicago.

After one year at American college I transferred to Northwestern university. I went out for football and made the team, then coached by Wally McCornack, former Dartmouth all-American. In midseason it was recalled that I had been a professional prize fighter. I left the squad.

Returns to Ring.

The wanderlust then seized me and I deserted the medical profession flat to operate in other fields. The year 1909 found me in New Orleans. Times were hard and appetite acute. I returned to boxing.

I had two fights, one with Sammy Phillips and the other with Jimmy Clabby.

Illness had suspended my fighting career before. Ten rounds with Mr. Clabby ended it permanently.

This early activity was a preface to my entrance on the career which led me to the ring at Soldiers' field on the night of Sept. 22, 1927. While defeat by Clabby ended my appearance in the ring as a fighter, it marked the beginning of my career as a referee.

I refereed a fight between Young Corbett and Harry Ferns early in 1910. This was the first of more than 600 decision fights in which I was the third man in the ring.

Included in the long list were the following championship encounters:

Freddie Welsh vs. Young Erne.
Abe Attel vs. Charley White.
Marvin Hart vs. Tony Ross.
Sam Langford vs. Dixie Kid.
Harry Forbes vs. Frankie Neal.
Jack Britton vs. Ted, Kid Lewis.

In the spring of 1926 boxing was legalized in Illinois. It never had been legal before, but had been tolerated in Chicago until the Gans-McGovern scandal in 1900.

I was among the first to receive a referee's license following the formation of the Illinois Athletic commission after the legalizing of the sport.

NOT A ROWDY

I have given this résumé of my early life and activities in order that you may have a fair picture of the man who was in the ring when the most talked about 14 seconds in prize ring record were counted off.

I'm telling you this in an attempt to convince you that I am not a rowdy, had the necessary experience to referee the Tunney-Dempsey fight, and by temperament would naturally feel a resentment and a hurt at what I think is unfair treatment by fight fans.

Before this article is completed I purpose to discuss the charges made against me and to answer them truthfully and squarely. But first let me tell you how I was drawn into the fight.

Dempsey Loses His Title.

On Sept. 23, 1926, World's Champion Jack Dempsey, the Manassa mauler, had lost his title to Gene Tunney, a peculiar type to be a prize fighter. The decision was fair, but no one could believe it. It was like the case of the farmer who said, "They ain't no sich animal," when he viewed a giraffe for the first time. An ideal spot for a return engagement, and no one knew it better than Tex Rickard, who had both of the fighters under contract.

The vigor of the bidding for the return encounter has been thoroughly explained in the press. To get the great battle, Chicago had to lift the enterprise out of the class of the usual sporting world routine. Staging the Tunney-Dempsey fight became a civic matter, and men who had never seen a prize fight put their shoulders to the wheel. Eventually Rickard decreed that the fight would be held in Chicago, and the civic character of the enterprise was emphasized.

Chicago's Great Fear.

There was the promise that nobility and the official and society cream of the land would get the choice ringside seats. At the outset it was made clear that the hoodlum element was to be crowded into the background. No funny business was to be tolerated. The boxing commission set about taking every precaution to prevent any mixup that would cause these high-toned strangers in the world of fistic sport to regret their interest in the spectacle.

Naturally there was a great deal of talk in Chicago, and throughout the country, for that matter, on who was to be the referee of the great return bout.

The naming of the referee was up to the Illinois athletic commission. The latter at the time consisted of John C. Righeimer, Oswald Huncke, and Paul Prehn. Righeimer is a Chicago business man, once owner of a saloon; Prehn is a former wrestler and afterward instructor in wrestling at the University of Illinois, and Huncke is an insurance broker. He had been named as chairman of the Illinois boxing commission at the time of its appointment by Gov. Len Small, but subsequently had resigned, although at the time of the Tunney-Dempsey fight his resignation had not been accepted and he was still serving.

He Wanted the Job.

Undoubtedly pressure, great pressure, was exerted upon these three men to obtain the selection of a referee. How much pressure, and from what sources, I cannot state.

During the weeks immediately preceding the fight my friends frequently asked me if I thought I would referee the big fight. I told them what was the truth—"I don't know."

And I didn't.

Frankly, I hoped that I would get the assignment. In the first place, I craved the honor. And I wanted the money. I thought, too, if you'll pardon the egotism, that I had more experience, more training, and was better fitted for the job than any one else.

But I never—and may I drop dead if it is not true, I never discussed my desire with any member of the commission nor to the best of my knowledge did any single one of my friends.

GETS TELEPHONE CALL

About 11 a. m. on the day of the fight I received a telephone message at Mullen's gymnasium where I was employed as boxing instructor. I was told to report at the office of the boxing commission as "soon as possible."

I got to the offices about noon. A stenographer ushered me into Chairman Righeimer's private room. Seated there around Mr. Righeimer's desk were Phil Collins. Davie Miller, Joe MacNamara, Tommy Thomas and a fellow named Byers from Decatur. The other five were Chicagoans licensed to referee bouts. Besides the referees, those in the room were Righeimer, Prehn, Huncke and Walter George, secretary of the commission. Several other fellows who had served as judges at previous Chicago fights and Paul Beeler, who had previously served as a timekeeper, also were there. The press was barred.

What Righeimer Said.

Righeimer opened the meeting by saying:

"This fight tonight is the biggest thing of its sort ever to come to Chicago. Inasmuch as it is a civic affair, one that will either reflect credit or discredit upon the whole city, and in view of the fact that there have been charges of fouling in one of the contestant's previous fights we must be sure that there can be no repetition of these charges tonight. (Mr. Righeimer, I thought then and believe now, was referring to the public clamor about whether or not Dempsey had fouled Sharkey.)

The rules of the Illinois Boxing commission were then taken up one by one. Mr. Righeimer read them and asked if every one present thoroughly understood them. There was a good deal of discussion. Particular emphasis was laid upon 'the knockdown rule.'

Here Are the Rules.

The rules which have been the subject of so much argument are now Nos. 87 and 88 in the manual of rules of the Illinois Athletic commission and appear under the general heading "Knockdowns," on page 26.

No. 87 reads:

"When a contestant is 'down' his opponent shall retire to the farthest corner of the ring and remain there until the count is completed. Should he fail to do so, the referee will cease counting until he has so retired."

No. 88 reads:

"When a 'knockdown' occurs the timekeeper shall immediately arise and announce the seconds audibly as they elapse. The referee shall first see that the opponent retires to the farthest corner of the ring and then, turning to the timekeeper, shall take up the count in unison with the timekeeper, announcing the seconds to the boxer on the floor. Should the boxer on his feet fail to stay in the said corner, the referee and timekeeper may cease counting until he has so retired. At the tenth second, providing the termination of the round has not happened in the meantime, he will strike the gong twice."

What Was Meant?

Mr. Righeimer asked: "Do all of you referees understand just what is meant by the knockdown rule?"

This query brought on a hot discussion. Some pointed out that there was conflict in the wording on the point of whether the referee should take up the count in unison with the timekeeper or start the count from where he, the referee, left off whn he started to get the boxer on his feet into the farthest corner of the ring. I asked the commissioners how they reconciled the statement, i. e., "should he fail to do so [go to the farthest corner] the referee will cease counting until he has so retired," with the statement, i. e., "The referee shall first see that the opponent retires to the farthest corner of the ring and then, turning to the timekeeper, shall take up the count in unison with the timekeeper."

The Commissioners' Verdict.

The commissioners ruled that a succeeding sentence now in Rule 88 answered this question. That sentence reads: "Should the boxer on his feet fail to stay in the said corner, the referee and timekeeper shall cease counting until he has so retired."

The commissioners realized that there was conflict on the matter whether the referee, having quit counting, should resume the count in unison with the timekeeper or take it up where he, the referee, had left off.

But the commissioners decisively and unanimously pointed out that the timekeeper was merely an auxiliary to the referee. It is only a recent innovation which calls for the timekeeper to make an audible count. Ring usage never has permitted a timekeeper to count a boxer out. Counting a man out is solely the function of the referee.

They Were Unanimous.

Hence the commission's agreement that the timekeeper should cease counting when the referee ceased counting.

It was plain that when the referee resumed counting he should pick up where he had stopped.

In other words, the commission chose absolutely to ignore the phraseology of Rule 88—"shall take up the count in unison with the timekeeper," and so advised all referees present.

It was explained that the only reason for the phrase "in unison with the timekeeper," was an attempt to make a referee's count, often times either too long or too short for ten seconds, a true tolling of the seconds as ticked off on stop watch.

After a full discussion and a clear-cut definition of what the rules in regard to the count, several of the referees asked the commissioners what they regarded "the farthest corner of the ring."

Define "Farthest Corner."

The commissioners unanimously agreed that the farthest corner of the ring must be taken to mean the farthest neutral corners, the neutral corners, of course, being those not occupied by the contestants and their seconds between rounds.

All the rules in the commission list having been discussed, Righeimer again spoke of the magnitude of the affair. "The eyes of the world will be on Chicago tonight," he said. "It will be up to one of you fellows to uphold the city's honor." The meeting lasted about four hours, ending about 4 p. m.

There was some discussion about the advisability of keeping those present together. But since no arrangement had been made, all of those present were placed on their honor to say nothing as to the fact they might be chosen to referee or judge or be timekeeper at the fight.

Because of the fact that my ring togs were at home on the north side I called my mother, whose residence is at 522 Melrose street and asked if she would pack my bag, as she had done on numerous occasions, and have dad bring it down to me.

Dresses at Gym.

My father arrived at about 5:30 with my bag at Mullen's gym. I had eaten alone in a restaurant under the gymnasium.

At about 6:45 I took a cab and went to the arena, where I arrived at about 7:15 o'clock. I was ushered to the ringside without having gone near the dressing rooms. I was seated in the first row of the press section in a place reserved for referees, commission attachés, and timekeepers.

Since there were six referees at the afternoon meeting and there were six bouts on the card, my supposition was that each would referee one bout. No information whatsoever had been given at the commission meeting as to who would referee the main bout.

I remember that Phil Collins refereed the first bout. The second bout was between Chuck Wiggins of Indianapolis and Jimmy Brynes of Louisville. After the fighters had entered the ring I was designated by Commission Secretary Walter George as the man who was to referee.

The bout, a furious affair, went the limit of six rounds. When it was over I left the ring, pulled on my sweater and took my seat at the ringside. Previously the thought had not occurred, but as I sat down it dawned on me that my evening's work was done.

BARRY IS DISAPPOINTED

There was a surge of disappointment. My desire to officiate at the championship, with the attendant prestige, had been uppermost in my mind. Seemingly my opportunity had been swept away.

As the next bout was called I sat consoling myself. "O, well, I've got a good seat, anyhow," I mused.

Davie Miller climbed between the ropes after the fighters for the third bout had reached the center of the ring.

"Dave doesn't get it, either," I said to myself. "Who in hell can it be?"

I recalled that Dave had shared with me a large percentage of the fights in Illinois and had been the most frequently mentioned possibility for the assignment.

He Is Bewildered.

I was mystified beyond words. I figured Collins, then myself, then Davie out of the running. I couldn't see how any of the remaining candidates possibly rated the call.

My disappointment at my apparent failure to land the job was surpassed by my bewilderment. Why would the commission, after the apparently sincere gathering a few hours before, ignore the claims of such experienced men as Collins, Miller and myself? Frankly, I was sunk.

The third bout meant nothing to me. Today I couldn't tell you who the contestants were, much less who won. I did look at Davie. I've never talked the matter over with him, but I was confident at the time the same puzzling thoughts were racing through his mind as those that had me going.

Miller Also Left Out.

Davie is a man of strong emotions. His swarthy countenance is easily read. When he's pleased, his rather round face beams. When he's not so happy his black eyes shoot sparks. His eyes were flashing menacingly when he left the ring after that third bout. He was in no pleasant mood. He felt as certain he wouldn't be recalled for the next—the fourth bout—as I was that I wouldn't be.

THAT FOURTH BOUT WAS FOR THE HEAVYWEIGHT CHAMPIONSHIP OF THE WORLD!

I remember as though it were yesterday how Dempsey, accompanied by Jerry the Greek, Leo Flynn, his manager, and Gus Wilson, all dressed in the white regimentals of the Dempsey entourage, marched down the tortuous aisle and climbed through the ropes. What a thunderous ovation that tremendous crowd gave him. He may have been the defeated champion. He may have been a hasbeen. But the crowd saw only the Manassa mauler.

His beard was of several days' growth. His hair was towsled. His belted and scarred brows were contracted into a frown.

Dempsey Tries to Keep Warm.

Dempsey grasped the ropes in his corner and pawed around like a wild beast. His attendants fixed the stool and stood around. Gus Wilson pulled the bathrobe closely around his shoulders. There was chill in the air.

While Dempsey attempted to keep warm, waiting for the appearance of the champion, the ring filled with civic notables.

I remember noting that Tunney was slow in arriving. "Tho old gag," I thought almost aloud. For several minutes there were introductions and bowing from those introduced. I paid little attention to these, being intent upon watching Dempsey.

I felt no nervousness, no tenseness. I was out of it. The great battle was almost on and I was a spectator with a ringside seat.

ORDERED INTO RING

Suddenly I felt a tap on the shoulder. I glanced around and saw Righeimer.

"Dave," he said. "Go in there. And may God bless you."

Almost mechanically, surely without a thought of what it meant, I pulled off my sweater, grasped a score card from Righeimer's outstretched hand and climbed into the ring.

A minute later I had called Jack Dempsey and Gene Tunney to the center of that squared circle.

(In next Sunday's Tribune Barry tells, simply but dramatically, of the ten round battle between Tunney and Dempsey. He describes the "vaseline incident," tells in detail of the famous knockdown in the seventh round, and of how "I saved Dempsey from himself." Barry tells how he scored every round and gives a technical description of the fight. Others have told how the battle looked to those looking at the ring. Barry tells how it looked to the only other man in it. Accompanying Barry's story will be photographs illustrating the referee's points on the knockdown.)

CANADIENS GLIDE TO 2 TO 1 HOCKEY WIN OVER HAWKS

Arbour Scores Lone Tally for Chicago.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MONTREAL, Quebec, Dec. 8.—Chicago's Blackhawks suffered their seventh defeat of the season against Les Canadiens of Montreal, 2 to 1, here tonight in a National Professional Hockey league game.

The Frenchmen dominated throughout and the score might have been larger but the Canadiens eased up when it appeared they were complete masters of the situation.

The game was a listless affair until about the middle of the final period, when both sextets scored inside of two minutes.

March, Gardiner Star.

Arbour scored Chicago's lone tally for Chicago after being on the ice only a few minutes. "Mush" March, the new Hawk substitute, and Goalie Gardiner turned in excellent performances.

Chicago was outstandingly weak in offensive playing, the forwards lacked in aggressiveness.

In the first period Gardiner blocked sixteen shots at the Hawk net. Hainsworth, Canadiens' goalie, stopped eight tries in the same session.

Second Period Scoreless.

Howie Morenz scored the Canadiens' first goal after eighteen minutes of play in the initial period. They were one man short at the time, Joliat being on the penalty bench for a tussle with Irvin. The second period was scoreless. Summary:

CHICAGO.		CANADIENS.
Gardiner	Goal	Hainsworth
Loughlin	Defense	Burke
Wentworth	Defense	Mantha
Ripley	Center	Morenz
Irvin	Wing	Gagne
Arbour	Wing	Joliat

GOALS.

First period—Morenz [17:20].
Third period—Leduc [11:00]; Chicago, Arbour [0:40].

PENALTIES.

McKinnon [3], Joliat [3], Wentworth, Morenz, Loughlin [2], Carson, Gottselig, Wentworth, Burke.

SUBSTITUTIONS.

Chicago—McKinnon, Hoffinger, Gottselig, March, H. Gardiner, Coutur. Montreal—G. Carson, Gaudecault, Leduc, Lepine, Patterson, Lesieur.

OTTAWA WINS, 2-1.

TORONTO, Ont., Dec. 8.—(AP)—Ottawa stopped the Toronto Maple Leafs' winning streak tonight when they scored a 2 to 1 overtime victory, Boucher scoring the winning goal on a long shot from center after six minutes of extra play. Ottawa's close knit defense more than offset the offensive superiority of the Leafs, and puts the victors into a tie with the Montreal Maroons for first place in the Canadian division of the National Hockey league.

DETROIT BLANKS PITTSBURGH.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Dec. 8.—(AP)—The Detroit Cougars went into a tie for first place with the New York Americans in the American division of the National Hockey league here tonight by defeating the Pittsburgh Pirates, 3 to 0. The Cougars meet the Americans at Detroit tomorrow night.

BRUINS, 5; MAROONS, 1.

Boston, Mass., Dec. 8.—(AP)—The Boston Bruins went on a scoring rampage here tonight and defeated the hard checking Montreal Maroons, 5 to 1, before 15,000 spectators. Frederickson, Boston center, caged the first Boston score in the opening period, and came back early in the second session to score again. Montreal's lone score was made by Phillips in the first period.

Englewood Wins 2 Cage Games from New Trier

Englewood High administered a double beating to New Trier at basketball at the dedication of the south side school's new gym last night. The heavies triumphed, 28 to 23, and the lights won, 28 to 20. Capt. Hoffman starred for Englewood heavies with seven baskets and two free throws.

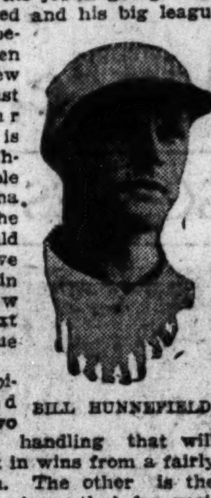
BLACKBURNE HAS HARD JOB AHEAD OVERHAULING SOX

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.



BILL HUNNEFIELD.

Inasmuch as his job is going to be quite complicated and his big league managerial experience has been confined to a few months, the vast army of cigar store managers is advised to withhold unfavorable criticism of Lena Blackburne if the White Sox should happen to prove a bit befuddled in the first few weeks of the next American league campaign.

Big league pilots are called upon for two things. One is handling that will draw the utmost in wins from a fairly good ball team. The other is the overhauling of a team that for various reasons has become run down at the heel. Obviously the latter task is the more complicated because it not only calls for putting together the best possible combination but getting the maximum results after the machine is completed. Blackburne's task is the latter.

It is a healthy sign for a manager to admit, as Blackburne did recently, that he is awake to his team's weaknesses. By mentioning out loud that the Sox were shy behind the bat, at second base, and on the pitching knob he broadcast to the respective candidates for the posts involved that they need not come into camp feeling that a job is nothing more than a matter of putting on a uniform. They'll have to fight to gain recognition.

Where Blackburne is going to be called on for the keenest variety of judgment is in determining his outfield. Of this class of athletes the Sox have an abundance. Falk is the prize of the lot if he will give all that is in him, but if he is traded it either will be for an outfielder good enough to perform regularly anywhere or for a pitcher able to work his turn. Either way the Sox will profit. To grab a pitcher probably would be the most advisable move because the team will still have such as the hustling Metzler, the promising young Reynolds and Mostil, who can still go get 'em, although his hitting is not heavy.

IN the WAKE of the NEWS

WHY IS A FORECASTER?

WHY is a football forecaster? Frequently during the football season The Wake is asked that question. Less frequently the query contains serious reflections upon the forecaster's intelligence or even sanity.

Recently we met a national authority who combines syndicate writing with his coaching duties. This season he took up the forecasting stunt. We put the same question to him and he frankly replied, "Because it makes my articles sell better. Apparently the public wants opinions, whether they be right or wrong."

Originally this task was wished on us over our protest by a publisher who knew his public. The first batch of letters following the inaugural forecasts convinced us he was right. Since then Wake forecasts have become a habit.

These forecasts serve a useful purpose, especially when you are mistaken. They then afford opportunity for forecasters of superior intelligence to write in what a boob you are. Nothing gives a loyal partisan greater joy than that. And if you are fair minded you enjoy it, too, for so often the partisan is right.

The season of 1928 has been one of many unexpected results. The Wake makes no particular effort to secure a high percentage of winners—that is by picking soft games—but tries to "dope" the leading teams in each section. It was somewhat surprising, therefore, to note a higher average than in 1927, despite some lamentable guesses on several of the big games.

For those who care for that sort of thing, here is The Wake percentage since the practice originated [in accordance with sporting custom, ties are eliminated in figuring winning average]:

	Won.	Lost.	Tied.	Pct.
1928	275	67	21	80.4
1927	205	70	21	74.5
1926	226	54	19	80.7
1925	206	61	21	77.4
1924	125	36	17	77.6
1923	166	35	19	82.6

MODEL 40 A.C.
A powerful, compact, all-electric receiver in a beautiful shielding cabinet. FULL-VISION Dial. Uses six A.C. tubes and one rectifying tube, $77 (without tubes).

If you could get top performance at the bottom price

WOULD YOU HESITATE?

You can get it—in radio—with an all-electric Atwater Kent.

There's no question about it. Look at it this way:

When the human voice or the musical instrument at the broadcasting station is brought to you with complete fidelity to the original—that's perfect reception.

When you can tap this great reservoir of entertainment instantly—at any time—without bother or delay—that's ease of operation.

When you can enjoy your radio night after night and month after month and always find it responsive to your will—that's dependability.

These are the fundamentals. These are the things that make you say: "Our radio is all right. We're completely satisfied."

These are the things that are built into every Atwater Kent receiver. The tone is pure and natural, with selectivity and with power for long range and plenty of volume. The FULL-VISION Dial is speedy and sure. And for dependability—just ask any of the 2,000,000 owners—let them tell you their experiences with "the radio that works and keeps on working."

If you have noticed some of the higher radio prices, it may surprise you that this beautiful and beautifully performing little receiver can give you all you expect, at so modest a price. But if you'll just forget the prices and try the radio you will join the great army of believers.

A holiday remembrance

"I can never forget, nor would I if I could, the packages of ALLEN'S FOOT-EASE that were sent to us in France from the U. S. A. about Holiday time during the War.

While we were shaking in our shoes this healing, antiseptic powder for the feet, the remark frequently went 'round: 'It ain't the A. E. F. that's winnin' this war—it's the A. F. E.!'

Napoleon once said: 'A foot-sore army is an army half defeated.'

PADDY DRISCOLL.

Green Bay, the team which taught Benny Friedman how to defeat the Bears and cost Chicago a professional football championship, comes back to Wrigley field this afternoon in the concluding game of the 1928 campaign.

If there were no other reasons than the 16 to 6 beating the Packers wrapped up and delivered to the Bears more than a month ago, that would be sufficient to arouse the Chicagoans. But there are other reasons. They date back in the long list of closely contested games between the rival clubs.

Today probably will be the last opportunity Chicago fans will have of seeing the present aggregation of Bears. In this classification, it is rumored, is Paddy Driscoll. Approaching his thirty-third year, and ending his thirteenth on the gridiron, Paddy is said to be ready to turn in his suit and take a seat in the grandstand. Driscoll has decided to drop out before he does slow up.

The kickoff has been moved up to 2 o'clock for today's game.

K. C. BASKETBALL LEAGUE OFFERS 20 GAMES TODAY

De Soto and Columbus Top North Division.

A full schedule of 20 games will be played in the five divisions of the Knights of Columbus Basketball league this afternoon. In most of the sections first place will be at stake.

The north division offers one of the most attractive cards of the day for its home floor at the Broadway armory. De Soto and Columbus, ancient rivals, will clash in the headliner, with Marquette and Ravenswood meeting in another game that promises plenty of action.

First place in the west division will be the prize when Hildebrand, with three straight victories, meets Hennepin, present champion of the division. Damen, also unbeaten, collides with Tonti.

SOUTHWEST DIVISION.
[1814 South Ashland avenue.]
ge vs. Lafayette.
Washington vs. St. Augustine.
Sherman vs. Ketteler.
Oak Park vs. St. Francis.

WEST DIVISION.
[4711 West Madison street.]

Carroll vs. Barry.
Americus vs. Feehan.
Damen vs. Tonti.

CENTRAL DIVISION.
[St. Rita's gymnasium.]
St. James vs. Hughes.
Fort Dearborn vs. Madonna.
De La Salle vs. Leo XIII.
Quigley vs. Santa Maria.

NORTH DIVISION.
[Broadway armory.]
St. Cyr vs. O'Connor.
De Soto vs. Columbus.
Marquette vs. Ravenswood.
Brownson vs. O'Connell.

SOUTH DIVISION.
[Eighth Regiment armory.]
Dowling vs. Englewood.
Perez vs. La Rabida.
McHale vs. Loyola-Hyde Park.
Calumet vs. Aquinas.

So we're calling this Reo Flying Cloud The Master

He must have been a grand old sea-dog, the Master of the Flying Cloud. — Can't you imagine him—taking the wheel himself, driving her under full sail down the Roaring Forties, thrilling (as who would not?) to the feel and mastery of the finest clipper ship that ever rode the seven seas?

And so we call this Reo Flying Cloud The Master. The name of the car and a name that suggests still something else. — Get behind the wheel yourself. Feel the thrill when you let her out for speed. Watch her for pickup and brake action. Watch the way she handles. Note the way she hugs the road, paved or dirt, at thirty miles or sixty—the clip at which she'll take a hill. — She's a car—as the other Flying Cloud was a ship. And there's a Flying Cloud waiting now for a Master to take her wheel.

WATERFOWL HUNT SEASON ENDS IN ILLINOIS DEC. 31

Indiana Nimrods Have Until Jan. 15.

BY BOB BECKER.

The so-called "arctic" or last stage of duck hunting in Illinois, Michigan, Indiana, and Iowa is due this month. Late December shooting often means hunting on the ice with fur lined ear muffs, hot packs, and all the wool socks and clothing that a man can wear at one time. The season on waterfowl shooting in Illinois ends Dec. 31. The same closing date prevails in Wisconsin and Michigan. Indiana hunters may go after ducks and geese until Jan. 15.

Middle west hunters who want to crawl into an "igloo blind" and shoot mallards on the ice will find this sport going strong in the Illinois river bottoms right up to closing day. Last year, when the closing day was Jan. 15, thousands of birds were still active in southern Illinois and one could get a bag of birds during the last weeks, although low temperatures on New Year's day froze all the lakes and ponds so that hunters drove their cars across lakes and bayous.

In order to keep warm late in the season when below freezing and often near zero temperatures may prevail, the duck hunter has to work several tricks in fitting himself out with anti-freeze clothing. If hip boots are needed for the hunt, an extra large pair should be provided so that a fleece lined leather moccasin may be inserted inside of each boot. These should be large enough to take two pairs of woolen hose. With such a combination one usually can keep his feet warm on any kind of a day. If hip boots are not needed, a big combination felt and rubber knee overshoe or boot is recommended. We tried this type of footgear on Jan. 15 this year and found it was the best foot-warmer to be had.

THE INQUIRING REPORTER

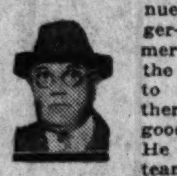
Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

The Tribune will pay $5 for each question accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "Inquiring Reporter," Chicago Tribune. For today's question Hugh E. Rouse, Greenwood Inn, Evanston, Ill., was awarded $5.

The Question.

What Big Ten football player do you consider of most value to his team this season?

The Answers.



Emil Blumenthal, 2541 Ewing avenue, Evanston, manager—I would pick Holmer of Northwestern as the most valuable man to his team, though there are others just as good players as he. He was captain of the team, a great kicker, and a passer. I imagine he was the best ground gainer on the team. His combined qualities set him apart among players in the Big Ten.

Clarence Olsen, 1921 North Karlov avenue, salesman — I believe Holmer of the Purple was the most valuable man this year because of his unusual all around ability. Not only has he been valuable to his team as a triple threat back, but in other respects he is looked up to by the other members of the team. His leadership was an important factor in the success of the team.

W. A. Snow, 7 South Dearborn street, law clerk—Walter Holmer of Northwestern. He was the outstanding star of the Big Ten season. He was an able leader and had the coöperation of the entire team. He was captain, full back, a good kicker and passer. He probably gained more yardage than any other player in the Big Ten.

Walter Krieger, 209 West Jackson boulevard, insurance—Raskowski of Ohio deserves top notch credit for the good work he did. If he hadn't received injuries he would have been an all-American for the second straight year. I am from Ohio and I have watched his work. Next to Raskowski I would rank Walter Holmer of Northwestern, a mighty fine player.

Vincent Isla, Loyola university, medical student—Welch of Purdue certainly meant about as much to his team as any one player could. He was a triple threat back and the mainspring of Purdue's attack. His alertness on pass defense paved the way for several touchdowns. Without Welch the Boilermakers would have had tough sledding. Bennett of Indiana is another who can't be overlooked.

ANDERSON LEADS N. U. FOOTBALL TEAM NEXT FALL

29 Get Varsity Letters at Annual Banquet.

Henry James Anderson, a guard, last night was elected captain of the 1929 Northwestern university football team. The election was held at the annual banquet given the team by the alumni at the Hotel Sherman. Twenty-nine athletes who were awarded major letters for the past season's work, participated in the selection.

Anderson, who will be 21 years of age next month, is a Chicago prep product, having played on the championship Lindblom High school teams of 1924 and 1925. Russell Crane, who recently was elected captain of the University of Illinois team which Northwestern meets next fall, was the other guard of those two Lindblom teams.

Record for Frosh Awards.

Including the 29 varsity awards, there were 123 purple sweaters presented at the dinner. Twenty-one minor letters were given members of the "B" football team and 73 freshmen, by approximately 50 per cent a record for yearling rewards, were honored with numeral sweaters of the class of 1932.

One thousand Wildcat fans were in attendance at the annual "Harvest Home" jamboree, sponsored by the Northwestern university club of Chicago. Harry Wells, L. A. '13, of Evanston, was elected president of the club for 1929.

It was the largest presentation in the athletic history of the school. Freshmen sweaters rarely have been given to as many as 50, but the spirit and talent displayed by the record squad of 120 occasioned the faculty committee to bestow numerals upon more than six full teams of yearlings.

Ten Tons of Frosh.

Because of their great weight and number, the frosh became known as the "ten tons of freshmen gridders." Their aggregate weight is more than 20,000 pounds.

Eighteen linemen and eleven back fielders were given varsity letters. They are:

BACKS—Capt. Walter Holmer, Moline, Ill.; George Levison, Will Lewis, Lee Hanley and Bert Fox, all of Evanston; William Griffin, Chicago; Henry Bruder, Pekin, Ill.; Russell Bergherm, Billings, Mont.; Lowell W. Calderwood, Benton Harbor, Mich.; Johnny Haas, Fargo, N. D., and George Rojan, Muskegon, Mich.

ENDS—Tom Verdell, Chicago; Lawrence Oliphant, Wade Woodworth and Ted Egbert, all of Evanston; Don Massie, Galesburg, Ill.; and Frank Baker, Cedar Rapids, Ia.

TACKLES—John Hazen, Butte, Mont.; Harry Kent, Perry, Okla.; Nels Vandenberg, Chicago Heights, and Frank Sinkler, Chicago.

GUARDS—Justin Dart, Hinsdale, Ill.; Robert Sinks, Jonesboro, Ill.; Francis Sullivan, Chenoa, Ill.; Rudy Penza, Kenosha, Wis.; Henry Anderson, Chicago, and Joe Spadea, Brockton, Mass.

CENTERS—Milton Erickson, Moline, Ill., and Robert Clark, Detroit.

NOBODY'S BUSINESS

By WESTBROOK PEGLER

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—Literature is to hand announcing the establishment of academic courses in prize fighting and baseball.

Prof. James De Forrest, who prepared Jack Dempsey, Luis Angel Firpo and Harry Pearson, the illustrated Swede, for more or less noble inspirational works in the resined square, has established the John L. Sullivan Memorial College of Prize Fighting and Self-defense in New York City.

Profs. Johnny Bassler and Jess Orndorff, late catchers in the major leagues, send a prospectus from Los Angeles, announcing the opening of the National Baseball college there to teach the national game in a really serious way.

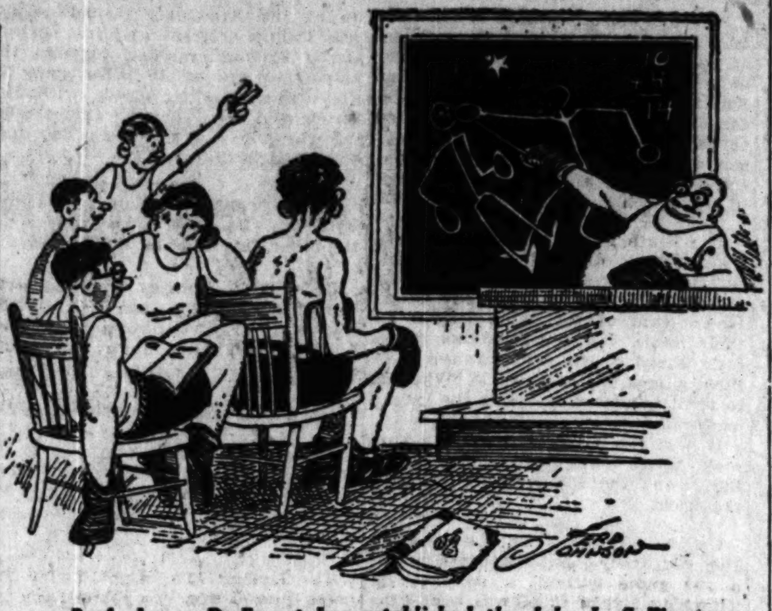
The enrollment in the baseball college will be limited to one hundred undergraduates, but it seems probable that if a really deserving student should present himself at the faculty office with the price of his tuition in hand, the regents might strain the rule slightly and enlarge the student body to 101. I cannot imagine Profs. Bassler and Orndorff denying the light of education to a young man with the price of admission in cash.

All undergraduates will be marked rigidly in all subjects of the curriculum, including conversation with the umpires and telegrams to the club owners during the holdout season which comes in March. The inclusion of these subjects in the course sets it above all previous attempts to prepare young men for the major leagues under what might be termed hothouse conditions.

I believe there have been several baseball colleges in which the technical subjects were well taught, but it always struck me that the graduates must be onesided and failed to progress in their calling because they had not been grounded in the arts of negotiating with the club owners or pleading with the official scorers for their hits.

These talents have been quite important in the advancement of the Messrs. Frank Frisch and Eddie Collins, for instance, among others.

The art of writing articles for the newspapers while actually engaged in hitting home runs or chasing fly balls in the field, which Mr. Babe Ruth has developed to a high degree, need not be stressed in the college course. In fact, I believe that in the entrance examinations all applicants should be required to write a running account of a world series game, a lecture to young boys on right living, and an anecdote about an old Negro in the bleachers down in Greenville, N. C., while asleep or be rejected as temperamentally unfit for baseball as a career.



Prof. James De Forest has established the John L. Sullivan Memorial College of Prizefighting.

I take it that, in a general way, the national college of baseball is to be the West Point of the baseball industry, turning out many sided young alumni, fit for all the technical, artistic, and social duties of the baseball player. It will be a pleasure to hear the first graduate who presents himself to Uncle Wilbert Robinson of the Brooklyn club, with his dipolma in hand and the equivalent of the Phi Beta Kappa key, carved of pure bone, of course, dangling from his watch chain.

Mr. Robinson's ideas on some matters are slightly radical and it would be interesting to observe the conflict of opinion between the college taught ball player and Uncle Wilbert.

During the last world series, Uncle Wilbert was asked to suggest some means of preventing the loss of baseball games to the Yankees. "There is only one way," he said, "I would walk Ruth and Gehrig. Then I would walk Lazzeri and Meusel. In fact, I would walk everybody but the pitcher. I would make him hit and win his own game."

No mention is made of the recreational life which is planned for the students of the baseball college to divert their minds from the grind of baseball, but I take it that there will be a mathematics team and that students who are found deficient in the hook-slide, fielding bunts, or trapping the ball will be declared ineligible for participation in mathematics.

Prof. De Forrest informs me that one of the major subjects at the John L. Sullivan Memorial College of Prize Fighting and Self Defense will be the bandaging of the hands, a science in which he is a recognized expert. The professor is generally credited with having bandaged Jack Dempsey's hands for the Willard episode at Toledo, in which one swing to the face raised Mr. Willard's cheek to the size of a toy balloon and turned the complexion from its natural tint, which was about the color of an oyster or a batch of bread dough, to a blooming, iridescent purple.

"All my students will be given a very severe course in the bandaging of the hands," he states. "You cannot imagine how many fights are lost which could be won if the hands were correctly bandaged.

"Of course, the members of our faculty will give instructions in boxing, too, because you never can tell when you will have to fall back on boxing if your bandages slip. But I am a great believer in bandages. Let me bandage a heavyweight champion's hands and I do not care who writes the nation's songs."

La Grange, Calumet Fives Divide Double Header

La Grange and Calumet High schools divided two basketball games at La Grange last night. Led by Azzarallo, who scored seven points, the home heavies won, 21 to 16. Mose, with eight points, paved the way for Calumet's lightweight victory, 21 to 16.

BRAVES TRADE OUTFIELDERS.

Boston, Mass., Dec. 8.—[U. P.]—Outfielder Ed Brown has been traded to the Toledo club for Shortstop Glen Messner, the Boston Braves announced today.

LAKE FOREST IS DENIED BERTH IN MIDWEST LEAGUE

Application for membership from Lake Forest college was rejected by the Midwest Intercollegiate Athletic conference in its annual meeting here yesterday. Lake Forest had filed application on the strength of the rumored withdrawal of Hamline, but the latter remained within the fold although scheduling only one football game with a conference member. This was with Carleton at Northfield, Minn., Oct. 13.

Carleton was awarded the track and field meet for May 31. The athletic directors also decided to add a cross country run to the list of annual events but the date and place was left open to the judgment of a committee composed of P. W. Boutwell of Beloit, Morey Eby of Coe, and L. R. Jackson of Knox.

Ban Johnson Falls Down Stairs, Fractures Ribs

Spencer, Ind., Dec. 8.—[Special.]—Ban Johnson, former president of the American league, now a resident of Spencer, fell down a short flight of steps today and fractured several ribs. Mr. Johnson, who is in much better health than he was early this fall, arrived home Friday from Chicago, where he had gone direct from Mexico.

Pullman Meets Hammond Eleven Today for Title

The midwest heavyweight football championship will be decided today when the Pullman Panthers and the Hammond team will meet at Corliess field, 103d street and Cottage Grove avenue, at 2:15 p. m. Hammond has been strengthened by the addition of Rose and Kresky of the University of Wisconsin eleven.

In 10 WAYS—Pines Automatic Winterfront

Will Pay for Itself on Your Car Over and Over Again

1 It will break you of the costly, dangerous "choke" habit.
2 It cuts the "warming-up" period to seconds.
3 It prevents excessive crankcase dilution.
4 It prevents premature cylinder wear.
5 It saves gasoline.
6 It keeps your motor always at the correct temperature.
7 It prevents corrosion and condensation.
8 It reduces carbon.
9 It keeps the car warm inside.
10 It's Automatic.

THERE is no guesswork, no relying on your memory for Winterfront protection. It always works — positively and dependably — with scientific accuracy. It's the only automatic radiator shutter on the market. Thermostats are guaranteed. Ask for it by name.

Special advance showing—Tomorrow and all this week—Diamond T Show Rooms, 933-941 W. Washington Blvd.

REVEALED to the public TOMORROW—for the first time—even before the New York Automobile Show—the new complete line of bevel drive Diamond T trucks.

You are invited. Come—inspect the smartest motor trucks ever built—Diamond T, Chicago's most popular trucks that are ready to GO and look the part. See them at this special advance showing.

Note These Prices!

They Prove Diamond T Value

Diamond T Model 151—1-ton chassis	$1095
Diamond T Model 290—1½-ton chassis	1475
Diamond T Model 302—2-ton chassis	1650
Diamond T Model 550—2½-ton chassis	2195

(all prices f. o. b. Chicago)

Complete line, 1 to 7½ tons

SIXES every one! Four great trucks, capacities 1, 1½, 2, and 2½ tons—built to snap through traffic holes, to deliver advertised performance with full load and "look like a million dollars." This new bevel drive line of Diamond T trucks is the most spectacular motor truck event of the year. Don't miss it.

Diamond T Strength, Stamina, Beauty

Every detail of these new trucks reflects Diamond T's 24 years of automotive experience—Diamond T's dogged determination to LEAD, to build in greater performance, more rugged stamina and richer appearance than motor trucks have ever had before.

Lacquered steel-sheathed bodies that gleam with rich colors like custom coach work—smart modern lines—passenger car comfort that makes drivers prefer them—performance that does every job RIGHT and right away—safety features of 4-wheel brakes, convenient controls, complete equipment.

For years Diamond T has dominated the Chicago market—has outsold all other heavy duty motor trucks. These trucks show you why at a glance.

CROSSCO RACES TO STAKE VICTORY AT NEW ORLEANS

Triumphs Over Solace in Baton Rouge Handicap.

DAILY RACING FORM SELECTIONS

7—Hit the Deck, Graceful, Conversation.
8—Conciliation, Privately, Nose Dive.

New Orleans, La., Dec. 8.—[Special.]—The Wild Rose farm stable's Crossco, a Chicago mare, won the Baton Rouge handicap at Jefferson park here today. She came here fresh from an impressive victory over the mile and a sixteenth route at Bowie.

The race today was at the same distance and Crossco won easily by a length and a half over Solace from the Seagram stable. Galahad, the favorite, was third.

Crossco's victory was well earned, for she covered more ground than Solace and Galahad. Coming to the outside on the bend Jockey McCrossen had to keep the mare wide all the way around the turn and down the stretch, but she was going away from the others at the end.

Reigh Count Adopts Roman Idea Abroad; Spurns Clock

BY FRENCH LANE.

Trainer B. S. Michell, who has taken Reigh Count, American turf champion, to England to try for the Ascot cup and a half dozen other English turf classics, is not going to violate the traditions of the English turf and train his horse by the split second stop watch.

But he will not be at any disadvantage at that, because in Larry Mills he has an exercise boy what is a veritable split second timepiece himself.

This ability of Larry's was demonstrated during Reigh Count's training for the last Kentucky Derby, Saratoga Gold Cup, Lawrence Realization stakes, and other famous races the colt won. Trainer Michell could tell Mills to work Reigh Count at a certain clip and the order would be carried out to the second.

Michell could tell Mills to work Reigh Count a mile in 1:43 or six furlongs in 1:15 and the stop watch proved that Mills would come within fractions of a second of the mark every time he tossed a leg over the big red son of Sunreigh-Countessa.

It is this uncanny skill of knowing exactly how fast a horse is running at every fractional mile post that has caused Mills to be regarded as the best exercise boy in America. Many trainers have said he would make a great jockey. But Mills, a lad of 19, from Louisville, Ky., evidently did not care for such a vocation.

He preferred to be called the best exercise boy to becoming a jockey of more or less fame. And it was because he generally was regarded as the most efficient exercise boy that he was taken to England as an important cog in the preparation for America's invasion of the English turf.

Despite the irregular tracks over which the horses run and train in England, Trainer Michell declares he will not need a watch to know how fast Reigh Count is running.

"If I can't judge the pace Larry can, so we don't have to give any thought to the stop watch when all the horses we race against are trained without the use of one," Michell declared before leaving for the trip abroad.

"We'll know when Reigh Count is ready and can guess just as well the day before the race on about what Reigh Count's time will be over the Ascot course as we might had we been holding the watch on him throughout his training work."

Other American trainers have been able to get their horses into winning condition in England without the use of the watch, and no doubt Michell will be able to do the same thing. But the English trainers who have come to America and attempted to use the English no time trial system of training have been failures.

This is due to the fact that in America all race tracks are constructed along similar lines. In England no two are alike, nor of the same distance or construction.

NINE PENN SWIM MEETS.

Penn swimmers will engage in nine dual meets this winter.

DEVITO SWAMPS BILL BRENNAN IN BOWLING MATCH

Dominick Devito piled up enough pins last night at the Randolph alleys to take the last 6 games of a 7 game Chicago All Stars Individual league bowling match with Bill Brennan. Devito knocked over 1,517 pins to Brennan'S 1,278. Devito's high game was 266.

This afternoon, at 3:30, Krems and Carlson will clash and in the night match, at 8:30, Fliger and Schanz will stage a battle.

When Sam Murray of the Commodore Barry team rolled a perfect game in St. Louis it was the first 300 score in the history of Midwest tournament play.

The Bleck's Acmes are going strong in the North End Traveling league and are gradually overtaking the Oh Henrys, who are out in front by five games.

The Green Rivers of the Harding league have crashed through the maples at a merry clip. Billy Goldhammer has been flashing great form in the season's play and much credit for the team's success is due to his fine work.

In the Illinois Steel Company league Koester of the 27th Place Drafting Room team has the highest game score of 268. The Alloy Bar Mill team leads the league with 26 wins and 7 defeats, while right behind them come the No. 1 Open Hearth quintet with 25 won and 6 lost. L. Petrie has an individual average of 189 5-37.

ROSS ON MIDLAND CARD.

Johnny Ross, Central A. A. U. middleweight champion, will meet Ed Wills of Alabama in one of the main events of the boxing show at the Midland club Tuesday evening. The affair is announced as a "triple windup," with Harry Duffield and Johnny Panek, both of Chicago, and Johnny Meis of Gary and Dick Holly of Texas meeting in the other attractions.

NOTES OF CHICAGO BOWLERS

In the Walgreen league of ten five-man teams, all composed of employés of that company, the Silvertones are on top, due mostly to the bowling of Scultz and Backow. The Peau Doux team has reached second place through the fine form shown by Erickson and J. Freting. Branton of the Pyrolacs holds an individual average of 185, which is the league's best.

The South Parks of the White City Major league dropped with the temperature last week and went from first to fifth place in a hurry. The Green River team of the same league let their Santa Claus inclinations get a little ahead of the calendar and gave three games to the James M. Whalens to send that team back into the league leadership.

It was the Lauerman quintet that took three games from the South Parks and the 655 score helped turn the trick.

On the Chicago Athletic association alleys Attorney Thomas Slusser bowled a 200 game without a double. On Thursday Byron C. Howes took time off from his insurance long enough to bowl a 267 game. But he had plenty of doubles.

That clatter of falling pins heard up at the Samuelson Arcade alleys was Phillip O'Keefe and his partner Herbe Freitag crashing through the maples toward a $50 prize going to the winner of their match with Jim Brown and Joe Wilman. O'Keefe led the way with a 701 series. The final score was 1,323 to 1,360.

H. F. Walliser's game gets better with age. His 650 three game score the other day came in his 73d year.

Dr. Frank Brawley knocked over enough duck pins at the C. A. A. last Thursday to give him a 198 score. L. W. Pardridge's duck pin score was 186.

Dr. Sam Plummer is leading in the race for the W. S. Hay trophy at the C. A. A. with Almer Coe, Dr. E. K. Findlay, third and second respectively, and Dr. John Cavanaugh. Dr. W. Wilder and A. W. Jerrems running close to the leaders.

The leading Mississippi Valley Express quintet won two games from the sixth place Oriental Limited, despite Lange's 639 score in the C., B. & Q. league series. The B division leaders, the Night Hawks, won 2 from the St. Louis Limited team.

CHICAGO NORMAL BEATEN, 36 TO 31, BY LAKE FOREST

Lake Forest college opened the basketball season with a 36 to 31 victory over Chicago Normal at Lake Forest last night. Ferzacca led the attack for the winners. The winners held a 16 to 14 advantage at the half.

Cards Release Maranville and Harper to Braves

St. Louis, Mo., Dec. 8.—[U.P.]—Walter "Rabbit" Maranville, veteran shortstop of the St. Louis Cardinals, and George Harper, outfielder obtained last season from the Giants, have been released to the Boston Braves, the Cardinal office announced today.

Secretary Clarence Lloyd of the Cardinals made the announcement of a telegram from Vice President Branch Rickey, who gave no further details.

Maranville's passing has been forecast for months with the acquisition of younger infield material, while Harper's release helps clear the outfield for Billy Southworth to become the National league's only player-manager.

CHEVROLET

New Features of—

The Outstanding Chevrolet of Chevrolet History

—a Six in the price range of the four!

Everywhere The Outstanding Chevrolet is being hailed as a spectacular achievement in advanced design, because it embodies the greatest array of improvements ever offered on any automobile of comparable price.

Here, for example, is a marvelous new six-cylinder, valve-in-head engine whose perfected design represents over four years of development and testing on the part of Chevrolet and General Motors engineers. It has numerous advancements typified by a non-detonating, high-compression cylinder head—gasoline pump and filter, and automatic rocker arm lubrication. It provides performance the like of which was never before available in the low-price field—marvelous smoothness, tremendous reserve power and sensationally swift acceleration—all with an economy averaging better than 20 miles to the gallon of gasoline!

Here are new and improved four-wheel brakes unsurpassed for silence in operation, positive action and ease of adjustability!

Here are marvelous new Fisher bodies introducing a new order of beauty, smartness and luxury.

And here, also, are additional features by the score—each an impressive example of automotive progress—each contributing to outstanding performance, quiet operation, long life, ease of control and economical ownership!

We cordially invite you to visit our showroom and secure complete and detailed information regarding this great new car, which will be ready for delivery beginning January 1st.

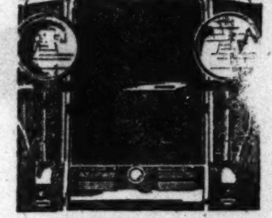
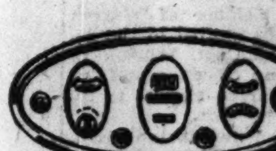
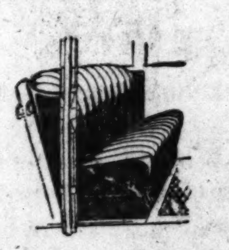
Chevrolet's new six-cylinder, fully enclosed valve-in-head engine has a high compression non-detonating head. Its piston displacement is 194 cu. in. and it develops 46 H. P. at low engine speed. Its advanced features include hot-spot manifold, automatic rocker arm lubrication, gasoline pump with filter, fabric timing gear, air cleaner, etc.



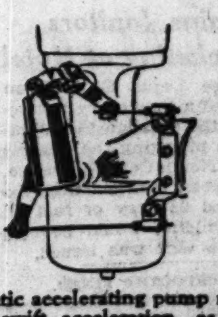
The new chromium plated radiator, lamp standards and rims, and one-piece full crown fenders are typical fine car features of the Outstanding Chevrolet. Special prismatic lenses are standard equipment in the new two-beam headlamps which also contain the parking lights.



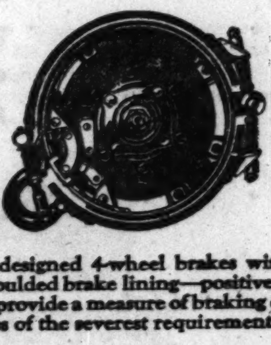
On the indirectly lighted instrument panel are grouped all controls, including the water temperature indicator and Delco-Remy theft-proof Electrolock.



The driver's seat in all closed models is easily adjustable forward or back by means of a handle regulator. This brings the clutch and brake pedals within proper reach for all drivers.



An automatic accelerating pump results in unusually swift acceleration, as well as greater gasoline economy. When the accelerator is suddenly depressed, this pump automatically sprays an extra quantity of gasoline into the mixing chamber.



Newly designed 4-wheel brakes with new semi-moulded brake lining—positive, safe—quiet—provide a measure of braking control in excess of the severest requirements.

BODY by FISHER

Marvelous new longer and wider bodies by Fisher of hardwood and steel construction are an outstanding feature of the Outstanding Chevrolet.

CHILDREN'S DAY BRINGS CLOSE TO LIVE STOCK SHOW

Iowa Carries Off Lion's Share of Trophies.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

City and farm boys and girls were guests yesterday afternoon at the International Live Stock exposition which closed last night with the horse show. It was children's day and the youths of town and country literally took the place, riding everything from steers, hogs, and ponies, to iron girders high up in the international amphitheater.

With two show crowds on the closing day, it was estimated that a record crowd of more than a half a million people attended the show during the week. Twenty thousand children saw the afternoon horse show, and an equal number of grownups attended the night show.

Iowa at Top of List.

At midnight exhibitors began packing their show trinkets and trophies and loading their live stock for the home journey. Officials of the live stock and the hay and grain shows in summing up the final standings of exhibitors in the various states and provinces found that three corn belt states—Iowa, Illinois and Indiana, in the order named—stand at the top of the list.

Just as the Iowa State college held the lead in the number of championships and first prizes, so also did the state. There were 201 championships and first awards credited to the state of Iowa, including the winnings of individual exhibitors and the college. Iowa has 130 championships and 71 firsts in her state trophy chest.

Where the Trophies Went.

Following is the standing of the first twelve states, not including prices awarded below first place:

State—	First Prize.	Champs.	Tot.
Iowa	130	71	201
Illinois	103	35	138
Indiana	49	21	70
Ontario, Canada	42	21	63
Ohio	47	14	61
Wisconsin	32	18	50
Michigan	33	12	45
Minnesota	30	14	44
Montana	28	8	36
Nebraska	23	9	32
Colorado	24	6	30
Kansas	16	4	20

Word was received yesterday of the appointment of James D. Conner Jr. as a knight of the order of the crown by King Albert of Belgium. Mr. Conner is secretary-treasurer of the American Association of Importers and Breeders of Belgian Draft Horses, Wabash, Ind. He was decorated because of his outstanding work.

HORSE SHOW RESULTS

The exposition closed last night with the final events of the horse show. Mrs. A. C. Thompson won first prize for the best decorated stall, with Sunset farm second and W. D. Alexander third.

Owners of winning horses in last night's events were:

CHAMPION HARNESS PONY STAKE—Won by J. R. Thompson; second, Gorham & Simpson; third, J. R. Thompson; fourth, Broadview farm.

CHAMPION FIVE GAITED SADDLE STAKE—Won by Miss Virginia Scheu; second, W. D. Alexander; third, Lulworth Stable; fourth, R. E. Moreland.

DRAFT HORSES—Won by Wilson & Co.; second, Union Stock Yard and Transit company; third, J. F. Hassler.

SHETLAND PONIES—Won by Gorham & Simpson; second, Heyl Pony farm; third, Earl M. Dixon; fourth, Marilyn Jean Claudon.

CHAMPION ROADSTER STAKE—Won by R. E. Moreland; second, Daniel A. Orth; third, B. B. Tucker; fourth, Minton Hickory Mountain stables.

CHAMPION THREE GAITED SADDLE STAKE—Won by Minton Hickory Mountain stables; second, John R. Todd; third, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Palmer; fourth, Burton A. Howe.

CHAMPION HUNTER CLASS—First, John R. Thompson; second, Mrs. J. H. Martell; third, Mrs. Bert H. Laudermilk; fourth, Harry G. Goelitz Jr.

The 124th field artillery indoor polo team defeated the 58th field artillery, 8 to 5, but the 58th won the series, five matches to four.

NEW DIRECTORY LISTS MORE THAN 21 MILLION CATHOLICS IN AMERICA

There are now 21,453,928 Catholics in the United States, according to the new issue of "The Catholic Press Directory," published by Joseph H. Meier, 64 West Randolph street, secretary of the Catholic Press association.

The directory figures show that the Catholic church in the United States has gained 6,188,760 in membership during the last twenty years. Within the last three years the Catholic gain has been 715,481.

The directory lists 291 Catholic papers and magazines, with a combined circulation of over 7,000,000. There are nine dailies, 106 weekly newspapers, 217 monthlies, and 49 other publications. Two hundred and six are published in the English language, while eighty-five are published in fourteen different languages. The directory is endorsed by the Catholic Press Association of the United States.

FARM BUREAU IS SPLIT ON HOOVER PLAN FOR RELIEF

Fight Over Convention Policy Expected.

Delegates and officials arriving by the hundreds in advance of the tenth annual convention of the American Farm Bureau federation which opens here tomorrow morning are divided into two opposing groups over what the organization's official policy shall be toward the agricultural relief plan proposed by Herbert Hoover.

Supporters of the plan to give farmers their share of the nation's income through the formation of a federal farm board operated with the support of producers' coöperative organizations, declared at the Sherman hotel yesterday that the majority here for the meeting would vote to put the farm bureau back of Mr. Hoover.

Others Back McNary-Haugen Plan.

Others indicate that they had plenty of support from delegates who want to keep the federation back of the fight to put through legislation which will include the principles of the McNary-Haugen farm relief bill, supported by the bureau and twice vetoed by President Coolidge.

Views of S. H. Thompson, president of the farm bureau, were being sought by the majority of delegates soon after they got off the train. But he refused to give out his opinion until tomorrow morning at 10:30 when he is to deliver his annual address.

Preliminary views given out by bureau officials, who are here from every state, indicate that organized agricultural leaders are sure they do not want any farm relief legislation passed at the present session of congress. Many frankly say that they feel the Coolidge administration was given a chance for seven and a half years to bring relief to agriculture and that now they want to give Mr. Hoover a full opportunity to make good his campaign pledges. The whole issue will be voted upon before the close of the convention Wednesday.

Secretaryship Causes Concern.

Another thing that seems to be causing concern to the delegates and officials is the question of who is to be the next secretary of agriculture. Some of them from the strong coöperative marketing states have heard the rumor that a new secretary will succeed William Jardine. They are aroused over word that has come to them indicating that an anti-coöperative man would be the next head of the United States department of agriculture.

The names of many men were mentioned as prospective candidates for the secretaryship, including the following: J. R. Howard, the first president American Farm Bureau federation; Charles Pugsley, former assistant secretary of agriculture; C. C. Teague, head of the California raisin and walnut coöperatives; Dante Pierce, publisher of the Iowa Homestead; R. A. Pearson, president of Maryland university and former head of Iowa State college; Everett C. Brown, president Chicago Live Stock exchange; J. W. Coverdale, former secretary American Farm Bureau federation, and Eugene Funk, a farmer of Bloomington, Ill.

ASHURST HEAVES VERBAL BRICKS AT BOULDER DAM

Foes Mobilize to Talk Bill to Death.

BY ARTHUR CRAWFORD.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 8.—[Special.]—Indefinite continuation of the senate debate on Boulder dam seemed in prospect today.

Senator Henry F. Ashurst [Dem., Ariz.], who led filibusters against the bill in the last two sessions of congress, commenced a lengthy speech today and will continue Monday. It is understood that Senator Reed Smoot [Rep., Utah], another of the opponents, will follow Senator Ashurst and will hold the floor for at least two days and possibly longer.

Senator Hiram Johnson [Rep., Cal.] insisted that there would be a showdown next week, but the opposition inclined to the belief that there might be no action until after the Christmas holidays.

Refuses Conference.

Senator Johnson refused suggestions for compromises in the controversey between California and Arizona over the division of the waters of the Colorado river.

He proposed an agreement for a vote on the bill as a condition for negotiations, but the Arizona senators would not consent.

Senator Ashurst in his speech referred to the activities of California land speculators.

"The bill authorizes the expenditure of millions of dollars of federal funds to irrigate lands owned largely by private land speculators in California in units in excess of 160 acres," he said.

Democracy in Danger.

"Local self-government is the basis of democratic institutions," he continued. "If the rights of states are destructible the Union is destructible. If the federal government, under the thin guise of irrigating public lands, may seize the property of Arizona over her protest and embark upon a project to supply cheap electrical energy and municipal water to California cities and irrigate privately owned lands in that state, then there is little left of the rights of the individual states."

RUSSELL SHIFTS 2 CAPTAINS AND 61 OTHER POLICE

Two police captains, six sergeants, and fifty-five patrolmen were shifted in a transfer order issued yesterday by Commissioner of Police W. F. Russell. The order supplemented the shakeup of a week ago when 300 men, including 6 captains, were moved to new stations.

The new transfers, like those of last week, it was understood, came as a part of Russell's "close-up-the-town" campaign, directed at vice, gambling, and bootlegging activities.

Capt. Patrick Kelliher of Warren avenue station was shifted to the detective bureau and Capt. William L. Stapelton, a young officer, sent from the bureau to Warren avenue to replace him.

Sergeants shifted were Anton Piska, bureau to Brighton Park; Joseph Paak, Canalport to Brighton Park; John Melcheimer, Marquette to Canalport; Albert Booth, Brighton Park to bureau; Thomas O'Malley, Fillmore to bureau, and Albert Fetik, Brighton Park to Marquette. Ten patrolmen were transferred out of the bureau and nine brought in from outlying stations.

Writ Restrains Janitors from Picketing at Hotel

Superior Judge Denis E. Sullivan yesterday granted a temporary injunction to restrain the Chicago Flat Janitors' union from picketing the Central Plaza hotel, 321 North Central avenue. Owners of the hotel charged that the pickets prevented delivery of fuel oil and that the building would be cold today unless the writ was issued.

WOMAN PICKPOCKET FINED.

Mary Bell, 49 years old, 4700 Drexel boulevard, was fined $200 yesterday as a pickpocket by Judge Frank M. Padden in the South State street court.

JAIL DOOR OPENS FOR 16 KNITTERS IN FOR CONTEMPT

Friends of Kenosha Strikers Pay Fines.

Milwaukee, Wis., Dec. 8.—[Special.]—Forty days after their incarceration in the Milwaukee house of correction for civil contempt of federal court 16 of the 26 Allen A strikers of Kenosha were releasel upon payment of fines.

Al 11:30 a. m. today Harold F. Steel, business representative of the Milwaukee local of the American Federation of Full Fashioned Hosiery Workers paid to the clerk of federal court $1,600, all of which was raised at a massmeeting of labor sympathizers at Chicago last night.

Fines Revert to Mills.

The 16 men who were released originally prefererd imprisonment rather than pay fines which would revert to the hosiery firm as damages incurred while the strikers were picketing the Kenosha mills.

Nine of the 26 who were jailed were women, and they were released several weeks ago following a protest meeting at Milwaukee. Donations and pledges to effect their release were made after United States Senator John J. Blaine had addressed the meeting. One man who fell sick in jail was also freed when the union paid his fine. One of the prisoners had sought liberty on the plea that poverty prevented him from paying the fine, but no action was taken.

Parade to Prison.

A holiday atmosphere prevailed as union officials and a large delegation of strikers paraded to the house of correction this morning. Amid the shouting of union yells and songs some of the released men wept as they were reunited with their families. Among the 16 were six married men, one of whom, James Bennett, was married only three days before both he and his bride were imprisoned.

After a speedy trip to Kenosha by motor a dinner was served at the Dayton hotel for the entire group and their families.

The returning knitters were met by fellow strikers and townspeople.

Poincare Bars Ministers from Political Banquets

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Dec. 8.—Premier Raymond Poincare's concentration government is not going to be further embarrassed by "wise cracks" or wild statements made by cabinet members when warmed up at banquets of their respective political parties, the premier decided today. He forced the cabinet to adopt a resolution prohibiting "cabinet members taking part in banquets or conventions of any political party so long as they remain a member of the government."

Files Suit to Keep Hoover Out of Office

Cleveland, O., Dec. 8.—(AP)—A suit to prevent Herbert Hoover from taking office as President was filed in federal court here today by Gustave F. Ebding, who contends Hoover has been a resident of the United States only since 1919. Ebding, who has written works attempting to prove the world is not a globe, told secret service men that "patriotism and conscience" moved him to file the suit. He asks that Vice President Dawes be restrained from certifying to the senate the electoral vote cast for Hoover.

Court Holds Retired Police Can't Get Pension Boost

Retired Chicago policemen learned yesterday that their pensions cannot be increased, once they are retired from public service. The Illinois Supreme court denied a motion for a rehearing in a suit won last October by the Civic federation, enjoining payment of pension boosts authorized by the 1927 session of legislature. The courts opinion held that "increases in pensions to retired public officers and employès often nullify appreciably the public benefits derived from general pension laws by depleting the funds rightfully applicable to the payment of the pensions of officers and employès in the active service when they ultimately retire."

EDDA MUSSOLINI SAILS FOR INDIA.

BRINDISI, Italy, Dec. 8.—(AP)—Edda Mussolini, daughter of the premier, sailed aboard the Tevere for India today with a woman companion.

POLICE KILL 2 ROBBERS, ARREST 1 IN GUN BATTLE

Indianapolis, Ind., Dec. 8.—[U.P.]—Two bandits were killed here today in a gun battle with six policemen who thwarted the robbery of a dry goods and hardware store. Two policemen were wounded.

The dead were identified as Carl Kittrell, 35, and Otto Price, 38. A third man, believed to have been an accomplice, was captured.

The police squad had been advised of the robbery plan and was waiting with riot guns when the bandits appeared.

TWO HELD TO GRAND JURY.

Nathan Lenler, 25 years old, 1808 Sawyer avenue, and Milford Michelson, years old, 821 Galt avenue, were held to the grand jury yesterday in bonds of $5,000 on charges of robbery by Judge William J. Helander.

CROSS COUNTRY FLYING IS EASY TO LEARN—LINDY

Watch, Compass and Map Are Needed.

Written especially for The Chicago Tribune, the New York Times, and a group of allied papers.

BY COL. CHARLES A. LINDBERGH.

[Copyright: 1928: By the New York Times.]

Aerial navigation, or avigation, is a subject to which unlimited study can be devoted. Ordinary cross country flying, however, requires only a general knowledge of many of the finer points, combined with a thorough understanding of map reading and the ability to keep on a compass course. The professional pilot can well afford to devote his time to a detailed study of this subject, but the future of the aircraft industry is dependent on our ability to make flying safe and uncomplicated for the individual owner.

Let us leave, therefore, instrument, long distance, and night flying for the time being and consider only the simplest form of navigation by air. The necessary equipment consists of a watch, a compass, and a map covering the territory to be flown over. Strip maps are available for the developed airways, but ordinary state commercial maps are entirely satisfactory and can be obtained anywhere in the country at a cost of 35 cents per state.

Suppose it is desired to fly from New York City to St. Louis. The plane has a gasoline capacity for six hours at a cruising speed of 100 miles an hour. Since this is a problem in navigation, we will not consider the advisability of following the mail route over the Pennsylvania mountains, but only an air line course, allowing for the fact that the plane has a cruising range of 600 miles and that a reserve must be allowed for possible head winds. St. Louis is a little more than 900 miles from New York, consequently it will be necessary to refuel at some midway point.

Laying a Course by Map.

By drawing a line between the two cities on a map of the United States, it will be seen that Columbus, O., lies nearly midway and only a few miles north of the line. Through inquiry or by looking up Columbus in a department of commerce airport directory, an airport will be found to lie on the east side of the city. Lambert field is near Auglum, Mo., and about 12 miles northwest of St. Louis.

We are to take off from either Curtis or Roosevelt field just east of Garden City, L. I., since the New York Municipal airport is not yet completed. By drawing a straight line on a map of the United States from our starting point to the Columbus airport, and thence to the St. Louis airport, it will be found to pass through parts of New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, and Missouri.

The point at which this line cuts the border of each state is noted in relation to some city or landmark and the line transferred to the larger scale maps of the individual state. In some corner of each state map will be found a scale of miles or a straight line with marks at distances representing ten miles on the map. This scale is transferred to a sheet of paper and in turn to the line representing the route to be followed in that state.

Adjustment of Map Scales.

From our point of departure in Long Island marks are placed at ten mile intervals along the course and the total mileage noted at fifty mile intervals. The scales on the state maps vary, so that it is necessary to transfer them from each map to our course through that state. On some maps an inch on the map may represent ten miles on the ground and on others it may represent twenty.

The maps are then folded in strips about six inches in width with the route to be followed in the center. These strips are arranged in accordion folds so that it is only necessary to turn one of the folds in following the route. When finished we have a map of each state passed over, arranged in convenient form with the route and distance marked.

As a matter of precaution we will mark the position of some airport between our stopping points, in case a strong head wind is encountered and the fuel reserve becomes insufficient. One is found just north of the route at McKeesport, Pa., and another a little north of Terre Haute, Ind. The most difficult part is to find the compass course to follow at the start.

Compass and Landmarks.

A compass is subject to a number of errors which can be compensated for but which we will not take into consideration here. Consequently we will start with a compass which may be pointing a number of degrees off of true north. Twenty miles out our route passes over downtown New York, so after taking off the plane is headed in this direction and the course indicated by the compass is noted. This course is held until downtown New York is passed.

If we are approximately above, the compass course is correct and should be continued. If to one side, the course should be changed a few degrees in order to bring the plane back on to the route gradually. Unless the error is great a change of five or ten degrees will be sufficient. Five miles further on we should be over the north end of New York bay and crossing two railroads. We pass just south of Newark and over several railroads, each of which should be checked on the map. Forty miles out our course strikes the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western and parallels the railroad for several miles.

At sixty miles we cross the Central of New Jersey where it takes a sharp bend northward. At sixty-seven the forks of a river. At seventy-three the Lehigh Valley, and again at seventy-eight. At eighty-two miles the Delaware river is crossed, giving a perfect check on our ground speed and an indication of the time required to reach Columbus if weather conditions remain constant.

If it has required an hour to reach the Delaware our ground speed is only eighty miles, and with six hours of gasoline we will not be able to reach Columbus and will be required to stop at McKeesport to refuel. If, however, we passed the river in fifty minutes or less we will probably arrive at Columbus with a safe reserve.

Check Objects with Map.

Every object indicated on the map should be checked as it is passed, and should map and ground fail to correspond in more than two or three consecutive instances a definite check should be made even though it necessitates landing on some farm pasture. Some of our more progressive cities and towns have painted their names on the roofs of conspicuous buildings, thereby greatly assisting the air traveler.

Department of Commerce regulations require a minimum altitude of 1,000 feet in passing over densely populated areas. Consequently it is no longer permissible to seek the name of a town by flying low over the railroad station. Undoubtedly, however, a pilot who is lost in a territory without open fields would use this method as a last resort. It is simple and inexpensive to paint the name of a town on the top of some roof, and in the present day of aeronautical development every village in the United States should be plainly marked.

PLAN AIR MAIL TO LINK U. S. AND LATIN COUNTRIES

P. O. Officials See Trade Boom in Aviation.

Promotion of trade relations between the United States and countries of Central and South America is soon to be aided by the establishment of air mail service which, in its entirety, will stretch from Montreal, Canada, to Buenos Aires in Argentine. By binding the Latin American countries closer through the air mail, it is hoped to continue the commercial relationship desired by President Elect Hoover. One of the lines will follow the course taken by Hoover on his good will journey.

Announcement of the establishment of the new air service was made yesterday by W. Irving Glover, second assistant postmaster general, in charge of the air service. Mr. Glover, who came to Chicago with the foreign delegation attending the International Aeronautical exposition at the Coliseum, visited Postmaster Arthur C. Lueder yesterday.

Will Greatly Cut Time.

Completion of the air lines will enable mail, posted at Montreal Monday noon, to reach Santiago, Chile, the next Saturday, Mr. Glover said. It now takes three weeks for the delivery of mail between those two points.

Two of the routes, those connecting Miami, Fla. with Colon in the Panama Canal zone and with Trinidad, will be in operation within 60 days, said Mr. Glover. The third route, from Colon to Santiago, Chile, will be advertised in the near future. The cities to be served by the new routes are:

Route No. 1—Miami; Havana; Yucatán; Belize, British Honduras; Guatemala; Tegucigalpa, Honduras; Managua, Nicaragua; San Jose, Costa Rica; David, Panama, to Colon. Route No. 2 will touch at Miami; Havana; Camaguey, Cuba; Santiago, Cuba; Port au Prince, Haiti; Santa Domingo, Dominican republic; San Juan, Porto Rico, and around the Virgin islands through Trinidad where it will connect with an extensioin from Colon. The Caribbean sea will be circumscribed by the two routes.

Chicago Show Closes Tonight.

The International Aeronautical exposition, which will close tonight at the Coliseum, has broken all attendance records for commercial shows, according to officials in charge. During the eight days of the exposition approximately 100,000 persons have inspected the planes on display. Among that number are sixty foreign aviation leaders, who are in the United States to attend the international civic aeronautical conference which will open in Washington, D. C., on Wednesday. They will take off from the Municipal airport today in eleven planes, stopping off at Dayton, O., for a short visit with Orville Wright.

Marshall Field III., Chicago millionaire, has purchased a Keystone-Loening amphibian air yacht, it was announced yesterday at the exposition. The plane has a speed of 130 miles an hour. It is scheduled for delivery to Mr. Field in the spring.

Among the visitors to the exposition yesterday was Lady Mary Heath, British aviatrix. The Avro plane in which Lady Heath flew from London to Cape Town is on display at the show.

NEGRO BOY IS WOUNDED.

Roland Johnson, colored, 13 years old, 4504 Indiana avenue, was shot and seriously wounded yesterday as he was trying to break into a flat at 4601 Prairie avenue. One of the occupants of the flat, a Negro, was being sought last night for questioning.

NEW SERIES SIX
MODEL 6-80

Seeing Is Believing

It has a longer wheelbase, a stronger frame, a more powerful motor and a larger body than any car under $1000. It affords more room, comfort and refinements. It gives full advantages of a really fine BIG car. Not cramped or cheapened in any way. It holds the road better, handles easier and performs smoother. It is a safer car to ride in and a more durable car to invest in. If this sounds exaggerated, remember we put it entirely up to the car itself to prove all of these claims. You will find improvements found in no other car under $1000. You will find advantages you thought were obtainable only in high priced cars. You will find that if the car does not sell itself you will not be asked to buy.

120-inch wheelbase; Lycoming motor; Strongest of frames—7 inches deep; Bijur chassis lubrication; Hydraulic, internal expanding four wheel brakes; Hydraulic shock absorbers; Re-enforced bodies; Finest of mohair upholstery and luxura springs; Metal side quarters; Non-glare Brewster windshield; Cam and lever type steering; Lower center of gravity; New type wood wheels; Corona proof ignition wires; Steel running boards; Electro lock; Starter button on dash; Large head lamps and plate glass.

Another New Winner

Progress must be swift and unerring for leadership in the automobile business. A factory cannot rest on yesterday's success. It must excel itself anew or lag behind. Auburn forges farther in front with this new Series Straight Eight. Auburn's far-sighted program, coupled with our policy of passing back to the consumer the benefits of Auburn's growth, enable us to shatter all precedent by introducing this, the most astonishing Eight cylinder car ever on the market. Everywhere people are amazed at its value. Competition concedes it forces a complete revision of standards of comparison. Never has there been a car of its high character available at its low cost. If you have not seen and driven this Eight you are missing the "buy" of the year.

Lycoming motor; Strongest frame under any car; 125-inch wheelbase; More horsepower than any other stock car per size; Dual carburetion; Dual manifold; Bohnalite steel strut pistons; Thermostatic heat control; Cam and lever steering; Bijur chassis lubrication; Four wheel, hydraulic internal expanding brakes; Four hydraulic shock absorbers; Brewster non-glare windshield; Starter button on dash panel; Luxura type upholstery springs and genuine curled hair.

WISCONSIN FACES HIGHWAY CRISIS, OFFICIALS ASSERT

Has No Continuous Route in System.

Madison, Wis., Dec. 1.—[Special.]—The state of Wisconsin, which burst into the arena of highways with a great show of leadership and energy back in 1911, now finds itself distanced, confused and in an almost hopeless muddle so far as modern road development is concerned.

For several years it was the boast of Wisconsin that it was without the power of bonding for highway improvement purposes. Since the signal benefits of state bonding methods have been demonstrated by a number of other commonwealths, it has not boasted so much. Formerly it dwelt heavily on the virtues of the pay as you go policy. Today, in distress, state officials are proclaiming the fact that the Badger commonwealth is tied hand and foot and seriously impeded in its highway efforts by the existence of the once popular statutes.

Foresaw Future Condition.

Wisconsin was one of the first states to comprehend the importance of modern roadbuilding and to foresee the day when motor traffic would need an incredible amount of mileage. At an early date it passed laws providing for state aid, and had reached the conclusion that county determination for roadbuilding would yield best results. While much roadbuilding in some locations ensued it later was found that counties did not respond uniformly.

This situation resulted in the building of much mileage in some counties and none in others. The state had no power to connect up through routes and no funds provided, had it the power. With 2,675 miles of concrete roads today, the state has not one highway which extends from one border to another across the state. Neither from north to south nor from east to west is there a continuously paved thoroughfare.

Seek a Way Out.

In a sort of bewilderment the state highway department is now seeking some method by which it may construct a few needed continuous highways, the location of which shall be in the control of the state.

As a first step the proposal is made that the 2 cent gas tax be increased to 4 cents at the coming session of the legislature. This is not widely popular, as the present 2 cents tax is considered enough, when it is added to the relatively high vehicle license fee. Despite popular sentiment the state highway officials are determined to work some sort of system out of the legislative muddle and have decided to use persuasion rather than coercion.

Walter C. Buetow, state highway engineer, and R. C. Bretting, chairman of the state highway commission, have announced a plan for the building of an entirely new 5,000 mile road system which will supplement what now exists for both local relief throughout the state, and for through route relief for general travel.

Would Retain Tourists

As Wisconsin's tourist business is estimated at $120,000,000 a year to the state, it follows that the state is willing to invest somewhat heavily to retain that economic advantage.

In a statement the highway commission says:

"The commission announces completion of a tentative draft of provisions for a plan to be presented to the 71 counties of the state for discussion by county boards at their current meetings, contemplating an expansion of Wisconsin's highway program to provide for the construction of a 5,000 mile system of through hard surfaced highways in a period of ten years. It cannot bond for highway purposes as do other states, notably Illinois and Iowa. This must be a "pay-as-you-go" plan. Wisconsin is now faced with the fact that it cannot bond and at the same time it ranks thirty-sixth in gas taxes and motor vehicle license fees.

A Piecemeal Policy.

"Wisconsin cannot remain in the front rank of those states providing first class highway systems for the traveling public by adhering to the present plan of piecemeal highway construction with its annual crop of detours. It will be necessary to secure funds of the same amounts from some other source as other progressive states are doing so that Wisconsin will not remain thirty-sixth in rank.

"The legislature of 1911 enacted the first state aid law which made it possible for the state to participate in highway construction. When federal participation came in the highway laws had to be changed and the legislature in 1917 enacted the state trunk highway law. This with modifications is still in force.

"The greatest step was taken in 1926 when the present gas tax and automobile weight tax law was passed to finance the construction and maintenance of the state trunk highway system and also some aid for county trunks.

Not a Through Route.

"However, after all these years of state and federal participation there is not one continuous road in the state trunk highway system of the 10,000 miles, either north and south or east and west, that is paved with a hard surface. Considering only the period from 1917 to the present time we have an elapse of eleven years and the state is still woefully lacking in an adequate system of transportation.

"The only sections of the state that have been able to make progress are those that have been able, financially, to promote bond issues for the paving of the trunk system in their counties. Less than a third of all the counties have been able to do this and they have provided their people with a means of good and cheap transportation. Such a system has been of very great benefit to them and a similar system covering the entire state should and would likewise be a good investment to all the motoring public."

NEWS AND VIEWS

Willys-Overland today presents two completely redesigned lines of four and six cylinder Whippets, which John N. Willys intimates may revolutionize things in the low priced field. He asserts that all new models are now in production and outstanding features are longer wheelbase, larger bodies, button starter and light control. Over 60 miles an hour speed is provided, with decreased fuel consumption. Production capacity is 2,500 a day.

A new Peerless six model will be the highlight feature of this line at the New York show, the factory announces.

Chevrolet, which planned eleven advance exhibits for the new six line, has been compelled to add fifty exhibit dates through the country to meet popular demand, the factory announces.

W. E. Butler of Chicago has been nominated to succeed W. E. Johnston of Peoria as president of the Illinois Automotive Trade association at the election to be held in Dixon tomorrow.

Reo announces production of the Mate, supplementing the Flying Cloud. It is termed a "smaller edition" of the latter model and will sell for a shorter price.

Winter bus service between Minneapolis [via Chicago] and Jacksonville, Fla., started Dec. 3, according to O. S. Caesar, president of Greyhound, who announced the schedule time as 63 hours and 30 minutes. Time from Chicago is 45 hours. The service is daily.

The winter program for the Motor Truck Distributors' association was announced last week by O. E. McCarthy, president.

Chicago Stutz announces W. Loomis Pinney as new general manager of the Broadway branch; J. B. Burns, general sales manager, and L. J. De Broux, sales manager at the main branch. L. H. Velde is now wholesale manager for the territory.

Sales of Pines Winterfronts to Nov. 15 exceeded those of the same period last year by 35 per cent, according to Ed Blumenthal, Chicago distributor.

All records for shipment of cars since the first Packard was completed Nov. 6, 1899, were broken by Packard company in October. There were produced and shipped 5,800 vehicles during the month, exceeding by 700 cars the best previous month.

Announcement is made of the appointment of James H. Linn as custom eight sales manager by K. C. Wettstone, general manager of Chicago Packard. For seven years Mr. Linn has been with the organization in a sales capacity.

ATTENDANCE AND SALES MOUNT AT CHEVROLET SHOW

New Chicago records for attendance and sales were established at the Chicago advance showings of the new six cylinder Chevrolet in the Pure Oil building and Palmer house.

According to L. K. Cooper, regional sales manager, 155,000 people viewed the exhibits. Chicago's opinion was reflected in 3,153 orders for preferred delivery.

This exceeds by a wide margin all former Chevrolet records in Chicago and according to Chevrolet officials, presages a new record for Chevrolet in Cook county.

More than 500 dealers from the northwest and middle west, in addition to several hundred salesmen from outlying communities, were among the thousands who took advantage of the opportunity to see the cars before deliveries to the public get under way Jan. 1.

POLICE INSIST ON CARS SHOWING LIGHTS AT REAR

A noticeable increase in the number of automobiles driven at night without rear illumination is reported by the police of Chicago and of the county highway force.

While the presence of cars on the streets and highways without the rear light is a menace to night traffic generally and a frequent cause of collision, the police see a more sinister danger in the practice.

They are aware that crooks are in the habit of putting the rear light bulb out of commission for the particular purpose of preventing identification by pursuers, in case they attempt escape by car after a murder, robbery, or other crime. As automobiles are constructed today, the tail light, besides throwing a red beam to the rear as a signal to other motorists, illuminates the license plate, so that the license numbers may be read as easily from the rear as the front.

Watch for Violations.

"There has been an increase of the number of defective tail lights during the fall," Capt. Frank J. Matchett, in charge of the police traffic division, said yesterday, "and the men of this division have been instructed to keep a careful watch for violations.

"Since we started on this light violation campaign it has been found that the number of cases has been much greater than we had reason to believe. I think that in most cases it is just carelessness on the part of the motorists. They pay a lot of attention to the head lights but very little to the rear lights. Men of our division have issued several hundred summons within the last few weeks.

"If the general motoring public, the lawabiding car owners in other respects, will keep lights in proper form, it will make it much easier for the police to weed out the criminals whose cars are being operated without rear lights for the purpose of escaping identification while in transit.

Capt. Matchett said that there has been a growing volume of reports of collisions resulting from lack of proper rear lighting, on city streets, and the county police reported a similar condition.

For general safety in traffic, Capt. Matchett said, motorists should have the lighting systems of their cars overhauled frequently, so that they may be sure the rear illumination is working.

Asks Parking Lights.

He believes that all cars parking along the streets at night should show parking lights, though it is found to be infrequent in practice, excepting upon dark thoroughfares.

Inspection of parked cars to ascertain the condition of lights by police officers fails to be effective when the general practice is to park dark, he pointed out.

Unless a definite decline in volume of violations is found by the police, within a short time, the authorities will give notification that the ordinance providing that all vehicles parked at night show lights, will be enforced.

ENGINEERS SEEK DATA ON MOTOR CAR ACCESSORIES

An attempt has been begun to learn what effect air cleaners, oil filters, shock absorbers and similar accessories have on the operation and maintenance of motor trucks and motor coaches.

Questionnaires covering the subject have been sent to a list of motor vehicle fleet operators on the Pacific coast by E. C. Wood, chairman of a subcommittee of the operation and maintenance committee of the Society of Automotive Engineers. There are three questionnaires. The one on air cleaners contains ten questions, relating to the efficiency of the device, the saving in engine maintenance effected by it, its faults in construction and its mechanical failures.

The shock absorber questionnaire relates to data on cost of maintenance of the vehicle with and without the device and how it affects spring action. Two dozen questions are asked about oil filters.

From the replies expected it is hoped to compile some data that will be of practical value to fleet operators regarding the advantages of using the several accessories.

The Perfect Gift!
ALL WINTER MOTORING in SUMMER COMFORT

Howling wind, swirling snow, thermometer around zero—but summer comfort in your car if you have a Ha-Dees Heater. Hot Water does it. No gasses, no fumes—just clean, healthful warm air.

"Ha-Dees" is a small hot water radiator, attached to dash under instrument board, and connected to motor water jacket. No connection with exhaust. Small electric fan back of radiator circulates volumes of heat throughout car. Fan uses no more current than a tail light.

Works perfectly, no matter what antifreeze solution is used in water system of car. Cannot clog; safe, healthful—the car heating triumph of the age. The heater you will eventually buy—why not enjoy it now? A wonderful Christmas gift.

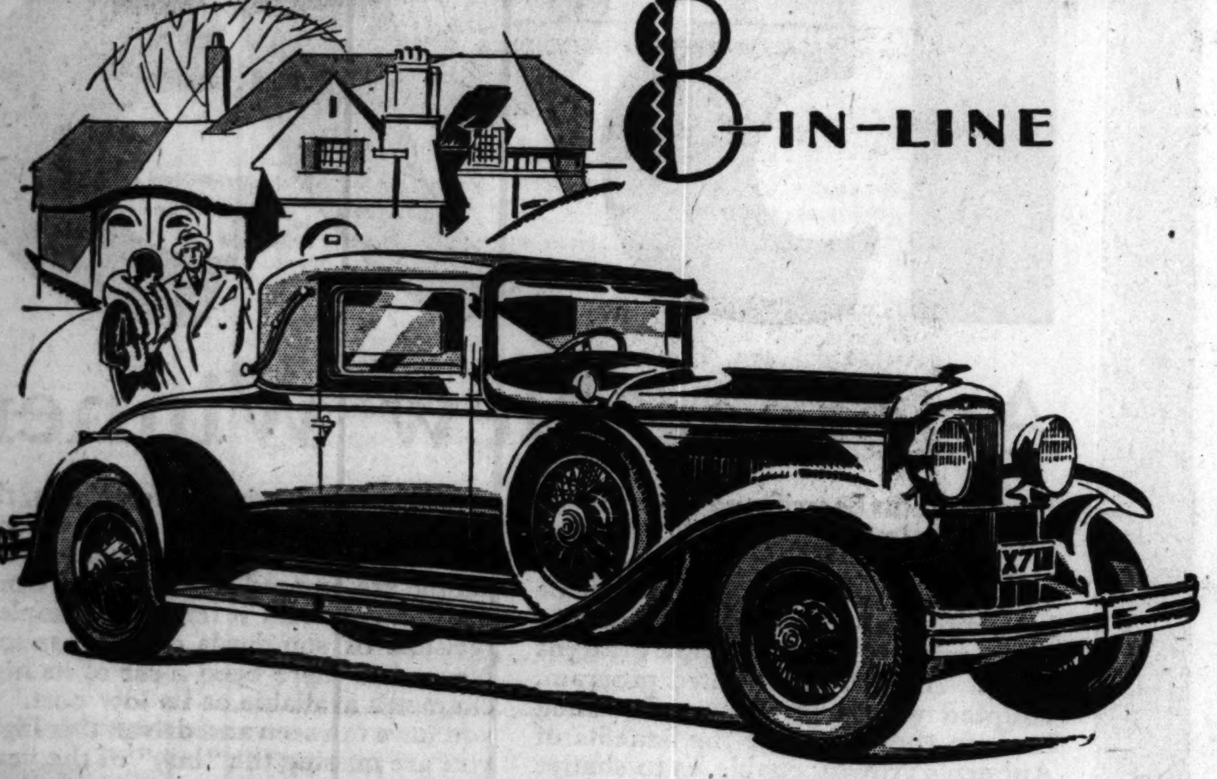
GARDNER 8-IN-LINE



What makes a fine car fine?

The Gardner Eight-in-line can be purchased out of income with a down payment on certain models as low as

$495

Your present car, of course, will be accepted at its full appraisal value and will probably more than cover the down payment.

Sixteen body styles and 50 color combinations are available in the 3 Gardner Series on chassis of 120, 125 and 130-inch wheelbase. Prices range from $1295 to $2395 f.o.b. St. Louis.

FOR over 50 years, with sound principles and high ideals, the Gardner family has been building fine vehicles. The new 1929 Eight-in-line is Gardner's latest contribution to meet the advanced ideas and needs of this day and age. It is the embodiment of a vision that is ever centered on building the finest car that today's resources can contrive or tomorrow's improve.

To the men who build the Gardner Eight-in-line, quality means more than quantity, and added comfort and charm are more desirable than big volume production.

That is the answer to what makes a fine car fine. It is the reason for the growing conviction thruout the country that the Gardner Eight-in-line is America's most distinctively different motor car.

A New Thrill In Motoring

GRAHAM PAIGE

Owners say they get a new thrill driving a Graham-Paige with four speeds forward. Fourth, used most of the time, gives a new smoothness and swiftness—third, a quiet internal gear, provides rapid acceleration in traffic, and up steep hills. The gear shift is standard. You start in second—first, in reserve, is seldom used. A six or eight is at your disposal.

Joseph B. Graham
Robert C. Graham
Ray A. Graham

Five chassis — sixes and eights — prices ranging from $860 to $2485. Car illustrated is Model 835, five-passenger Sedan, with 4-speed transmission (standard gear shift), $2285. All prices at factory.

CHRYSLER . .

BEAUTY is no chance creation

FOR the first time in the history of motor car design an authentic system has been devised based upon the canons of ancient classic art

CHRYSLER designers realize fully that beauty is an elusive thing and that the pursuit of it in motor car design must not be hampered by too rigid adherence to laws and conventions . . . ¶ But Chrysler has also found that there are so many glorious precedents and inspirations in art, architecture and design, that the search for authentic and harmonious symmetry can actually be reduced to something like a scientific system in which results are certain . . . ¶ Chrysler has left nothing to chance . . . ¶ Chrysler has not relied alone upon the inspiration of individual designers . . . ¶ Chrysler has sought instead to do something never done before in motor car design—to search out authentic forms of beauty which have come down the centuries unsurpassed and unchallenged and translate them in terms of motor car beauty and motor car utility . . . ¶ The lengths to which Chrysler designers have gone in this patient pursuit of beauty will doubtless prove a revelation to those who have probably accepted Chrysler symmetry and charm as fortunate but more or less accidental conceptions . . . ¶ The Chrysler process goes far deeper than any charming but accidental conception.

NEW CHRYSLER "65"—Six body styles priced from $1040 to $1145 • NEW CHRYSLER "75"—Nine body styles priced from $1535 to $2345 • NEW CHRYSLER-IMPERIAL—Eight body styles priced from $2675 to $3475. All prices f. o. b. Detroit

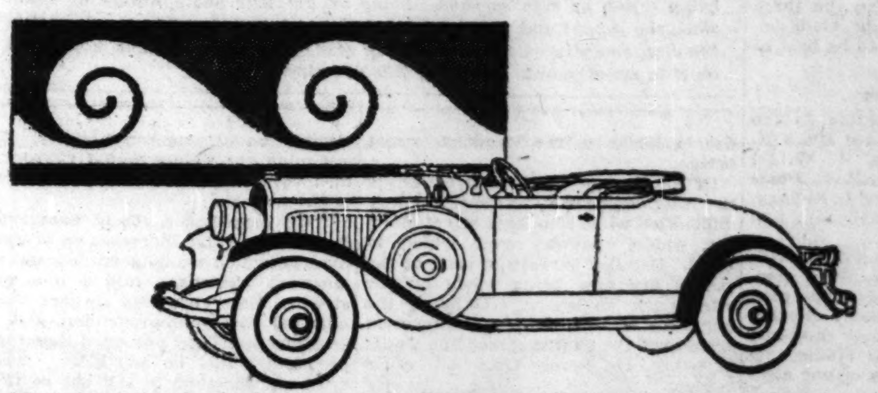
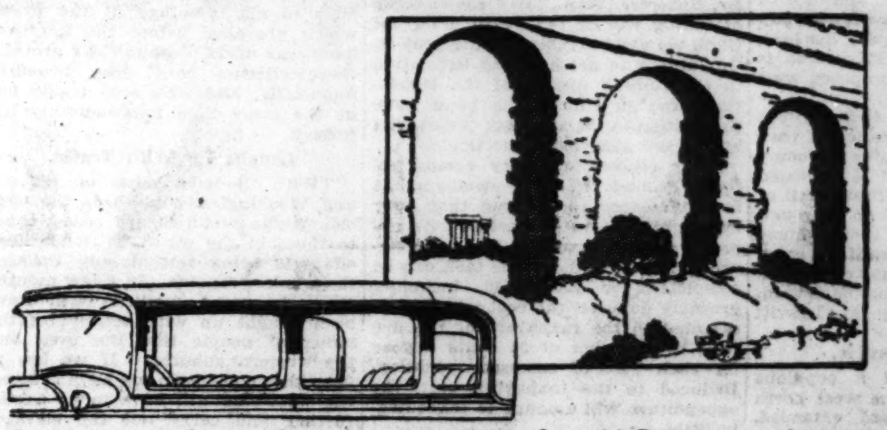
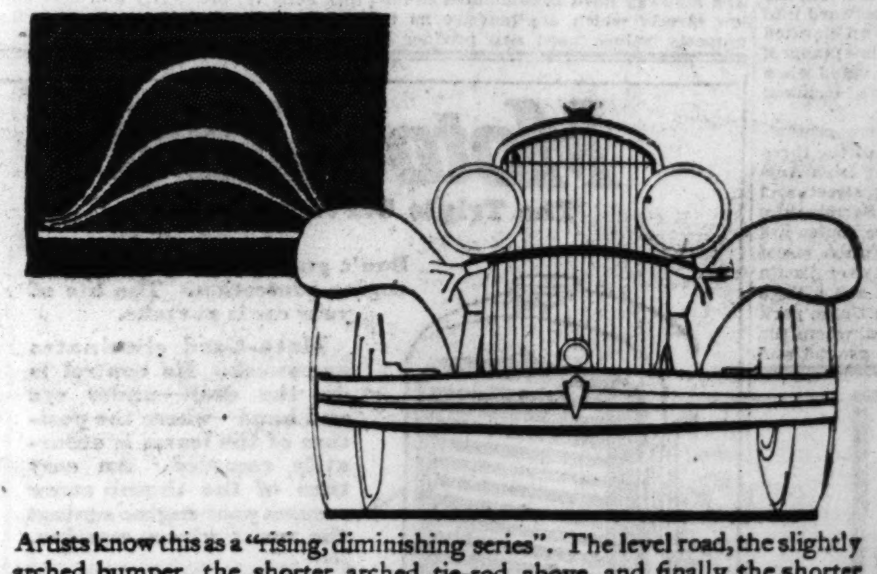
The most modern thing in motor car design—Chrysler's matching of slender-profile radiator with cowl bar moulding—has its artistic origin in the repetition of motif in the historic frieze of the ancient Parthenon.



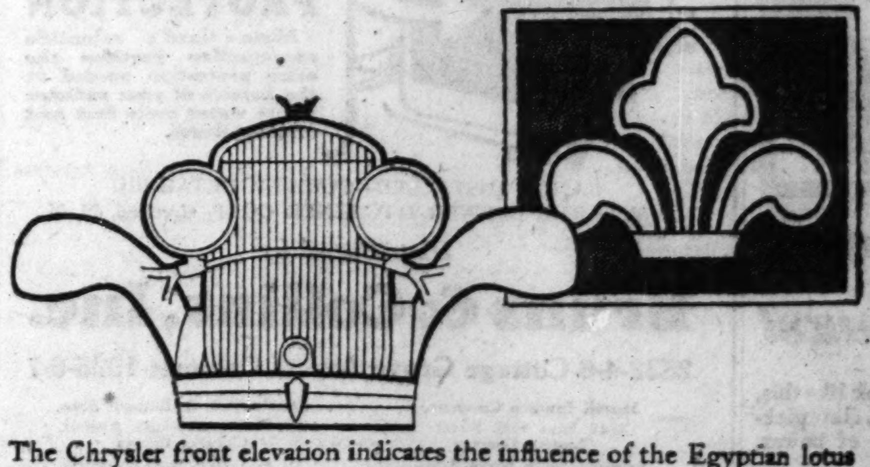
Note how the dynamic symmetry of Chrysler fender contours and wheels express the very essence of life and motion, just as does their counterpart in the "wave border" of the classic masterpieces of architecture and design.



It may seem a far cry from the correct lines of an old Roman aqueduct to the "arched-window" silhouette of the Chrysler of today. Here it is, however—a plain indication of the artistry with which Chrysler lines are developed.



Artists know this as a "rising, diminishing series". The level road, the slightly arched bumper, the shorter arched tie-rod above, and finally the shorter and more deeply-arched radiator contour, form a series in perfect harmony.



The Chrysler front elevation indicates the influence of the Egyptian lotus leaf pattern. Modified to its modern application, it is perfectly proportioned, and applied with consummate artistry in blending beauty and utility.

MOTORS — TRAFFIC — HIGHWAYS

ENGINEERS SCAN MOTORWAY PLAN FOR WEST SIDE

Experts Consider Routes of New Highway.

BY PUTNEY HAIGHT.

A group of leading designing and construction engineers and builders of Chicago met at the Mid-West Athletic club the latter part of the week and went over the groundwork of the proposed elevated motor highway that the West Chicago park commission hopes to build within the next two years from the loop to Austin boulevard.

The engineers had been invited by Dr. John Dill Robertson, president of the west park commission, to discuss in a broad way the problems which beset public works of such extensive character.

At the conclusion of the session the engineers expressed the opinion that here, at least, is one public highway project which presents no material engineering problems and few important points which might develop controversy. A further study of contours, existing buildings and underground requirements along the three alternative routes, is to be made before the next conference to be held in a fortnight or so.

Members of Group.

The engineers participating in the preliminary session included Hugh E. Young, Fred A. Rogers, W. W. De Berard, Ivan C. Peterson, R. P. Brennan, Paul E. Green, Henry L. Kellogg, Joseph Moore, Julius Gableman, and A. C. Michaelson.

"The proposed motorway fits in with the views of the Chicago Plan commission," Engineer Young of the plan commission, said, "in that a portion of the proposed route is over the same streets which have been studied recently by the technicians of our commission.

"In a general way the commission has concluded that elevated highways are essential to the needs of motor traffic in a northwesterly direction, a southwesterly direction, and on a westerly line from the downtown section. The Avondale highway has been approved definitely and its course is far to the north of the proposed west side route.

"That the west park thoroughfare would be of great importance to traffic and a factor in traffic economy that cannot be disputed, is indicated superficially by the fact that north of Washington boulevard no through east and west protected thoroughfare exists on the west side until Diversey parkway is reached. This artery does not extend west of Logan boulevard, which is approximately at Leavitt street.

Three Routes Possible.

"On the other hand a populous suburban area lies to the west north of Washington boulevard extended, which is without direct thoroughfare. Next summer the North avenue extension from St. Charles to the city limits, a 40 foot road calculated to carry 30,000 vehicles per day over its twenty miles, will be in use, but no direct roadway will lead eastward into the city. The ebuilding of an elevated straightaway, such as is planned, would have a very definite value when connected with the eastern terminal of the state road."

Three possible routes were presented to the engineers. Each of the three traverse Kinzie street, east from Austin boulevard; Ferdinand street, and Franklin boulevard to Sacramento. From that point east three routes are suggested. One is over Fulton street to Canal street; the second over Austin avenue to Jefferson street and a third over Randolph street from Union park to Jefferson or Des Plaines, where the drive would come to the ground and deliver traffic to the Randolph street bridge.

Of the three the Fulton street offers the least engineering and right of way difficulties, while Randolph street offers the widest roadway over which to build. Detailed surveys of each of the routes are now being made by the west park engineers. Offhand, the engineers agreed that the construction costs over the Fulton street line would probably be lower than on other routes.

Figures on Two Years.

"The members of the park commission believe that this improvement can be completed within two years," Dr. Robertson said. "If it shows signs of taking five or ten years, I do not think we are interested in the project. Our aim is to get enabling legislation in the coming session of the legislature, and to submit the bond issue proposition to the voters of the district at the fall aldermanic election.

"Our citizens' advisory committee, formerly made up of 250 members, has been increased to 500 and that body by unanimous vote expressed its approval of this project. We have figured out that if the whole task can be completed for $20,000,000, including property damage, the cost will be represented to the taxpayers of the district by the sum of 25 cents a year for each $100 of assessed valuation. Reduced to the taxpaying unit, the expenditure will amount to exceedingly little.

Predicts Increased Values.

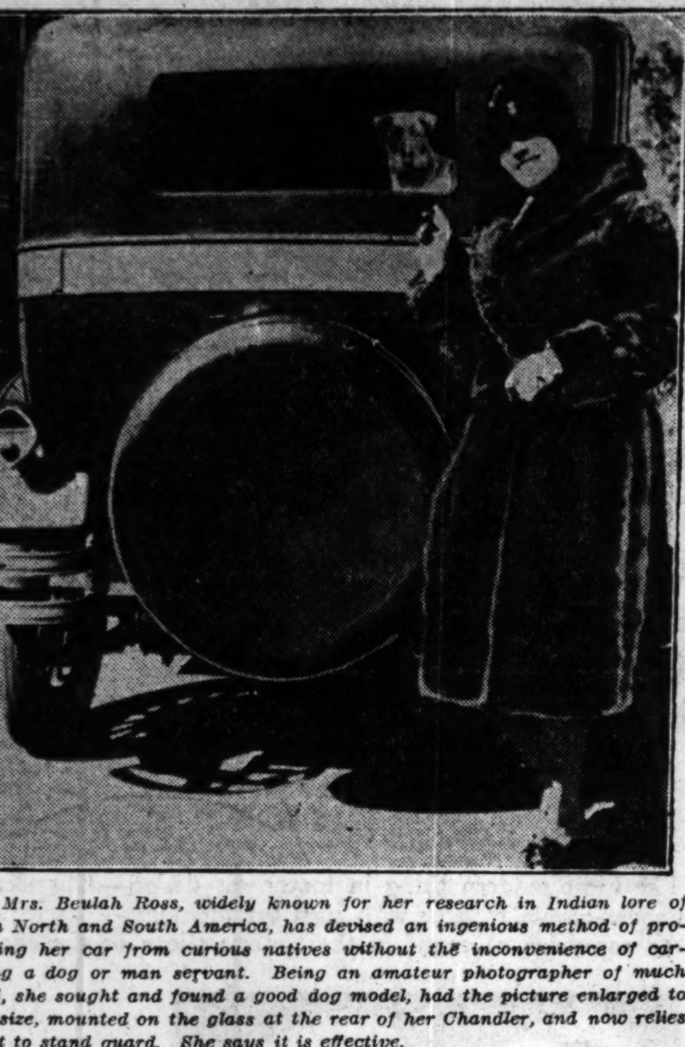
"On the other hand the property value enhancement on the whole west side is assured by such an enterprise. The highway itself is calculated to follow streets which are inactive as to property values now, and produce a stimulation of property activity. To my mind the values would skyrocket in a very short time after completion of the project.

"We have had a recent experience in property value increases on Warren avenue, which we boulevarded and resurfaced and made into a one way street. Many property owners there objected to the improvement and to assessments. They protested that their premises would be worthless. They cried out for time to sell out so they might escape losses. This boulevard has been open a month. We find that property is being held at material advances from former prices all along the street, and that it is now impossible to buy frontage at the prices which prevailed before the improvement was made. Despite their protests these citizens have been benefited financially, and west side traffic has at the same time immeasurably improved.

Caught Up With Traffic.

"With the completion of Jackson and Washington boulevards the west side traffic facilities are today equal to those in the other divisions. The effect is being felt already through the whole west side. In a few months these improved facilities will have been caught up with because of the influx of people into the area and the western suburbs. If we are to keep the momentum we have created, the west side will have to go a step further and carry out the elevated highway plans. This will place the west side far in advance of any other division of the city in regard to traffic facilities. And it is a well known and thoroughly proved proposition that activity, prosperity and new population follow high speed motoring facilities."

HER CARDBOARD GUARDIAN



Mrs. Beulah Ross, widely known for her research in Indian lore of both North and South America, has devised an ingenious method of protecting her car from curious natives without the inconvenience of carrying a dog or man servant. Being an amateur photographer of much skill, she sought and found a good dog model, had the picture enlarged to life size, mounted on the glass at the rear of her Chandler, and now relies on it to stand guard. She says it is effective.

MOTOR INDUSTRY WAITS STARTING SIGNAL FOR 1929

Detroit, Mich., Dec. 8.—[Special.]—From a production and sales point of view, the automobile industry this week is classified as a little below normal.

However, there is a vast army of prospective buyers awaiting cars of 1929 models, and with the coming of January and February it is predicted that the industry will develop activities never before experienced so early in the year.

Dealers' floors are practically cleared of cars of this year's models, the result of liberal price cuts. This was common practice through the nation and produced desired results.

November production was considerably below October, but 75 per cent higher than the corresponding month in 1927. The output was about 225,000 passenger and truck units. If the rate is maintained in December it will put the year nearly on a par with 1926.

Step Up Tire Output.

Tire manufacturers are exceptionally busy on heavy schedules, which calls for early spring deliveries in preparation for the output of new cars before the real spring rush begins.

Just what the New York show will have to offer in new cars, new bodies, and colors, is still the manufacturers' secret. No doubt exists but what there will be the usual number of new cars.

It seems quite certain that the Detroit offerings will be a complete new line of V type eights, along with a new line of six cylinder models. In the latter will be shown increased speed and horse power at a dcreased cost.

Employment in the various Detroit automobile plants continued a downward trend this week, a decrease of 2,785 being reported. The total employed is 276,952, which is greater by 82,241 than for the corresponding week of last year.

Announcement was made this week that John R. Lee, for several years sales manager of Dodge brothers, has been appointed vice president in charge of sales for all divisions of Chrysler, and C. W. Matheson, who has been vice president in charge of sales for De Soto, becomes general sales manager of Dodge. Roy Peed, following eleven years association with Willys-Overland, has been made general sales manager for the De Soto Motor corporation.

Ford to Increase.

Ford continues to increase production almost daily, and now is turning out on an average of 35,000 units each five day week.

The high pressure output will begin soon after Jan. 1, when the output will be increased to more than 7,000. One body plant is said to have a contract with Ford for 7,500 bodies daily, delivery to begin on Jan. 1.

DEFINES SAFE SPEED AS CONTROL ABILITY, NOT CAR VELOCITY

Dr. H. R. Dickinson of the federal bureau of standards, speaking before state highway officials at Chicago, defined adequate car control for safety purposes.

"If a man drives his car at such speed that he can stop before reaching any particular object within his range of vision, he is driving safely," Dr. Dickinson said.

"The arbitrary foot length of the space in which a car should stop is not at all practical. Some drivers get started braking sooner than others."

RICH COLORINGS OF CARS FEATURE AT 1929 SHOWS

Kaleidoscopic Picture Big Exhibit Promise.

Radical departure from what has been seen in the past will feature the national automobile shows this season.

A number of elements combine this year to make the displays in New York, opening Jan. 5, and in Chicago, opening Jan. 26, new and different from predecessors—things which tend to prevent a great industry from becoming static after twenty-eight years.

One of these elements is the modern use of color, which is becoming more expressive in industry every day. Numerous new color combinations and departures in handling the color masses of bodies, with certain modernistic touches, will be noted.

Change in Silhouette.

Another element is the change in silhouette, both front and side view, of the new models, which is refreshing to the eye. The application of dynamic symmetry to low hung car bodies and chasses—most appropriate for such dynamic things as motor cars—and the tendency to make the lines rhythmic and simple, will be apparent on many show models.

As for the setting of the show itself, the exhibition arrangement and the decorations will be quite different from what has gone before. A grand staircase to be constructed in the center of the show, ascending from the main floor to mezzanine, will be the feature about which the decorative scheme will be built.

Foreign Cars Listed.

Another feature is to be the international aspect, foreign makers being invited to exhibit this year for the first time. British, German, and French cars will be shown. On Jan. 7 automobile men from many lands will take part in international day activities. President Alvan Macaulay and the board of directors of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce have invited more than 7,000 automobile dealers in 107 countries.

At the New York show there will be shown more than 200 passenger cars, 44 American, and 5 foreign.

There will be several hundred exhibits of parts and accessories. The shop equipment section again will be featured, with 60 or more exhibitors.

MOTOR MANNERS IN CRUDE STATE, CLUB HEAD SAYS

"Motoring manners are more important than table manners or golf manners; yet, because of the conventions, using the wrong fork or talking while another player is teeing off are considered more heinous offenses than making a sloppy turn in traffic," says Charles M. Hayes, president of the Chicago Motor club.

"Our motoring manners are not yet developed. The veteran drivers of today have developed a code of ethics in conformity with state laws and local ordinances, but we must try to obtain widespread acceptance of the code.

"The veteran driver uses his horn sparingly; he does not sound a raucous horn when a pedestrian comes near his line of travel; he keeps his car under control ready to stop at an instant's notice, and, if necessary, gives a courteous signal of his approach.

"When blocked by traffic, the veteran driver never tries to bully the traffic officer into action by use of his horn, nor does he become excited if a car in front of him should stall. The excessive use of the horn is the hallmark of the novice, if not of the motoring boor."

CONGESTION COST TO CITY'S TRAFFIC OVER $27,000,000

In a survey made by Miller McClintock, director of the Albert Russel Erskine bureau for street traffic research, it is estimated that traffic congestion adds approximately a billion dollars a year to our bills as a nation.

In the case of Chicago alone it is shown that a 10 per cent reduction in traffic delays would result in a saving of over twenty-seven million dollars a year; in San Francisco, the cost of moving many staple commodities from freight car to consumer was found to run from 33 per cent to [illegible] per cent of the total cost of transportation.

"Although individuals might be aware of the cost of their personal transportation, it is pointed out, the indirect cost of living to be found in commodity prices resulting from cartage of materials is less well known and its burden less realized."

ACTUAL BUILDERS OF ROADS MEET HERE THIS WEEK

The twenty-second annual convention of the Illinois Association of Highway and Municipal contractors is scheduled for this week at the Hotel Sherman.

The contractors who have achieved a record mileage of construction during the last twelve months in Illinois will discuss prospects for the coming year and talk over problems of the trade. Alan Jay Parish of Paris, Ill., president, is to make his annual address on Tuesday.

Frank T. Sheets, chief highway engineer of Illinois, is to be one of the principal speakers, as is also Charles Bartlett, mayor of Evanston. Robert Kingery, general manager of the regional planning association, is to be on the program Wednesday. The annual banquet is set for Thursday.

Are these your spark plugs?

If your spark plugs look like this, it means hard starting, slow pick-up, poor idling, loss of power, waste of fuel.

After a season's driving or 10,000 miles, put in a new set of AC's.

That will insure easy starting, fast pick-up, smooth running, increased power, more miles per gallon.

Insist upon AC Spark Plugs, sold by best dealers everywhere.

MOTORS — TRAFFIC — HIGHWAYS

ASKS RAILWAYS TO CONCENTRATE ON SEPARATIONS

I. C. C. Doubtful About Crossing Devices.

The campaign for the elimination of railway grade crossings has been given a decided impetus through the decision of the interstate commerce commission recommending that railroads concentrate their attention and resources on doing away with dangerous crossings instead of spending further money on the installation of train control devices.

This statement has been issued by the American Automobile association, which points out that there were 11,485 people killed and 32,998 injured in 27,336 grade crossing accidents in the period of 1923 through 1927.

Crossings Reap Harvest.

"During the same time," the statement continues, "there were 885 people killed and 8,971 injured in derailments on the railroads, while 579 were killed and 9,817 injured in rail collisions.

"This means that more than seven times as many people were killed at grade crossings than on railroads and nearly twice as many were injured in the five year period."

Although carriers spent over $92,000,000 between 1920 and 1926 to eliminate 3,624 grade crossings, the serious aspect of the situation is shown by the fact that casualties at highway crossings have increased more than 32 per cent in the present decade. The statement concludes:

"The commission is authority for the statement that railroads have spent more than $26,000,000 for automatic train control signals and devices, yet such safety appliances are on a very small proportion of the total railroad mileage.

Increase in Automobiles.

"In the last seven years, the number of automobiles has increased more than 150 per cent. At the same time, the mileage of improved highways has only gained slightly over 34 per cent. The result has been ever-increasing congestion on the highways and a growing problem at grade crossings, where in many instances the heavy traffic occupies the full attention of the car owner.

"The Association of Railway Executives has long seen the need for grade crossing elimination and may be expected to work hand in hand with state authorities now that they have been relieved of a federal burden requiring the expenditure of millions of dollars annually."

REMOVE JOG IN WASHINGTON BLV. AT LARAMIE AVE.

The sharp and dangerous turn in Washington boulevard at Laramie avenue will be removed by the west park commission as soon as contractors are able to perform the physical work.

The commission has acquired the southwest corner at the intersection and will run the line of the boulevard across this property so that a gentle curve will be formed. For years the jog at this point has formed an angular turn, first to the north and then to the west.

Negotiations with the General Outdoor Advertising corporation for sufficent frontage to permit the cutting down of the turn have been completed by Werner W. Schroeder, attorney for the commission, and title is to be passed early this week. This is the last step in the realignment of the boulevard which was proposed for the purpose of providing a safer and faster motor thoroughfare.

VOICE OF THE TRAFFIC

IOWA, 1,020; MINNESOTA, 918.*

Marshalltown, Ia., Dec. 1.—I have had several arguments about Minnesota having more paving than Iowa. Can you give me this information.

F. N. Anderson.

*Concrete as of Jan. 1, 1928.

PREFERS CHICAGO COPS.

Chicago, Dec. 5. — While driving in River Forest I was arrested for traveling 28 miles an hour. Following the officer to the station, I was compelled to go 40 miles an hour to keep up with him. My bond was $15, and next morning I appeared for trial. I was fined $15. In Chicago we have a real police department, human in all respects. Who ever heard of Chicago policemen arresting drivers for going 28 miles an hour? I have been stopped by Chicago cops and asked to reduce speed, which of course I did. My River Forest experience convinces me that Chicago police are really law officers and not grafters or extortionists, either for personal or community gain.

MILWAUKEE AIR LINE.

Sturtevant, Wis., Dec. 5.—The best and cheapest solution of the Chicago-Milwoukee route is to connect with county trunk H, in Kenosha county, proceeding to Franksville in Racine county and picking up the Howell road into Milwaukee. It would shorten the distance now found on U. S. highway 41 by cutting out the west jogs north of Wisconsin state highway 50 on that road and entering Milwaukee on Sixth street instead of 27th.

J. J. Meyer.

A HOUSE OF GLASS.

Centerville, Mich., Dec. 5.—Why make such a time over widening of our Michigan roads to Chicago, then make us Michiganders run into your park system over such measly roads? Roads are fine from here to Whiting. Then, such a road! The ram's horn is straight compared with it. You tell of lovely roads north and west of the loop, but make no effort to speed traffic south of the park system. The entire body of tourists from the eastern states must be impressed with the roads into Chicago. Just let up a little on the north side and put a few of those Drainage Dollars in a decent road for the weary tourist vsiting your city from the east.

F. W. Keasey.

UNFAIR TO PARKERS.

Chicago, Dec. 4.—I call your attention to what I consider unfair conditions of some of the city parking rules. I refer particularly to 22d street, which has an enormous width but no adequate parking. A single line only of parking is permitted along the curb.

Between Indiana and Michigan avenues half of the block is preëmpted by a filling station. It seems to me diagonal parking should be permitted, as is done in more cities where streets are wide. On 22d street also a diagonal row of cars could be parked in the center of the street, leaving more than ample space for traffic.

This widening cost me $2,500 and I have paid out many times that amount during the last three years for other special assessments, and yet I cannot find parking space.

Edwin D. Weary.

BEWARE!

Chicago, Nov 29.—In case other motorists are tempted to go faster than 25 miles an hour on the new 40 foot pavement just west of Evergreen Park, DON'T! The chief himself [the whole force] is endeavoring to collect as much as he can (for the town) by arresting drivers. He rides in a new flivver coupe with no license plates. Of course he is the law and therefore immune to it—at least he thinks so. He socked me $45, with no comeback allowed.

Donald Kennedy.

OBSTREPEROUS CABS.

Chicago, Nov. 30.—Thanksgiving afternoon I parked my car on Randolph about 100 feet west of Wells street. At the time I parked there was plenty of room in front of me without interfering with the cabs parked at the corner.

When I went to my car I saw a cab bumping, not pushing, my car backwards. A policeman and a cab supervisor stood by. My front left fender was pushed in and touching the tire. I mentioned this to the police officer. He said the cab did not bend my fender. However, my fender showed yellow paint on it. My fender is black.

On Washington boulevard I was stopped by red lights at Sacramento. I did not start when the yellow light appeared and a cab bunted me twice from the rear.

What I would like to know is, have the cab companies more rights on Chicago streets than a property owner paying real estate taxes and vehicle taxes?

L. R. Millar.

WHAT OF STREET CARS?

Chicago, Dec. 2. — Every car driver knows the delay, confusion and difficulty in the loop on slippery pavements. With bad weather ahead of us, one way streets would be the most helpful thing that the city ever had. It would not only speed up traffic but would help to avoid accidents. The plan could be worked out by starting with Lake street for west bound traffic, Randolph for east bound, Washington for west, etc. Many large cities have installed this regulation satisfactorily and Chicago can do the same.

Mildred C. Carlough.

FOR REVENUE.

Chicago, Dec. 4.—I was riding in one of Chicago's north suburban towns when we were stopped by an officer and charged with speeding. Cash bond was refused; court was held on the spot; the driver was fined; we went on. The driver was from a neighboring town.

We were not going around any traffic; we were moving in the traffic line. I do not doubt that we were exceeding the speed limit set by some regulating body, but if so, the traffic in general was exceeding the limit, and there were plenty of drivers who were not being molested when they pulled out of the traffic line and passed long lines of cars.

Why should one driver be singled out and fined? What benefit does the public derive from such actions of the police and courts? Certainly it has no effect on curbing speed violations, for as we drove on the traffic was moving the same as before.

The motive for such arrests must be other than a desire to protect the lives of those who pay the officers to enforce the law. The motive savors of the "racket" idea. Get all the traffic will bear! Get the fellow from out of town! Fine him. He has no defense.

It would not do to so regulate traffic that there would be no revenue from fines, even though strict enforcement might furnish some measure of protection to the public. No.

S. S. S.

A NUMBER OF WHYS.

Chicago, Dec. 5.—Living in Cicero, it is necessary for me to use 22d street to visit Chicago. This street is fine to Crawford, where Ogden, Crawford and 22d street almost cross. There are traffic signals on the corners, but the street cars seem to go against the lights instead of with the lights. Why does the street car turn from 22d street, going west, south on Crawford, and then east on Ogden? Why does the street car start turning on the above mentioned streets when the yellow appears on the signals? Why is not the street car company informed that one car should not follow the other car on a turn? Why do not the officials of the west side do something to prevent such confusion?

Ervin Materna.

A DEFINITION AMPLIFIED.

Decatur, Ill., Nov. 28.—P. E. H. is hardly strong enough in his definition of a speed trap in last Sunday's Tribune. He might have added: "A place where the rakeoff from the booze joints is not sufficient to satisfy the pockets of a combine of 'law enforcers,' so they reach out and get it from the motorist." Recently I learned where Specialville is. Coming through, with no traffic ahead or behind, at 40 miles an hour, a cop suddenly shot out of a blind and headed me off. "Going pretty fast?" he said. "Only forty," I replied. "This is Specialville, and you're exceeding the city speed limit," he chanted. "I saw no signs indicating this was a city, and only a barbecue joint in sight, either way," I explained. "Follow me," says he. We backtracked to a shanty resembling a hen house. The dignified jurist was at his desk. He ordered me to put up $20 as bond and return at 2 p. m. next day. I asked for an immediate trial. He said: "Court is not in session." They still have my twenty. A fortnight later I came through again, it being the Dixie highway, and kept down to 20 miles an hour. There was a lot of traffic and every car going in my direction passed me, one or two at 50 miles an hour. The fastest cut in so close ahead of me he nearly hit me. The same cop that got my twenty was standing 200 feet away and saw this reckless performance, but made no move. Why?

I am opposed to the busses on the highway, all of which traveled much faster than my car, and were not molested. Let them buy their right of way or pay their way on the highways.

J. R. Chandler.

PLAYBOYS OF THE BOULEVARDS.

Chicago, Nov. 27.—Opening of the outer drive above 39th street has diverted a tremendous traffic to Lake Park avenue between Oakwood and Hyde Park boulevard; and necessitated traffic officers at 47th street and Woodlawn avenue. These officers are doing their duty in a manner suggestive of children playing with toys. They blow their whistles and hold up their hands to see the cars stop. East and west traffic is insignificant at peak hours. Yet when a single car approaches from a side street, the whole of the main traffic is held up. I am not unmindful of the rights of a minority, no matter how small; by all means have them adequately protected. But surely such an overwhelming majority, as in this case, is entitled to an even break. Until completion of the outer drive to 51st street parking should be prohibited on Lake Park avenue from 47th to 51st at least. Under present conditions traffic along these four blocks is limited to a single line of cars in each direction, with average speed equal to the street cars which make frequent stops.

NEW RAND BRIDGE OVER DES PLAINES HONORS PIONEER

Third Span of Same Name Ready for Traffic.

The third of a succession of important highway bridges, all of which have borne the same name, Rand, that of a pioneer road and bridge builder in northern Illinois since the early '30s, at last has been finished and automobiles and other vehicles may now travel over it three abreast at high speed.

All the building débris has been cleared away and from a distance in all directions there is disclosed to view one of the most substantial and beautiful highway bridges, for its size, ever built in this part of the state.

Northwest Highway Outlet.

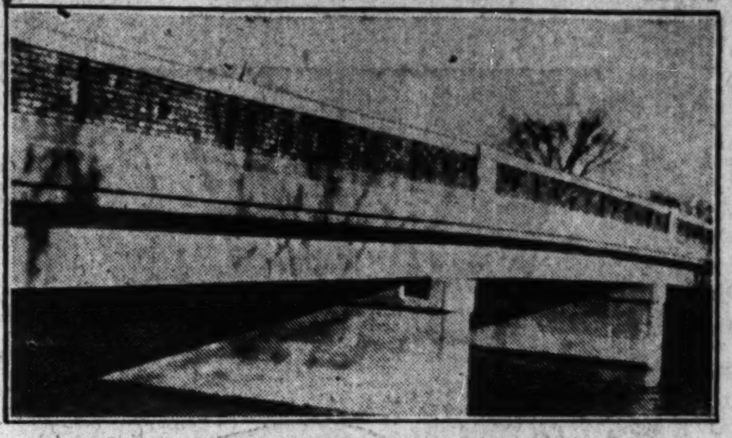
It is the new Rand bridge carrying the Northwest highway across the Des Plaines river at Des Plaines. The original structure was built by Socrates Rand, known through all that region as "Squire" Rand, because he was one of the pioneer justices of the peace.

He came from Franklin county, New York, to engage in harbor work in the Chicago area, became a farmer, a road builder and a projector of needful things to all the early settlers of Cook county. It was Socrates Rand who, in a mill that still stands, ground the first grists of the settlers. Besides he was known far and wide for his enterprise in public works that helped build up the entire region.

No one remembers much about the first structure, but the second was destroyed by a gas explosion nearly two years ago. It was a narrow iron structure, entirely inadequate for modern traffic. The present one, intended to honor the name of the old bridge builder for all time, is a model of the bridge builder's art.

A mile farther up the stream still another important bridge structure is now under way. It will carry widened Dempster road across the Des Plaines. When completed it will join Evanston with Elgin, and will be the fifth new concrete bridge to be built across the same stream in the Chicago district in three years.

New Bridge Over Des Plaines



Rand bridge III., newly opened for traffic over the Des Plaines river, just east of Des Plaines.

SEEKS METHOD FOR SAFE USE OF ROADS NOW HELD DANGEROUS

Narrow roads are a source of constant danger to motor traffic, in the opinion of Dr. H. R. Dickinson of the federal bureau of standards.

"Our greatest problem now is: How can we get safe use from the type of roads which prevail today?" he said.

"Shortly our roads will be of the three or four lane type and much safer than today. But in the meantime we need effort directed toward getting some degree of safety from the inadequate widths of pavement."

HOW TO FIGURE COSTS.

In keeping figures on what it costs to run a car do not confuse service costs with total operation and maintenance costs. Service means only the labor, parts and material necessary for a service operation. Gasoline, tire upkeep, replacements due to accidents, and similar items should not be charged to service.

CARELESSNESS WASTES MILEAGE OF AUTO TIRES

Millions of miles of tire service are wasted every year simply because car owners apply rims on wheels carelessly, according to tire manufacturers here.

Improper application of rims on wheels is likely to cause rapid tread wear and spotty wear, and may even detract from the ease and comfort of driving by throwing the wheel off balance.

None of these will occur, however, if the lugs holding the rim on the wheel are tightened evenly all around. When a tire is changed on the road the nuts holding the lugs should be screwed up snugly, but not tightly, all around three or four times until the rim sets firmly on the wheel and shows no wobble when the wheel is spun.

The nuts may then all be tightened firmly, being sure that space between the wheel and the rim is the same at all points. When that is done the nut must be tightened over the valve stem to hold it firmly and keep dirt and moisture from entering the inside of the casing through the valve stem opening.

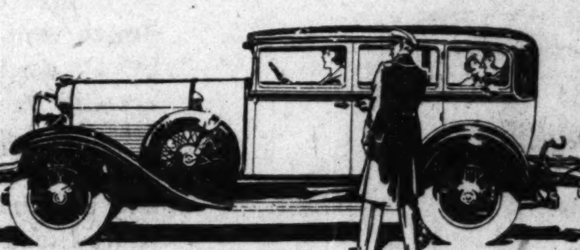
SOLD INTEREST FOR $7,500 NOW WORTH MILLIONS

James D. Tew, president of the Goodrich company and son of one of the founders, said at a chamber of commerce banquet at Akron, O., recently that in 1874 his father sold a quarter interest in the Goodrich company for $7,500. Goodrich is now a $150,000,000 corporation.

In speaking of the future of the rubber industry, Mr. Tew said: "If we continue to bring in well educated and well trained young men of good character there will be no need to worry about who will carry on the industry."

MARMON

UNDER THE DIRECTION OF
G. M. WILLIAMS



A Marmon as Low as $1465

Marmon for more than twenty years has catered almost exclusively to a wealthy clientele. But today the present young and aggressive Marmon organization has directed its attention also to a new and vast market which has long wanted striking individuality, advanced performance and respected reputation in a motor car selling at a moderate price.

There is now a Marmon to be had as low as $1465 (f. o. b. factory). This car, built with a fine regard for Marmon reputation, has distinction and style ranking with that of cars twice its price. Performance also is comparable with the most expensive cars. (Marmons are powered by straight-eight motors rather than the customary six.) There is, we feel, no other automobile in the world quite like it at this money

G. M. Williams, President Marmon Motor Car Company, under whose direction this company has attained the greatest success and importance in its long history.

F. O. B. FACTORY

Marmon Prices—New Series 68, $1465, New Series 78 $1965. Both are straight-eights. All prices f. o. b. factory. De luxe equipment at moderate additional cost. A convenient time-payment plan is available to all purchasers who do not care to disturb their fixed investments. Under this plan your present car may be applied as cash at appraisal value.

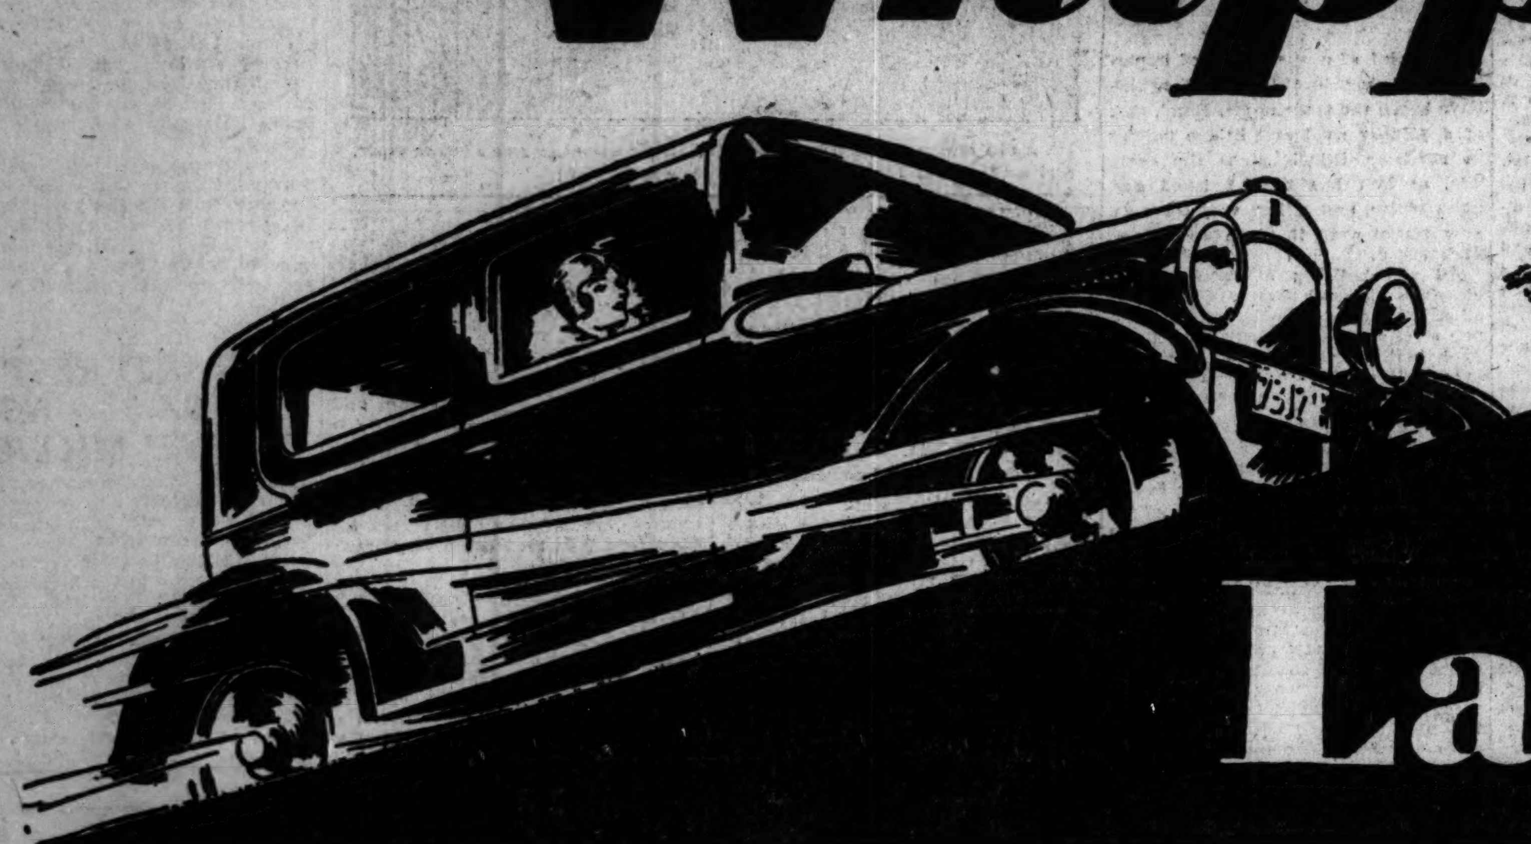
ANNOUNCING

NEW SUPERIOR

Whippet

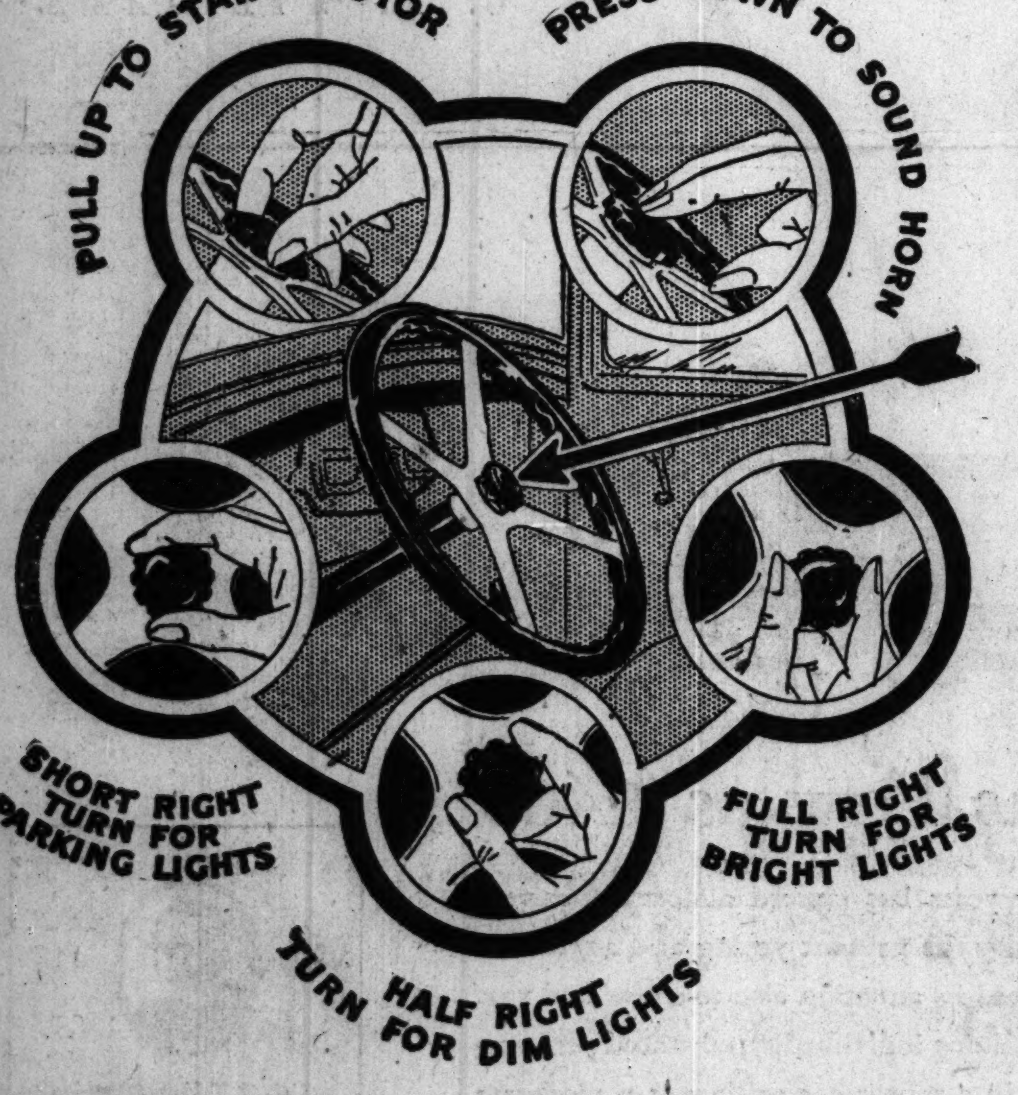
SOLID TRAINLOAD HERE FOR IMMEDIATE DELIVERY!



Greater Beauty, Larger Bodies!

with "FINGER-TIP CONTROL"

-the most notable advance in driving convenience since the self-starter



PULL UP TO START MOTOR
PRESS DOWN TO SOUND HORN
SHORT RIGHT TURN FOR PARKING LIGHTS
FULL RIGHT TURN FOR BRIGHT LIGHTS
HALF RIGHT TURN FOR DIM LIGHTS

What "Finger-Tip Control" means to you

Greater Convenience: A single button, conveniently located in the center of the steering wheel, controls all functions of starting the motor, operating the lights and sounding the horn.

This fundamental improvement does away with all troublesome foot fumbling for the starting button, a frequent source of annoyance particularly to women drivers. It also avoids changing from the comfortable driving position to reach a light switch on the dash.

Greater Safety: With the new "Finger-Tip Control," you can at all times keep your hands on the wheel and your eyes on the road. An important safety factor, especially when driving at night.

TODAY Willys-Overland presents for public judgment the new superior line of Whippet Fours and Sixes, setting new standards of beauty and comfort for low-priced cars . . . the artistic triumph of master designers . . . as far ahead of competition in beauty and style as the original Whippet was ahead in engineering advantages. The new Superior Whippet introduces the style of expensive cars to the Four and light Six field just as the original Whippet introduced the engineering practice of high-priced cars to the low-priced field.

Greater beauty, longer bodies, higher radiator and hood, more graceful lines, richer colors, heavier one-piece full-crown fenders — all these contribute to the trim, smart appearance that denotes creative genius and superlative mastery of modern design.

Roomier bodies, greater comfort

More spacious interiors in the new Superior Whippet afford added leg room and elbow room. The wider, form-fitting seats are deeply upholstered . . . all passengers enjoy relaxed, restful positions.

The longer wheelbase, plus the lengthened springs both front and rear, plus oversize balloon tires, and snubbers—all combine to make far easier riding under all conditions.

Greater power, greater speed

In mechanical improvements the new Superior Whippet advances even over its famous predecessor. The new higher compression engine gives more than 20% added horsepower, resulting in increased speed, faster pick-up and greater hill-climbing ability. A completely redesigned steering gear makes this new car instantly responsive to the lightest touch.

Through these further advances in scientific engineering, dependable performance and minimum operating costs are assured.

Chicago Suburbs Continue to Show Big Building Gains

DOCTORS FOOT BILL FOR CLARK ST. OPERATION

Trio of Buildings to Cost $1,750,000.

BY PHILIP HAMPSON.

North Clark street, between Deming and Wrightwood, is the scene of a major operation, and when the $1,750,000 bill for it is presented a number of doctors will find themselves in the position of shelling out instead of signing papers marked "received payment."

Chicago Suburbs Continue to Show Big Building Gains

DOCTORS FOOT BILL FOR CLARK ST. OPERATION

Trio of Buildings to Cost $1,750,000.

BY PHILIP HAMPSON.

North Clark street, between Deming and Wrightwood, is the scene of a major operation, and when the $1,750,000 bill for it is presented a number of doctors will find themselves in the position of shelling out instead of signing papers marked "received payment."

This operation will be somewhat medical in its nature, inasmuch as it will include a seven story, 300 bed hospital. Other parts will consist of a combination store, office, and hotel building and a 300 car garage. This improvement is under way on a site fronting 208 feet at 2551-69 North Clark, with a maximum depth of 208 feet, and it is the enterprise of a group of doctors and business men included in the North Chicago Hospital association and the Clark-Wrightwood Bulding corporation. Dr. Joseph Beck is president of the hospital association.

To go more into detail, the buildings will occupy the present site of the North Chicago hospital, long familiar to our townspeople voyaging on North Clark. This institution was organized in 1906.

Of Georgian Design.

The hospital will front fifty feet on Clark at the south end of the lot and will extend back the entire 268 feet, with jogs in the building line to provide for light and air. Designed by Meyer J. Sturm, with M. Louis Kroman associated, it will be of imposing Georgian architecture. The front elevation will be entirely of Indiana limestone. At the top there will be a solarium inclosed with ornamental arched windows and pilasters. This part of the structure will be illuminated at night.

We'll take a look at the interior, which is designed to resemble a luxurious hotel rather than a hospital. The patient is greeted at an information desk and then passed on to a receiving ward. Most of the hospitalization space will be given over to individual rooms, there being only a few wards, and none of these will contain more than three beds.

This property will be owned by the North Chicago Hospital, Inc., and leased for fifteen years to the North Chicago Hospital association. It is stated it will represent an investment of $950,000.

Now to the rest of the development. The remaining 158 feet of frontage on Clark will be improved with a three story structure designed by M. Louis Kroman. There will be nine stores on the ground floor. The two upper stories will be divided into offices, mainly for doctors, and living rooms. A passage will connect this building with the hospital so that persons stopping there may visit patients. It is ex-

Leased to Ritz Garage.

Back of the hotel will be the garage, which has been leased for fifteen years to the Ritz Garage company, now having three garages built for it in the city. It will be two stories high.

These latter two buildings are being erected by the Clark-Wrightwood Building corporation and it is stated they will represent an investment of $800,000. Each of the three buildings is being financed by a separate 6¼ bond issue made by Lackner, Butz & Co. The Callner Construction company has the general contract. The hospital is to be completed by June and the commercial buildings the latter part of next year.

J. L. CORCORAN HEADS EVANSTON REALTY BOARD

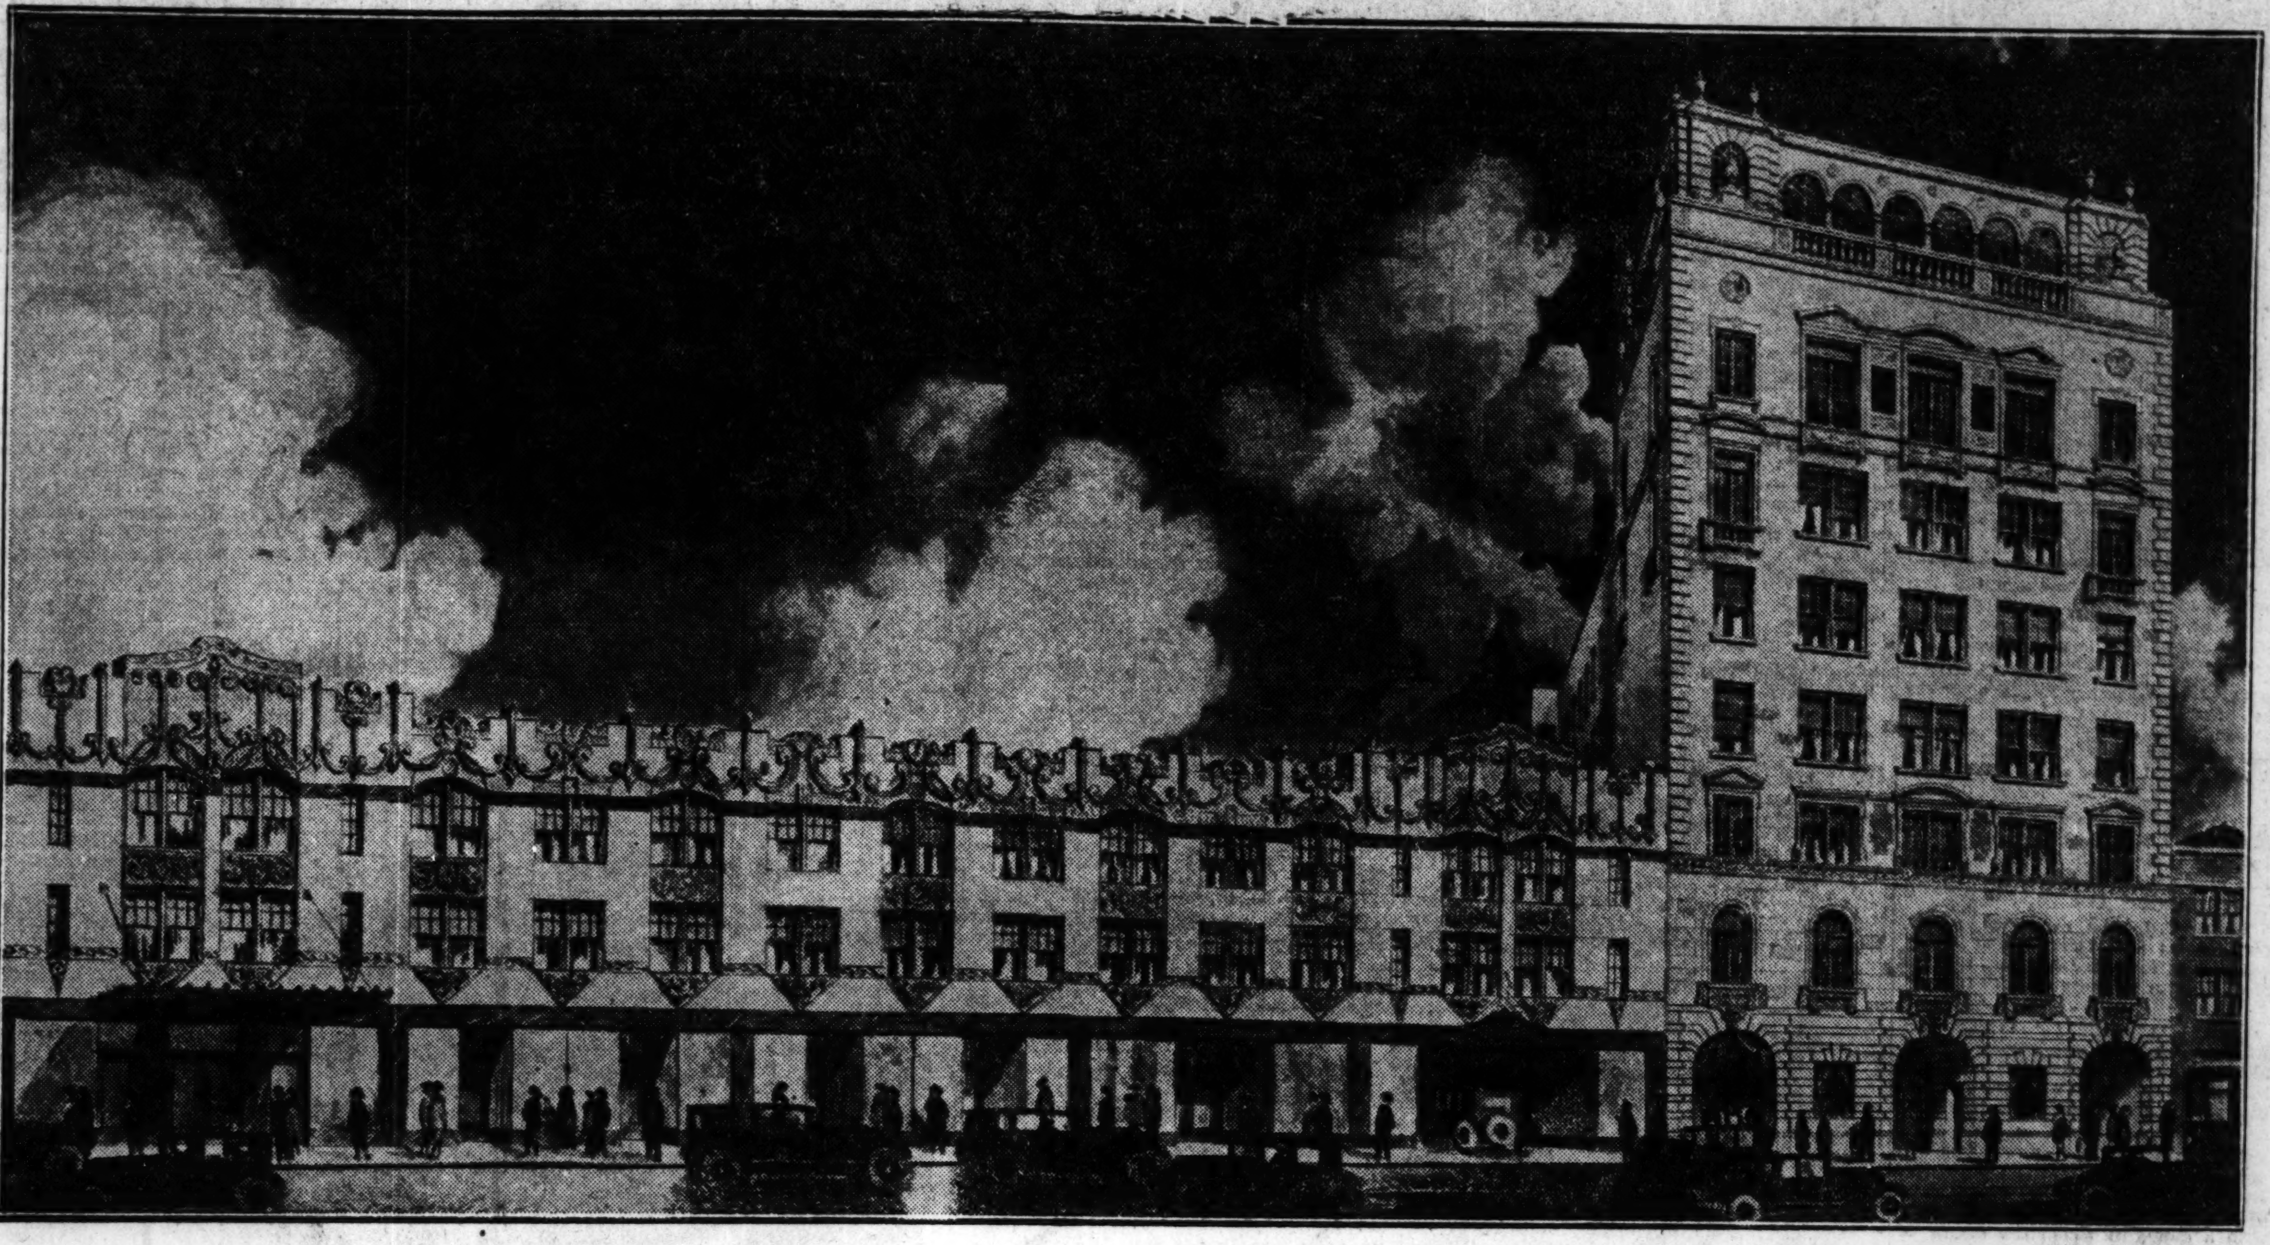
JOSEPH L. CORCORAN.

Joseph L. Corcoran of the real estate firm of Quinlan & Tyson, Inc., was unanimously elected president of the Evanston Real Estate board at a recent meeting of that organization. He succeeds David C. Malin, who recently was made a director of the Illinois Association of Real Estate Boards. Ray Dowdall is the new vice president of the suburban board. Ben E. Salomon was elected treasurer and Herbert L. Lucas is the new secretary of the organization. James R. Smart was chosen as a director to succeed Clyde E. Foster.

PURCHASERS OF CO-OPS TO DINE FLATS' BUILDERS

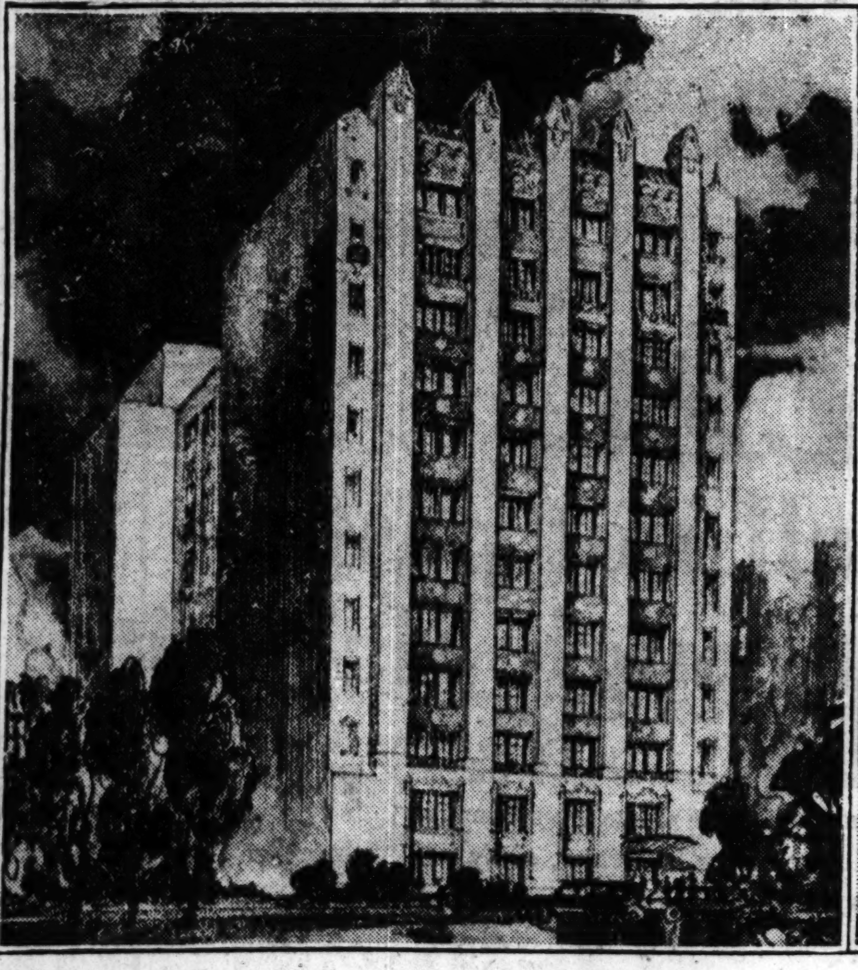
Reversing the usual procedure, people who bought coöperative apartments in the Cloisters, recently completed at the southeast corner of 58th and Dorchester, have invited all those having to do with the building of the structure to a banquet, which will be given Thursday evening, Dec. 13, at the Cambridge club. The guests number twenty-two and include Messrs. Granger & Bollenbacher, the architects; E. P. Strandberg, contractor; Alex G. Whitfield,, sales manager; Earle A. Shilton, broker; the superintendent on the job, and the trustees of the building syndicate. The invitations include the wives. The Cloisters is now eighty per cent occupied.

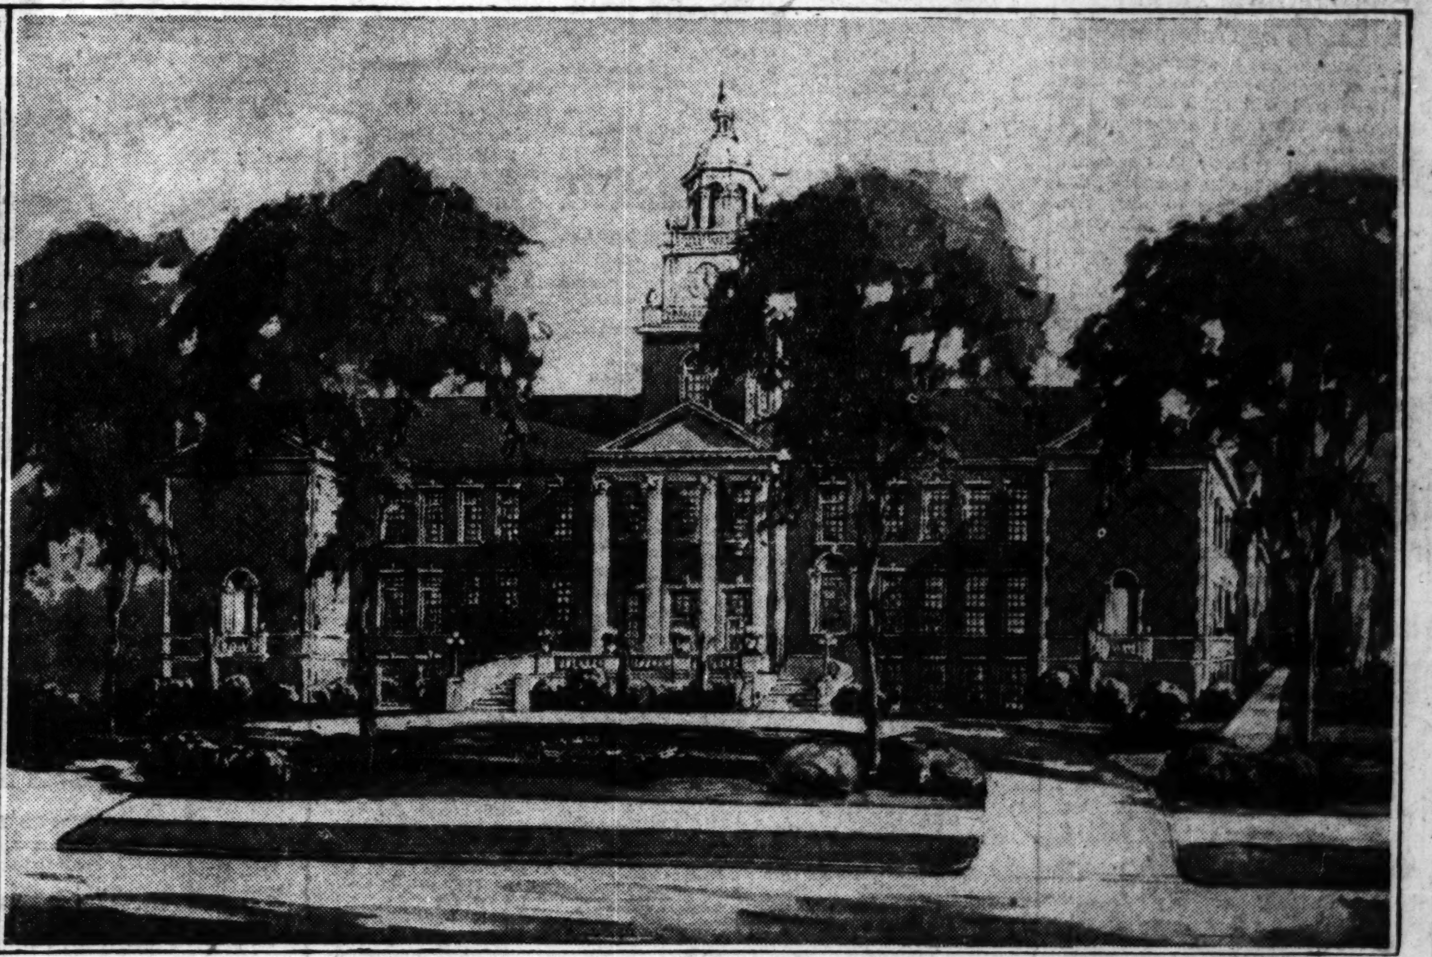
NORTH SIDE PROJECT EMBRACING HOSPITAL, GARAGE, HOTEL, AND STORES



Illustrating a major building operation which is under way at 2551-69 North Clark street, between Deming and Wrightwood, on the site of the North Chicago hospital, long a north side landmark. To the right is a picture of a seven story hospital to be known as the New North Chicago hospital. It was designed by Meyer J. Sturm, with M. Louis Kroman associated. To the left is a three story building to contain, stores, offices, and hotel rooms. And in back of the three story structure will be a two story garage to accommodate 300 cars. Mr. Kroman was the architect for the commercial part of the development. It is stated the trio of buildings will represent an investment of $1,750,000. Lackner, Butz & Co. are financing the project. Edgar L. Bloomster made this rendering. The Callner Construction company has the general contract.

SERVING CITY FOLK AND SUBURBANITES





On the left is a picture of a twelve story apartment building, to be erected from plans by Leon F. Urbain, at 5528 Hyde Park boulevard. The structure is to contain seventy-seven flats of the kitchenette variety. It will be owned by the Jackson Park Building corporation and will represent an investment in land and building of $650,000, it is stated. Charles Morgan's deft paint brush is responsible for this perspective.

On the right is the new Glen Ellyn Junior High school, which is, frankly, a first cousin of Independence hall, in Philadelphia. This interesting piece of colonial architecture, the work of E. Norman Brydges, is to be built on Duane street, in the Du Page county suburb, in front of the present old Duane street grammar school. Later, when another unit is needed, the old timer will be wrecked.

EVANSTON NIPS AHEAD OF OAK PARK IN RACE

42 Towns Increase 44 Per Cent.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

For the reader who likes his facts just as cheerful as his fiction, we can recommend the perusal of the suburban survey for the month of November just completed by S. W. Straus & Co. For Chicago's suburbs closed the eleventh month of 1928 in a blaze of glory, making a 28 per cent gain over November a year ago. The November increase this year was 44 per cent ahead of the volume of the suburban area for October.

Of course, when one hears suburban statistics mentioned the neck and neck race between Evanston and Oak Park at once pops into the reader's mind. For some time the western village has been so far ahead of the university town in building figures that some loyal Evanstonians, so 'tis said, were considering ending it all by asking for annexation to Chicago.

And now the city by the lake is all smiles and Oak Parkers are gloomily turning over in their mind the best way to retrieve their lost position.

Evanston, it might be added, showed a gain of 291 per cent over November of 1927. It also registered an increase of 451 per cent as compared with October of this year.

Sssh! Not So Loud!!

Oak Park, let it be whispered, only gained 12 per cent in November as compared with the same month last year. Its comparison with October of this year was better—117 per cent—but still way behind Evanston.

In actual figures Evanston's building permits were $3,409,750 last month compared with $871,550 the same month last year. The figures for October, 1928, were $618,450.

Oak Park's November figures were $1,894,627 as compared with $1,683,580 for November of 1927. October, 1928, building permits were only $412,010.

Here are the figures compiled by Frank Thayer, statistical sleight of hand star for the Straus organization, based on permits filed in forty-two suburbs, showing last month as compared with the same month of 1927:

Of course, as will be seen from the above table, other suburbs besides Evanston made big gains, in fact, several made tremendous gains, so far as percentage is concerned. For instance, the little town of Batavia, on the Fox river, boasts of an increase last month of 2,238 per cent over the same month of the year before. That sounds imposing, but, as a matter of fact, only $650 worth of building permits were issued in November of 1927, and last month the figures climbed to $15,200.

Well, Here's Niles Center!

The second in the list, so far as percentages are concerned, was Niles Center. Its gain was 1,396 per cent. This big increase resulted from a jump in building permits from $25,000 in November, 1927, to $373,990 last month.

Arlington Heights also registered a spectacular gain of 1,261 per cent. This was brought about by an increase from $16,000 permits in November, 1927, to $217,850 last month. East Chicago, our big steel suburb across the Indiana line, registered a gain of 1,003 per cent over November of 1927.

The suburbs and their gains as shown in November against October this year included: Arlington Heights, 50 per cent; Aurora, 23 per cent; Batavia, 300 per cent; Calumet City, 32 per cent; Des Plaines, 49 per cent; Elgin, 47 per cent; Elmhurst, 82 per cent; Elmwood Park, 83 per cent; Evanston, 451 per cent; Highland Park, 325 per cent; Homewood, 478 per cent; Joliet, 7 per cent; Lombard, 14 per cent; Maywood, 20 per cent; Mount Prospect, 43 per cent; Niles Center, 26 per cent; North Chicago, 187 per cent; Oak Park, 117 per cent; Wheaton, 150 per cent, and East Chicago, Ind., 103 per cent.

South Side Gets Twelve Story Flats

Another important segment in the south side's skyline is taking shape in the form of a twelve story apartment building which is being erected at 5528 Hyde Park boulevard. This enterprise will represent an investment in land and building of $650,000, it is stated.

Leon F. Urbain designed the structure, which will contain seventy-seven one, two, and three room kitchenette flats. The front elevation will be of terra cotta for the first two stories, above which the material will be of face brick.

A handsome lobby will be found on the ground story. The upper stories are divided into thirty-three two room flats, thirty-three three room flats, and eleven of one room.

The owner of the structure is the Jackson Park Building corporation, which consists of the following: Andrew Nelson, Ray E. Granstrom, Henry J. Kopp, Theodore Ebert, L. W. Johnson, and Leon F. Urbain. Financing is through a $390,000 ten year bond issue, at 6½ per cent, underwritten by H. O. Stone & Co. Completion is scheduled for April 1.

City Planning Move May Link All Fox River Valley Towns

Prospects are bright for orderliness in the future growth of Fox river valley towns of the Chicago metropolitan district as a result of interest stirred there by announcements that Aurora and St. Charles are proceding with town plans. This action is impelling the authorities of Batavia, Geneva and Elgin to consider similar measures.

St. Charles has put into effect a town plan worked out by Jacob L. Crane Jr. The program contained in this plan includes zoning, a building code, architectural approval of buildings, subdivision platting control, supplementary building lines to protect future street widenings and a comprehensive plan for the development of street systems, park, playground and school sites and the river front.

Check on Architecture.

An unusual feature of the foregoing is the provision for the architectural control of buildings—a measure which it is believed will do much toward eliminating architectural monstrosities in the future.

Two recent events which stimulated interest in St. Charles as a residential town were the opening of a forty foot roadway direct from the Fox river community to Chicago and the establishment of a motor bus service by the Aurora and Elgin electric line by means of which the running time betwen St. Charles and Chicago is reduced from an hour and a half to about an hour.

Aurora's Plans.

Aurora has been working on its plan for about a year. Important features developed so far include proposals for street widenings and openings in the congested downtown district, master plans for street and road development in the city and adjacent territory, and building lines looking toward future street widenings on several miles of thoroughfares within the city limits. Mr. Crane also is acting as consultant to the Aurora plan commission.

The present remarkable growth of the Fox river valley district towns is linking all towns there together in practically one continuous community and leaders in each muncipality are beginning to feel it would be to the benefit of each if a general plan to serve all could be worked out.

More Raps and Rhapsodies on Tribune Plant

Praise and condemnation of the proposed new twenty story TRIBUNE plant, to be erected on the site of the present building, just east of the tower section, continue to come in from readers. The suggestion made last week by the real estate editor that architects comment on the sketch printed in this section on Sunday, Nov. 25, brought in one letter from a well known architectural firm in this city.

"I think you are going to find that criticisms or suggestions from architects are going to continue to be conspicuous by their absence," predicts this gentleman. "It is not ethical for one architect to criticize the work of another, especially if that work is done in such masterful fashion."

His prediction has been fulfilled. Not an architect has taken advantage of the opportunity to rap or rhapsodize, so we'll go ahead without waiting for professional comment and print herewith letters from the laity.

Glen Ellyn Junior High an Echo of Independence Hall

One of Du Page county's oldest educational edifices, the Duane street grammar school, in Glen Ellyn, is scheduled for retirement behind what might be called a first cousin of Independence hall, pictured above. This attractive pillared and cupolaed structure, designed by E. Norman Brydges, will be erected directly in front of the present Duane school. Later the old building will be wrecked and a second unit erected. There has been a school on this site ever since 1852.

The new structure will be a junior high school. It will be of variegated red full range color brick and will cost approximately $100,000. The roof will be of varicolored slate. All windows will have small panes and will be of plate glass. It will have twelve classrooms, a library and a recreation room in the basement, with outside entrance for public use. The latter will have a stage.

When unit No. 2 is built in the rear it will have a full sized gymnasium, a 35x60 swimming pool, an auditorium seating 1,200, a library, classrooms for manual training, household arts, etc.

According to Benjamin F. March, president of the Glen Ellyn public schools, bids will be asked about the first of the year.

R. D. Bowden, superintendent of schools, expects to have the new junior high ready for his pupils by next fall. The members of the school board are: Mrs. A. R. Utt, Mrs. Ethel L. Hitt, E. C. Chapman, C. H. Hibbard, Carl J. Richardson, and K. E. Aspray.

Liggetts Will Open Drug Shop at 53d and Lake Park

The Liggett Stores, Inc., leased from the Hyde Park National Building corporation the corner store, 30x80 feet, in the new Hyde Park National Bank building at the southwest corner of 53d and Lake Park avenue. The lease begins May 1. This will be the first store in its chain to be equipped by the Liggett company, the other twenty-eight having been purchased from former owners. The Hyde Park Investment company negotiated the lease. Charles K. Schwartz was attorney.

WORKING PEOPLE CALLED GOATS OF SHAM BENEFITS

Self-Seekers Use Charity to Gain Publicity.

BY THOMAS WREN.

There is probably no class of people in Chicago more willing to help a worthy charitable cause than members of organized labor if assurance is only given that the name of charity is not being used as a publicity medium for some ambitious philanthropist.

But members of the trade union movement are being "tapped" so often that today theirs is a state of bewilderment. It has developed to a stage where it is almost impossible for them to judge a worthy and unworthy cause. They have been asked to participate in lot selling schemes and stock purchases and they are sought out to get something for nothing in fly-by-night associations of buyers.

All these financial enterprises are supposed to operate for the welfare of the working men and women, and incidentally for the financial well being of the sponsors. These adventures offer entry into the labor movement of high pressure salesmen, often called racketeers.

Used as Smoke Screen.

The muddled situation gives open shop interests a fine opportunity to use the racketeer issue as a smoke screen to put the trade union movement in possible disrepute. When this work is being done 90 per cent of organized labor's officialdom are compelled to carry the burden created through the manipulations of a handful of sharpshooters.

And about the charity angle. Since Patrick Carr died there has been a stampede of ambitious philanthropists to ascend to the vacated throne.

This year Samuel P. Luzzo, head of the Hod Carriers and Building Laborers' District council, has entered the benefit arena. To make the issue appealing, mention is made that part of the funds of a mammoth show to be given at the Coliseum on Dec. 20-22 will be devoted to finance entertainment for crippled war veterans. Some will be given to purchase Christmas baskets for the poor and certain workmen's compensation bureaus will also share in the funds.

Last heard of, Fred [Frenchy] Mader was conducting some kind of a compensation bureau.

A Whoopee Show.

Luzzo's show is being directed by the Rice Production company, an organization that specializes in raising funds for any cause on a certain percentage; a so much for you and so much for me sort of arrangement. Luzzo's remuneration and satisfaction are taken care of in the way of publicity. He is called upon to furnish names of workingmen and then the come and get your present method is arranged by specialists of the Rice Production company. Programs are also rigged up and other labor leaders are asked to donate so much for a page ad upon which is printed the best picture of the gentleman who falls for the stunt.

The Coliseum adventure is to be of a whoopee nature. It is planned to have booths à la Maxwell street style where golf bags and sticks, alarm clocks, suits of clothes will be sold and even an automobile is to be raffled off. For the sheik and flapper type dancing is to be provided and a good time is guaranteed to all; a recreational opportunity for the working people, as it were.

It hasn't been decided yet whether the carnival should have a sideshow with a bunch of freaks headed by Fat Emma and have big tall men togged out in black silk toppers yelling about the wonders one can see by stepping right up to the box office and buying a ticket for fifty cents.

CHARLES PEGLER AT PEACE AGAIN WITH GEORGE V.

Off Spain; Picks English Design for Flats.

Maybe it's because of the kindly feeling of the Christmas season which is settling over all of us, but, whatever the reason, it appears that Charles Pegler, one of the north side's leading apartment builders, has patched up what differences he may have had with King George of Old England and everything is peaceful between him and Albion again.

For some years Mr. Pegler, who was born in the land reputed to have invented the plum pudding, has been erecting flat buildings. They were all of English architecture and they were named for English castles and other places favored in tourist guidebooks. And then, of a sudden, Mr. Pegler turned his back on things English and looked to Spain for the designs and names of his flats, forgetting that it was the Spaniards who might have overwhelmed his native land with their famous armada.

Back in England's Fold.

But this lapse is a thing of the past now, for Mr. Pegler has returned to his fold and once more is giving Chicago English apartments. His latest is Kenilworth Hall and Kenilworth Gardens, which he is building at the southeast corner of Touhy avenue and Paulina street, Rogers Park. This enterprise, though having two names, is a single building, the Hall part being on the corner and the Gardens the court part of the structure.

Anthony L. Quitsow designed the buildings, which will be characterized by half timber work, stucco, chimney pots and other English features. The entire ground story will be of Indiana limestone, with rock face around the doors and windows. Red face brick will be the order above the first floor. As the building will be set back twenty-eight feet from the sidewalk, there will be considerable ground. This will be landscaped and will have for its piece de resistance a handsome fountain.

The structure will contain fifty-two apartments of three, four and five rooms. Walls in all rooms, except the kitchens, will be canvased. There will be soundproof floors to help keep dispositions of tenants pleasant.

Comfort for Bather.

Another feature will be the arrangement of the bathrooms. Bath tubs will not be ranged along the windows as is commonly the case, but will be set back. This should intrigue the gent who likes to read a book while in his tub, but who often finds himself disturbed by having a blast of cold air come through the window crack onto his bath.

Mr. Pegler bought the site, 150x1?? feet, from Charles Lowry, formerly connected with the board of education and incidentally father of Tim Lowry, Northwestern university football star. Mr. Lowry lived in one of the two houses on the land for twenty-eight years.

The investment in land and building will be about $375,000. Frank Rogerson of Baird & Warner was broker in the purchase of the site and Baird & Warner will finance the enteprise.

Twenty Friends Buy Piece of Realty as Investment

A group of twenty friends, comprising the Fraternity club, has purchased the two story frame house at 6?? Harvard avenue from Edgar Olsen for a reported $15,000, subject to $8,5??. The purchase was made for investment. Lester E. Lee was attorney.

COLD "shall not pass" through Masonite

THE age-old battle with winter is on. In millions of homes as many heating plants are attempting to meet the challenge of the blustering, chilly outdoors. Too often winter is the victor, taking its toll of health and happiness; giving in return drafty, uncomfortable rooms that never get warm.

But fortunate, indeed, are those home-owners who have discovered that Masonite Structural Insulation, and its companion product, Masonite Insulating Lath stop cold surely and effectively... keep heat inside where it belongs . . . reduce fuel bills beyond expectation.

No matter how cold it gets Masonite homes are cozily warm all winter long. Temperatures are healthfully constant . . . and rooms hold their warmth throughout the night. Remember, too, that Masonite keeps your home delightfully cool in summer . . . and delightfully quiet all the year 'round.

Masonite comes in strong, broad boards of uniform thickness that are literally honey-combed with dead-air cells. It is an all-wood product that is built into and becomes a permanent part of the structure. It is an ideal plaster base, sound-deadener, makes excellent sheathing. Owners of old homes, as well as new, can enjoy Masonite's many outstanding advantages.

Another Masonite Product —a grainless wood board of remarkable workability

Masonite Presdwood is a genuine wood board that is absolutely grainless. It will not crack, check, split or splinter. Takes any finish beautifully—needs no paint for protection. Possesses unusual workability, has uniform strength and high resistance to moisture. Can be used on any wood-working machine—can be punched, die cut and shaped. Industry after industry is finding new uses for this remarkable product.

this country as the finest example of Gothic architecture as applied to the modern office building," writes F. H Sternberg, of 925 South Oakley boulevard. "If the addition is carried out in the spirit of the Tower the result should be the finest commercial building in the world for pure design.

"The addition, to my way of thinking, should have a pitched roof of slate in variegated shades and should be built of the same texture and shades of Indiana limestone as the Tower."

Suggests a Court.

Robert G. Pilkington of 7518 Phillips avenue, suggests a court between the tower and plant.

"We recognize, of course, the necessity of providing a proper plant for the printing of The Tribune," he writes, "but we also think that if the proposed plant is built just as it is shown in the picture, it will spoil the most beautiful building that has ever come to our knowledge.

"The Tribune Tower is one of the things that the citizens of Chicago like to brag about. We have shown it to friends from all over the world, even as far away as Peking, China.

"The Tower should stand for two or three hundred years and unless more thought is given to present plans, future generations are going to say that The Tribune management had a chance to do something great and then foozled it.

"There should be a narrow court between the present Tower and the proposed plant. The court should be deep enough so that to the casual observer from the south there will seem to be two separate buildings. This will allow the Tower to retain its present beautiful individuality.

"Please do not ruin a thing as beautiful as the Tower, by making the building just as shown in the picture."

From an Ad Man.

Here's a word from an advertising man. Carroll Dean Murphy of 35 Wacker drive, writes: "As one who looks across Wacker drive toward the Tribune building most of his time, may I offer a suggestion in reply to your invitation regarding the design of the plant addition of the Tribune Tower.

"Your architectural drawing shows a definite break in the design between the old and the new. Is it not possible to emphasize the main Gothic elements, namely, the vertical rib and flying buttress, in the plant section?"

"There is something majestic about The Tribune Tower which gives me a thrill every time I pass it, and I sincerely regret that it is no longer visible from our office. I shall never forget the day when the building was opened and the American flag was unfurled to the breeze. It was to me a most inspiring sight," writes E. C. Budlong, vice president of the Federal Life Insurance company.

"The proposed addition seems to be exactly in keeping with the original design. I have never seen a building which even compares with the solemn dignity of this structure. It needs no marble, white tile and green and gold trimmings to beautify it.

"In my opinion, it will never be copied or equaled anywhere, and I believe that one hundred years hence it will still be the most beautiful building in Chicago, if not in America, and worthy of the World's Greatest Newspaper."

Suggestions from Cicero.

"In accordance with your request for opinions on the design in Sunday's Tribune on the contemplated addition to The Tribune Tower to the east of the present building, I submit what, in my opinion, would be an improvement on the sketch," writes Jean Stroud of 5104 West 21st place, Cicero.

"1. Cut out finials on top and replace by plain Gothic panels, with coping.

"2. Eliminate pitched roof. Use flat roof.

"3. Reproduce piers or pilasters from left of building to right of building.

"4. In extending panel frieze effect, which replaces finials, a straight line might be formed from top of present structure.

"My reason for giving these suggestions is that I think the more elaborate Gothic shown in the sketch belongs to schools, churches, residences and clubhouses, but in business houses I think it ought to be modified so as to eliminate the ecclesiastical effect."

Bricklayer Urges Second Tower.

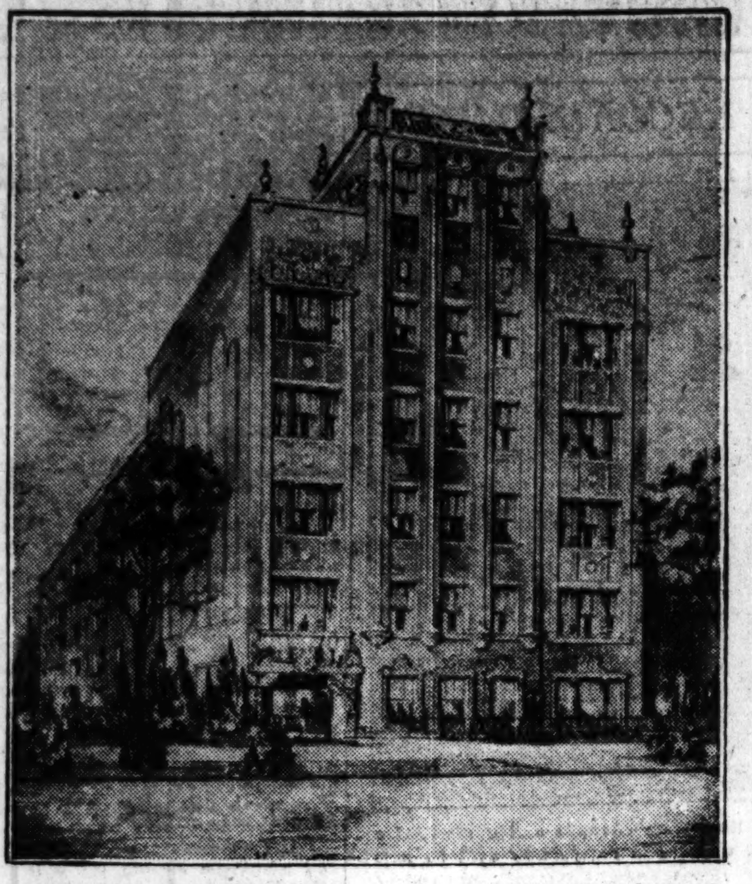
"The twenty story unit you show looks too much like a church," comments Paul V. Christensen, a bricklayer, living at 2538 Logan boulevard. "Why not put on another tower to match the old one and instead of a gable roof make it flat and utilize that space for a tennis court or a roof garden? Whatever additional cost the tower may be I am sure it will repay you many times over both in looks and value of building."

"Too unadorned to harmonize with the main tower; should be more castellated, giving the effect of an entire unit rather than a unit with an appendage," says Miss Hilda L. Mancini of 4641 Winthrop avenue.

WIELAND PLANS $150,000 HOME ON BRIAR PLACE

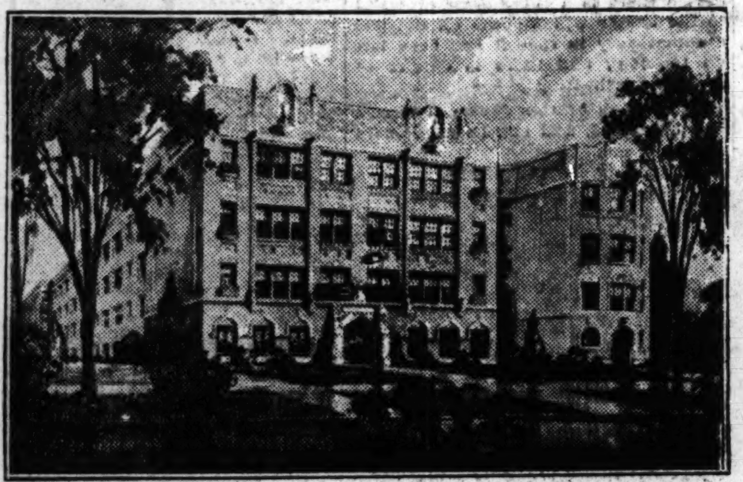
Robert A. Wieland of the Wieland Dairy company has purchased from Edward N. Hurley Jr president of the Electric Household Utilities corporation, 87x158 feet of vacant land at 345 Briar place, adjoining the corner of Lake Shore drive, for a reported $87,000. While Mr. Wieland's plans for the improvement of the property are indefinite, it is stated that he plans utimately to erect a residence on it to cost about $150,000. The site is across from the Stout residence and is in a district restricted to private homes. H. W. Jansen of the office of Richard A. Connell was broker. Ryan, Condon & Livingston were attorneys for the seller and Charles W. Paltzer acted for the buyer.

FOR BRYN MAWR DISTRICT



Picture of an apartment building to be erected at 6811 Paxton avenue, in the Bryn Mawr district of the south side, from plans by Morris Komar. Completion is scheduled for next spring. L. B. Sugarman prepared this rendering.

RISING AT 130 NORTH LOTUS



Work is under way on the above structure at 130-34 North Lotus avenue, to contain three seven room apartments, six four room apartments, twenty-seven of three rooms, and twelve of one room. All but the seven room flats will be furnished. B. Albert Comm is the architect and his design is Italian Gothic. Dr. Henry J. Mann is owner. It is stated the cost of the project will be $250,000. The lot is 75x178 feet. Lawrence Monberg, who recently returned from a trip to Europe, drew this picture.

Says Plant Makes Tower but Smokestack to Engine

Mrs. C. L. Dougherty of 4500 Ellis avenue thinks the Tribune Tower should stand by itself and if a new plant is necessary a court should separate it from the main shaft.

"I thank you for the opportunity of criticizing the proposed addition to the Tribune Tower without feeling quite presumptuous in doing so," she writes. "I wish I had a thousand voices to shout 'no' to the proposed design. It reduces the glorious Tower to the smokestack of an engine trying to drag along the heavy incubus attached to it.

"Why did you build a tower in the first place if you meant to kill it a few years later? It is almost like bearing a child and then strangling it!

"It is imperative that the tower stand alone! Nothing must ever touch it on any side! At any cost or sacrifice leave a court between the tower and whatever addition you plan.

"In no other way can you preserve the majestic upward reaching beauty of the tower. And surely there is enough symbolism in that upreaching to have a definite effect for good upon the community.

"Why did you finish the tower on all sides with such exquisite detail if you meant in a few years to plaster some huge addition up against it? You spared no expense in rearing an absolutely perfect thing; why spoil it now? You sacrificed considerable floor space by cutting off the right angles of the tower, and in every detail the thought seemed to be Beauty without regard to Expense.

"I have seen many beautiful buildings, both in this country and the old world, but I have never seen anything quite so perfect, quite so soul-satisfying as the Tribune Tower. Please, O, please, do not destroy it!

"Very earnestly,

"Maud Miller Dougherty."

URGES TWIN OF ENGLISH "BIG BEN" FOR TRIBUNE TOWER

A rival for Mr. Wrigley's altitudinous timepiece, but with the added attraction of chimes, is suggested for Tribune Tower by C. L. Vennewitt of 2203 Ridge avenue, Evanston, in a letter commenting on the proposed new Tribune plant.

"It would be useless for The Tribune to spend the money to build such a beautiful addition to the east of The Tower unless something is done to forever eliminate the disreputable looking soap factory to the south or prevent any other building from going up there," reads the Vennewitt communication. "If you cannot do this you might just as well build with common brick, the commoner the better.

"Why could not the land be made into an airport? Or dig it out and make a port for ships? Anything to keep it low and permit this masterpiece of majestic architectural beauty to shine out as an inspiration, an appeal, an uplift, to the citizens and all who may come.

"Tribune square and the Tower should be to the Chicago metropolitan area, in a civic sense what Mecca is to the Moslems; a shrine of civic devotion and civic uplift.

"To make the picture complete, put up a twin of 'Big Ben,' that it may peal out upon momentous events and the great pageants in the making, that are yet to wend their way past Tribune Tower."

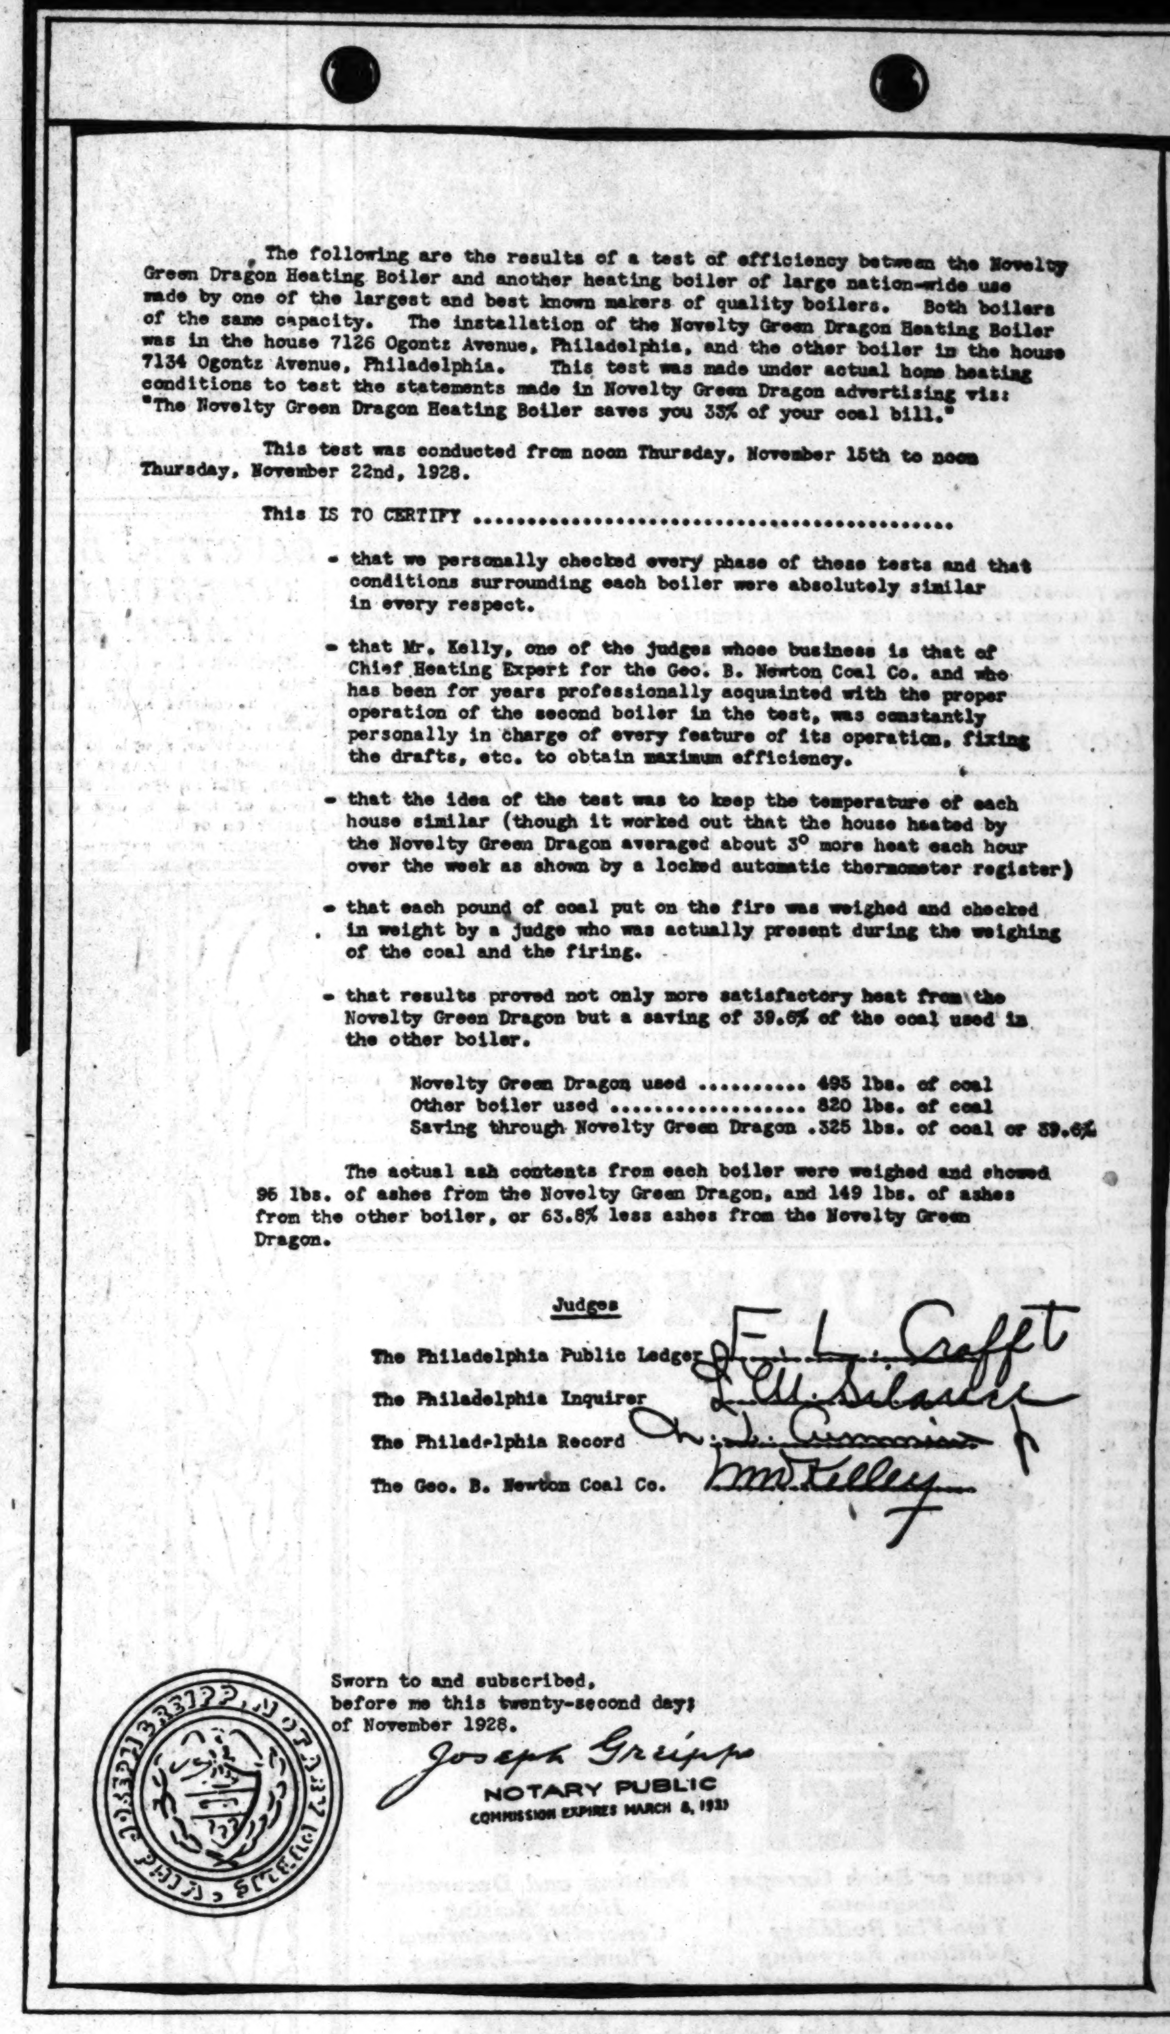
Proof to the public of 33% coal savings

Read of actual savings — $39\frac{6}{10}\%$



The following are the results of a test of efficiency between the Novelty Green Dragon Heating Boiler and another heating boiler of large nation-wide use made by one of the largest and best known makers of quality boilers. Both boilers of the same capacity. The installation of the Novelty Green Dragon Heating Boiler was in the house 7126 Ogontz Avenue, Philadelphia, and the other boiler in the house 7134 Ogontz Avenue, Philadelphia. This test was made under actual home heating conditions to test the statements made in Novelty Green Dragon advertising viz: "The Novelty Green Dragon Heating Boiler saves you 33% of your coal bill."

This test was conducted from noon Thursday, November 15th to noon Thursday, November 22nd, 1928.

This IS TO CERTIFY ....

- that we personally checked every phase of these tests and that conditions surrounding each boiler were absolutely similar in every respect.
- that Mr. Kelly, one of the judges whose business is that of Chief Heating Expert for the Geo. B. Newton Coal Co. and who has been for years professionally acquainted with the proper operation of the second boiler in the test, was constantly personally in charge of every feature of its operation, fixing the drafts, etc. to obtain maximum efficiency.
- that the idea of the test was to keep the temperature of each house similar (though it worked out that the house heated by the Novelty Green Dragon averaged about 3° more heat each hour over the week as shown by a locked automatic thermometer register)
- that each pound of coal put on the fire was weighed and checked in weight by a judge who was actually present during the weighing of the coal and the firing.
- that results proved not only more satisfactory heat from the Novelty Green Dragon but a saving of 39.6% of the coal used in the other boiler.

Novelty Green Dragon used .... 495 lbs. of coal
Other boiler used .... 820 lbs. of coal
Saving through Novelty Green Dragon .325 lbs. of coal or 39.6%

The actual ash contents from each boiler were weighed and showed 95 lbs. of ashes from the Novelty Green Dragon, and 149 lbs. of ashes from the other boiler, or 63.8% less ashes from the Novelty Green Dragon.

NOVELTY GREEN DRAGON

The four judges of this test were entirely impartial and with no connections which might influence their opinions. These judges were F. L. Crafft, of The Philadelphia Public Ledger; L. M. Silance, of The Philadelphia Inquirer; W.D.Cummins,Jr.,of The Philadelphia Record; M.D.Kelley, Chief Heating Expert of The Geo. B. Newton Coal Co. They all attest to what the Novelty Green Dragon actually accomplished—their certified report proves conclusively that our statements of savings are fully justified. And the reason the Novelty Green Dragon makes these savings is because it has built right into it every heat-saving device known to heating science—everything that makes for efficiency and saves coal and labor.

Some of these things the Novelty Green Dragon brings you are: exceptionally large base, specially designed grates, fire-brick combustion ring, extra water sections, corrugated heating surface, exceptionally long fire travels, and the INTAKE AIR CHAMBER—the greatest fuel economizer which completes the burning of the coal in two stages. And the entire boiler is insulated with one-inch thick air-cell asbestos—in four separate layers—and covered with a beautiful steel casing, finished in rich deep green, trimmed with a border of rich black.

HOME BUILDING AND REMODELING

EXPLAINING HOW TO GIVE HOUSE A BRICK VENEER

Converts Old Residence Into New One.

(Next week will appear an article on remodeling an old home with exterior surfacing of stained shingles.)

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

[Home Builders Editor.]

LOUISE BARGELT.
[Hutchinson Photo.]

One of the first questions to be considered in the modernizing of an old house is the betterment of the exterior. Not every house can be successfully modernized, nor is every house worth the money necessary to bring it up to first class shape. But where a house is structurally sound and the alterations do not require tearing out more than one-third of the interior, it is safe to assume that by remodeling the owner will not only achieve pleasure and increased comfort for himself and family but profit financially from the added monetary value of the house.

Considering the exterior, in the case of the house shown today, we see before the modernizing was accomplished, an extremely plain, old fashioned home.

A new roof has been substituted for the old one, with smartly sweeping lines, the frame exterior has been given a veneering of face brick, stone steps and platform have replaced the old ones, the second story bay has been removed and double hung windows substituted.

The result surely compares favorably with most new houses built new from the foundations up.

By veneering with brick, paint and repair bills have been reduced to a minimum, the house has been given added warmth, and unquestionably added beauty and longevity.

In veneering with brick the first thing to be considered is the selection of the brick.

Many Types of Brick.

One of the many methods of skintled common brick, now so much the vogue, may be applied to the old house or one can choose from the various soft and effective shades of the ever charming face brick.

To veneer an old house with brick it is necessary to have a support of some kind at the ground level, upon which the brick may be started. It may be that occasionally the existing foundation is the native rock, or it projects far enough beyond the frame of the house to give the necessary base. But in most cases the foundation and the wall above are in line. A footing must be placed in the ground outside the existing foundation wall. For this a trench should be dug 6" to 8" wide, or the width of the average spade, and it should always be carried to a depth below the frost line and to good solid soil.

A Concrete Footing.

The footing should be of an average concrete mix in the proportion of one part cement, three parts sand, and six parts crushed stone or gravel. As the concrete fills the trench completely, no form is necessary except in the case of a sandy or shifting soil, where a form would have to be set for the outer face. The top should extend a couple of inches above the ground and be finished level, with a straight, smooth outer edge. Where porches occur the brickwork on the house starts at the porch floor on an angle support.

The brick work is now started on the base provided. It should be set so as to leave an inch space between it and the face of the siding, shingles or stucco, which is not to be removed. This space gives room for the mason's fingers and allows for the variation in the width of the brick when the face of the wall is plumbed.

Must Anchor Brickwork.

As the brickwork progresses it must be anchored at intervals to the frame wall by ties. These ties may be corrugated metal strips, known on the market as "wall ties," or the use of 30d nails, as anchorage is also practical. These nails are driven into all the studs, every fifth or sixth brick course in height. The nails must be driven in with an upward slant at a point somewhat above the brick and then tapped down with the hammer to the level of the joint so that they extend about an inch into the brickwork.

Brick for sills should be laid on edge and pitched approximately at an incline of 1 inch in 6 to shed the water. They should project at least an inch from the face of the wall to form a drip, and be laid in rich cement mortar composed of equal parts of cement and sand, with joints completely filled and finished with a smooth, hard surface. The back end of the brick should be clipped to set against the siding and it should be brought up snug under the projecting wooden sills of the existing windows.

Placing of Steel Angles.

Steel angles 8 inches longer than the openings and resting on the brickwork on either side are placed over the windows and doors to support the brickwork above. They should be 3 by 4 inch by 5-16 inch for spans up to four feet, and 4 by 5 inch by 5-16 inch for spans from four to six feet, with the four inch leg outstanding in both cases. Where there are still larger openings to be bridged the 3 3 by 4 inch by 5-16 inch angle should be used by punching or drilling holes in the vertical leg about every four feet for lag screws and attaching it to the framework over the windows.

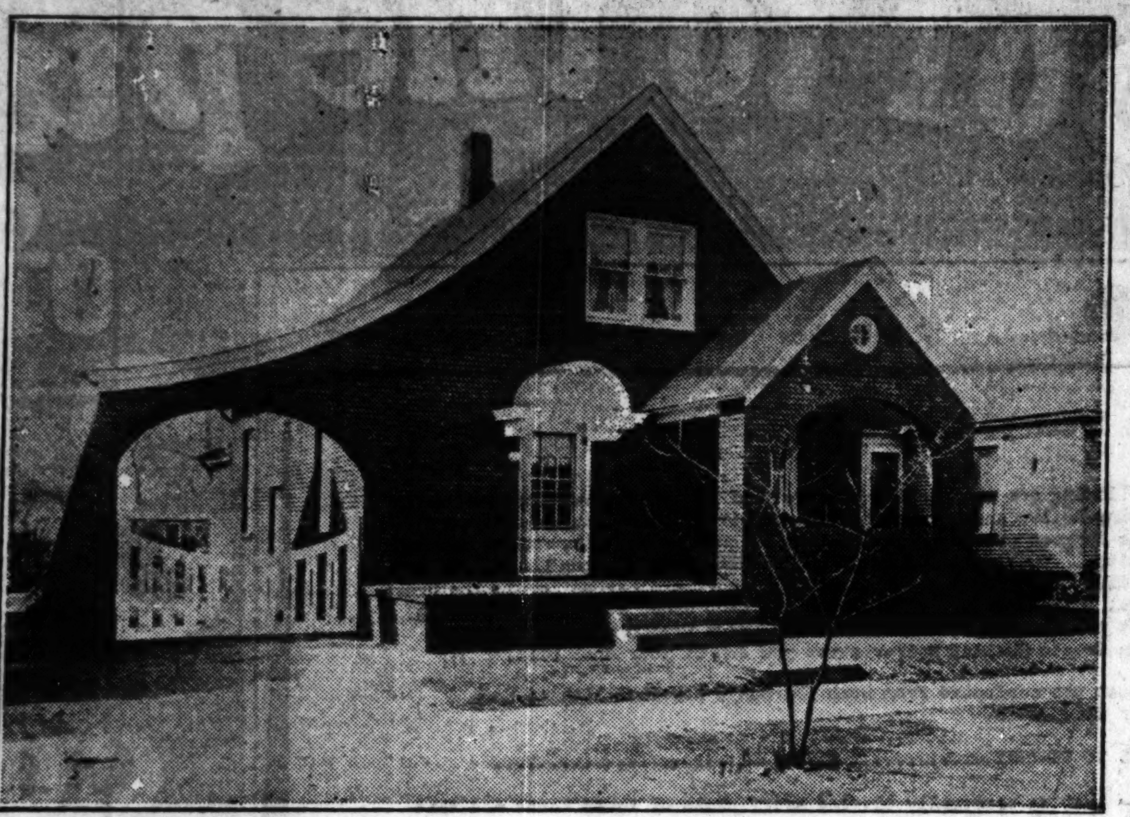
Where the veneer is to be carried over porches, kitchens, or other low additions, the siding immediately above the roof should be removed and a 3 to by inch by 5-16 inch steel angle placed against the sheathing and attached to every third stud with 4 inch lag screws so that no weight of the brickwork comes on the roof. Where the roof has a steep pitch a metal flashing should be placed on the angle extending down to the roof to close the gap and give a finished appearance. Where the roof is comparatively flat, this, of course, is not necessary.

Two Inches of Door.

The brickwork is laid up to within two inches of door and window openings and in the angle thus formed a staff bead molding is securely nailed to the old trim, making a tight joint. Similar moldings should be placed at the under side of roofs, porch ceilings, and like places where the brick meets the old frame finish.

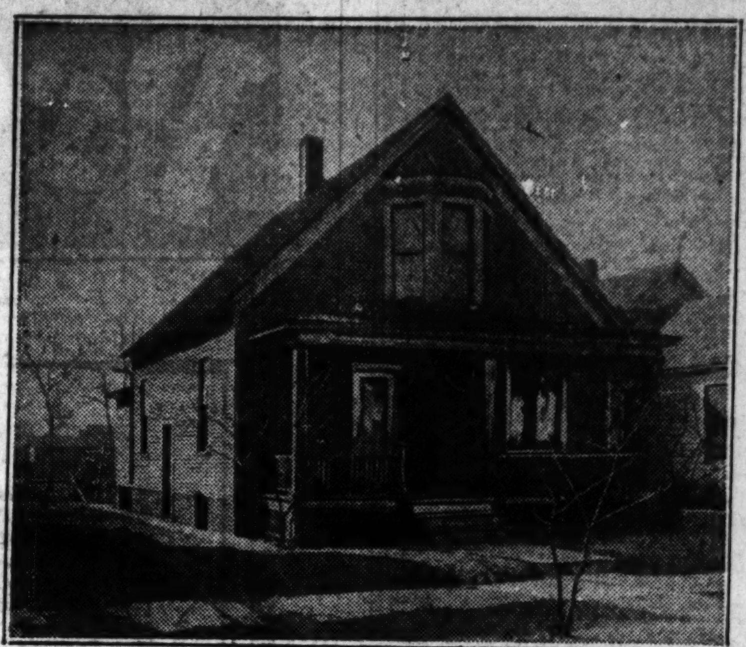
So far as the porch is concerned, in case the base of the old one to be retained is enclosed with siding or stucco, it may be veneered in the same way as the walls of the house.

AFTER MODERNIZING AND BRICK VENEERING



This madeover home compares favorably, don't you think, with most houses you see which are built entirely new from the ground up? It is easy to estimate the increased property value of this modernized home from the general remodeling program; new roof and roof lines, brick veneered exterior, old porch and bay removed and new windows incorporated. Residence of C. E. Glover, 1323 East Whitmer street, Decatur, Ill.

BEFORE BEING RECONDITIONED



An old frame house before its lines were changed and it received a veneer of brick. Note how drab it appears in comparison with its new coat.

Plastic Floor Material Ideal for Basements

BY HOMER GRANT.

One of the biggest problems attendant on the use of basement rooms for recreation areas is to find something which will cover a cold, damp cement floor.

Since this desire to convert a part of the basement into living quarters is becoming more widespread every year, it will interest many home owners to know that there is a flooring material—a plastic flooring—which can be laid directly on top of cement floors in basements and English basements. This floor, which is moisture proof, resilient, and dry, makes it possible to use a basement not only for playrooms for children but also for the older members of the family for living quarters, without fear of rheumatism or any ailments following in the wake of too damp quarters.

This plastic flooring may be laid on with a trowel over an old wood or cement flooring, and it forms a complete and seamless covering for the entire area.

Flooring Is Durable.

This same flooring is very durable and, because it is smooth and free from joints or seams, is sanitary, there being no chance for vermin to collect or to breed.

This type of flooring is excellent in remodeling work, for, laid in plastic form as it is, it fills cracks, crevices and worn spots. Even a splintered wood floor can be made as good as new in this way. If there is a wood baseboard, a cove can be formed of this same material in place of the baseboard.

This type of flooring is not expensive. No expensive foundations are required nor repair work of the existing floors it is to cover. It can be laid equally well over rough cement, common wood underflooring or existing floors of wood or cement.

Is Quickly Installed.

It is quickly installed, and dries and hardens very rapidly. If finished one day, it can be used the next day.

This flooring is produced in a variety of rich, warm colors—blacks and browns, reds and buffs. Combinations of colors may be obtained if desired.

It can be laid in distinctive panel or inlay designs with field and border in contrasting colors. It may even be scored to resemble a tile or marble floor.

The flooring is installed by experts, thoroughly competent and experienced.

Good Hardware Drives Away Home Annoyances

Good hardware pays high dividends to a home owner in freedom from worry. Nor does it cost much more than cheap hardware, either.

ELECTRIC DEVICE TURNS ON OR OFF WATER HEATER

Electricity has been commandeered into service, making it possible to have a control system on one's hot water heater.

This device, simple in itself, may be attached to any gas water heater. Then, with an electric switch in bathroom or kitchen one can turn the heater on or off.

Another step saver—this—appreciated by any home owner who has to run up and down steps to light and turn off the hot water heater.

There are indicator lights of red which show when the heater is on. Easy way to remember in this way. Furthermore as a "forgettery proof" device there is a thermostat attached to the heater which shuts off the gas automatically in case it has been left on too long and there is danger of serious overheating.

The wiring of this device is simple and concealed, and can be effected in a few hours.

Santa Gives Smoking Den to This Hubby

A Cheerful Room.

Chicago.—Santa Claus is going to prove himself a more generous old fellow this year than ever before. By Christmas eve, an extra room in our apartment which I have always used for storing odds and ends, will be transformed into my dreams of a perfect smoking den for my husband.

The stringy, drab curtains will give way to crisp, new chintz drapes. The old rag rugs will give up their reign to a luxuriously soft, colorful oriental. Gone forever will be the gaunt looking sewing machine and in its place will preside a mahogany secretary desk, the bookcase of which will be filled only with my husband's favorite books. A bright red leather armchair will yawn forth a cheerful welcome. The final touches will include a few sturdy smoking stands and a pair of twin parchment shaded lamps. My husband's collection of prints will look down from the walls on a scene of color, cordiality, and comfort.

What enjoyment a room like this can give—the setting for a peaceful after dinner smoke, for a quiet hour of reading, for the meeting of the bridge gang, and finally for the new location on Dec. 24 of our Christmas tree.

A Sun Parlor Gift.

BELOIT, Wis.—It was in August that my husband suggested that we put our Christmas money into a very much needed home improvement. Since he is a teacher and has his summers free, we decided to begin immediately as he proposed to do all of the work himself.

A small, dark shed off the kitchen furnished the only entrance to our basement. This was cold in winter, a "hot box" in summer, and a "catch all" the year round. Besides this, it was dangerous for the children. We decided to enlarge this shed, put a concrete block foundation under it and make it into a real sun-room as it faces south. We put in seven large windows and a fifteen panel glass door replaced the old solid wooden lightless one.

We also built an inside entrance to the basement, utilizing a closet in the dining room. A side door was cut with a cute "scoop" above it. We certainly appreciate a warm entrance to the basement, and believe we shall have fewer colds this winter. Both of these improvements have added greatly to the beauty, comfort, and health of our home, so we feel that our Christmas will be a very happy one.

A Sleeping Porch.

La Grange.—Mine is a home loving family of two sons and a daughter, who, though old enough to venture away, remain at home while they can, for we all are happy in each other's company. At the same time we all love the outdoors and seize every opportunity to benefit by the good health insurance Nature offers twenty-four hours a day.

With these facts in mind, and wishing to make a good Christmas present to the family, I'm going to build a sleeping porch and sun parlor on to the rear of my suburban home. It will be approximately 16x8 feet, with casement windows, and, of course, screens. It will be heated daytimes, and will have generous south and east exposure. With our present inclosed front porch, every member will be able to sleep outdoors, and I think my boys will do so all winter.

The addition will cost about $2,000. Half I can pay down, and the remainder over a year. I can't think of a present from which my family can derive more benefit in happiness and health, and the improvement will enhance in value the home I shall some day leave to my children!

SOME "WORLD'S GREATEST DOPE" FOR FACT FIENDS

Merchandise Mart Figures Are Staggering.

Statistical minded gents who enjoy prefixing their descriptions with "the largest so in so in the world" or "the largest number of what have yous ever employed in the history of mankind," and such, are having a most agreeable time of it when telling about the Merchandise mart, now under construction for Marshall Field & Co. interests on the site of the old North Western passenger station at Wells street and the river.

Of course most every one knows that we may take the first of the above quotations and multiply it by two when speaking of this monster edifice. But how many know that there are 458 reinforced concrete caissons extending from 80 to 100 feet below street level being installed? This is more than twice the number of caissons ever before used for the foundation of a structure.

Some 50,000 tons of steel will go into the skeleton work of this giant edifice. And 200,000 square feet of stone and 1,380,000 cubic feet of concrete will be utilized.

To Have 5,500 Windows.

Then there will be 5,500 windows, which will require 132,000 square feet of glass. Besides this there will be about six and a half miles of plate glass used in the display windows lining the corridors.

Talking about illuminating the structure, there will be 30,000 lighting fixtures used, and this will require 2,000,000 feet of wire, about 380 miles.

Fresh air fiends will be in their element, because fans and ventilating systems will deliver 2,000,000 cubic feet of fresh air a minute—enough to take care of 250,000 people.

There will be displays of some 2,000 manufacturers, representing products of several hundred different industries, and along corridors 650 feet long on each floor in the main part of the building the tenants will exhibit their wares.

Twenty-three Stories High.

As previously stated in this department, the main part of the structure will be eighteen stories high, with the central tower part going to twenty-three floors. The second floor will have huge exhibit rooms, facilities for fashion shows, etc. Service departments, restaurants, barber shop, branch postoffice, drug store, retail shops, etc., will be located on the main floor.

The Merchants' club, reading rooms, lounges, etc., are to be in the tower.

Graham, Anderson, Probst & White are architects for the structure, which is to be completed by the spring of 1930.

FUN TO CROWD OUT ORATORY AT REALTY DINNER

Bridge, dancing and singing will take the place of formal speeches at the annual banquet of the Evanston Real Estate board to be held on Tuesday evening at the Orrington hotel. Of course, the gradual trend in modern banquets toward more enthusiasm and less eloquence hasn't yet reached the point where all talking can be done away with. There'll be speeches but all will be informal. Various guests will be asked to say a few words. Edward H. Payne, a former president of the Evanston Real Estate board, will be toastmaster.

EDWARD H. PAYNE.
[E. L. Ray Photo.]

About 350 persons are expected to attend, according to Pierre G. Beach, general chairman of the banquet committee. Among the guests will be Henry G. Zander, president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards; George F. Nixon, president of the Chicago Real Estate board; Charles E. Jackson and C. B. Gorham, present and past presidents of the Illinois Association of Real Estate Boards respectively; Mrs. W. H. Wright, president of the Suburban Council of Real Estate Boards; Mayor Charles Bartlett of Evanston; Walter Dill Scott, president, and William A. Dyche, business manager of Northwestern university.

A feature of the entertainment program will be the St. Olaf quintet of Northfield college, Northfield, Minn.

Paramount Realty Buys 24 Acre Tract in Evanston

The Paramount Realty corporation has purchased twenty-four acres up in the northwest tip of Evanston, bounded on the north by Glenview road, on the west by Greeley avenue, on the south by Thayer street, and on the east by Ridge road. Crawford avenue cuts diagonally through the new subdivision. The property was bought from Joseph J. Steffens, Conrad Gerstenbrandt, Mary Heinsen, Charles H. Sherer, and Bernard Doetsch. This tract adjoins twenty acres purchased by the Paramount organization some time ago from Charles F. Speed.

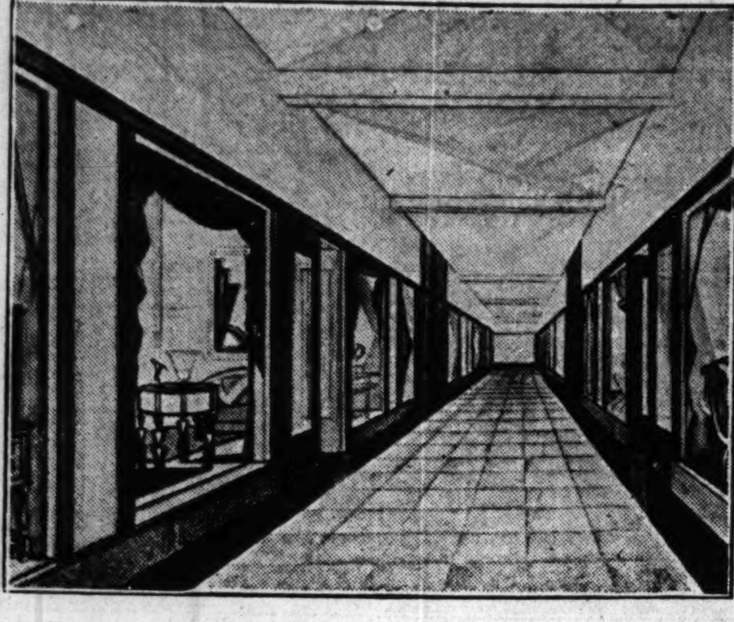
Nearly Half of New Co-op on Oglesby Avenue Is Sold

McKey & Poague report that nineteen of the forty apartments in the 6901 Oglesby building have been sold. According to S. W. Framhein, in charge of the coöperative sales division of that firm the consideration involved is approximately $500,000. The building will be completed by next February.

NORTH MICHIGAN AVENUE LEASE.

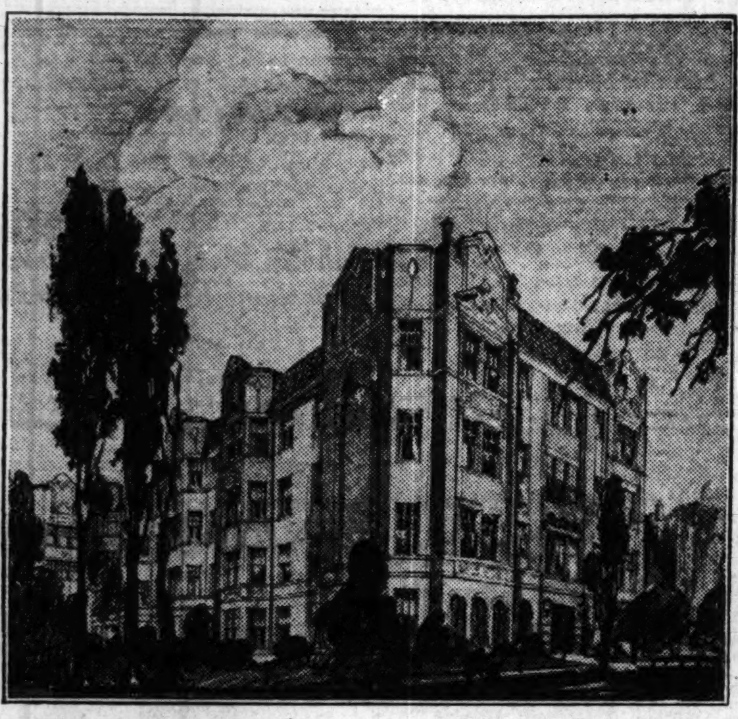
Louis Fishman of St. Louis, Mo., has leased the store at 221 North Michigan avenue, in the Massasoit building, for five years, at a reported gross annual rental of $30,000, to be used as a cigar store. Charles L. Keller & Co. and William O. Trainer & Co. were lessors.

CORRIDOR 650 FEET LONG



Here is a typical corridor such as will be found in the Merchandise Mart, now under construction. Each corridor will be 650 feet long and will be a veritable boulevard lined with shop windows, in which will be exhibited the wares of tenants of the building.

FOR 5806-08 WEST LAKE STREET



Harry L. Morse designed the above structure—a forty-seven apartment building being erected at 5806-08 West Lake street. It's to be called the Austin. Louis A. Gorman will own the building, which will stand on a site 61.7x165 feet. It is stated it will represent an investment of $215,000, in which connection the Bond and Mortgage company is underwriting a $140,000 bond issue. Charles Morgan made this rendition.

The closing, virtually, of the deal by which the Federal Reserve bank acquired the John G. The consideration, while not disclosed, is understood to approximate $3,000,000. Building plans wait on cheaper material and labor costs.

One of the most interesting of real estate transactions was prevented by Levi Z. Leiter's action in granting Siegel, Cooper & Co. a reduced rental on the premises they occupy in State street, between Van Buren and Congress streets. Under a concession made by Mr. Leiter the firm will pay a straight rental of $200,000 a year for thirteen years from Jan. 1. The original contract between the two parties on a ten year lease from Jan. 1, 1892, called for $250,000 annually for the first five years and for $280,000 for the balance of the term. There was a provision giving Siegel, Cooper & Co. the privilege of extending their lease five years from Jan. 1, 1902, at a rental of $300,000 a year. Under the concession this option is wiped out and an extension made from Jan. 1, 1902, for ten years at $200,000 annually. The department store had previously decided to move from their present location, but Mr. Leiter's reduction forestalled this.

Hand-firing coal into your boiler is almost Criminal Waste

If your janitor threw every third shovelful of coal out the window, would you consider this criminal waste? You'd stop this waste today! Yet you don't stop it—because firing your boiler by hand is actually wasting one-third (or more) of the coal you pay for. How some Chicago business men continued to permit this tremendous waste day after day, when their neighbors have stopped this leak overnight, is inconceivable! Can you, a building owner, refuse to accept this challenge that we can save you from 15 to 50% on your fuel bill . . . the balance of this month . . . the balance of this year . . . for the next twenty years? That saving alone in the typical boiler room per month, per year, represents an income as large as the salary of the average Chicago executive. When you replace hand-firing by automatic coal feeding and coal burning you make that saving at once! Tomorrow! The day you replace archaic, wasteful shovel-and-muscle method with a Combustioneer—automatic, electrically controlled, scientifically regulated, the last word in engineering achievement—on that day you have cut your fuel bill to a point you little believed to be possible. Read the proof below—then ask our engineers to visit your boiler room and without obligation show you what this means to your income. The cost is so low that you'll immediately recognize it as the smallest investment you ever made to earn this immediate dividend! And you can pay for Combustioneer by easy monthly payments, provided for by saving made on coal. Not next month—or next year—but tomorrow, because the sooner you stop this waste, the sooner your boiler room will pay dividends!

What Chicago Building Owners Say About Combustioneer

"Since the installation of the Combustioneer we are not only paying less per ton for coal, but are using fewer tons. Also saving the labor of one fireman, and our steam pressure is held automatically at 115 pounds."—F. H. Simpson, Secy. & Treas., Bon-Ton Wet & Dry Laundries, Chicago.

"Combustioneer is saving us $2.40 a ton on coal, as we are now burning screenings. Our pressure never varies, because of Combustioneer Automatic Control. It has eliminated our smoke problem, reduced soot in our flues, and we have less ashes."—Paul G. Kittel, Gustav Kittel, Chicago.

"The Combustioneer is not only saving us real money on our coal bill, as we are now burning screenings at $2.50 less a ton, but we are getting more efficient operation of our laundry, as our steam pressure is now automatically maintained. It does more than you claimed for it."—Henry J. Mueller, Pres., Mueller Brothers Laundry, Chicago.

"Before installing the Combustioneer we were troubled with smoke. This has been eliminated. We are not only saving materially on the price of coal, but we are also saving one-half of the quantity used, and still keep up the same amount of steam. The Combustioneer is a great asset in our plant."—Frank Sefcik, Pres., Sefcik Dairy Company, Chicago.

"As you know, we are using the Combustioneer in connection with a 24,000 sq. ft. capacity steam boiler. We easily obtain 30,000 sq. ft. from this boiler for hours at a time. Our firemen comment repeatedly on how easy it is to clean the fire (which they do once in twelve hours)."—Louis Wittbold, Pres., George Wittbold Co., nationally known florists.

"It is a pleasure to report that the Combustioneer outfit in our boiler room is working entirely satisfactorily. We find that it is possible for us to use a cheaper grade of coal; we have less smoke and less labor than with the old style of hand-firing."—M. W. Dangel, Manager, Berry Bldg., Chicago.

"We are pleased to state that Combustioneer has proved itself very efficient. Coal cost per ton has been reduced $1.40 on account of being able to use screenings. The boiler rating has also been greatly increased, and the smoke nuisance has been eliminated."—Paul Hoffman, Pres., Board of Education, Stevens Point, Wisconsin.

"We are very much pleased with the Combustioneer which you installed under our Cast Iron Heating boiler, of 12,500 sq. ft. capacity. We are burning Illinois screenings without smoke, and have no trouble keeping up steam. The machine makes it much easier on the fireman, as this boiler was hard to fire by hand."—Felix Jablonski, Owner, Pine Wood Hotel, Chicago.

Hand-firing steals Heat or Power you are paying for

Where do your dividends come from in your apartment building, factory, hotel, garage, laundry, greenhouse, dairy? They represent the difference between your income and what it costs you to operate that building. If COMBUSTIONEER cuts one-third from your fuel bill in the next ten months—that cut alone can represent a handsome profit you have never had before. COMBUSTIONEER, the automatic coal feeding, coal burning device, is not an experiment. In every section of the Chicago territory, in every type of building, in boilers used for either Heat or Power—COMBUSTIONEER has replaced fifteenth century hand-firing, and the owners of these buildings will tell you face-to-face what COMBUSTIONEER is doing for them. With enthusiasm almost unbelievable, they will show you actual figures on their own boiler rooms of how COMBUSTIONEER has made it possible to burn screenings, the lowest priced fuel on the market, more efficiently than it was ever possible to burn the best grades of coal. They will tell you they are burning less tons. They will point to COMBUSTIONEER'S automatic control of heat or power, showing you that for the first time in the history of this building, they have been able to maintain day and night a uniform, predetermined temperature or head of steam. They will tell you how labor in the boiler room has been released for other duties in the building—a saving alone worth serious consideration. COMBUSTIONEER operation absolutely eliminates smoke—thus complying with Chicago's Smoke Inspection. Ask these building owners—shown in the column to the left—and then telephone or write us immediately. No obligation. You can't afford not to get complete information now.

SOY BEANS SOLVE THE PROBLEM OF CATTLE FEEDING

Live Stock Men Now Able to Double Profits.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

A scoop-shovelful of soy beans has turned out to be a pot of gold that Mississippi valley beef cattle producers have been searching for during the last half century. These little "gold nuggets" are precious in the steer's feed bunk and are in great demand as an economical protein feed.

Cattle feeders are now able to double their profits by using soy beans in their rations. Thousands of bushels of them have been grown in Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, and other corn belt states this year. Central Illinois farmers have been selling them at a minimum price of $1.35 a bushel, producing about 22 to 23 bushels to the acre.

Good News for Farmers.

When the story of John W. Schwab's experience in feeding steers on soy beans and cottonseed meal gets circulated widely among farmers this legume will be more popular than ever and will be more generally grown in the corn and cattle feeding belt.

In the feed lots at Purdue university, Lafayette, Ind., Mr. Schwab has been feeding steers on soy beans and cottonseed meal for five winters. He has proved that soy beans as a protein supplement are more profitable for fattening cattle than cottonseed meal. Lucky for corn belters that this is true, because they can easily grow the beans on their farms, furnishing not only a profitable cattle feed but building up the soil at the same time.

Schwab's tests showed that the steers fed soy beans returned an average profit in the five trials of $12.91 a head, while those fed cottonseed meal returned a profit of $6.74 a head. He fed, during the five years, a total of 100 steers. Each winter he fed ten steers on a ration containing soy beans, and another group of ten steers were fed a ration containing cottonseed meal. Otherwise the rations were the same.

Rations for Gaining Weight.

To get 100 pounds of gain on a steer he was fed 507 pounds of shelled corn, 102 pounds of soy beans, 133 pounds of clover hay, and 1,166 pounds of silage. To get 100 pounds of gain on the other steers it was necessary to feed 524 pounds of corn, 105 pounds of cottonseed meal, 145 pounds of clover hay and 1,271 pounds of silage.

Each soy bean fed steer ate a total of 6,964.20 pounds of feed and gained 365 pounds, while each steer fed cottonseed ate a total of 7,218.85 pounds of feed and gained 353 pounds in five months.

The fifty soy bean fed steers fed during the five years produced a total profit of $645.50, compared with a profit of $337 on the fifty cottonseed meal fed steers. There was a difference in profits of $308.50. This means that if two farmers were each feeding fifty steers a ration of corn, clover hay, and silage, and one used soy beans and the other used cotton seed meal as a protein supplement the farmer feeding soy beans would make practically twice as big a profit as his neighbor.

When Mr. Schwab put the steers in the feed lot they weighed approximately 900 pounds. They were fed an average of 152 days and were sold weighing from 1,200 to 1,300 pounds. With each steer a shoat weighing about 100 pounds was put in the lot. At the end of the feeding period the hog had gained about 100 pounds. This gain was made on the feed wasted by the steers, which were handled under practical corn belt feed lot conditions. No feed was given the hogs other than that which they picked up in the feed lot. The gain they made was credited to the steers' profit. The feed was originally charged against the steers.

Two Year Olds Used.

All of the feeding trials were made with two year old steers. The actual feed and live stock prices prevailing during the five winter feeding periods were used in making the calculations to determine the profits. The average price of the cottonseed meal was about $56 a ton, while the soy beans were about $50 a ton.

Mr. Schwab says that the factors which determined the greater profits of the soy bean fed steers over the cottonseed meal fed steers were less feed required to produce 100 pounds of gain and the larger gains made by the hogs following the cattle. It took a total of about 255 pounds less feed to get the gains of 365 pounds on a steer fed soybeans than to get a gain of 353 pounds on a steer fed cottonseed meal.

To the farmer Mr. Schwab's tests teach a practical lesson in economical feeding of cattle. To the city consumer they teach what a large amount of feed is required to produce good beef. In order to feed the 100 cattle 152 days it took more than 700,000 pounds of corn, soybeans, cottonseed meal, clover hay and silage. The fifty pounds of corn, soy beans, cottonseed meal in their ration ate 12,700 more pounds of feed than did the steers that were fed soy beans. That is nearly enough extra feed to run two more steers in the feed lot for 152 days.

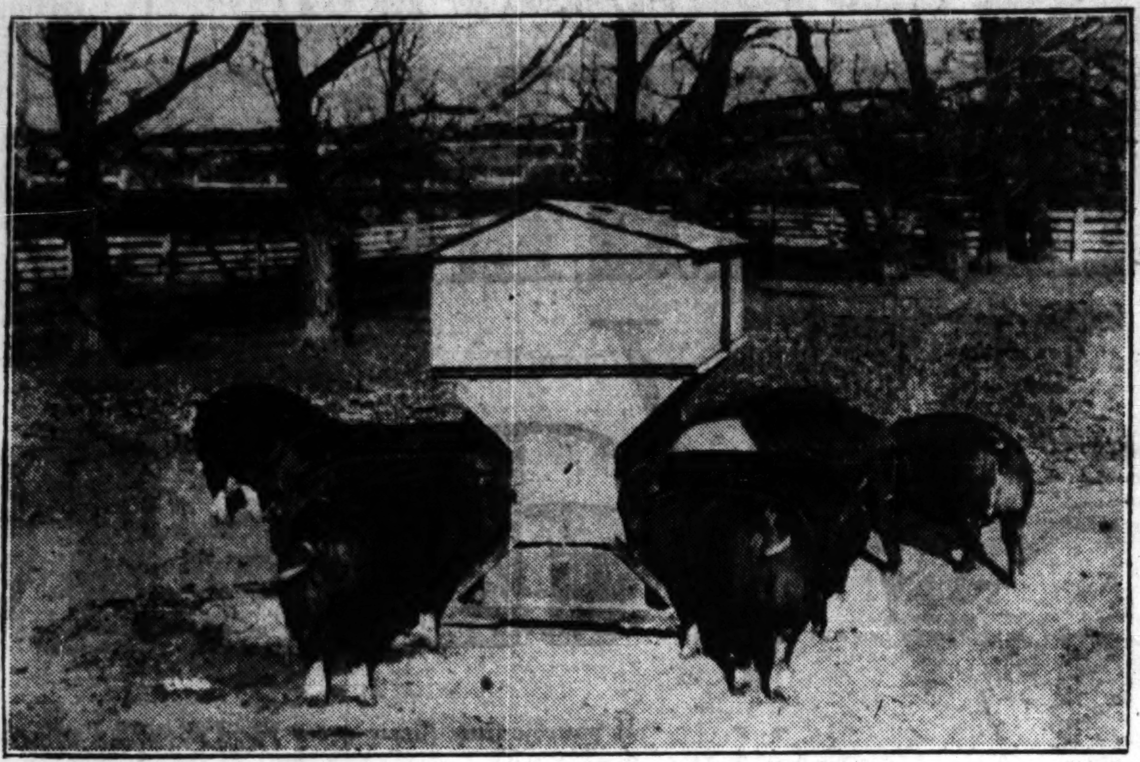
Successful Feeding a Science.

Cattle feeding is a profitable business if it is properly done, but the old system of locking steers up in a lot and filling their bunks with corn alone is no longer practiced by successful feeders. Mr. Schwab says that successful cattle feeding today is an art, a science, and a business.

Farmers who are seriously interested in cutting down their cost of gains in fattening cattle will find that it pays to feed soy beans. They can be grown throughout the corn states of the Mississippi valley. The modern methods of harvesting make it a simple matter to handle the beans. They are fed whole; grinding is not necessary. Mr. Schwab fed them whole in his tests.

The combined harvester and thrasher is encouraging the growing of soy beans. The combine not only simplifies the cutting and thrashing of the beans but eliminates waste. There is little loss from shattering where the beans are handled with a combine. The loss amounts to 25 to 50 per cent from shattering where the beans are cut with a binder and then thrashed in the ordinary machine. The loss is quite small where the beans are run through a combine.

MODERN HOG TROUGH.



FREE-CHOICE SYSTEM OF FEEDING GILTS OFFERS NEW FIELD FOR SELF-FEEDER—John Evvard of the Iowa station says the self-feeder, like the one above, has a great field of usefulness, not only in fattening hogs for market, but in preparing the breeding herd. These self-fed gilts developed into profitable breeding stock at the station.

Evvard finds that a good plan to avoid overfattening is to mix ground alfalfa or oats with the grain feeds such as corn, barley, and middlings, but feed the tankage straight. Mix the tankage if the gilts tend to overeat.

FOUND DEAD IN SHEEP PEN

FRIEND OF DROVERS AND EXECUTIVES—Joe's Jerry, the famous old black bell sheep at the Union Stock Yards, is shown above as he appeared a short time before he died. He has led hundreds of bands of sheep down the alleys during the last six years. More than 6,000,000 lambs, ewes and wethers have followed him over the "bridge of sighs" and into the slaughter house in packingtown. He dropped dead at the yards yesterday.

RABBIT TROUBLES.

1. What causes young domesticated hares to die from dysentery when fed oats, alfalfa hay, carrots, beets and fresh, clean cows' milk?

2. I have a doe rabbit that had a sore ear when I bought her. The ear is apparently all right now. Would such a doe be safe for breeding stock? J. D. S.

REPLY.

1. If you are having dysentery trouble with any of your rabbits I would advise you to consult a veterinarian. Without knowing all the conditions under which the rabbits are kept, the best I can do is to guess at your trouble. Too much green feed, especially after the rabbits have been fed on such feeds as hay and grain, may cause diarrhea. See that the pens and hutches are entirely cleaned and disinfected to get rid of germs. If you think that green feed is being fed too liberally, reduce it and give the rabbits scalded milk. A mash of bran and oats or of bread and scalded milk is recommended. Experts get good results when they feed dry wheat bran.

2. Your doe rabbit that once had a sore ear may be disqualified for show purposes, but if the trouble has entirely disappeared you would be safe in using this doe in the breeding pen. If the ear causes any further trouble, clean it thoroughly with a good antiseptic and then rub it gently with warm olive oil. This is especially good where rabbits' ears are troubled with mange mites.

HOGS WITH WEAK BACKS.

I have lost several hogs during the least year. What is the trouble when hogs have difficulty in standing up; their backs seem weak and they are generally unthrifty? Some of them have become so weakened in the back that they drag their hind legs around. W. E.

REPLY.

Since you have so many animals affected the trouble comes no doubt from a common cause. Just what this is it would be difficult to say without examining the farm and herd. Your losses have already been heavy enough to justify calling a veterinarian to go into the matter thoroughly. It would be much safer for you to first find out exactly what your trouble is and then the remedy no doubt will be simple.

The trouble may be due to feeds lacking such minerals as phosphorus and calcium, which are used in building bones. To prevent such trouble in the future you should feed your hogs a home made mixture of minerals. One of the simplest mineral mixtures recommended by hog feed experts is made up of equal parts by weight of air-slaked lime and salt, or of wood ashes and salt. Corn and small grains commonly fed to live stock in the middle west lack the necessary minerals for hogs; the mixture given here furnishes the main minerals that are lacking in the corn and small grains feed.

JERSEYS MUST BE TATTOOED, CLUB RULES

Identifying Marks for Each Purebred.

Tattooing has been used successfully in marking chickens to protect the owner from thieves and also in marking hogs and cattle to identify them in disease control work, and now it is to be used in identifying purebred cattle. The American Jersey Cattle club, with headquarters at 324 West 23rd street, New York City, N. Y., announces that to establish a uniform method of identification for Jersey cattle, members in the organization will be required to tattoo all animals to be registered after the first of the year.

The tattooing will be done in the ear in indelible ink with letters and numbers selected by the owner—no two animals in the same herd are to have the same numbers. Both ears may be used, and the marks and numbers in the ears must be stated on application for registration.

Officials of the Jersey club explain that many dairy animals are of a solid color and in many herds only the owner can definitely identify all such animals. With the tattoo mark recorded in the owner's records and on the certificates of registration of purebred animals any one can identify every animal in the herd. In the event of the owner's death or absence this information is of the greatest value.

They find that it takes but a few moments to tattoo an animal and the identifying mark is permanently fixed in the ear. Needle points form the design of letters or numbers and these points are held in position in the head of the marker, which is like a large pair of pliers. The needle points are covered with indelible ink or paste. The instrument is then set in position and the needles penetrate the ear on the inside, carrying the ink well under the surface of the skin. Ink is immediately rubbed into the slight wound made by the needle points and the job is done. There is practically no bleeding, and the operation is scarcely noticed by the animal.

It is recommended that the ear to be tattooed be cleaned with alcohol before it is punched. This will remove the wax and other foreign matter and insure a clean surface on which to work, it is explained.

The new ruling on tattooing has been favorably received by breeders and agricultural leaders. The subject of tattooing will be of interest for some time to come as there are eleven million Jerseys in the United States, and of this number over three hundred thousand are registered purebreds, according to the Jersey club officials.

HUGE FACTORIES PROPOSED FOR HAMMOND AREA

Building Construction Sets New Records.

One of the reasons for Chicago's greatness is our Indiana workshop, Hammond, which is now the scene of major industrial expansion. Roscoe E. Woods of Roscoe E. Woods & Co., Hammond realtor, gives us some interesting information regarding conditions there.

"The present activity in Hammond seems predicated on vast expenditures now being made for the further enlargement of local industries," Mr. Woods says. The United States Gypsum company has a $2,500,000 plant under construction; the Roxana Petroleum corporation is planning an extension costing $2,500,000 for the production of lubricating oils and paraffin.

"Then the Insull interests are completing a $25,000,000 generating plant. The Inland Steel company and the Youngstown Sheet and Tube company are each said to be about to begin the construction of huge plants to cost $15,000,000 apiece.

"In addition to this, the North township group of cities, including Hammond, Whiting, and East Chicago, are engaged in a building boom which during 1928 is breaking all past records for construction.

"Some Chicago suburbs entice new residents by offering them fast transportation service. The Hammond group of cities entices residents by offering them jobs, and in both instances the shifting of population from one place to another is what creates real estate activity."

Plans are now on foot to help Hammond's business section, which is handicapped by reason of the network of railway tracks in its immediate vicinity. The proposal is to bring the trackage of all the railways passing through the town into a single line, possibly following the present route of the Michigan Central. The combined tracks would be elevated, eliminating the grade crossings now choking traffic. It is estimated the cost of this improvement would be in the neighborhood of $8,000,000 or $10,000,000.

TYPOGRAPH FIRM PLANS FACTORY AT ELSTON-LOGAN

The vacant industrial property at the southeast corner of Elston and Logan has been sold by the Edward Hines Lumber company to the Ludlow Typograph company for a reported $400,000. It is to be improved with a factory, salesrooms and office buildings to fill the needs of the Ludlow concern. The land fronts 406 feet on Elston and 900 feet on Logan boulevard, extending from Elston to the north branch of the river. Hart & Whetson were brokers. Wyatt B. Angelo was attorney for the seller, and Gann, Secord & Stead acted for the buyer.

SMITHIES BUYS FORMER HOUSE OF J. B. FORGAN

J. Edwin Quinn of the architectural firm of McNally & Quinn has sold to Dr. Frank Smithies, formerly associated with the Mayo brothers at Rochester, the three story house and garage at 1415 North Dearborn street, lot 50x132 feet, for a reported price of $90,000, subject to $56,000. This residence for more than thirty-five years was the home of the late J. B. Forgan, president of the First National bank. Dr. Smithies bought the property for investment. Paul Steinbrecher & Co. represented all parties as broker.

GLATT & MOLNER ERECTING HOTEL AT 7014 CREGIER

Jacob Lewis designed a four story apartment hotel which Glatt & Molner are erecting at 7014-16 Cregier avenue. The structure will contain forty-three furnished apartments and will stand on a lot 50x165 feet. It is stated it will cost about $165,000. The architecture will be Old English, being typified by half timber work. A large lounge will be provided as a meeting place for the tenants, and there will be a playroom for the children. Completion is scheduled for April 1.

CRAWFORD AVENUE LEASE.

Pellegrini Bros. leased from Morris Goldman a store at the northeast corner of Crawford and West End avenues, in which they will open a confectionery and luncheonette. The lease is for ten years at a reported term rental of $68,750. Sydney G. and Milton L. Schwartz of Michael Flicht & Co. were brokers.

MRS. W. H. WRIGHT AGAIN TO HEAD REALTY COUNCIL

Mrs. W. H. Wright was unanimously reëlected president of the Suburban Real Estate board's council at the annual meeting. Cary E. DeButts was reëlected secretary-treasurer and David C. Malin was elected vice president. The council's membership is drawn from all the suburban real estate boards in the Chicago district. The principal matter to be considered by the council next year will be the problem of suburban transportation.

The organization will hold its annual banquet and mass meeting Friday evening, Dec. 14, at the Midwest Athletic club. Members of the individual boards will participate. William E. Herron, John Berge, and Henry A. Zander will be the principal speakers.

A FRANK STATEMENT about the cost to
HEAT YOUR HOME WITH GAS
MANY people have the idea that house heating with gas is expensive, and beyond their means.
Yet there are numerous Chicago homes in which a change to gas heating has brought actual dollars-and-cents economy.
Nevertheless, it is not our intention to sell you gas heating on the basis of cheapness.
Gas heating is not cheap . . . But are you interested primarily in cheapness?
You drive an automobile today; though admittedly other transportation would be cheaper.
You use a vacuum cleaner costing fifty times the price of an old-fashioned broom.
Long ago you cast aside the oil lamp.
Why continue being a slave to your furnace?
Eight months out of every twelve you require heat. No other method of heating brings you the comfort, convenience and dependability that go with gas.
With gas, even your fuel supply is automatic! Your home is more healthfully heated.
You are free from furnace care—from uncertain temperatures—from dust and dirt. No smoke, no soot, no greasy grime. Convert your fuel bin into a spare room.
Why don't you have us tell you what it would cost to heat your home with gas? There will be no obligation whatever.
Just mail the coupon—a heating engineer will call when convenient to you.
OUR GAS HOLDER IS YOUR FUEL TANK
Gas Heating for your home—an unmatched Christmas gift to all the family!
YOU CAN AFFORD TO HEAT WITH GAS

STOCK TORNADO STRIKES LONDON IN FULL BLAST

King's Illness, Price Slumps Hurt.

BY SIDNEY CAVE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
[Copyright: 1928: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, Dec. 7.—The Wall street collapse affected the London stock exchange full blast. The collapse did not surprise most of the operators conversant with the customary year's end practice of banks window dressing balances. But New York's dramatic break hit London hard at a moment when the market was seriously restricted, under the cloud of the king's illness, which in a fortnight has reduced speculative activity to its lowest minimum.

Sentiment was just recovering, with better news from Buckingham palace, when news of the Wall street break, which is believed here to be serious, arrived, bringing a general tumbling down of prices on Anglo-American stocks and shares.

Severity of Slump.

The severity of the reaction to the Wall street overnight slump was indicated in Friday's decline in the Anglo-American section, where Columbia Gramophones tumbled from 15½ to 14¾, Victors from 141 to 130, Mond Nickels from 7¾ to 7, International Nickel from 232 to 216, Canadian Pacific from 242 to 233. Woolworths, Radio Corporation, United Steels, and the wireless group also broke badly. The dealers were taking no risks, the attitude being that New York may only make a dumping ground for discarded shares at London's prices, and that there is the possibility of lower prices still, next week. Values were marked down substantially, irrespective of actual liquidation.

Investment securities of even the solid gilt-edged market, also felt the kick in the Wall street break, sharing a general depression, the market fearing high class investment securities may have to be sold to provide for losses in speculative shares. The present movements justify previous conclusions that many Anglo-American interest shares were forced up upon flimsy structures, an outstanding instance being Canadian Marconi's, which closed weak here at 30 shillings, against bids of £6 at one time last week on the London exchange.

Mining Section Hit.

The mining section was badly knocked also, following the recent unusual active American interest in Rhodesian copper section, prices flattening on Friday's American selling with dealers unwilling to take blocks of shares at even nominal prices.

Business in "dirt track" shilling shares which recently soared to great heights, especially shares in cheap gramophone companies, photography machines, film novelties and similar features of this years warfare now is definitely out of the picture, newcomers in the stock exchange having aptly learned the lesson of the folly of gambling beyond their means.

Investors are showing signs of "safety first" and new propositions, which have been awaiting favorable opportunities for flotation will have to wait much longer yet, judging from the present temper of the speculating public.

This year's new issues will be the largest of any year since 1920, the period of postwar booms, when the figure reached nearly £423,000,000. Last month's new issues, not counting the government loans and other British government borrowing, totalled £28,000,000 comparing with £40,000,000 in October, bringing the total for eleven months of this year to practically £340,000,000. Despite the large amount of capital raised for enterprises within the country, the general volume of trade has not benefited, while also there has been no improvement in unemployment.

Platinum Attracts Interest.

Interesting developments are foreshawoded, suggesting the formation of a selling organization in the new platinum industry similar to that of the diamond industry, with the object of regulating production and price. According to South African advices encouraging developments are taking place in the platinum properties there, while the diamond industries outlook is brighter.

The bead of the diamond syndicate, S. B. Joel is optimistic of this week's diamond trade's future, stating the the American demand is rapidly increasing with prices higher today than a year ago.

NOTES SPEEDING UP OF PACKAGE FREIGHT SERVICE

If competition is the life of trade, shippers in the Chicago district should be extremely busy according to the December issue of the "Chicago Shipper." This publication carries a report showing the package car movement to practically every jobbing point in the United States and as illustrating the competitive feature shows Buffalo, New York, and Kansas City, Mo., each have daily package car service via fifteen different routes, while to the twin cities of Minneapolis and St. Paul there are daily cars operating over twenty-four different routes.

The heaviest single movement reported is that of the Santa Fe railroad between Chicago and Kansas City, there being 742 cars in the thirty day test period, of which ninety-eight per cent were on time. Of the fifteen different routes to Buffalo, the only one hundred per cent on time record was made by the Wabash, while to the Twin Cities perfect records were made by the Chicago Great Western, Illinois Central, Chicago and North Western, and the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific railroads.

Chicago Prospers Despite Rail Equipment Slump

BY LEON STOLZ.

The depressed state of the railroad equipment business has been conspicuous in recent months. While most industries have been going ahead, showing increased deliveries and increased profits, few of the equipment companies have been holding their own and most of them have been slipping.

Reports on current trade conditions throughout the country indicate that Chicago is one of the brightest spots on the continent in spite of the fact that in this district are concentrated 27 railroad equipment plants employing normally 16,000 men and producing equipment with an annual value of more than $125,000,000. If Chicago has been able to prosper in the face of depression in so large an industry, the explanation lies in the great diversity of business enterprises in this district.

Use Less New Cars.

Of recent weeks there has been a revival of railroad buying but there is unquestionably a great deal of slack to be taken up. The Railway Age recently estimated that in the first nine months of this year, capital expenditures by the railroads were $70,000,000 less than in the same period last year and about $130,000,000 less than in the first three-quarters of 1926. The total capital expenditures for the year are expected to approximate $650,000,000 which will be $400,000,000 less than in 1923 and about $200,000,000 less than the average for the last four years. Capital expenditure, of course, includes many items besides equipment but at no point have the economics been greater than in the purchase of freight cars. The freight car surplus this fall was smaller than at any time within five years.

Class 1 railroads in the first ten months of this year installed only 50,600 freight cars, a decrease of 15,700 from last year. Freight cars on order on Nov. 1 numbered 6,000, while on Nov. 1 last year, orders had been booked for 11,100. In the first ten months of this year, the railroads placed 1,190 locomotives in service, which was 481 less than last year. The only bright spot in the picture is the number of locomotives on order, which increased from 80 on Nov. 1, 1927, to 121 this year.

Corner Is Turned.

Railroad spokesmen commonly attribute reduced purchases to lowered earnings. Possibly, then, the corner has been turned, for recent earning statements have been relatively favorable. The first 51 railroads to report showed October earnings 23.7 per cent higher than last year and the comparison with September, 1928, was even more favorable.

Another explanation of reduced purchases is increased efficiency of the railways in maintenance and operation of their equipment. Still another explanation is the rule of the interstate commerce commission requiring the roads to advertise for bids on equipment trust certificates. Ernest L. Nye of Freeman & Co., leans strongly to this viewpoint. He appears to believe that the situation will be improved if the roads are permitted to return to the old system of doing business with the bankers of their choice.

Argument Works Both Ways.

Chicago wants its railroad equipment business to improve and it also wants its banks to take an increasing part in railroad financing. Mr. Nye's argument appears to cut both ways so far as the interest of this region is concerned.

NEW LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY STARTS WITH $1,500,000 IN RESERVE

A group of Chicago bankers and business men have just completed the organization of the Calumet National Life Insurance company. While the home office of the company will be Chicago, located in the Insurance Exchange building at 175 W. Jackson boulevard, the territory in which the company will do business will be unlimited.

The company will carry full legal reserves in addition to its capital, surplus, and voluntary reserve of $1,500,000, one of the soundest financial standings any life insurance company ever enjoyed at the beginning of its existence. All standard forms of policies will insure men, women, and children.

The personnel of the officers and directors follows: Chairman of the board, Emil G. Seip, also chairman of the board of the Sheridan Trust and Savings bank, president of the Calumet National bank, and director of Foreman National bank; president, E. B. Carson, who is chairman of the board of the I-C Bank and Trust company, and president of Standard Industries corporation; secretary, Carl K. Schmidt, vice president of the Calumet Casualty Insurance company; general counsel, Weymouth Kirkland of Kirkland, Fleming, Green and Martin, attorneys.

Mr. Carson declared that "Chicago's growth and its ever increasing importance in national and international affairs demands that it shall have a large life insurance company, as strong in its assets and financial responsibilities as the old line companies of the east."

OVER COUNTER ISSUES WEAK IN SHORT SESSION

New York, Dec. 8. — [Special.]— Weakness continued to predominate in the over the counter market during today's abbreviated session. Most stocks in the bank and trust company group held steady in a rather quiet market. Insurance stocks were weak and inclined lower. Industrials and chain store issues displayed a weaker tone. Sugar stocks were weak, bonds quiet and communication issues inactive.

Declines in the industrial section were marked against Agfa Ansco preferred, Douglas Shoe, Draper corporation and Eisemann Magneto common. Gains were scored by Central Distributors common, also West Virginia Pulp and Paper common.

Among the chain store stocks, Neisner common was a weak spot, while an easier tone prevailed in Kobacker common and Metropolitan chain new preferred. Schiff company preferred and common were higher. In the bank group, Mutual Trust and Lefcourt Normandie were higher. Among the insurance shares, Globe and Rutgers, Providence-Washington and Aetna Casualty and Surety were lower.

U. S. Smelting to Issue 219,447 More Shares

New York, Dec. 8.—(AP)—The United States Smelting, Refining and Mining company directors have authorized issuance of 219,447 additional common shares to common stockholders of record Dec. 19, at $55 a share, in the ratio of five-eighths share for each share held. Proceeds will be used to retire $2,000,000 5½ per cent debentures and for other purposes.

Chicago Distributor Wanted

An Exceptional Opportunity to Further Develop an Already Established Business

A Providence manufacturer, doing a national business, is looking for a man or organization of real sales ability to act as distributor for Chicago and surrounding territory. The man or concern who gets this franchise must be a producer. The product has many users in Chicago. The one selected will therefore be given an established business which insures an immediate income.

Chicago Bank Stocks Gain, Then Decline

Enthusiasm was again rampant last week in the bank stock market, and sensational advances were scored, but they did not hold.

Chicago Trust moved up 75 points to high sales of 640, but it closed with stock offered at 630 and best bids at 625. The rights were also strong and improved from early sales at 94 to 112, closing at 103@106. In the early trading First National advanced 100 points to a new high at 1380, but it later forfeited this gain and closed at 1270@1280. Union Trust added another 40 points to its recent advance and broke into new high ground when it changed hands at 1045. Offerings at the close, however, of 995 failed to interest buyers.

Other Issues Rise and Fall.

State Bank of Chicago rose 25 points to sales at 955, but it eased off toward the close and offerings at 935 aroused little interest. National Bank of the Republic was 10 points lower at 258 bid, 262 asked, while the rights were quoted 18½@20. Central Trust Company of Illinois was 25 points better, being traded in at 675, but at the close stock was offered at 640 with no buyers.

Interest was rather restricted in the balance of the list. Illinois Merchants was heavy, receding from 1417 to 1380. Northern Trust was unchanged at 940. Four hundred and thirty was bid for Peoples Trust and Savings, ex rights, but there were no reported transactions. Straus National Bank and Trust was steady between 310 and 325. Bank of America slipped off 10 points to sales at 540. Continental National Bank and Trust was 15 points easier, being quoted 715@720.

Industrial Shares Seesaw.

In the miscellaneous group Aviation Securities improved to sales at 36, but later lost this advance and closed at 28½@29½. Birtman Electric rose 5 points to high sales at 29, at which price additional stock was offered, with best bids at 26. Chicago Daily News common continued strong; sales were recorded at 62. The preferred was unchanged at 102@102¾. Davis Industries B lost 4 points when it sold at 15. Greenebaum Sons Investment was fractionally easier at 51½@52½. Northwestern Yeast was traded in at 207@209.

AS TURKEY GOES DOWN, SO GOES LUMBER DEMAND

Washington, D. C., Dec. 8.—[Special.]—Slight decline in lumber demand as compared with the previous week was indicated by reports from 843 mills for the week ended Dec. 1 to the National Lumber Manufacturers association. This was partly due to holiday shutdowns over Thanksgiving.

Softwood demand, as measured by orders received, showed a decline of approximately 14 per cent, with six fewer mills reporting; the reported hardwood orders increased 12 per cent over the preceding week. Production and shipments of hardwood lumber continued about the same as the preceding week, but there was a slight decrease in softwood shipments and a marked decline in softwood production.

The West Coast Lumbermen's association reported for 238 identical mills production as 178,086,007 feet as compared with an average weekly operating capacity for three years of 243,913,595 feet. The Southern Pine association reported production for 147 mills as 65,294,261 feet, which was 15,605,107 feet under the three year average.

American Bus Co. Buys Out Purple Stages Co.

W. E. Travis, president of the American Motor Transportation company, which operates a system of bus lines throughout the country as the Yelloway routes, today announced the purchase of the Purple Stages Bus company, which will continue to be operated as a subsidiary of the Yelloway system.

Royal Baking Places New Common on $1 Basis

New York, Dec. 8.—New no par common stock of Royal Baking Powder company has been placed on an annual $1 basis through declaration of a dividend of 25 cents. The dividend is equal to $2 quarterly dividend paid on old common before the 8 for 1 splitup.

CHICAGO PRICES CRASH AGAIN IN HECTIC SESSION

Radio Group Heads the Descent.

The crashing of prices on the Chicago stock exchange could be heard again yesterday during the biggest two hour Saturday session in its history. Total sales were 215,000 shares.

The market opened irregular and for a short time it almost looked as if some recovery was about to take place. The toboggan sleds were brought out again, however, and the radio group once more led the descent. Sonatron Tube dropped steadily and at the close was off 22⅛ points to 100. This makes a loss of $43.50 a share in two days and a depreciation of $2,849,000 in the market value of the 66,000 shares of listed stock.

Grisby-Grunow, another radio issue, was 10 points lower at one time but regained 2 points, finishing the day with a net decline of 8 points. Utah Radio was down 7½. Ceco, Steinite, and Zenith Radios lost around 5 points each and Erla Radio was off 2¾.

Automotives Skid.

Most of the automotive issues also made radical declines, drops of from 1 to 8 points being felt. The Hershey issues were off 8 points each and Houdaille "A" and "B", Bendix, Auburn and Nachman Springfilled closed from 1 to 6 points lower.

Borg-Warner, one of the automotive group, was weak along with the rest throughout most of the session and a sudden reversal took place a few moments before the close, when the stock shot up for a net gain of 5 points to 127. The action was attributed to reports that the company will soon take over several other corporations, including Galesburg-Coulter Disc.

Neve Drug A advanced 1⅞ and the common was up a fraction on quiet trading. It was announced yesterday that the company, which was incorporated last spring to acquire a group of about 65 stores operating in New York City, will soon be taken over by the United Cigar Stores and Whelan Drug company interests. The larger stockholders of the company have already agreed to the terms of the sale, which will be announced shortly, when stockholders will be called to a special meeting for formal approval of the proposal.

Beatrice Creamery withstood the selling wave and closed unchanged on the announcement that directors will meet tomorrow to consider plans of expansion. The company's main office and plant is at 1526 South State street.

Starts with Partnership.

The company is the outgrowth of a partnership formed in 1891, known as Haskell & Bosworth, to deal in produce. The partners had a small place in Beatrice, Neb., and three years later they churned their firm butter. In 1897 a Nebraska corporation was formed, with a capital of $100,000. A reincorporation took place in 1905, with capital of $3,000,000, when it took over two other concerns operating in Kansas and Colorado. The present corporation was incorporated in Delaware in 1924, and last February the capital was increased to its present size of $20,000,000, of which 134,265 shares of $50 par common stock and 57,455 shares of $100 preferred stock are now outstanding.

The company now has 13 creamery plants, three ice plants, six cold storage warehouses, 14 ice cream factories, and four milk plants. Net earnings available for dividends at the end of February this year were $1,143,700, compared with $923,617 in the previous year.

$1,653,118,000 in Debits for Week Ending Dec. 5

Debits to individual deposit account reported to the Federal Reserve bank of Chicago for the week ended Dec. 5, 1928, by 249 banks in 37 leading clearing house cities in the seventh federal reserve district, aggregate $1,653,118,000, an increase of 2.1 per cent, compared with a week ago, $1,618,877,000. Compared with the corresponding week of last year, $1,512,094,000, an increase of 9.3 per cent was shown.

Holiday Trade Reported Good Over Country

New York, Dec. 8.—[Special.]—Preholiday trade of record breaking proportions was reported from most parts of the country this week. Both wholesale and retail establishments reported activity ahead of last year and were preparing for further expansion in the next two weeks, when the buying season will reach its peak.

Telegraphic advices received from the various federal reserve centers indicated that the Christmas trade now has the right of way, overshadowing for the time being, the developments in the nation's basic industries. The turn in the weather late in the week, which brought snow and lower temperatures in several parts of the country, spurred the purchases of apparel and augmented the good buying that already had been taking place in these lines.

Seasonal Slowing Down.

Although less attention was centered on industrial activity, the reports from most centers continued to be distinctly favorable. A seasonal slowing down has occurred in the principal automobile factories, but it is apparent that this year's production willl come fairly close to the record breaking optput of 1927, and all of the major companies have prepared production schedules for next year which eclipse any past performances. Iron and steel output remained at high levels and freight car loadings revealed a heavy movement of business traffic.

An expanding tendency in most lines of trade offered a contrast with the recessions that were taking place at this time last year in the lines not directly connected with Christmas buying. A feature of the present situation is the conservatism with which the trade expansion is being accompanied. Merchants are guarding against excessive accumulation of inventories and in many cases this has resulted in the necessity of "repeat" orders as the demand from consumers increased. The price range of most staples has been narrow all week, indicating that steadiness is the feature of most markets. Employment is on a large scale, this situation having readjusted itself since early in the year, when idleness constituted somewhat of a problem.

Expansion in Business.

The expansion in business has caused readjustments in the capital structures of banks in many parts of the country. In several instances split-ups of stocks have taken place, with a reduction in par value, and in others additional shares have been issued, enabling the banks to keep pace with the increasing business.

The wide break in the stock market that took place last week has not yet had time to be reflected in the nation's business and it is questionable what effect it will have.

CLEARINGS FOR WEEK BREAK ALL RECORDS

New York, Dec. 8.—[Special.]—Bank clearings for the first week in December are far in excess of those of any preceding week on record. The total at all leading cities in the United States is $15,456,918,000, an increase of 40.5 per cent over the amount reported to Dun's Review for the corresponding week of 1927. At New York City, this week's bank clearings of $11,074,000,000 are larger than those for last year by 53.7 per cent, while leading outside centers report a total of $4,382,918,000, which is 15.5 per cent more than that of a year ago.

Many cities report record figures, those at New York being one-sixth higher than the amount shown for the first week of April last, the previous high level.

BANKS TO BOOST COLLATERAL LOAN RATES TOMORROW

Another indication of the year-end stringency in money is the action of the Chicago principal banks in raising the rate on collateral loans to 7 per cent starting tomorrow. The present rate is 6 to 6½ per cent. A marking up of commercial paper rates is similarly expected.

The Inland Trust and Savings bank directors increased its annual dividend rate from 5 to 6 per cent by declaring a dividend of 1½ per cent for the last quarter of 1928. They also added $25,000 to surplus, bringing this figure to $125,000 with capital of $300,000. Charles E. Ummach is president.

Tool Co. Stockholders to Vote on Capital Exchange

New York, Dec. 8.—(AP)—Chicago Pneumatic Tool company stockholders on Dec. 31 will vote on a recapitalization plan involving exchange of present capital of 94,000 shares for new preferred and common stocks. It is proposed to issue 188,000 $50 par $3 convertible preferred shares and increase present common stock to 500,000 no par shares. Two new preferred and two new common shares will be exchanged for each common share now held. An additional 12,000 new common shares will be issued in making adjustments with employés who are buying stock on installment plan. It is not intended to issue the remaining 300,000 common shares at present.

New Construction in 37 State Tops That of 1927

New York, Dec. 8.—[Special.]—New construction started in the thirty-seven states east of the Rocky mountains in the first eleven months of this year, amounting to $6,195,529,800, shows an increase of 6 per cent over the corresponding period of last year, according to the F. W. Dodge corporation. The territory covered in the thirty-seven states represents about 91 per cent of the country's total construction.

Electrification Projects to Increase Mileage 25%

Total mileage of railroads in the United States operated by electric current will be increased 25 per cent, when the Reading, Pennsylvania, and Lackawanna complete their recently announced plans for electrification of parts of their systems which together will aggregate an expenditure of $137,000,000, according to a statistical analysis published by Adams & Peck.

Ford Stocks Offered to Public for First Time

New York, Dec. 8.—(AP)—New York houses are receiving subscriptions for £1 sterling ordinary shares of the Ford Motor company, Ltd., Ford's new English subsidiary, subject to allotment or orders at the market. The company is marketing 2,800,000 shares at par in London. This is the first time that Ford stock has been publicly offered.

EXPECT BONDS TO FLOAT UPON SELLING WAVE

Future Bright After Stock Declines.

(New York bond list, page 10.)

BY GEORGE HAMMOND.

Leaders in the investment banking field are looking to the immediate future for added improvement in the new bond market now that mounting stock prices appear to have been abated. Although listed bond prices were a bit soft in the final days of last week in sympathy with the trend of stocks, better demand for bonds and a consequent enhancement of bond prices are seen, particularly if the stock market remains stable or recedes further.

The indications for an increased investment demand this week are strong. Several big issues are scheduled for public offering this week. The Harris Trust and Savings bank will head a syndicate which will offer $6,000,000 of New England Gas and Electric association 5 per cent convertible debentures. The issue is due Dec. 1, 1948, and will be offered tomorrow at 97 and interest to yield about 5.25 per cent.

Public Improvement Issue.

An issue of $4,755,000 of San Antonio, Tex., public improvement bonds, due serially from Aug. 1, 1929 to 1968, inclusive, will be offered by a group headed by Halsey, Stuart & Co. and Taylor, Ewart & Co. at 99¼. The Power, Gas and Water Securities corporation will enter the market during the week with an issue of $5,000,000 5 per cent collateral trust bonds due Nov. 1, 1948. The issue will be brought out by a syndicate headed by G. L. Ohrstrom & Co.

A. G. Becker & Co. will offer tomorrow an issue of $1,500,000 state of South Dakota tax anticipation warrants, due June 15, 1929, and bearing interest of 5.40 per cent. The price will be 100.33, to yield about 4.75 per cent. F. N. Kneeland & Co. head a list who will offer $600,000 Commonwealth Public Service company one year 5 per cent notes at 99 and accrued interest to yield 6 per cent.

Acquires Utility Group.

Announcement of the completion of a new $11,750,000 holding corporation formed to acquire a group of public utility companies under the name of the Utilities Public Service company was made. The subsidiary companies serve 171 scattered communities in this country. An issue of $16,800,000 New York Rapid Transit corporation 6 per cent series B bonds is expected to reach the market through a group headed by the Chase Securities corporation.

New bond issues offered publicly last week totaled $121,595,300, compared with $37,224,000 in the preceding week and $122,734,000 in the corresponding period of last year. The offerings by groups of last and the previous weeks follow:

Bonds.	Last week.	Prev. week.
Foreign	$ 57,600,000	....
State and municipal	23,980,200	$3,724,000
Public utility	17,915,100	26,300,000
Railroad	14,275,000	....
Investment trusts	5,000,000	6,000,000
Industrial	2,825,000	1,200,000
Totals	$121,595,300	$37,224,000

New state and municipal financing to be sold this week shows a drop compared with the total for last week. The total scheduled comes to $25,020,860, compared with $43,469,000 last week. The city of Philadelphia will come into the market next week with a $10,450,000 issue, and the commissioners of Lincoln park will sell a $4,850,000 issue.

BOARD OF TRADE CLOSED; OUTSIDE WHEAT IS HIGHER

Corn Prices Tumble in K. C. Market.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

The Chicago board of trade was closed yesterday due to moving into its new quarters, but outside markets were open as usual. Trade there, however, was extremely light, and prices held within narrow limits. Winnipeg wheat showed a rather firm undertone, with millers and exporters on the buying side of the December, while the country bought May against sales of cash grain, and the finish was at net gains of ½@⅝c with December, $1.16⅜, and May, $1.22⅞. Minneapolis wheat acted heavy a good part of the day with a relatively slow demand for the cash grain from mills, and closed ¼c lower with December, $1.10. Durum at Duluth was off ⅛c with December, 93⅞c, while Kansas City was unchanged to ¼c lower with December, $1.08.

Kansas City was the only corn market open, with the undertone heavy and the finish at net losses of ⅝c, December being 77⅞c, and May, 83½c.

Expect Smaller Visible

Owing to liberal shipments from Duluth and Fort William just before the close of lake navigation the trade is inclined to look for a decrease in both the domestic and Canadian visible supply to be shown for the week. Winnipeg messages claimed that stocks at Canadiain ports would probably be reduced to around 20,000,000 bu by the end of the week. Part of the grain is expected to show up later at eastern ports where it will be held in order to fill foreign demands later in the season.

Liverpool wheat closed ⅛d higher, being slightly firmer than due, while spot wheat there was unchanged. Argentine markets were closed for the day. Winnipeg received 1,774 cars for the day against 1,014 cars last year, while arrivals at Minneapolis and Duluth aggregated 477 cars, against 921 cars a week ago, and 198 cars last year. Primary receipts for the day were 1,201,000 bu against 633,000 bu in 1927, and shipments, 1,-[illegible]0,000 bu, or 282,000 bu more than a year ago.

Better Demand for Corn.

There was some improvement in the United Kingdom and continental demand for cash corn at the seaboard, but no sales were reported. Plate corn on spot in Liverpool is quoted at equal to $1.21 per bu. Country offerings to arrive during the day were light, and shipping demand slow. A fair trade was on in cash corn here with prices steady to ½c lower as compared with Friday. The trade look for liberal offerings on Monday, when trading in futures will be resumed. No change was shown in the basis at Kansas City. Primary arrivals for the day aggregated 989,000 bu or the same as last year, while shipments were 589,000 bu against 493,000 bu in 1927.

Little interest was taken in the oats and rye markets, with prices at Minneapolis and Winnipeg dominated to a large extent by the action of wheat. Winnipeg oats closed ⅛c higher to ⅛c lower and Minneapolis was unchanged. Minneapolis rye was ⅛c higher on December and ¼c lower on May.

ISSUES ON CURB CAST OVERBOARD IN FRANTIC DAY

New York, Dec. 8.—(AP)—All Saturday trading records were broken on the New York curb market today when 1,464,000 shares changed hands in a sweeping reaction which carried scores of prices down 1@25 points. The previous Saturday record was 1,240,100, established on Nov. 17.

The reaction embraced all groups of stocks, but was particularly severe in some of the high priced specialties. Brokers again reported that many curb issues were thrown overboard to protect commitments on the "big board," where many margins had been wiped out in the drastic shakeout of the last three days.

Public utilities, in which there has been wide public participation, fell back rather sharply. Electric Bond and Share fell 7 points and rallied 1½. Aero Supply A and B broke 25 and 10 points, respectively. Montgomery Ward [new] broke 14 points and rallied 1⅞. Aluminum Company of America, Checker Cab Manufacturing, Federal Screw, Grigsby-Grunow, Newmont Mining, Paramount Cab, Niles-Bement-Pond, and Walgreen Company warrants all closed 5@10 points lower.

Sale of Ellis Company to National Cash Co. Ratified

Baltimore, Md., Dec. 8.—(AP)—Stockholders of the National Cash Register company today voted to authorize issuance of 90,000 class A common stock shares to be used in purchase of the Ellis Adding Typewriter company of Newark, N. J. Purchase of the Ellis company was approved by the directors of the National Cash Register company yesterday, and today's meeting ratified that action.

BUTTER AND EGGS

Storage eggs for December delivery declined sharply at the last, running into a loss of ½c by dipping to 31⅝c and closing at 31¾c. January refrigerators declined ¼c to 30½c. Rumors of heavier production of fresh eggs have found some substantiation in more abundant arrivals and a consequent decline in cash prices. Sales were 277 cars and receipts 3,848 cases.

December butter declined ¼c to 46¾c and closed at 46⅞c. January was off ⅛c at 46⅝c. Sales were 44 cars and arrivals 10,767 tubs.

Cotton Crop Increased; Future Prices Slump

Department of agriculture estimate showing a cotton crop of 14,373,000 bales, or 240,000 bales above the November figures, was well above the general expectation of the trade, and prices broke 81 to 89 points from the early high on the local exchange, but the decline brought in a good class of buying, and the finish was on a rally with the close at net losses here of 40 to 50 points. New Orleans declined 47 points on the active deliveries and New York was off 31 to 42 points.

Ginnings to Dec. 1 were placed at 12,562,000 bales, showing 1,239,000 bales ginned between Nov. 14 and Dec. 1, compared with 843,426 bales for the same period last year. There was 3.4 per cent of the acreage in cultivation on July 1 abandoned this year, against 4.2 per cent in 1927 and a 10 year average of 3.4 per cent.

Trade reports from the east indicate that there has been an extremely satisfactory business of late in cloths, and trade buying of futures was a factor in checking the decline in futures during the day. Range of prices follows:

METALS.

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—(AP)—A sharp downward movement in the price of tin featured the smaller non-ferrous metal markets during the last week. Trading in tin futures was inaugurated on the National Metal exchange on Monday when prices were comparatively firm, but during the week contract values dropped about 3½c to 4c a pound under general selling, prompted by a decline of £13 15s for futures and £14 10s for spots in the London market.

In the lead market prices were firm with an advance of $3 per ton owing to a good demand for prompt and Dec.-Jan. shipment. Trading was fairly active and prices were steady with only minor changes.

Antimony was quiet and slightly easier, influenced by reports of larger shipments from the far east for January arrival. Buying of copper tapered off following a fair business early in the week. Steel unchanged.

ST. LOUIS, Mo.—[Special.]—LEAD—Steady at 6.35c. ZINC—Slab steady at 6.35c.

SUGAR.

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—Increased pressure was in evidence, the decline in the stock market having some effect, and investment buying was less aggressive. Closing trades were at net losses of 2 to 4 points, with December leading. Refined, steady with all interests quoting 5.25c. Prices follow:

1000 Locations Wanted in Greater Chicago and Mid-Western States for Harrison's Orange Huts

MONROE HARRISON
President, Harrison's Orange Huts, Inc.

To earn the distinction of Chicago's "Orange King" in less than four years is the signal achievement of Monroe Harrison, President of Harrison's Orange Huts, Inc. The volume of his purchases of oranges for dispensing orange juice by the glass, or in bulk, exceeds any other orange-buying company or agency in the entire Middle West.

(Will negotiate with Real Estate Agents, Real Estate Brokers, Landlords, Property Owners and Concessionaires of Office Buildings and Industrial Plants) for Harrison's Orange and Sandwich Huts. These locations are for Huts similar in dimensions and style to those in operation in Chicago, Milwaukee, Kansas City, St. Louis, Gary and other cities. Elsewhere is shown a drawing of the Harrison's Orange Hut located in the Morrison Hotel, corner of Clark and Madison, Chicago, one of the world's busiest spots. We are also interested in purchasing Sandwich Shops and Restaurants whose locations will serve Harrison's Orange and Sandwich Huts' purposes. If you have a location you think meets these requirements, clip and mail coupon A.

POPULAR demand for Harrison's "Heart O' Orange"—America's most delicious, refreshing, health-giving drink—clearly foreshadowed the marvelous expansion, which is already the sensation of the business world. This demand—widespread, urgent and insistent—forces us to seek new outlets where the Harrison Orange Wheel and smaller Fountain unit can supply "Heart O' Orange." Less than five years ago the first Harrison's Orange Hut was opened at 4730 Sheridan Road, Chicago. Its success was instant and extraordinary. The public was quick to appreciate and as quick to welcome the sanitary superiority of the Harrison method of extracting orange juice, as well as a new deliciousness in the beverage itself. Other Huts followed, link after link in a golden chain, which are proving wholly inadequate to meet public demand for "Heart O' Orange." For the public was quick to recognize the superiority of "Heart O' Orange" over other so-called orange drinks. There's a reason. We daily crush only FRESH, SUN-RIPENED ORANGES. No romance of American business is comparable with the origin and amazing development of this network of Harrison's Orange Huts. And we are going to give every community in the Mid-West an opportunity to enjoy this incomparable drink. With sensational rapidity new Huts are lengthening the great chain—additional thousands—young and old—are introduced to brimming goblets of buoyant health pressed daily from tree-ripened, sun sweetened oranges.

From Grove to Goblet

Harrison's Orange Huts, Inc., have gained control of the entire output of several of California's choicest orange groves. This is necessitated by the rapid and gigantic development of the business. Daily carload lots are inadequate to meet the demand for Harrison's "Heart O' Orange." Full trains of oranges will shortly be leaving California consigned to the Harrison's Orange Huts, Inc. Already the largest users of fresh oranges in the Middle West, impending expansion will make the Company the largest in the world. A nation will soon be enjoying delicious "Heart O' Orange," with its refreshing, health-giving properties. An invasion then of foreign countries logically follows. Today, in great food research laboratories, oranges, so often designated "acid fruit," have been found to have a positive alkaline reaction in the blood. This reveals them a potent food-factor not only in the prevention of "acidosis," but its correction. Orange juice supplies a large part of vital minerals, tonic salts and vitamines needed for mental and physical alertness. Eminent physicians unreservedly recommend orange juice to all ages. It is nature's great health-giver.

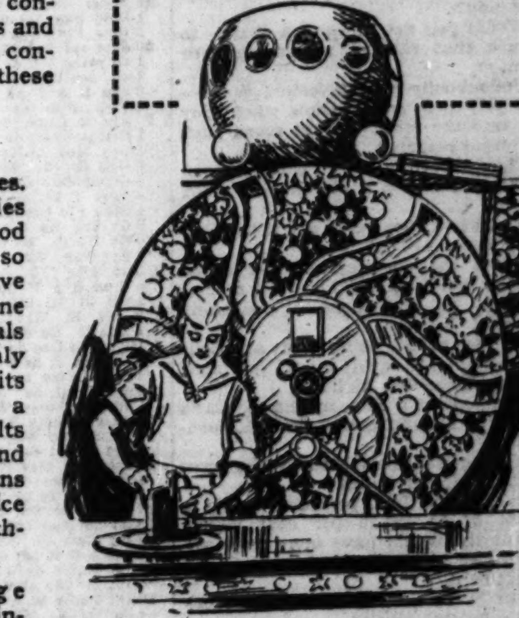
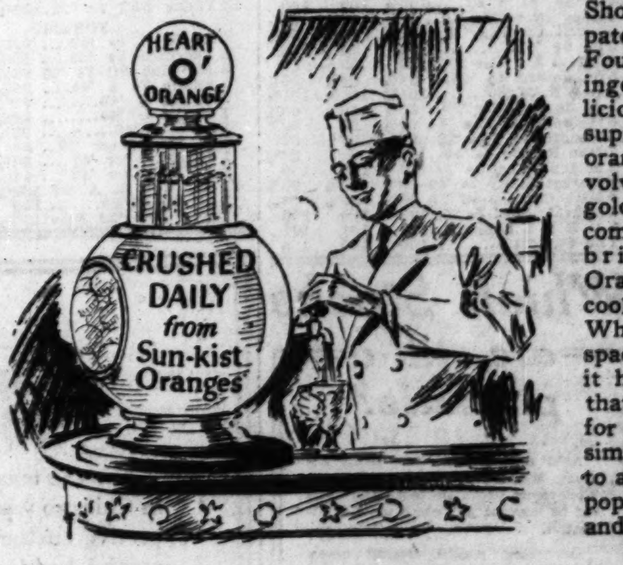
Direct From Orange Groves to You



The famous "Harrison Orange Wheel" shown here has attracted international interest not alone for its mechanical ingenuity but its outstanding attention-value. It is covered by United States and foreign patents. It is the backbone of the success of the Harrison's Orange Huts now in operation. It cannot be duplicated or imitated. It converts the gold of the orange into the gold of the mint. It laughs at high rentals for favorable locations, because this barrier to many businesses is a benefit to it. High rentals mean high profits. In no other business can small space be made to pay such amazing dividends per square foot. The colorful, animated, intriguing Harrison Wheel is a perpetual reminder and irresistible invitation to drink Harrison's "Heart O' Orange."



HEART O' ORANGE
CRUSHED DAILY from Sun-kist Oranges

Shown here is the newly invented and patented "Harrison's Heart O' Orange Fountain," another of Mr. Harrison's ingenious devices for serving his delicious orange drink. This compact, supremely sanitary and attractive orange-juice-dispenser encloses a revolving glass wheel filled with fresh golden, sun-ripened oranges. It has complete refrigeration equipment, the brimming goblets of "Heart O' Orange" saluting the eager lips in cool deliciousness. This miniature Wheel can be installed in miniature space. Practically all stores will find it highly profitable. It will be seen that we advertise for 800 locations for this particular device. This is simply a "starter." Its adaptability to almost negligible space will quickly popularize it in all communities, large and small.

NICKEL PLATE OPENS WAY FOR RAIL MERGER

Van Sweringens About to Drop Opposition.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 8.—[Special.]—The Van Sweringens are prepared to withdraw their objections to permitting the Pennsylvania railroad to use their Nickel Plate line from Toledo to Buffalo, it was understood here today. Thus the greatest single obstacle to a consolidation of the big four railroads of the east is in a fair way to disappear. The only remaining opposition comes from the New York Central. The railroad executives will get together again on the return from Europe of W. W. Atterbury, president of the Pennsylvania, to seek a final agreement.

New Line Called Absurd.

The Central always has held that if the Pennsylvania was to be admitted to the rich territory along Lake Erie, it should build its own line. The Van Sweringens believe, however, that it is absurd to permit the Pennsylvania to build a line along Lake Erie when it is virtually certain that the interstate commerce commission will refuse to approve such construction.

There have been two great points of issue among the rail executives in their consolidation conferences. One was the division of three extra lines into New York—the Lehigh Valley, the D. L. & W., and the Central of New Jersey. Agreement on this was made possible when L. F. Loree, who controlled the Lehigh was eliminated as a contender for a fifth eastern system last spring.

Pennsy Demands Met.

A much more troublesome issue was the demand of the Pennsylvania for access to the Lake Erie ports on even terms with the Central, which was, in effect, a request for trackage rights over the Nickel Plate from Cleveland to Buffalo. Hitherto the Central, the Baltimore and Ohio and the Van Sweringens have stood against the Pennsylvania on this question.

Would You Be Satisfied with 10 Per Cent on Your Investment?

As an investor how much interest would you expect to receive—5, 6, 7 per cent?

Would 10 per cent per annum satisfy you?

Would you not jump at a chance to secure that rate of return on your money?

Undoubtedly most investors would—and yet, these same people when they get into the stock market scorn such a meager return.

They expect 20, 30, 50 per cent—not in a year, but in a month or a week or less.

And when they have got it they expect more.

When the speculative fever seizes one he seems to lose all sense of proportion, all discretion—all reasoning power.

He sees profits being made all about him—sees his own stock, perhaps, going higher and higher.

Every point it rises means a dollar's profit to him on every share he controls.

He becomes fascinated by the prospect of further gains.

In a short time, perhaps, he has a profit of 10 or 20 per cent which, ordinarily, would have more than satisfied him as income for a year on his investment.

But is he willing to sell his stock and take that profit?

No. He wants more.

Caution is thrown to the winds.

Greed for gain has been awakened.

He is not reasoning—he is hoping.

He is not thinking—he is guessing.

He acts on tips, "hunches," rumors—often furnished by those no better informed than himself.

He laughs at the thought that there are people who are content with a steady assured 5 or 6 per cent on their money—that he himself once was.

He wants a fortune in a hurry. His profits are large, but he wants more and still more.

And then, perhaps, the reaction sets in.

This cannot go on indefinitely.

The top must be reached some time.

No one can possibly foretell when that time will come—and those who are the best informed in such matters will readily admit that they do not know.

It may be next year. It may be next week, or it may be tomorrow.

It may even occur before this article is published.

But it is certain that a reaction will take place.

It may take the form of a general slump or it may come with a crash that will send the entire market toppling.

Is it the part of common sense to wait until this occurs?

Is it not far better to take your profits when you have made a good return on your money than to risk waiting too long and having them all wiped out?

If you sell and find later that you could have made more you have lost nothing.

You have your profits safely in the bank where no market reaction can touch them.

It is far better to be sorry that you did sell at a profit than that you didn't.

After all, 6 per cent is a good return on an investment for a year.

A Christmas Stock Melon

Are you one of the thousands of fortunates who will profit this year by extra dividends? Did you prosper during the past year with such stocks as Chrysler, General Motors, Radio, Kennecott, National Dairy—all recommended by the Digest? Digest recommends specifically what stocks to buy and sell, and when. All our recommendations are based on our famous Weighted Average of authoritative opinions—each weighted scientifically according to the past accuracies of the various economists. Thus the Digest opinion is the net opinion. Use the coupon below or write for a free copy of this week's Digest containing valuable information on the probable trend of security prices.

AGAIN this company witnesses the passing of a year of complete safety and satisfaction for its thousands of investors. Forty-eight successful years—built on sincere service and public confidence.

Investors large and small in every state in the Union have purchased Cochran & McCluer first mortgage real estate bonds—millions of dollars worth—unsolicited by salesmen (because we employ none).

We deeply appreciate this confidence and this recognition of the Cochran & McCluer direct plan of serving investors—a plan which enables us to offer the purchaser the highest rate of interest consistent with safety.

As a token of our appreciation to our present investors on this, our 48th, anniversary—and as a symbol of welcome to new investors, we have chosen this very fine Corona fountain pen desk set for a gift to each purchaser of our bonds, either for cash or on payment plan, while this offer is in effect. Denominations $100, $500, $1,000. As little as $10 starts you on our Retire in 15 Years Plan and entitles you to this unusual gift offer.

This new-type, non-breakable, gold-pointed Corona fountain pen with beautiful base of Italian Marble will fittingly grace the finest desk. Secure it for yourself—or for a gift to another. We can make this offer for a limited time only. Phone, call or send coupon for full particulars.

Retire in 15 years on your present living budget

Follow the simple, definite plan in the book, "How to Retire in 15 Years," and your financial independence is won. Plan works just as surely whether you are earning $1,000 or $100,000 a year. Phone, call or send coupon for free copy.

BOMBING PLANE CONTRACTS AID AIRCRAFT SHARES

Great Lakes Co. Active on Chicago Exchange.

Great Lakes Aircraft "A" held well in Chicago stock trading yesterday, managing to keep the net decline to a small fraction despite the general drop. The company has just announced the receipt of several big contracts including one for 300 bombing planes for the United States army.

In this contract hangs an interesting story of the development of the Great Lakes Aircraft company and its predecessor company, the Glenn L. Martin company.

Pioneer in the Air.

Glenn L. Martin was one of the pioneers of aviation and developed in Cleveland the airplane heavy enough to carry large loads of bombs which were used by the United States army and other allied armies in the big war. The company's factory, hangar and airport are located on more than seventy acres in Cleveland owned in fee together with the buildings and improvements. The organization includes an engineering department, physical and chemical laboratories and uses the straight line production method followed in general by automobile manufacturers. More than 1,100 persons are employed.

Shares Outstanding.

The corporation has added improvements to the Martin plane and is manufacturing and selling the new models as commercial carriers as well as keeping the government for a lucrative customer. William Robert Wilson, former president of the Murray Corporation of America, is the chairman of the board of the company.

Of authorized issues of 500,000 shares each of A and B stocks there are outstanding 200,000 shares of the class A stock and 300,000 shares of the B stock which is controlled by the Henney Motor company.

Rock Island Buys 30 Gas-Electric Motor Cars

The Rock Island lines are making plans for carrying forward their program for motorization of their branch lines throughout the middle west. A total of about 30 gas electric motor cars for passenger service are now in the course of delivery, or have been put into service during the last two years, and inquiries are now going out for six more motor cars, 72 feet, all steel, four of which will be 400 horsepower. In addition, plans are under consideration for 8 more gas-electric motor cars in the 1929 program. All of the above are expected to be added during the next year.

Ford Company Sued for $250,000 Damages

Cleveland, O., Dec. 8.—(AP)—A $250,000 damage suit was filed in federal court here today against the Ford Motor company of Detroit by the Vance Motor company of Cleveland, on the ground that the Ford company refused to recognize the Vance company as a dealer after orders for about 600 new Fords had been placed.

Bond Redemptions Fall Short of 1927 Mark

New York, Dec. 8.—[Special.]—Bond redemptions so far this month are still ahead of the total for the corresponding period in November, but fall far short of the aggregate for 1927. Several large foreign loans were called this week, bringing the total called to $61,845,350, which compares with $55,124,000 a month ago and $126,584,669 a year ago.

Allied Chemical Budget Reported at $35,000,000

New York, Dec. 8.—(AP)—Allied Chemical and Dye corporation, which controls the Atmospheric Nitrogen corporation, is reported in Wall street to have made a budget appropriation of $35,000,000 for construction next summer of a second unit of Atmospheric Nitrogen's plant at Hopewell, Va.

N. Y. Clearing House Banks Shows Increase in Deposits

New York, Dec. 8.—(AP)—The weekly statement of the New York Clearing House association shows: Net demand deposits [average], $75,117,000 increase; time deposits [average], $8,816,000 decrease.

CHICAGO CURB EXCHANGE

Stocks crashed on the Chicago curb Walgreen led the decline with a loss of 8 points while other issues dropped more than 1 to 4. Harrison's Orange Huts proved the one bright spot in an otherwise catastrophic day. After sagging to a low at 26½ it came back strong and closed firm at 30, up a point for the day. Three new stocks have been admitted to trading in the Chicago curb. They are: Hood Rubber company, Curtiss Flying Service and Hall Lamp company, all no par common stocks.

Holland Forced Vaporaire Heating . . distributes warmth equally in every room

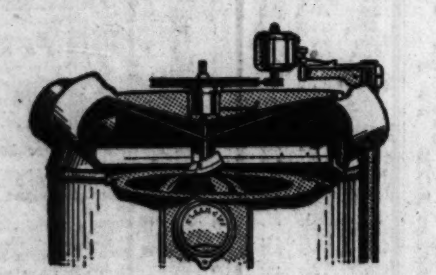
Makes Your Furnace a Modern Forced-Air System



Modernize your present furnace. Have it equipped with the Holland Aire-U-Well Circulator Fan at moderate cost. This unit fits into the top of any furnace—new or old—making it an efficient forced-air heating and cooling system. Fuel saving alone pays for the equipment that keeps every part of the home delightfully warm all the time. Its cooling effect in summer is equal to several electric fans in every room. Don't go through another winter paying two prices for comfort. Have a Holland man call. Get all the facts.

MOIST warmth is distributed evenly—upstairs, downstairs, all around your home—by the modern Holland Vaporaire system of forced-air heating. A quiet, motor-driven, airplane-type propeller mounted in the top of a Vaporaire plant forces clean, healthful moist warm air the full length of every pipe. The three essentials of perfect heating—correct temperature, proper humidity and constant circulation—assure comfort everywhere all the time. No room is ever hard to heat, regardless of location. It is like flooding your home with summertime. The air is balmy and moving—never dry or stagnant. Temperature need not vary. Holland's patented humidifier constantly moistens the air by vaporizing 5 to 25 gallons of water daily. Forced circulation eliminates wasteful forced firing—making a moderate fire sufficient even in severe weather—saving tons of coal and paying for the system. Heating response is immediate. The circulator fan drives warmth instantly to every room whenever needed. This is the principle of large heating, cooling and ventilating systems used in fine theatres, hospitals, schools and similar buildings. It is the practical modern and permanent solution of the home-heating problem. There is a lifetime Holland of the right size and price for every home. Investigate Holland forced Vaporaire heating. See how it provides greater comfort, convenience, economy and satisfaction than any other system. Have a Holland man call.

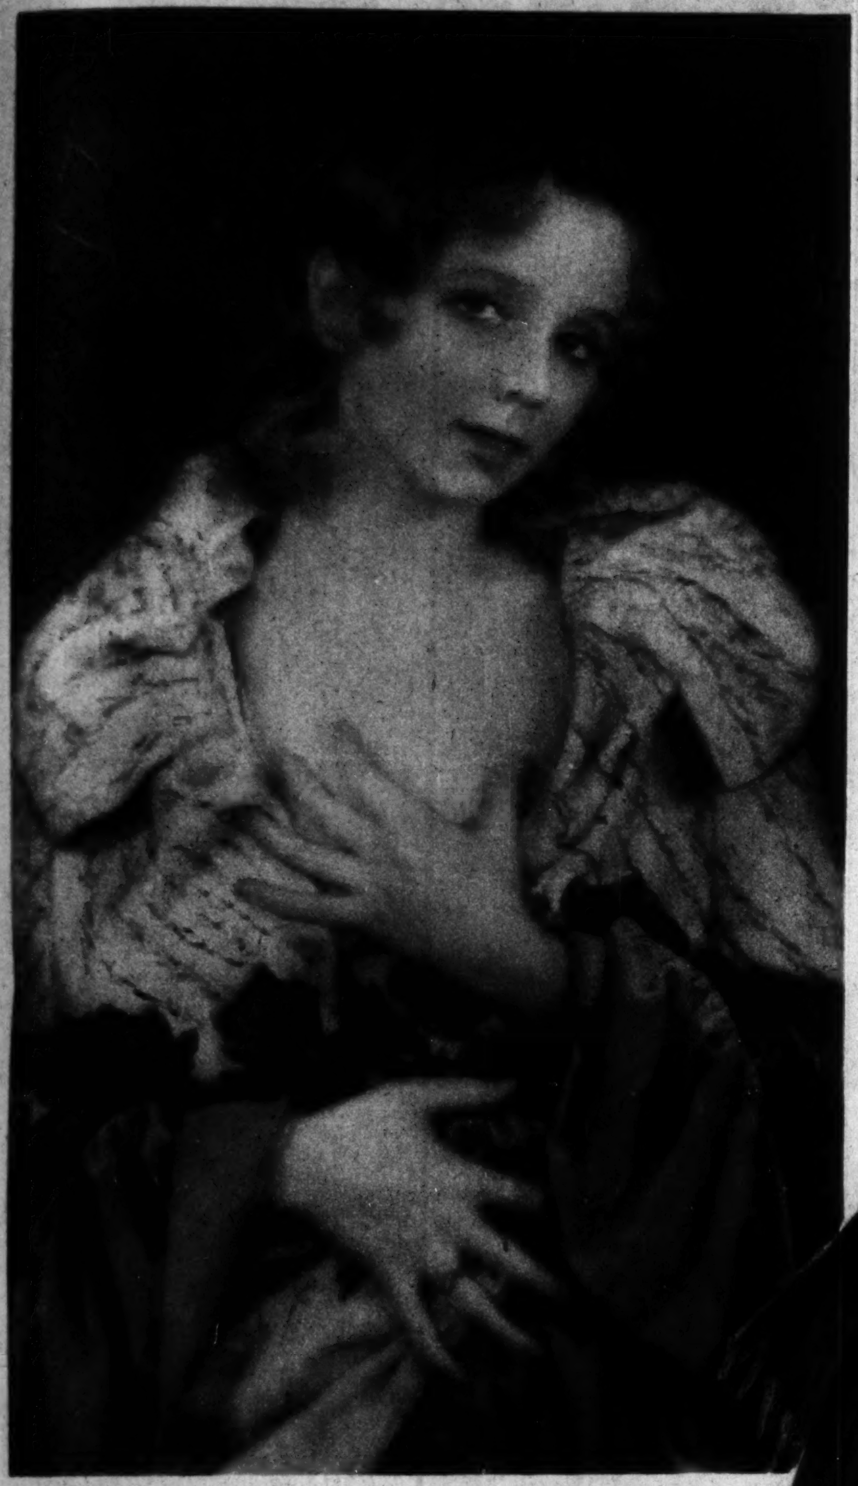
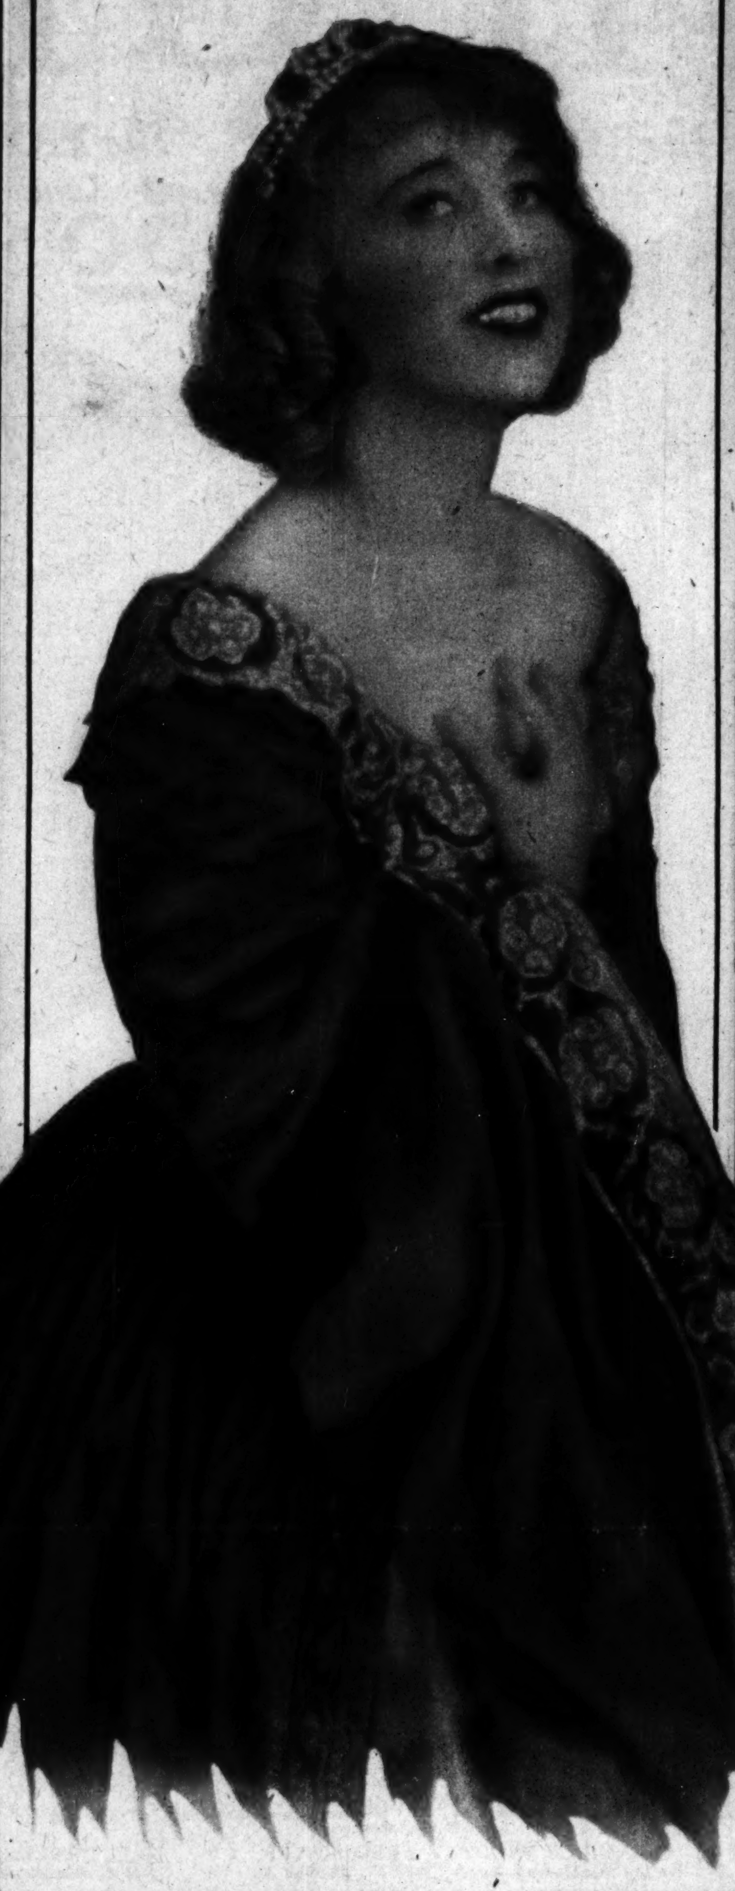
THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

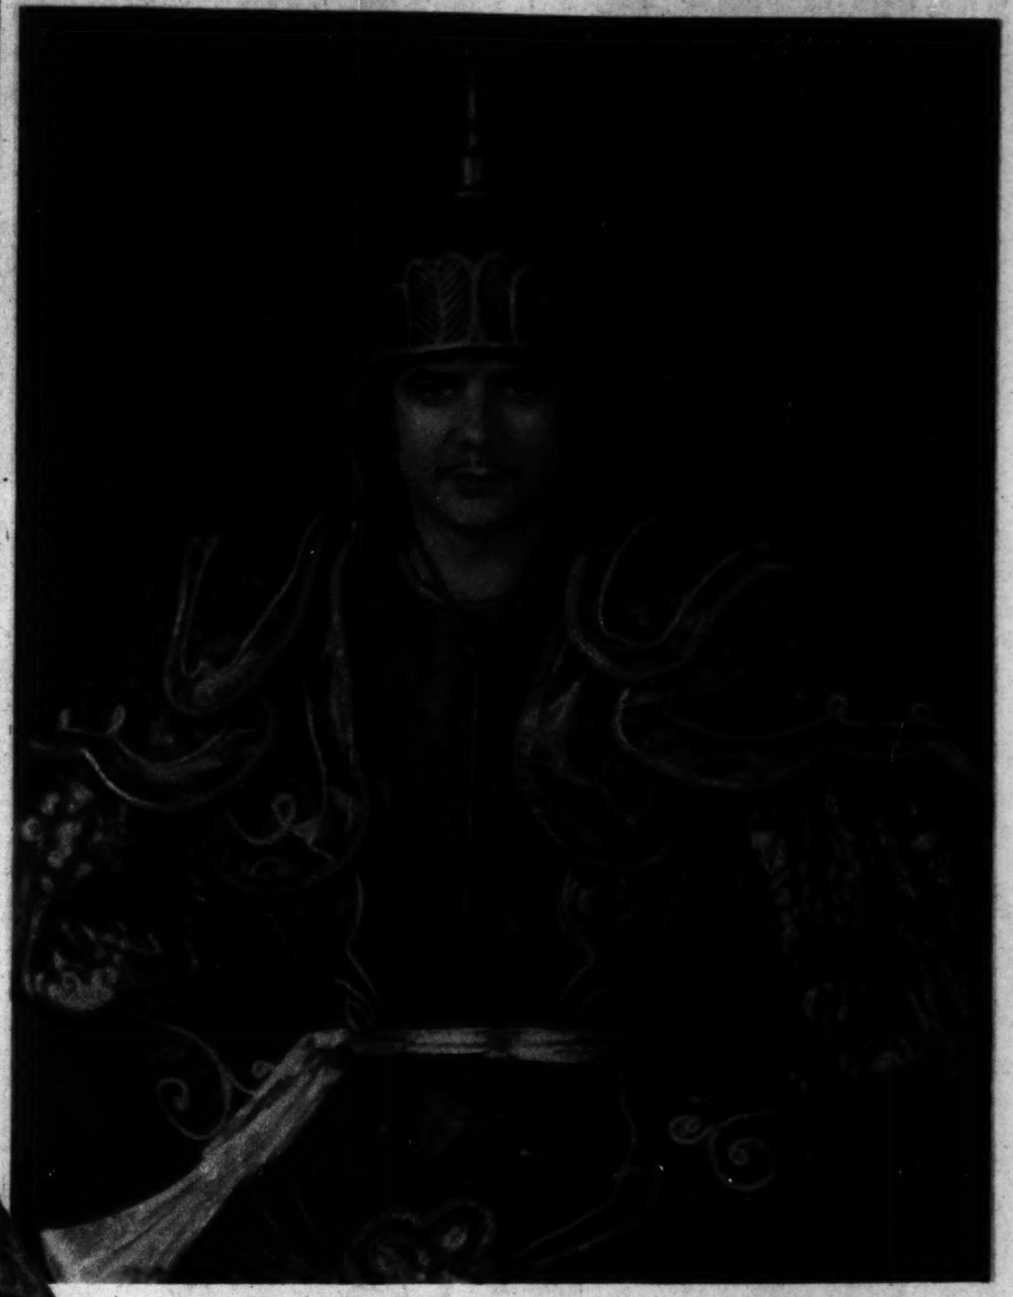
December 9, 1928



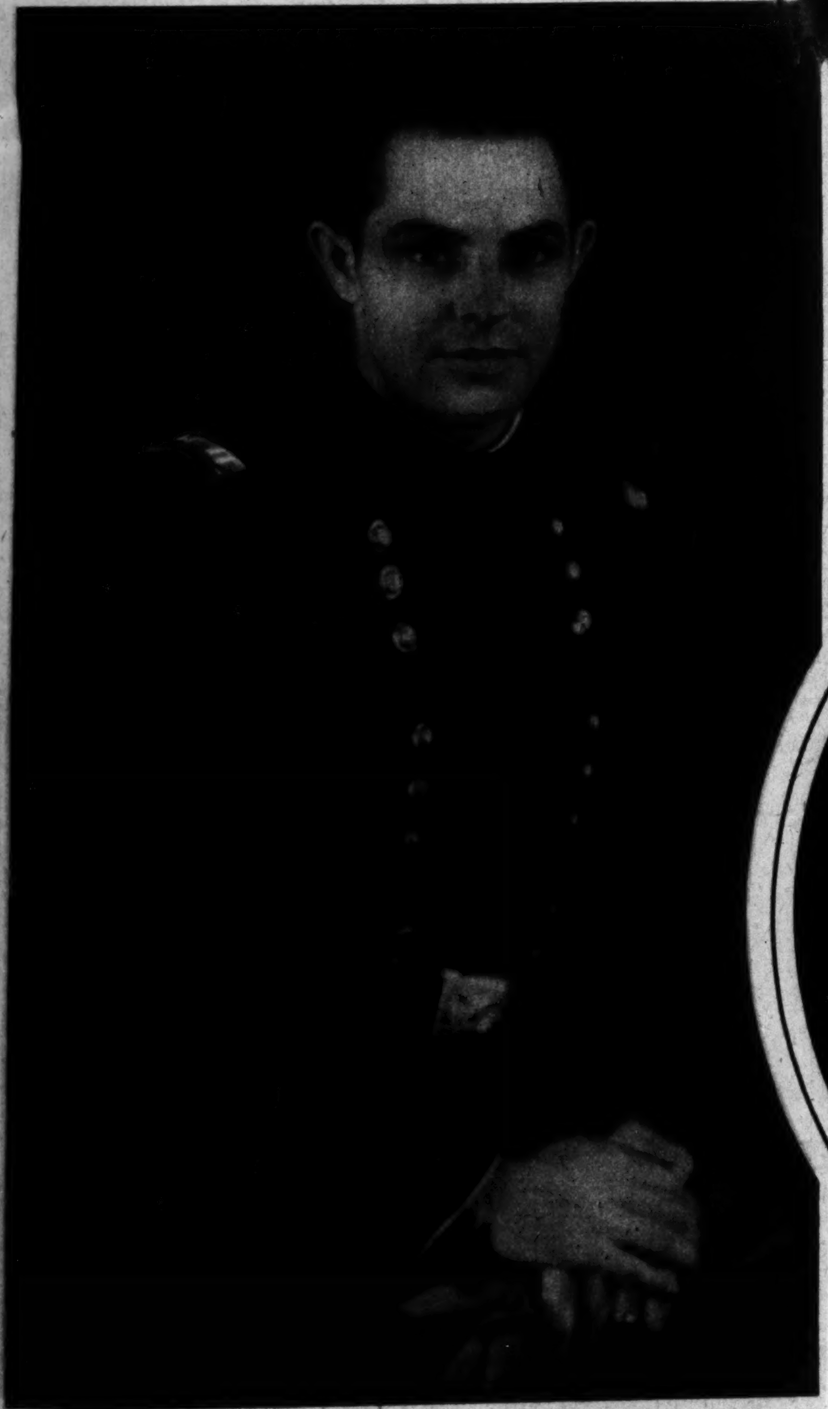
MISS DOREE LESLIE was put into the title-part of "Manhattan Mary" when the activities of that big show were resumed for the current season; and report on her is that she made good in the course of Ed Wynn's long Chicago visit.



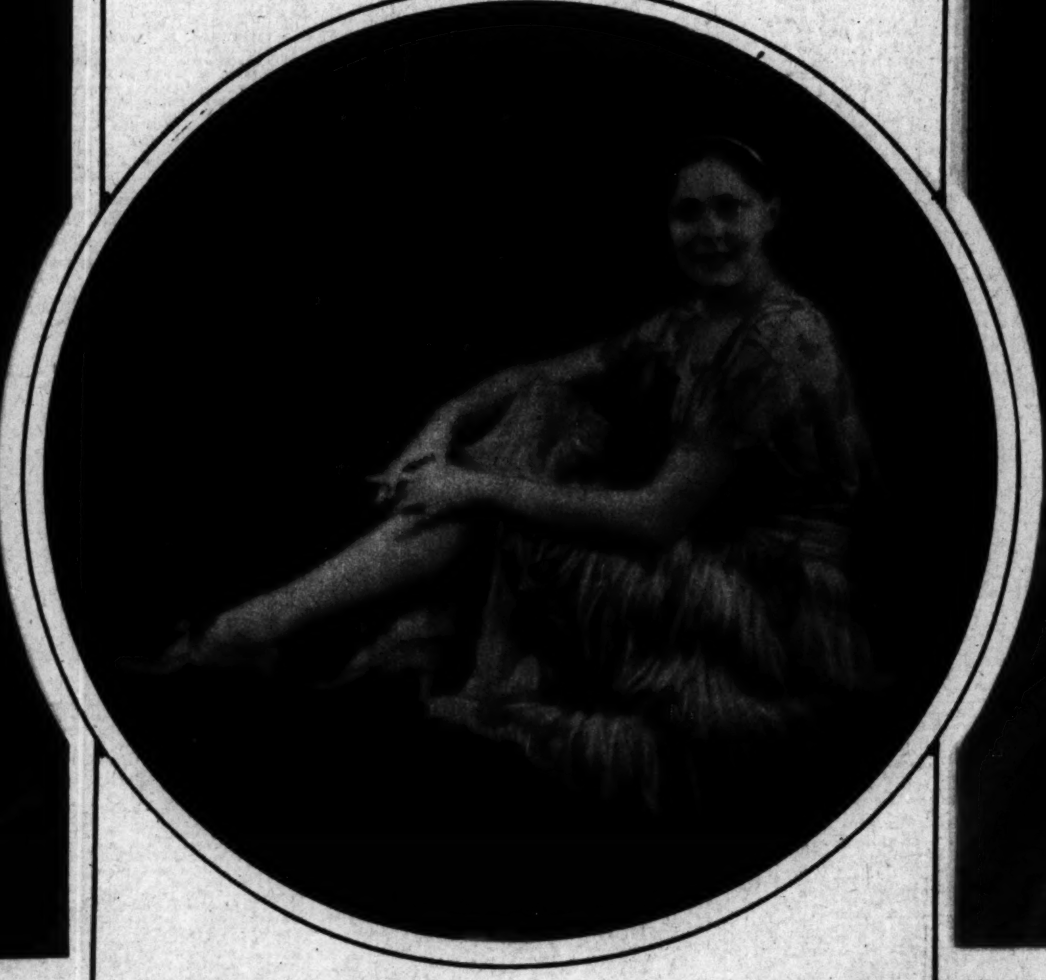
MISS VIOLA CARLSON, a mite of a soubrette, has been in Chicago in "The Nightingale," "The Love-Call," and "The Red Robe." She has admirers here; and their hope is that she will come one day in an operetta of greater durability.



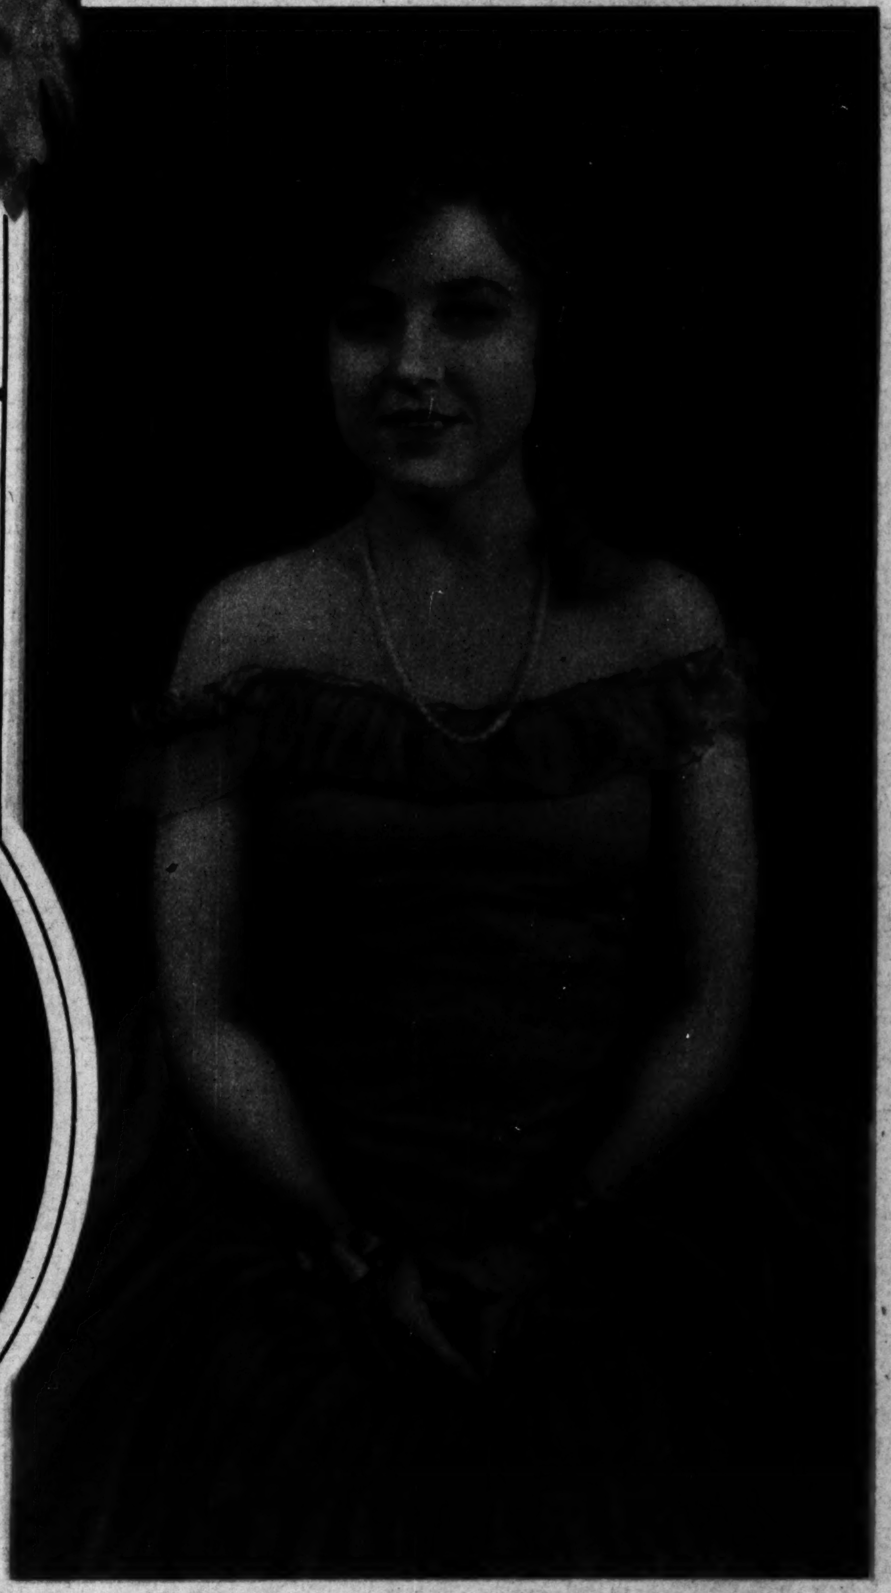
EARL LARRIMORE is a young actor who is quickly come to important parts through his being employed by the Theater Guild of New-York, wherewith he succeeded early this season Alfred Lunt in the title-part of "Marco Millions," and Mosca in "Volpone."



NATHANIEL WAGNER is the tenor who "sings opposite" Miss Olga Cook in "My Maryland," as the hero, Captain Trumbull, invented by Clyde Fitch when he dramatized Whittier's poem of "Barbara Frietchie." To Mr. Wagner falls "Your Land and My Land."



MISS EVELYN LAW is among the young dancing women of the contemporary theater entitled to say that they are graduates of the Ziegfeld Follies, an institution graced by the stepping and kicking of Miss Law in at least one issue.



MISS OLGA COOK, in Chicago since September 1 as Barbara Frietchie in the operetta of "My Maryland," and known well because of her long service here as Kathi in "The Student Prince." Her singing always evokes Mr. Donaghey's praise.

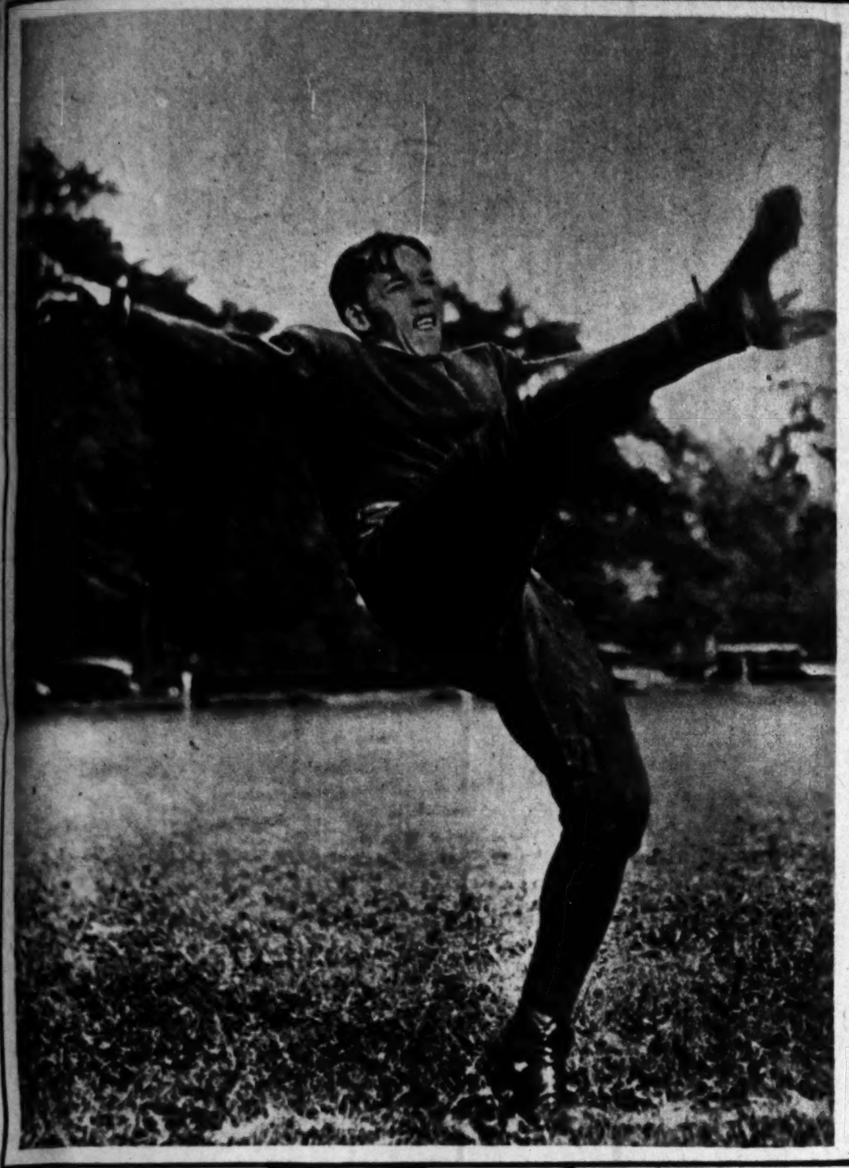
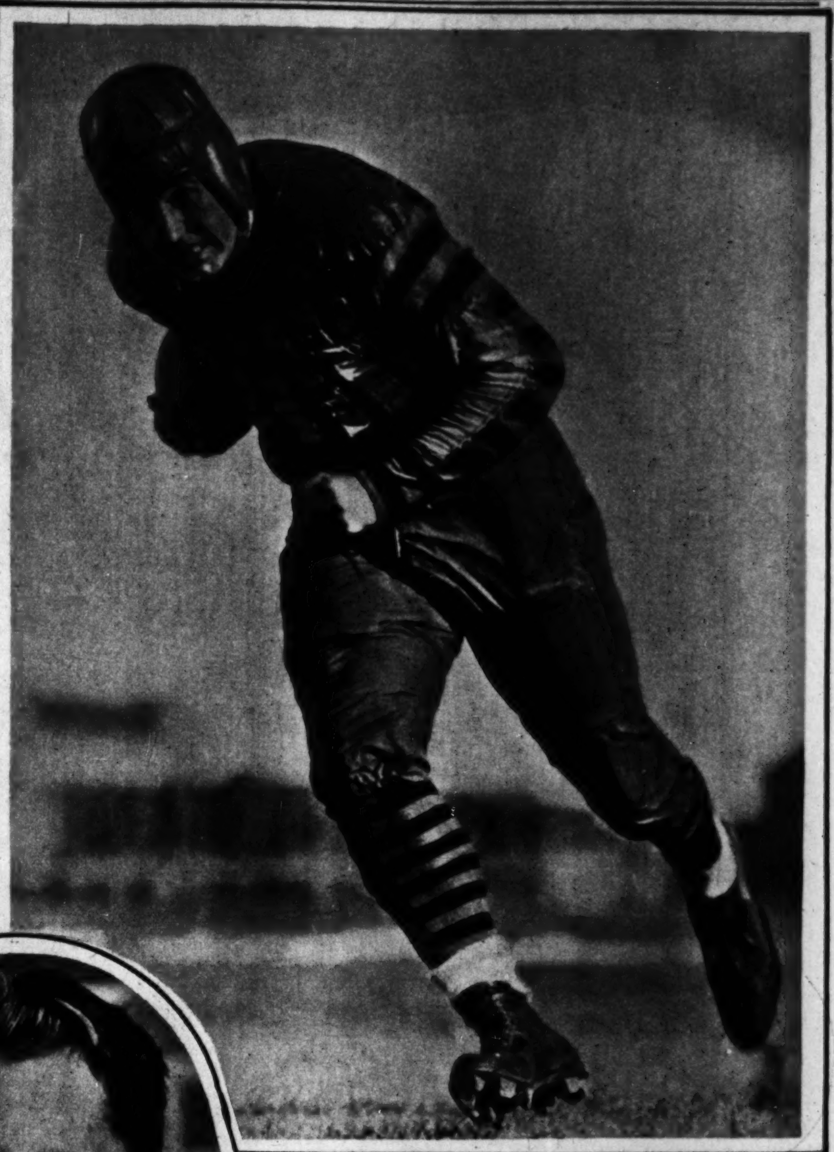
WALTER ECKERSALL'S ALL-WESTERN!

L. E.—Ken Haycraft, Minnesota.
L. T.—Fred Miller, Notre Dame.
L. G.—Otto Pommerening, Michigan.
C.—Tim Moynihan, Notre Dame.
R. G.—George Gibson, Minnesota.
R. T.—A. J. Nowack, Illinois.
R. E.—W. Fesler, Ohio State.
Q. B.—Claire Sloan, Nebraska.
L. H.—Ralph Welch, Purdue.
R. H.—Charles Bennett, Indiana.
F. B.—Walter Holmer, Northwestern (captain).



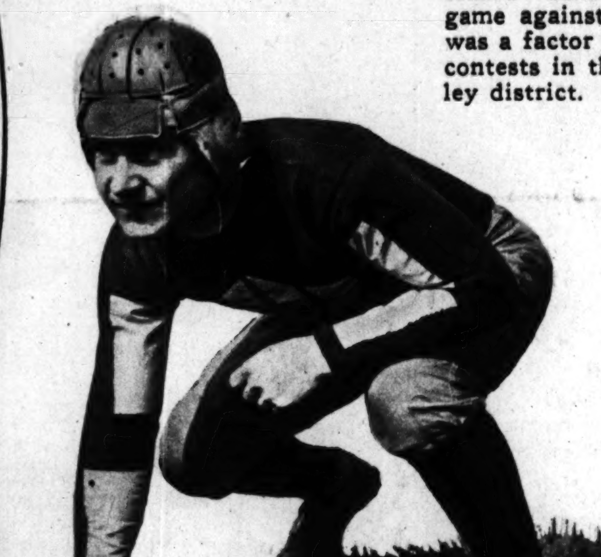
WALTER HOLMER, a splendid leader, is placed at full back and made captain of this honorary eleven. The Purple warrior performed consistently all season and was one of the country's leading triple-threat players. (U. & U. photo.)

CLAIRE SLOAN of Nebraska is chosen for the quarter back position. Sloan, who scaled 180 pounds, scored his team's three points in the game against the Army, and was a factor in all Nebraska's contests in the Missouri Valley district. (U. & U. photo.)



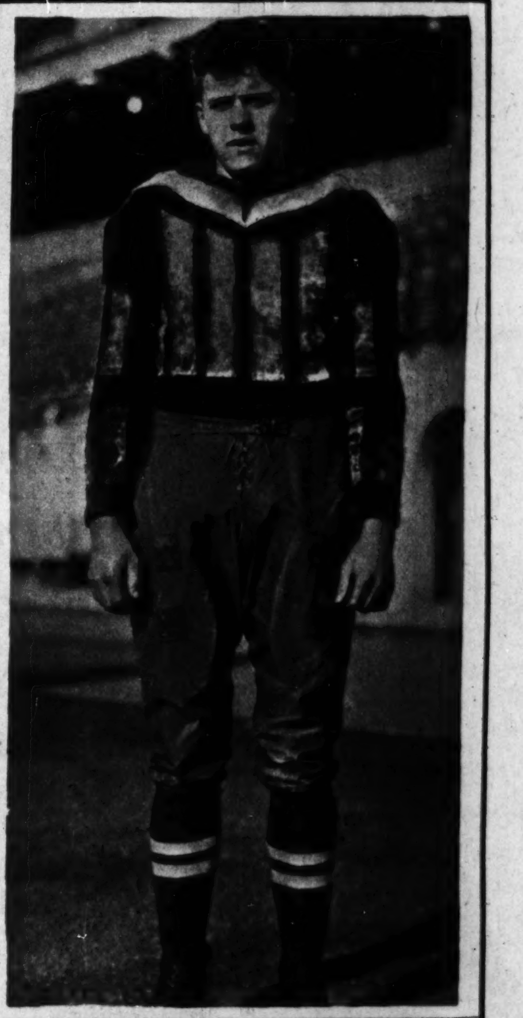
RALPH WELCH of Purdue, who broke into the spotlight a year ago by running wild in the Harvard game, is selected for left half back. Like Holmer of Northwestern, the Purdue back was a splendid runner, passer and kicker. He ran with power and used the pivot to break tackles. (Tribune photo.)

FRED MILLER, who captained the Notre Dame eleven, is honored with the left tackle position. Miller is a natural leader who has inspired his team at all times. He has been one of the reliables on Coach Knute Rockne's teams for the last three years. (P. & A. photo.)



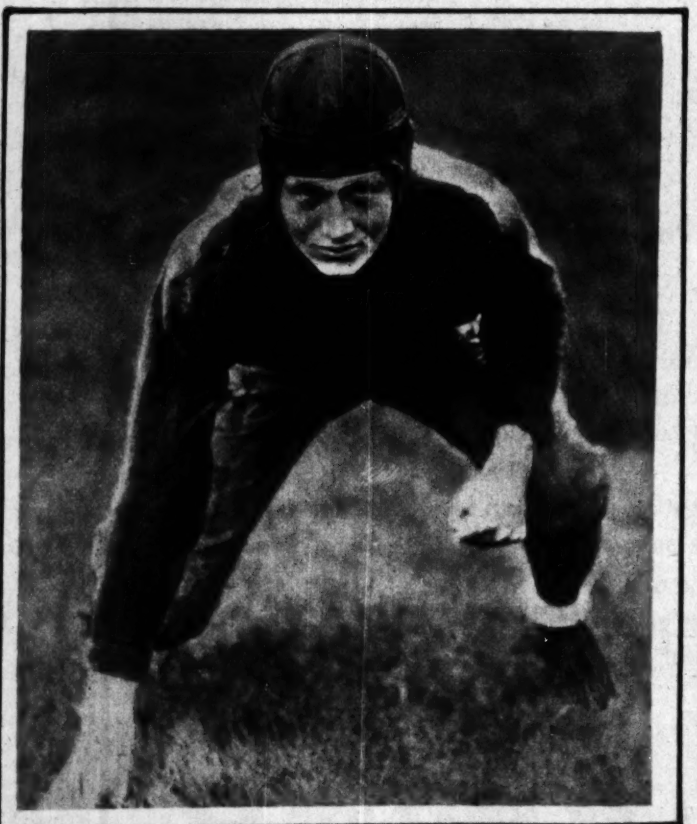
A. J. NOWACK, leader of the Western conference championship Illinois team, is placed at right tackle. Butch, as Nowack was known to his team mates, was an ideal forward; on offense he opened holes, on defense he plugged them. (U. & U. photo.)

GEORGE GIBSON of Minnesota, who led his team to a brilliant 6 to 0 victory over Wisconsin in the closing game of his career, is named for right guard. Gibson played consistently all season; he was a big factor in making Minnesota's plays successful, and was a strong defensive player. (Tribune photo.)



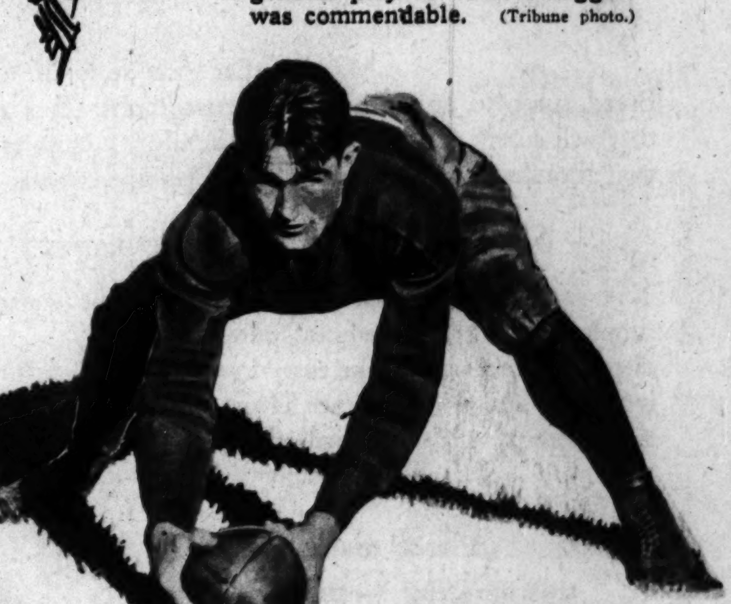
RIGHT END position is awarded to W. Fesler of Ohio State. The Scarlet and Gray flank player performed brilliantly in the intersectional game with Princeton and his general play in other struggles was commendable. (Tribune photo.)

OTTO POMMERENING of Michigan is selected for left guard. Otto has played tackle all season, but performed in a guard position a year ago. He was the outstanding forward on the Wolverine line, a player respected by every team Michigan faced. (P. & A. photo.)



KEN HAYCRAFT of Minnesota is placed at left end. The Gopher played his last game when his team defeated Wisconsin, 6 to 0. He was an excellent forward pass receiver and his defensive play was as strong as that of any other end in the middle west. (U. & U. photo.)

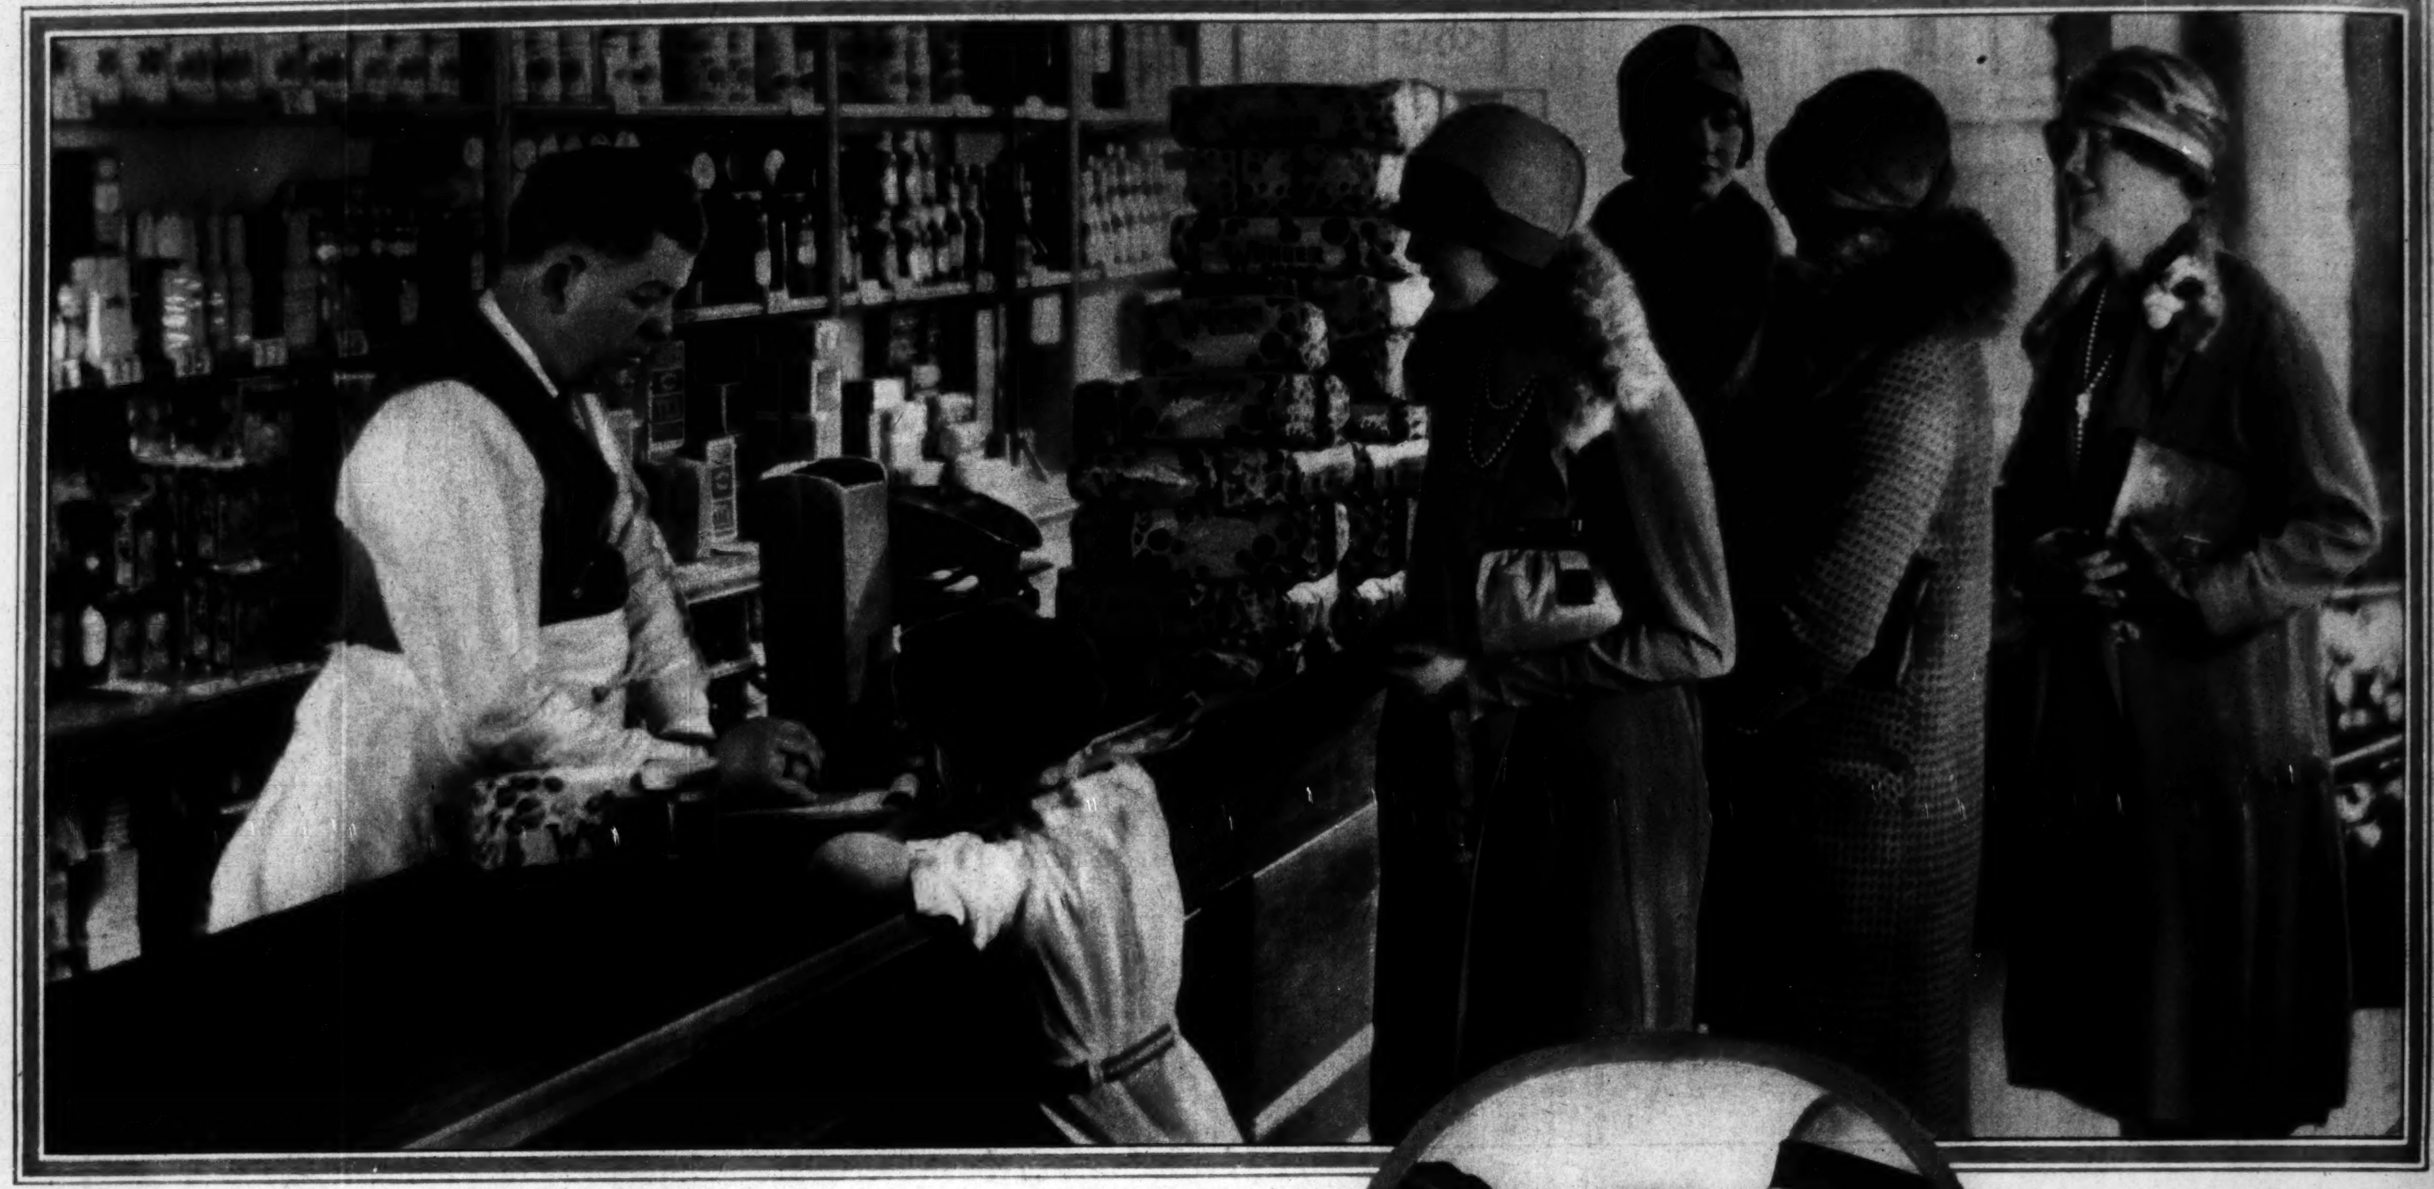
CHARLES BENNETT, a mainspring on Indiana elevens for the last three years, is honored with the right half back position. A fast, shifty runner, "Chuck" drove off his tackles for long gains in every game he played. He was, as well, a strong defensive player. (Tribune photo.)



AT CENTER is stationed Tim Moynihan of Notre Dame. Tim was aggressive in every game. On defense, playing in a roving position, he anticipated opponents' attacks and directed his team mates to the danger points speedily; and he passed the ball with accuracy. (P. & A photo.)

NEXT SUNDAY---WALTER ECKERSALL'S ALL-AMERICAN ELEVEN!

We've Amazed Women with this Slo-baked bread



Thousands of housewives, many of them actually neighbors of yours, are changing to this bread every single day! The first taste will show you why

A REMARKABLE bread! A bread that quickly wins every housewife who tastes it.

A bread that keeps its original freshness for days . . . that slices quickly and easily . . . that makes marvelously dainty sandwiches.

A bread that was unknown only two years ago . . . and yet today is the favorite of Chicago's most particular women.

Madam, that's the story of Wonder Bread, summed up in three short paragraphs. It is a bread that will surely win you and your family . . . just as it has won thousands and thousands of others everywhere.

Slo-Baking . . . that's the secret!

The secret of this marvelous bread is really wonderfully simple. We use only the finest, purest ingredients . . . and we slo-bake every loaf. That is how we seal in the delicate flavor . . . prolong the original freshness so much longer.

You'll taste the difference the first time you try it. A new freshness. A delicate new texture. A delicious new bread flavor.

Our flour is specially selected . . . scientifically blended. Only the nutritious heart of the wheat berry is chosen. It is a far better flour than most women buy in the stores. And our carefully tested recipe calls for double the usual quantity of milk.

Splendid for Children

You mothers can readily see why this bread is so good for children! It is one of the best energy-building foods you can possibly give them. It is packed with calories . . . and plenty of muscle- and bone-building elements, too. It builds strong, sturdy muscle. Hardens growing teeth and bones.

If you baked Wonder Bread yourself . . . right in your own kitchen . . . you couldn't take more pains than we do.

So if you pride yourself on serving good wholesome food at your table, please try this delicious bread at once . . . simply as a test if you wish! Order your supply tomorrow morning. Serve it at every meal.

Notice how firm and tender it is . . . how smoothly and easily it slices . . . how long it keeps its original delicate freshness. But, most important of all, notice that wonderfully delicious flavor which has won so many friends.

Now just this one word of warning. Don't ever expect to find Wonder Bread flavor in ordinary breads. Only from this one bread alone can you expect the remarkable advantages that we have described for you in this advertisement.

So always let your grocer distinctly understand that none but the genuine Wonder Bread will satisfy. Now at your grocer's . . . fresh twice a day. Two convenient sizes.

"WONDER BREAD, PLEASE," say thousands of women every day. It has been surprising even to us . . . they've taken to it so quickly.

HERE'S A SUGGESTION. Buy a loaf of your regular bread and a loaf of Wonder Bread . . . then just take them home and see which is best!

Please make this amazing 3-minute test

Take a slice of Wonder Bread and a slice of any ordinary bread. Toast each slice for 3 minutes . . . 1½ minutes on each side. The Wonder toast will be browned evenly. The other will be partially browned. This simple test is the supreme proof of bread flavor according to experts.

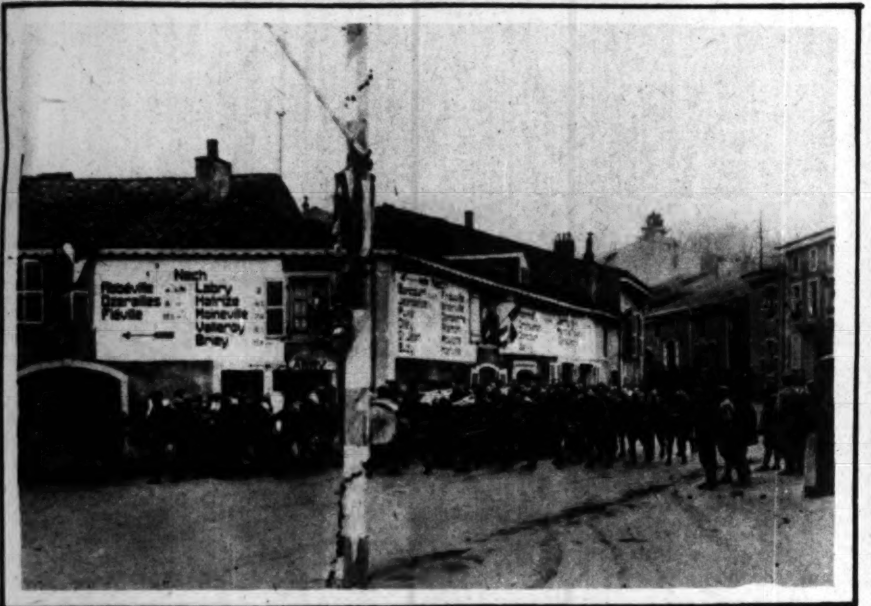
TEN YEARS AGO THIS WEEK casual officers were returning to America aboard the Samland. In this group are 2d Lieut. A. F. Cammeyer Jr., Company F, 168th infantry; 1st Lieut. Gillis A. Johnson, Company A, 5th regiment marines; 1st Lieut. A. M. Schoefer, Company B, 30th engineers; 1st Lieut. J. H. Sunderlin, motor transport corps; Maj. J. E. Brady, 130th infantry; 1st Lieut. James R. Stockton, 43d company, 5th regiment marines; 1st Lieut. Louis F. Verdel, medical corps, 28th infantry, and Philip E. Littlehale and Albert F. Landensack, both of the ordnance civilian department.

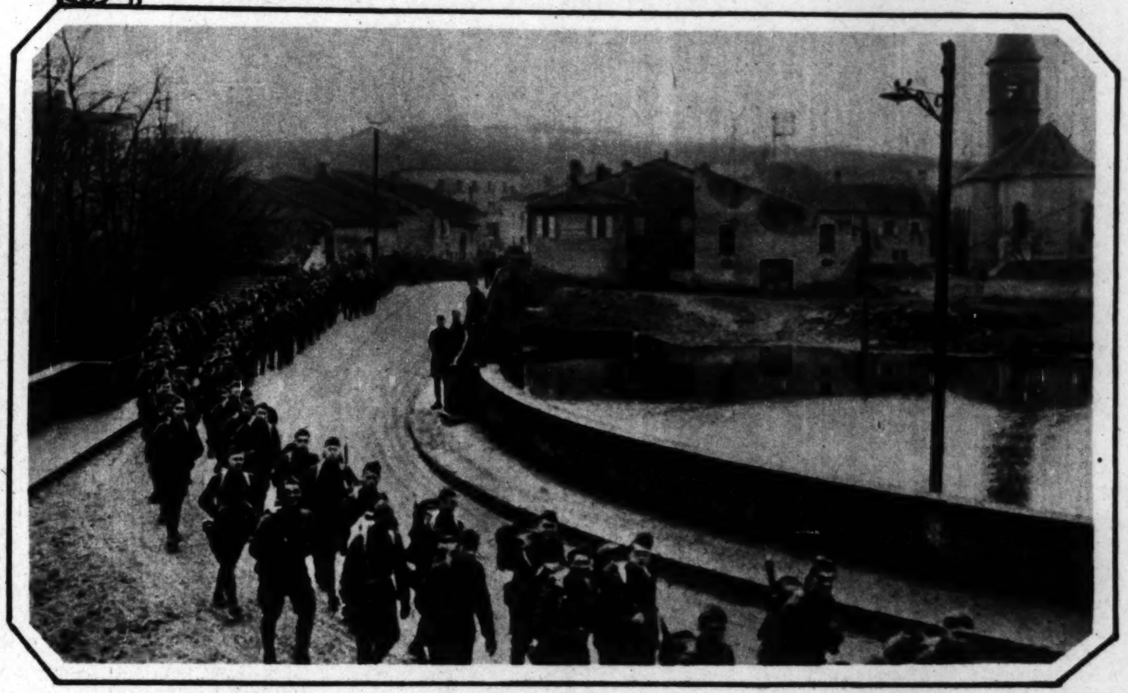
HOMEWARD BOUND—Severely wounded by high explosives in the Argonne, Herbert Rogena, Company C, 151st machine gun battalion, was being evacuated to seaport, and the nurses of base hospital No. 52, at Rimaucourt, France, were bidding him good-by.

NEAR ALTENAHR, GERMANY, the 166th infantry column of the 42d division crossed a bridge over the Ahr river and entered a large railway tunnel on Dec. 14, 1918.



THE BAND PLAYED, and everybody was in smiles, when Headquarters company, 129th infantry, marched through Conflans on Rue de Verdun, in the Metz sector, ten years ago today. Note the signs painted by the Germans.

OCCUPYING GERMANY—Capt. W. E. Talbot, motor transport officer, 42d division, inspecting a truck at Andeau, Dec. 11, 1918.



ON THE ROAD TO LUXEMBURG—With Company A in the lead, doughboys of the 130th infantry, 33d division, crossed the Orne river at Conflans, Dec. 9, 1918.

THE RULES

1. Every Sunday for 14 Sundays, the Chicago Tribune will print a set of 3 composite pictures of "Aces of the Air." Each set of pictures, when cut apart and assembled properly, will make complete portraits of Flyers. The public is invited to put the pictures together and name them. The Chicago Tribune will pay $15,000.00 in Cash Prizes to the persons who send in the nearest correct and neatest complete sets of pictures. See prize list at right.

2. The composite pictures must be cut out, assembled and pasted or pinned together. Below each picture must be written the name of the Flyer pictured. A total of 42 pictures will be printed—3 each Sunday for 14 Sundays. IMPORTANT! Hold all pictures until you have the complete set of 42. Then send them to "Aces of the Air," The Chicago Tribune, Post Office Box 1539, Chicago, Illinois.

3. This contest is open to everyone—men, women, boys and girls—except employes of the Chicago Tribune and their families. It does not matter where you live.

4. You pay nothing. Just prove your skill.

5. All pictures must be in by midnight 21 days after set No. 14 is published. Each entry should be sent by First Class Mail, postage prepaid. Entries with insufficient postage will be returned by the Post Office Department. A letter must be sent with each entry giving the name and address of the sender and telling in 50 words or less which Flyer, in his or her opinion, has accomplished the greatest achievement for the benefit of the world, and why. Contestants may send as many sets as they wish, but no contestant will be entitled to more than one prize. No entries will be returned.

6. The judging will be based upon the accuracy of putting the pictures together, correctly naming them, neatness, and merit of the accompanying letter. Elaborate entries will receive no greater consideration than the most simple entries. The prime requirement will be accuracy. Therefore any school boy or girl has the same chance to obtain a prize as any man or woman.

7. You need not purchase the Chicago Tribune to compete. You may copy or trace the pictures from the Tribune and assemble the pictures from the copies you have made. The Tribune may be examined at any of its Offices or at Public Libraries free of charge.

8. The judges will be a committee appointed by the Chicago Tribune. Entrants agree to accept their decision as final. In case of ties a duplicate award will be given each tying contestant.

DRUMSTICK—It reaches nearly 100 feet into the air, and it is a combined water tank and lookout at a Boy Scout camp near Ponca City, Okla. A spiral stairway inside the tower leads through the tank to an observation platform. (Photograph from M. E. Smith.)

FIVE SETS OF CO-ED TWINS at the University of Kansas keep the professors in a quandary as to which is which. They are Pauline and Irene Pray, Marie and Madge Gaunt, Alice and Alta Gaskill, Ethel and Helen Benson, and Alice and Elizabeth Sherbon. (Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic.)

MORE TWINS—The eight pairs here all attend Sam Houston school in Galveston, Tex. Their names, in case you are interested, are: Billie and Bobbie Searcy, Mildred and Merle Drewa, Alice and Peggy Letty, Harry and Melita Renfert, Helen and Ellen Franck, Marjorie and Evelyn Nelson, Philip and Raymond Parker, and Cleo and Leo Farmer. When unexpected guests run in, you'll need the handy Hostess Package of 12 bottles

HOSTESS PACKAGE
CANADA DRY
GINGER ALE
NOW, THEY'LL ENJOY THEMSELVES!

WHEN guests run in unexpectedly, there is no greater satisfaction than the feeling that you are prepared to entertain them. And the informal little party that follows—a chat, a game of bridge, some sandwiches and "Canada Dry"—that is the pleasantest part of it all.

You can see how convenient the Hostess Package is at a time like this. Think of it! To feel assured that your guests will have a pleasant time, no matter how many run in! Here is the Hostess Package. Twelve bottles of purity and fine flavor . . . subtle, gingery goodness . . . tingling, thirst-quenching mellowness! Twelve bottles of "Canada Dry"—the choice of connoisseurs the wide world over—awaiting your guests.

The distinction which "Canada Dry" has achieved is no accident of fate. It has distinction because very definite efforts are exerted in that direction. "Canada Dry" is made from the finest quality of Jamaica ginger and other absolutely pure ingredients. It is blended and balanced under laboratory methods of exactness and an hourly check is made to see that those standards are constantly being observed. The purity of "Canada Dry" is a matter of laboratory examination too. Its carbonation—a delicate matter effecting flavor—is done by a secret method and as a result "Canada Dry" retains its sparkle long after the bottle is opened.

No capsicum (red pepper) mars the fine flavor of "Canada Dry." Consequently it does not burn the tongue or produce unpleasant after-effects. This ginger ale is really good for you; it is served in leading hospitals of this country and Canada.

Order "Canada Dry." Always have some on hand, a few bottles in the ice-chest, several more in the Hostess Package. Ask your dealer for the Hostess Package. He will be glad to supply you.

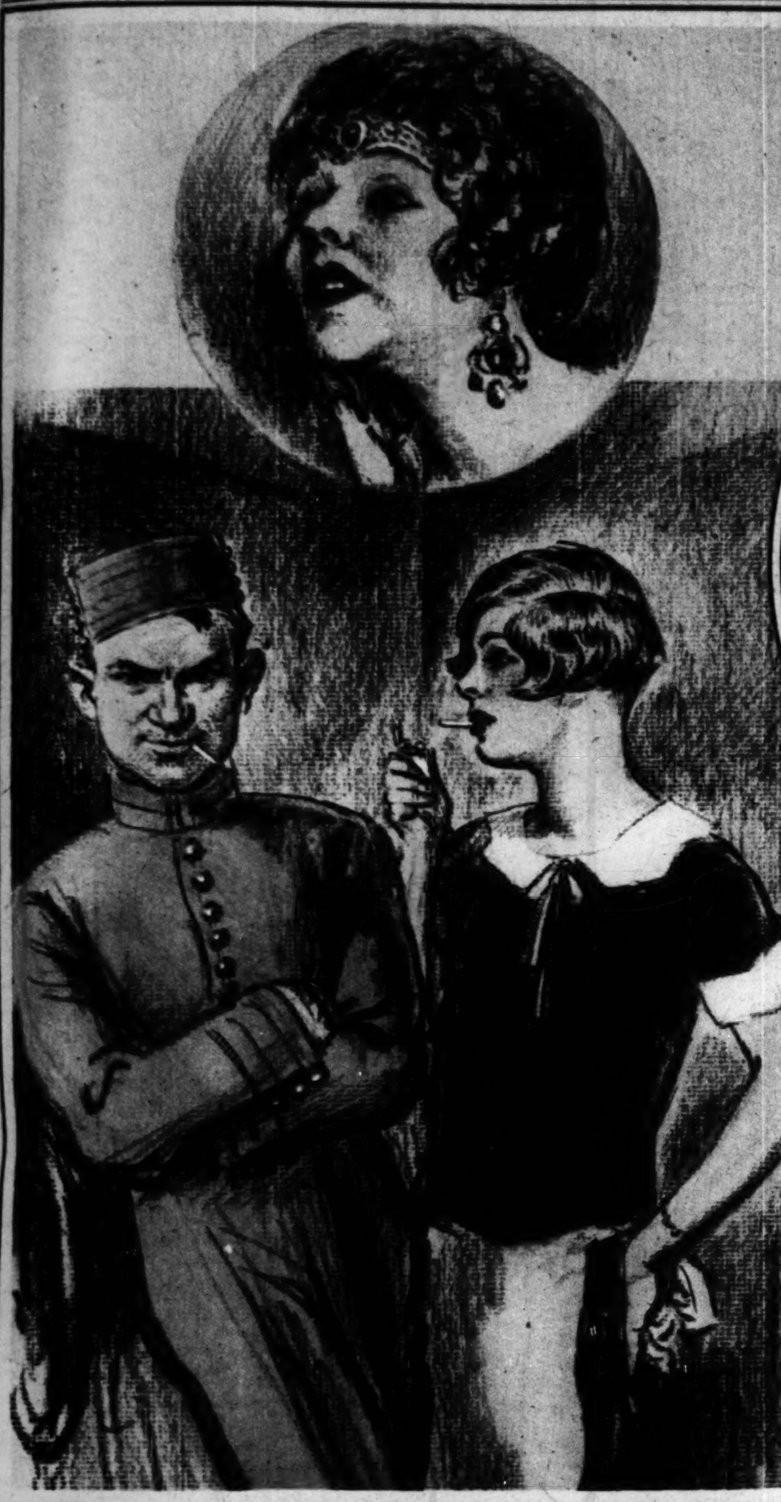
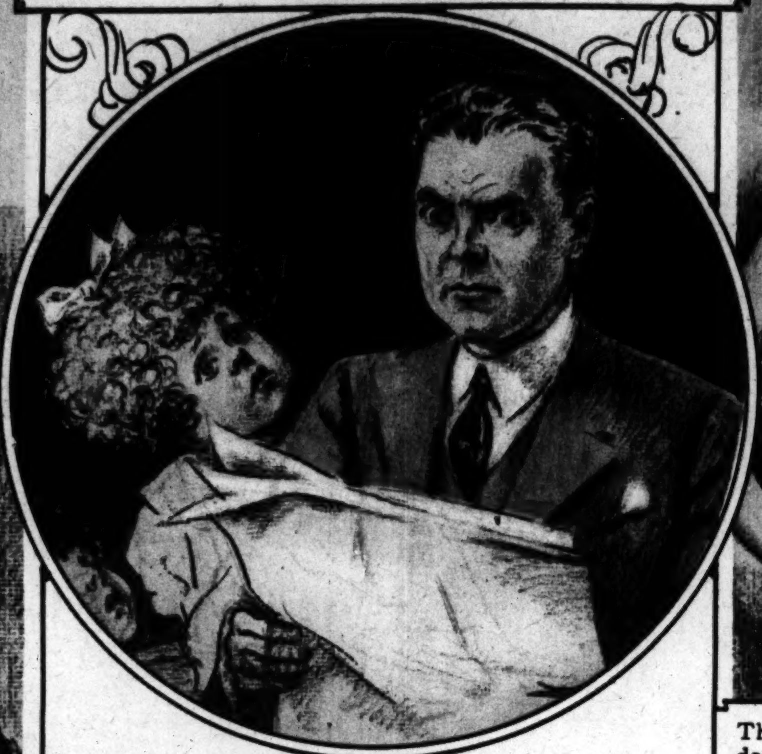
Life Among the Ads

By W. E. Hill

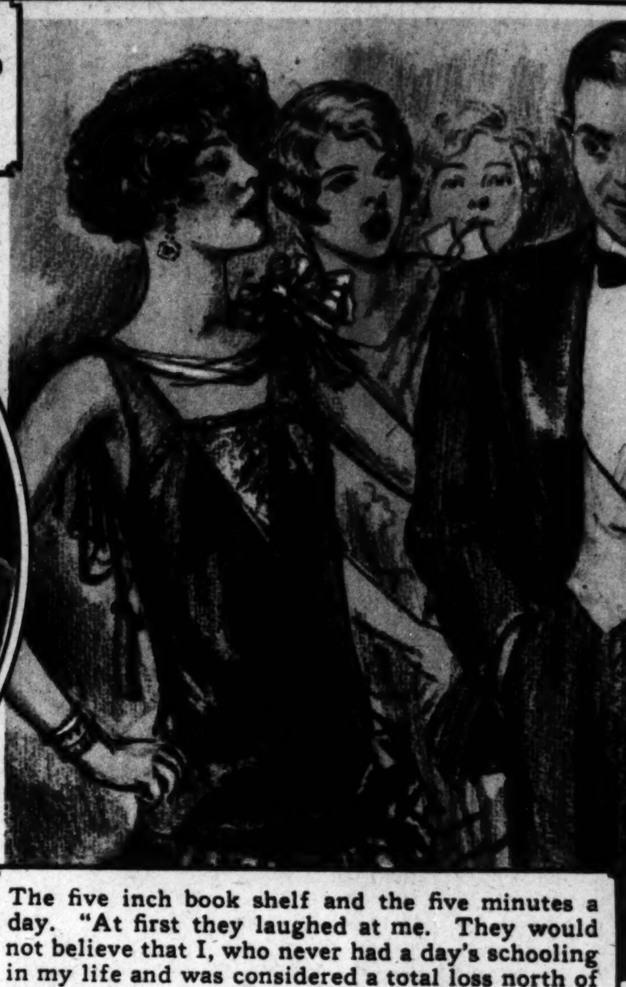
[Copyright: 1928: By The Chicago Tribune.]



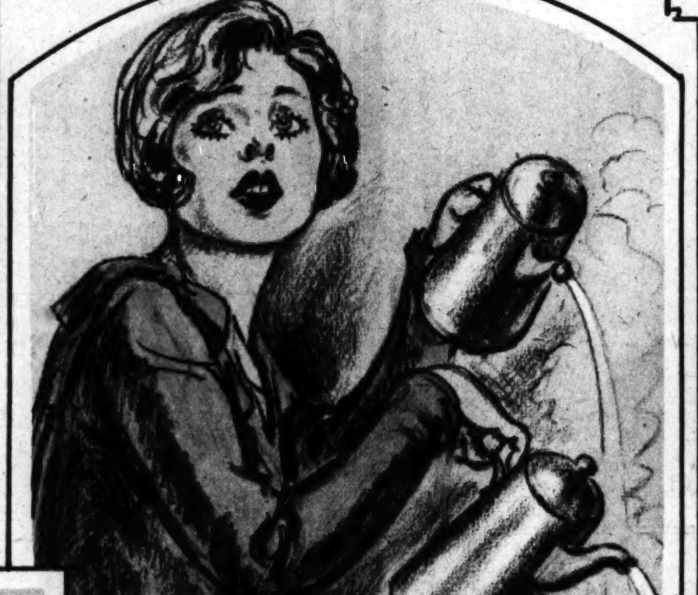
Just one of those friendly cigaret testimonial ads. Above is a portrait of Ginny Lippy, the opera star, saying: "Although my voice shows wear and tear badly, I do not think Bologny Specials, the mellow smoke, had anything to do with it." Below, Frankie Feegan, bellhop at the Hotel Helpus, is saying to Claudine Brady, hat check girl: "I'm glad I took Mme. Ginny Lippy's advice and smoked Bologny Specials. They certainly are unsurpassed for mellow charm."



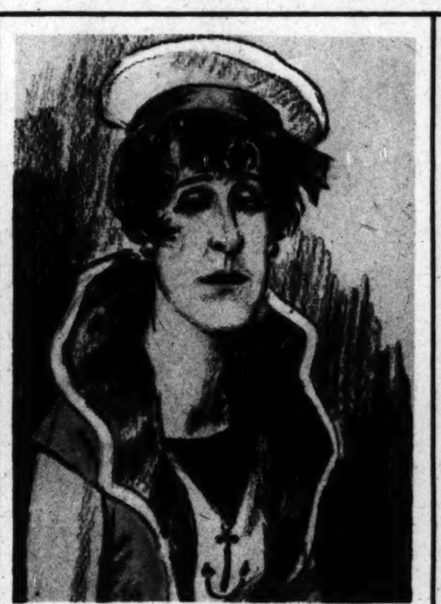
Investments. "Papa," asks little Tootsie, the darling of the advertising section, "are mother and I provided for? Have you safeguarded our future by investing in Tinklepaw ninety year refunding and improvement mortgage gold bonds? Because only too often unlisted stocks have a fluctuating market value, papa."



The five inch book shelf and the five minutes a day. "At first they laughed at me. They would not believe that I, who never had a day's schooling in my life and was considered a total loss north of the collar line, could tell them the difference between an ichneumon and an ichneutic. As I gained confidence in myself, I found myself holding them spellbound when I quoted from the poems of Robert Service, Sir Walter Dickens and Wilfred Shakespeare. 'Bob, you were wonderful,' said the most beautiful heiress in the room."

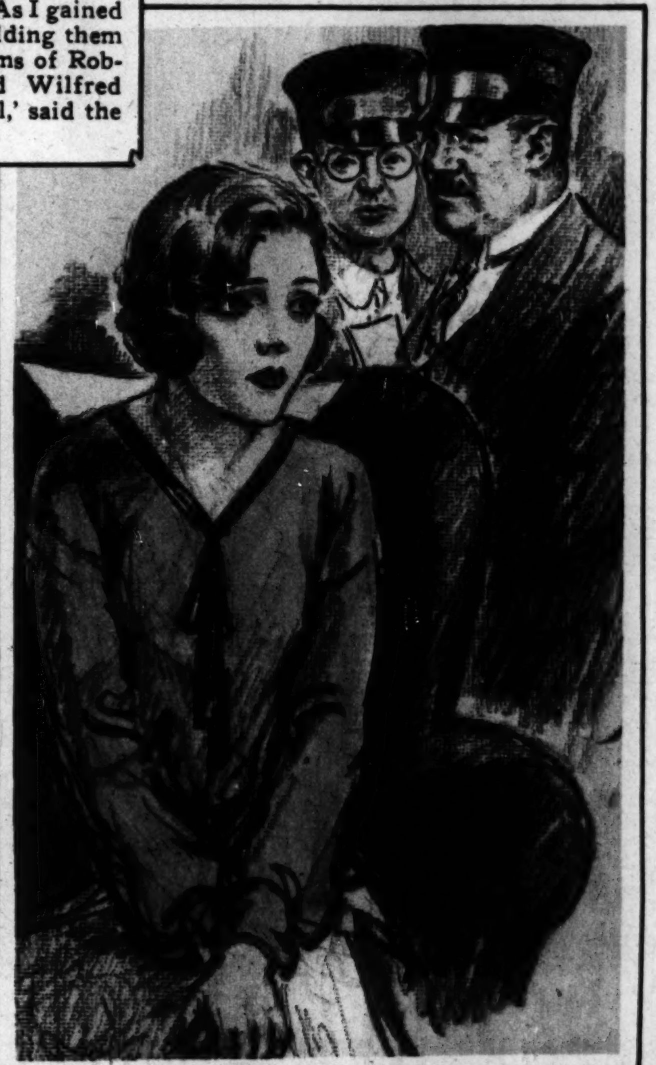


"Pulso polish has made our antique furniture able to resist anything!" Nothing can hurt this lovely young matron's furniture, as she will show you by pouring boiling water on a table top in the back of any household magazine, in three color process.

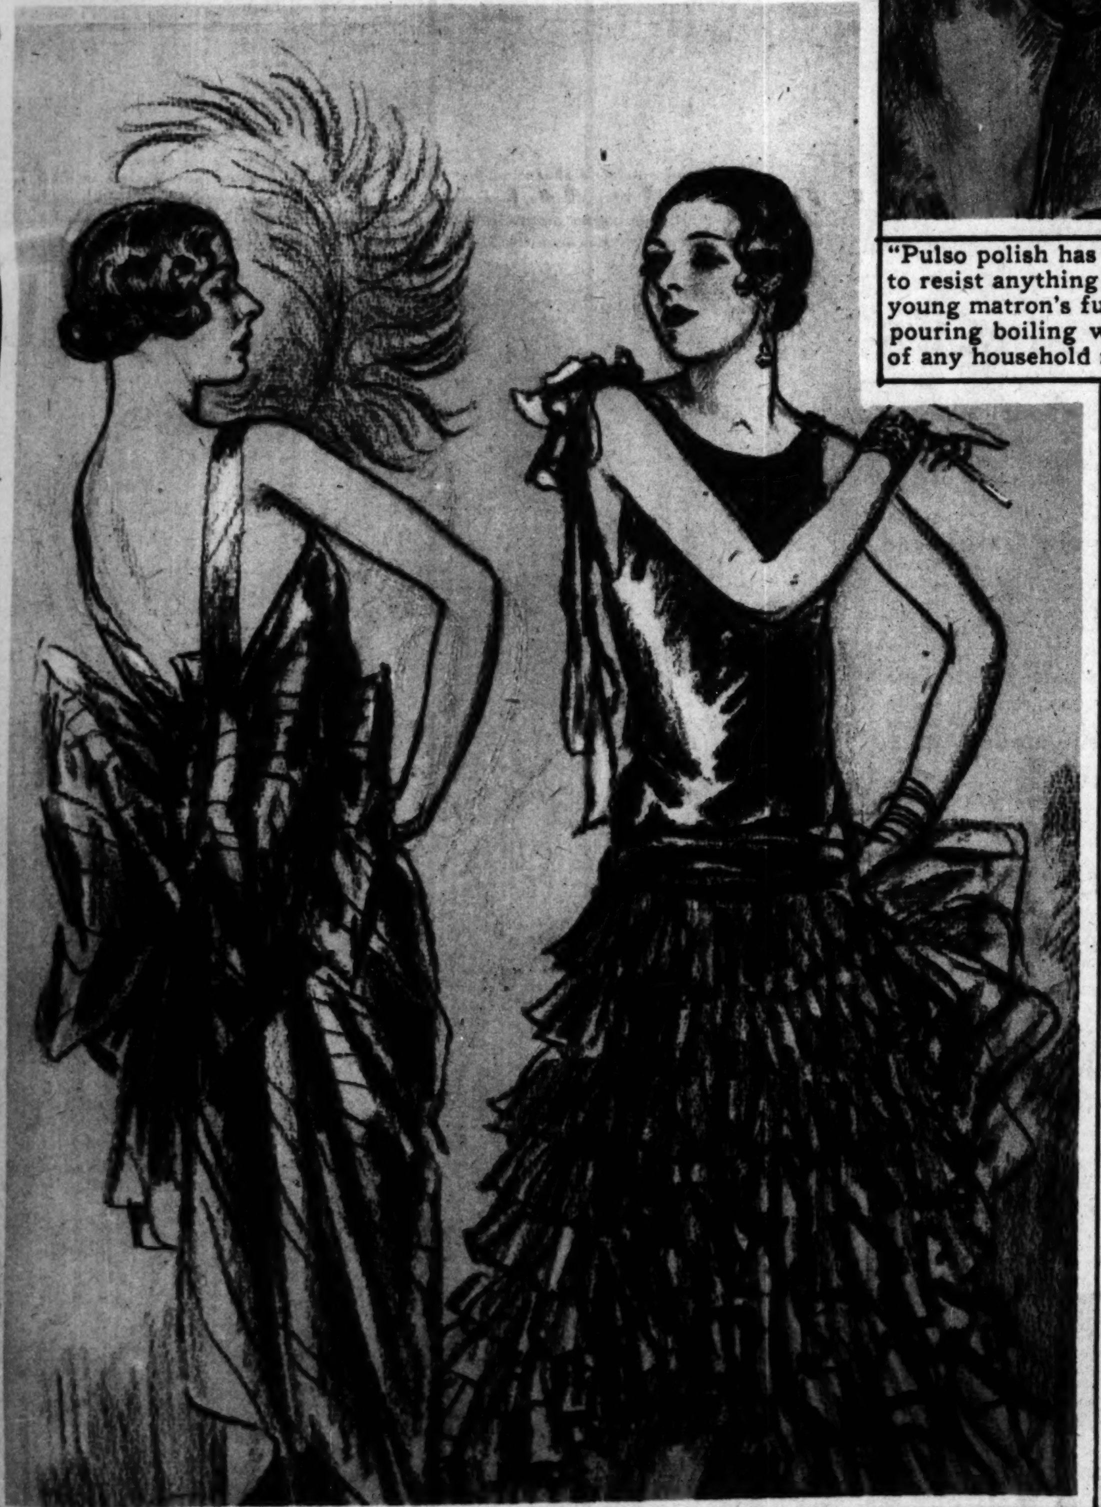


The high hat beauty cream. Creme de Hooie is endorsed by only the very select. Here's Princess Helene de Booboo de Scow, who says: "When yachting at Cowes I find that Creme de Hooie keeps the fine texture of my skin white and smooth in spite of the naughty winds. Graciously,

H. R. M. W. C. Helene de Booboo
de Scow,
Castle Oglethorpe, Regina Centre,
Albania."



The toilet goods heroine. No one, not even her mother, had told her. Men asked to meet her at parties, but they never came back for a second dance. In the brokerage firm where she worked no one had ever insulted her. And then one day on a train she heard the conductor and the butcher boy talking about her. Enlarged nose pores! That's the insidious thing about them—no one realizes their existence till they are enlarged! Buy a bottle of astringentine today and be popular!

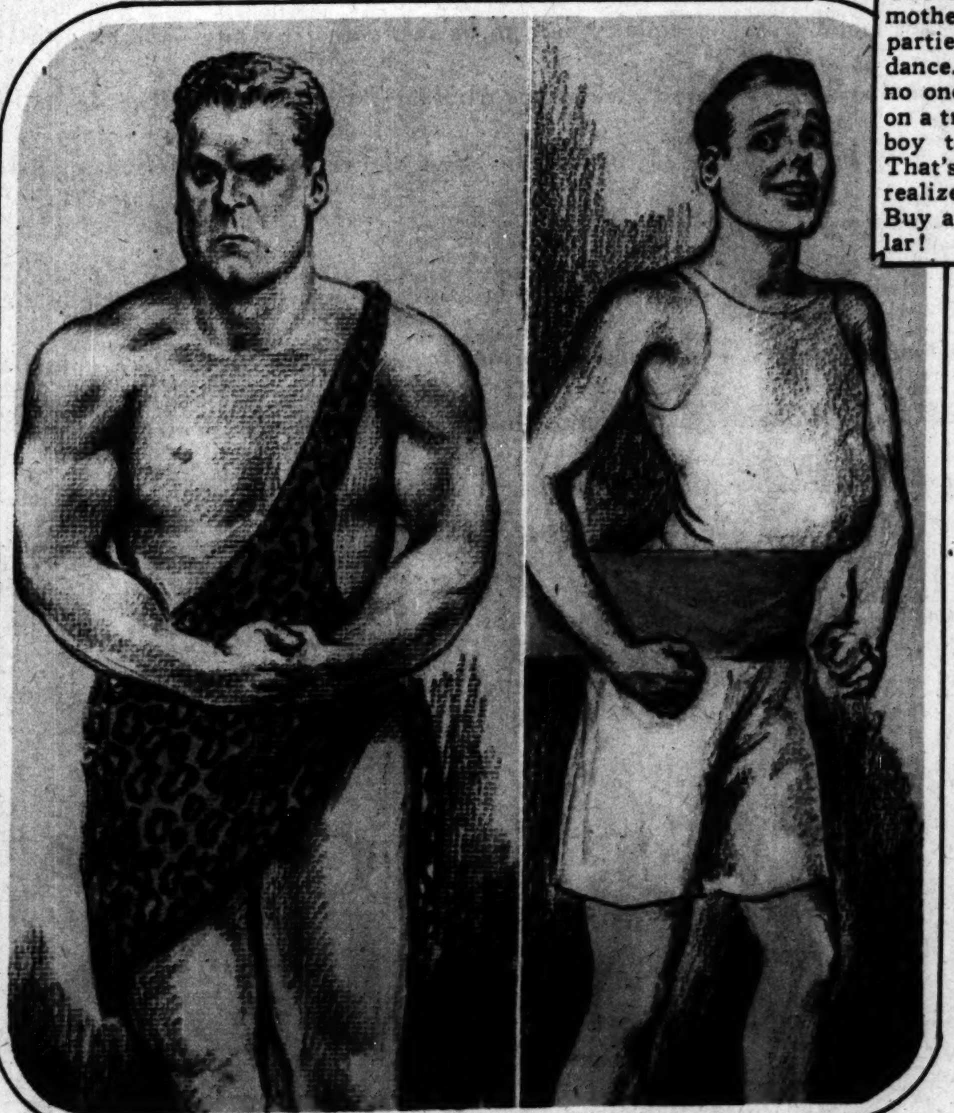


Meet Ethyle and Doris, the girls from the ritzy washing powder ad. They have a snappy dialogue to put over. Listen:

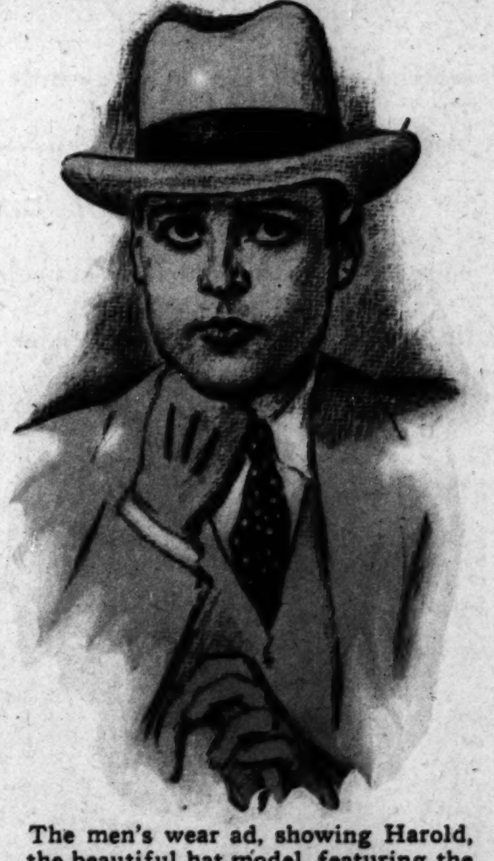
Ethyle: Why, Doris; not another new gown? My dear, how can Tom afford it?

Doris: Nonsense, Ethyle. This is the one Tom spilt the barrel of molasses and the quart of iodine on. I simply plunged it in Soapsy Sudlets for a few moments and the grease spots just scooted away!

(Great admiration on the part of Ethyle and great loquacity from Doris, etc.)



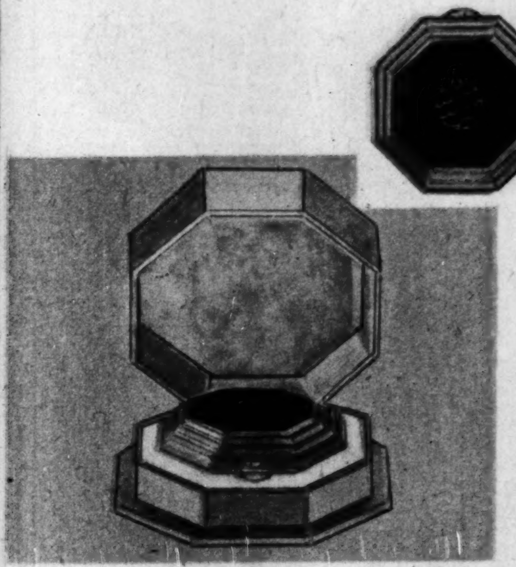
The physical culture boys. The young man on the right advertises an electric vibrator and reducer and never has to go outdoors for exercise. The boy on the left is none other than Prof. Eyeolf Wuttsman, who, for the price of a measly little 2-cent stamp, will send you a book on "Riding to Success on Muscle Power," telling how, in thirty days, you, puny weakling that you are, can become a Hercules and have all the girls chasing you around and around.



The men's wear ad, showing Harold, the beautiful hat model, featuring the "Amazing," which combines charm and exuberance with comfort and distinction. Next month there will be a big, full page of Harold in the "Manly," a golf cap for those who discriminate.

le Début

Chatelaine le Début is a happy liaison of the cloisonné-topped compacte and the gay lip stick . . . both on a dainty chain. In four colors . . . green, blue, ivory white, and black. Refills for both are available . . . choice of loose or compact powder. Price $10.00. The lip stick alone, $2.50. The compacte alone, with chain, $7.50.



Compacte le Début expressing the smart vogue for colorful compacts to blend with the costume. Finished in gold or silver, topped with genuine cloisonné: in blue, black, green and white. Powder and rouge in a delightful blend of the four odeurs of Parfum le Début. Refill available. Price $5.00

(enamel dotted top; $2.50)

Parfum and Compacte le Début . . . The Parfum (specially created and sealed in Paris)—your favorite of the four odeurs le Début to express one of the lovely feminine moods . . . The Compacte in four colors of genuine cloisonné, to blend smartly with the costume: green, black, blue, and white. Luxuriously boxed in colors to match. Price $12.50

Four individual odeurs of Parfum le Début, each expressing a lovely feminine mood: Romance, Adventure, Gaiety, Sophistication . . . in piquant flacons of blue, green, white, black . . The cloisonné-topped compacte in blue or green. Luxuriously boxed. Price $20.00

FOR HER — THE GIFT IN TUNE WITH THE TIMES

She's sure to like perfume that mirrors her mood . . . and equally sure to be captivated by any—or all—of these four exquisite odeurs in Parfum le Début. Straight from Paris—first introduced at the Hudnut Paris Salon, 20 Rue de la Paix. In each of the four colorful petits flacons is caught the very breath of one of the four loveliest of her moods — Romance, Adventure, Gaiety and Sophistication — a gift that has a blithe charm all its own.

And since Fashion has decreed that all accessories shall harmonize with the ensemble, Compacte le Début has for her an especial appeal. For these gay little compactes, topped with genuine cloisonné enamel, come in the four colors of the mode—blue, black, jade green and ivory white—and are as valuable to the ensemble as a bit of costume jewelry.

Then, too, Lip Stick le Début—a practical, refillable lip stick if you please—carries out the same ensemble idea. It comes in the same four le Début colors—in the smartest shades of lip rouge . . . And Chatelaine le Début, combining both the lip stick and compacte on a slender chain, is especially attractive with the evening ensemble.

All these may be had separately—or combined variously in delightful gift boxes—at any of the better shops.

What a cigarette meant there

It took a lot of courage, for he was no "ladies' man," and she was the belle of the town.

That awkward, stammering proposal . . . interrupted . . . what a mess he had made of it! And now . . . would she never come back? And what then? The zero hour, for a fact . . . the longest minutes of a lifetime.

Like most men, he lived through it, sustained by that little friend in need . . . his cigarette. In after years he always said it was the most important cigarette he ever smoked.

What a cigarette means here

It took a lot of courage, likewise, to propose and go through with the idea behind Chesterfield.

It took courage, for it meant less profit per package than is made on most other cigarettes. Into Chesterfield we blended the finest qualities of tobacco ever offered in a cigarette at popular prices—tobacco selected regardless of cost, from all the leaf markets of the world.

And when Chesterfield jumped to big volume and continued steadily to grow . . . we knew that this cigarette which so surely bespeaks tobacco quality to us had come equally to mean it to you.

AH, WOULDN'T YOU LIKE TO BE THERE! This comes to us as "the most beautiful still of the month," from the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios. It is from "The Overland Telegraph," Tim McCoy's latest production, and in the foreground you see Colonel Tim and his pony.

THESE BE RAMON NOVARRO AND A WILD OCELOT. What is a wild ocelot? A wild ocelot is, we are informed, a variety of South American jaguar. One of Ramon's friends—or was it maybe an enemy?—presented him with this pet, which he has named "Tabby."

THE "$1,000,000 LEGS" and the little doggie belong to Miss Lucy Doraine, whose underpinnings have danced for the screens of Europe and will do their stuff in Billie Dove's coming feature, "Adoration."

on your way to California

JUST stay in your comfortable Pullman until you reach the South rim. There, near the head of Bright Angel Trail, is El Tovar, one of Fred Harvey's best hotels.

Travelers always want more time at Grand Canyon than they've planned for.

Stay two or three days. See the chasm from rim boulevards in motor cars. See it from the deep-down trails on muleback.

No one can realize the fascination of this titan of chasms before seeing it. One can hardly picture its size! Think of going straight down into the earth for a mile! The Grand Canyon cuts deeper than that. And it is 13 miles across from El Tovar to the north side.

The mystery and the beauty of the Grand Canyon are impossible to imagine. You must see for yourself! Come any time of the year.

A Santa Fe trip to California via the Grand Canyon is one of life's most satisfying experiences. You'll enjoy famous Santa Fe-Fred Harvey service all the way. And you will enjoy the Indian-detour, too. Three delightful days by Harvey-car, off the beaten path.

Take This Hint from an Actress

"This is something," says Lucille, "that most women seem to forget, especially in winter"

"WHEREVER I GO, I watch people's hands — especially women's. And I find that most women apparently realize how beautiful well-kept hands can be. It is very seldom today that any woman, with any social ambition at all, fails to keep her hands carefully manicured.

"There is something else, however, that is just as important as a manicure, and unfortunately many women even today do not realize it. I refer to the color and texture of the skin. What good, in fact, is the most fastidious manicure if the hands are rough, or red, or chapped from exposure to cold weather and wind?"

Fortunately, a soft, smooth and white skin is easily obtained today by using Campana's Italian Balm, the original skin softener. It combines for the first time, the most trustworthy and quick-acting skin healing and skin smoothing ingredients with certain valued, imported essential oils. It safeguards your skin against cold weather and housework such as washing dishes, dusting, cooking and laundering the baby's clothing. Its quick-healing properties make it especially valuable for use on children's and infants' sensitive skins. Men like it after shaving. Generous bottle 35c. Extra economy size, 60c. Approved by Good Housekeeping. Sold at drug and department stores with a guarantee of satisfactory results. Free travel-size sample will be sent on request. Campana Corporation, 21 Lincoln Way, Batavia, Illinois.

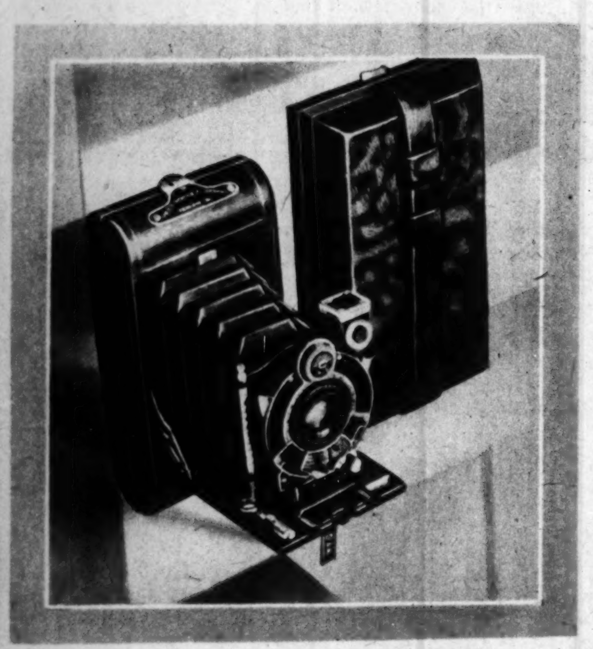
Kodak Gifts of Novelty, Beauty and Distinction

PICTURE MAKERS ALL

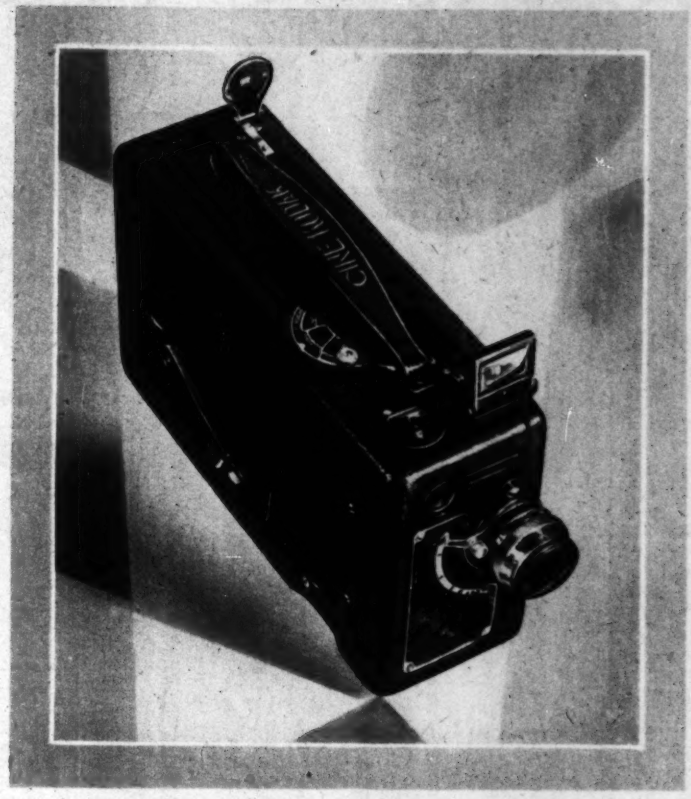
FOR this Christmas, Kodak offers you the smartest array of gift selections that have ever left the hands of its craftsmen. As to price, you may pay almost anything you have a mind to, for they range from the unassuming Brownie to the finest Ciné-Kodak home movie outfit. As to color, this is the first Christmas you have been able to get it in Kodaks.

This page should spell opportunity to you if there are friends or relatives for whom you have not yet been able to find a suitable present. Don't waste any of the precious time between now and the twenty-fifth on fruitless searching. See these beautiful new Kodak gifts. Here you will find the answer to your problem.

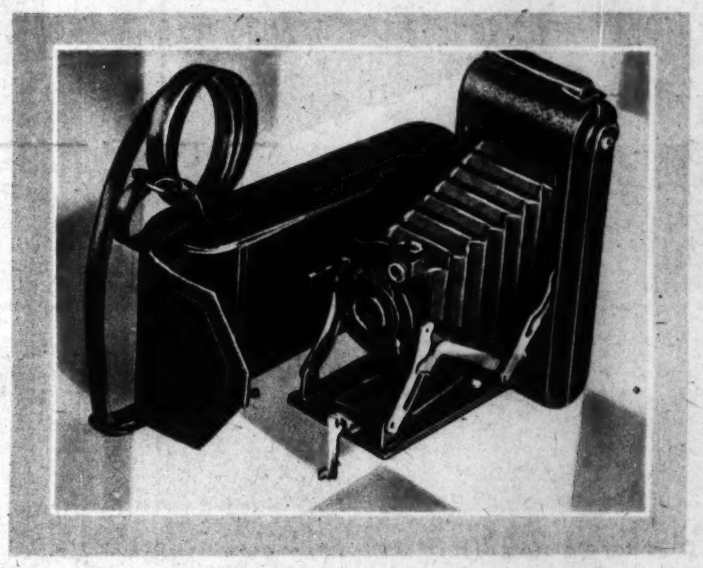
EASTMAN KODAK COMPANY, ROCHESTER, NEW YORK



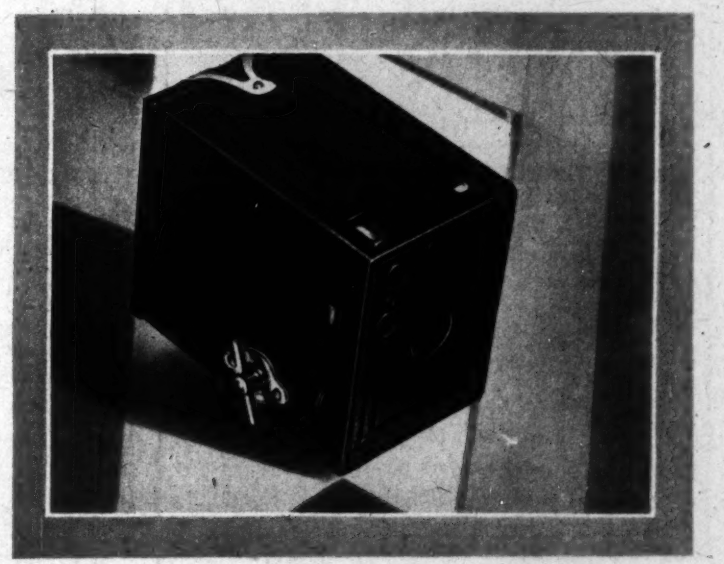
Vanity Kodaks—Incomparably beautiful in color and design, they are all that the modern gift should be. In five lovely colors: Redbreast (red), Jenny Wren (brown), Sea gull (gray), Bluebird (blue), Cockatoo (green). Picture size: 1⅝ x 2½.



Ciné-Kodak, the simplest of home movie cameras—A modern gift. For those fortunate enough to "have everything already," and for those less fortunate. A permanent gift. One that begins giving pleasure the day it is received, and grows more precious with every passing year. And this home movie camera can be adapted for Kodacolor—Home Movies in gorgeous full color. Complete home movie outfits Ciné-Kodak, Kodascope Projector and Screen—begin at $140.



Pocket Kodaks—This season you may have the 1 A Pocket Kodak, Series II, in four handsome colors, as well as black: blue, brown, beige, gray. Both Kodak and case are of the same lustrous grained leather, and both have been redesigned to meet the modern trend. "Supremely smart gifts" —say those who have seen them. Picture size, 2½ x 4¼.



Brownies—Your Christmas list is sure to contain the name of some one who would be overjoyed to receive a Brownie, as practical a little camera as ever was made. And it's just the thing for the boy or girl. They cost $2 and up, and every one of them takes splendid snapshots. With such a gift as this, a half-dozen packages of Kodak Film doubles the recipient's appreciation.

S. Parker—DUOFOLD." Don't disappoint them. Be sure the barrels of the Pens and Pencils you select bear this mark of excellence.

This will be a PARKER Desk Set Christmas for the Best Desk Set is the One that has the Best Pen

Commit that to memory. For you can get genuine Parker Duofold Desk Sets for the same prices asked for sets containing less desirable pens. Indeed none can equal the Parker Duofold Onyx Set, Duofold Pen included, at $8.75, Porcelain, $8.75, or Onyx, Marble or Glass, $10, $12, $15, and up to $100.00 for the Parker Duofold De Luxe.

Only Pen Giving Pressureless Touch—Improvement No. 47

Instant flow and constant feed at any speed without pressure on the pen.

Geo. S. Parker's Pressureless Point—an exclusive Duofold advantage—has never been duplicated in any other pen. It's our 47th Major Improvement. Today's Parker Duofold has reached its present perfection through 36 years of development, including 29 patents.

Not only are these Parker Permanite barrels non-breakable, but the whole Parker Duofold Pen is *Guaranteed Forever Against All Defects.

Pencils, in Five Colors to Match—make handsome Parker Pocket Duettes—with Penknife, the new Parker Trio

Five jewel-like colors—Green Jade, Lacquer-red, Lapis Lazuli Blue, Mandarin Yellow, and Jet-and-Gold—all smartly black tipped. And all these aside from Parker's moderne Black and Pearl in the Duofold De Luxe Pens and Pencils.

Do your Christmas shopping in ten minutes by clipping illustrations from this page and taking them to any nearby pen counter. And don't be persuaded to accept some second best. If one dealer can't supply you, another can.

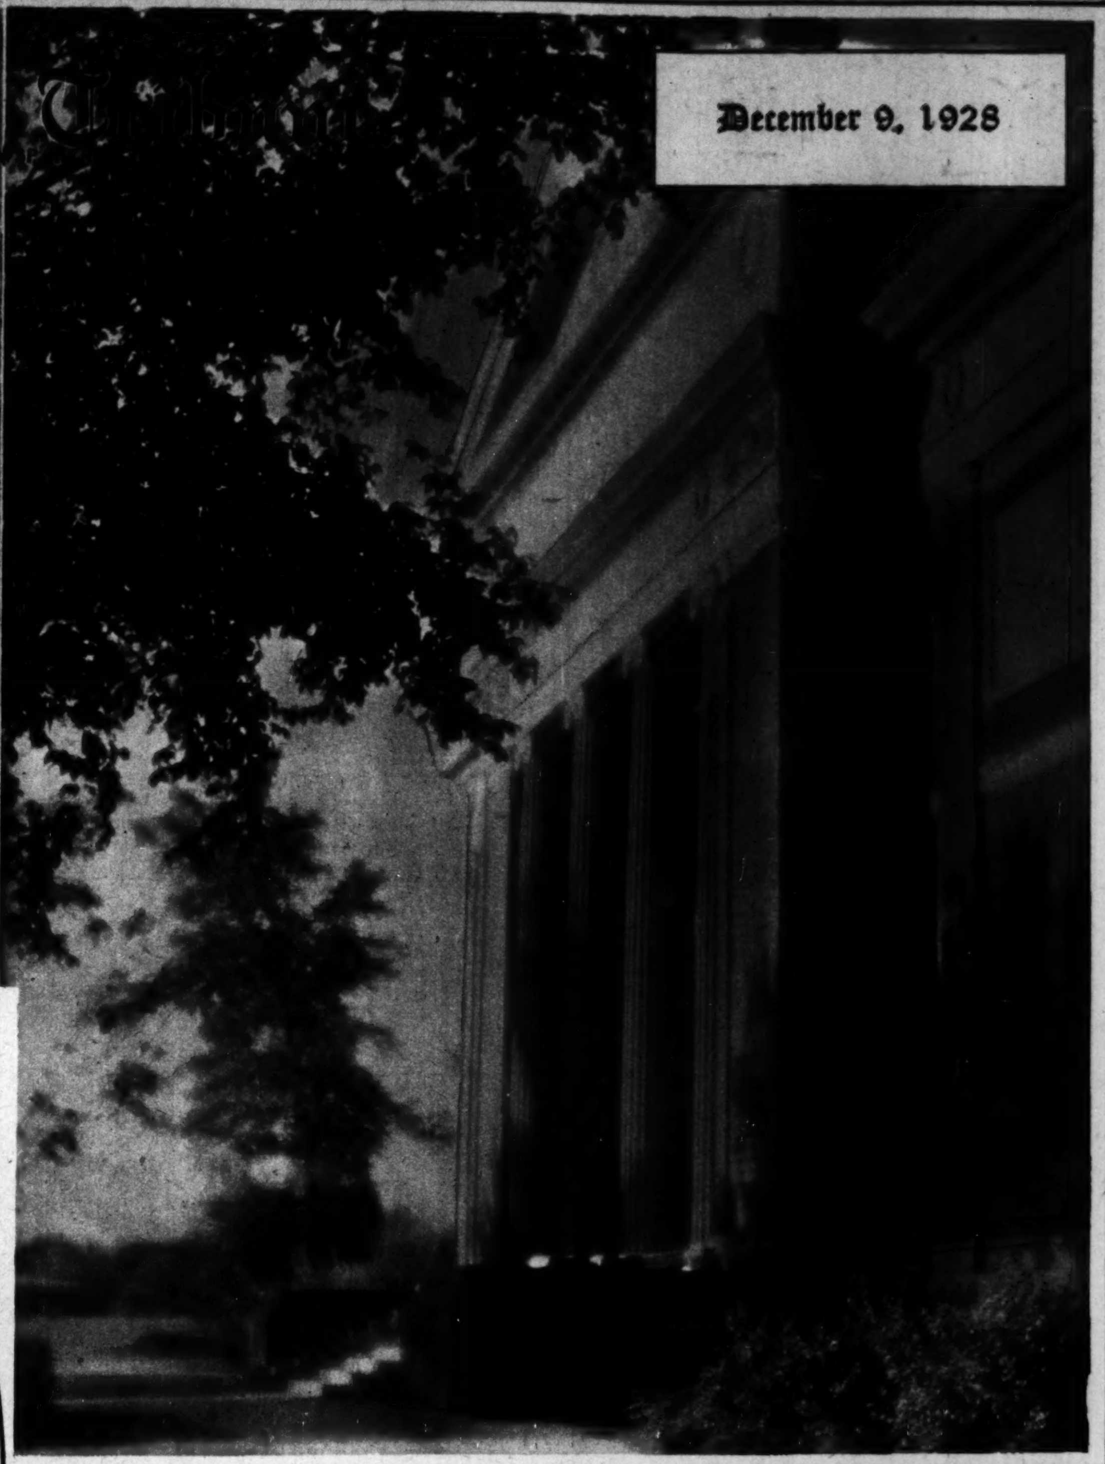
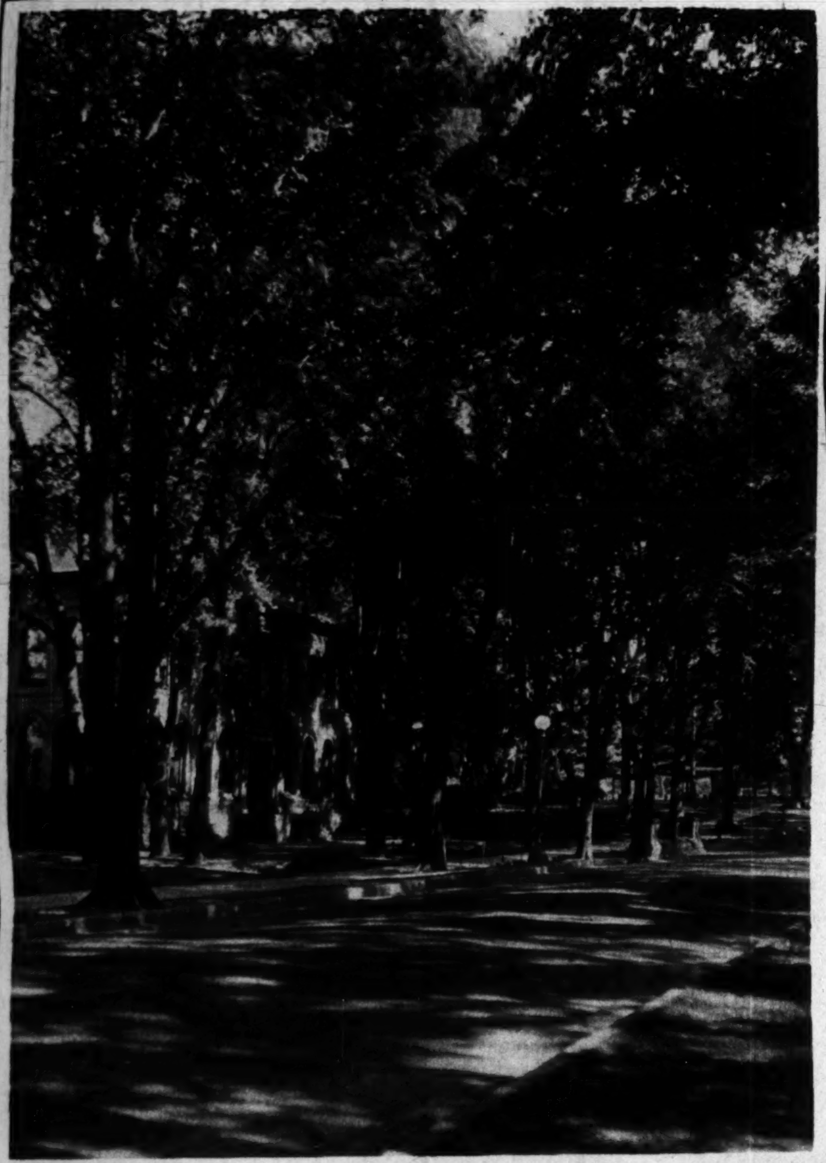
AT THE UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS—Those youths who delve into torts and equity and Blackstone at Urbana-Champaign have this vine-clad Law building in which to do their delving.

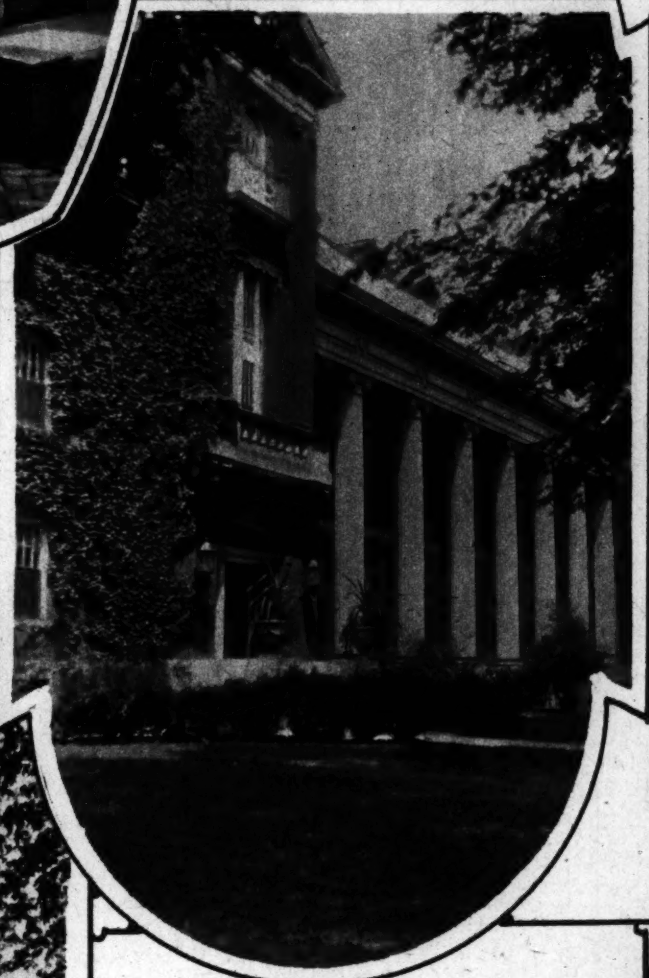


STATELY—The entrance to the Smith Memorial music building on Illinois' beautiful campus. All the pictures on this page are from the Illio, the student yearbook.

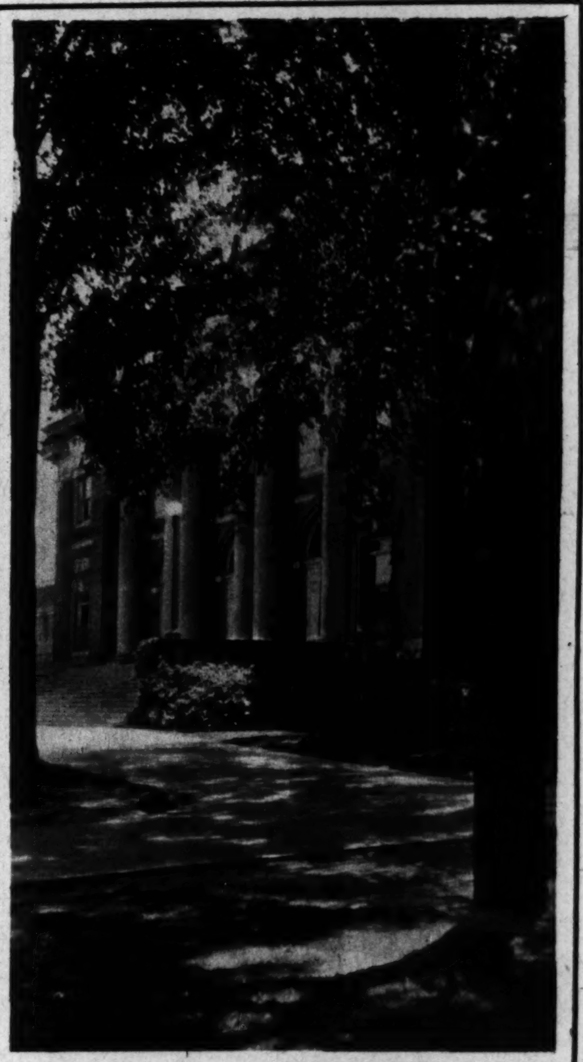


BURRELL AVENUE and one of the buildings of the Engineering group at Illinois.

A CLASS MEMORIAL, one of the many that dot the campus. This one, from the class of '09, was designed by student architects.

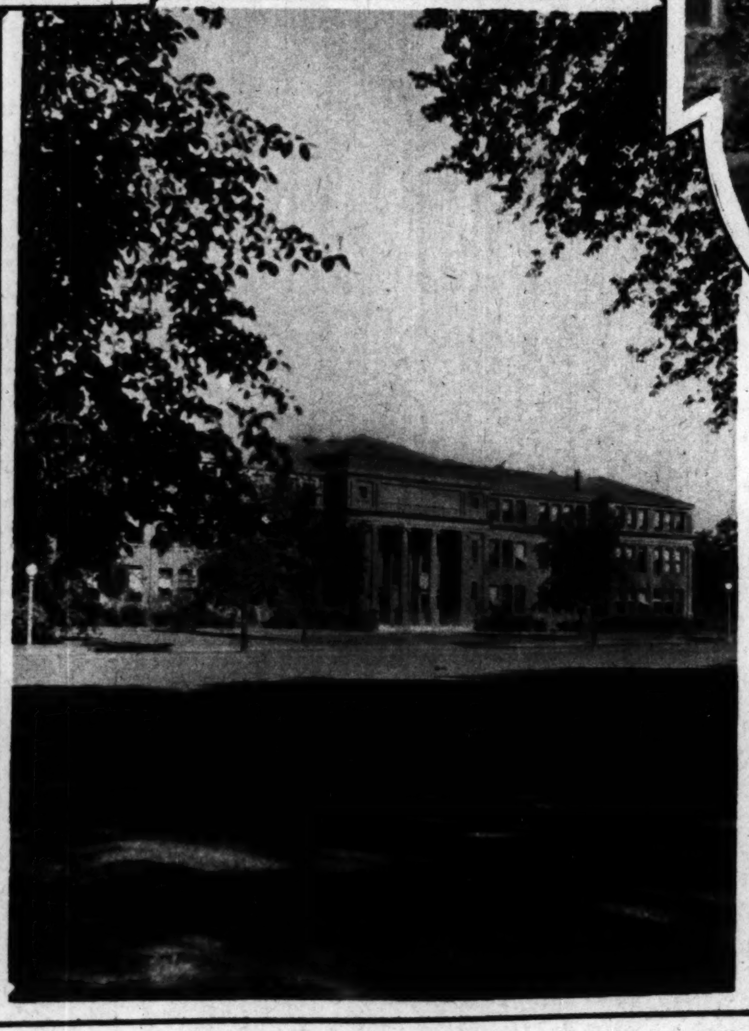


IVY-TWINED—The Woman's building, surrounded by plants of varied shapes and hues, offers a picturesque study.



THE BROAD WALK, in the foreground, and, behind it, the Auditorium.

THE UNIVERSITY HIGH SCHOOL provides a modern contrast to some of the older structures.



OLD AGRICULTURE BUILDING, where flora and fauna are studied by coming citizens of one of the great agricultural states of the Union.

MEMORIAL STADIUM, where football fans gather by the tens of thousands to watch the struggles waged by the great Zuppke teams.

MIRACLE

A Fragrant Echo of Your Loveliness!

Vivid as a recalled melody is the rich fragrance of the flowers immortalized in Miracle. Languorous flowers . . . Flowers with deep white throats . . . frail yet dangerous . . . have achieved the invisible glory of this perfume. For Miracle is a scented echo of woman's exotic self . . . subtle as her secret wish . . . glamorous as her heart's unfolding . . . Miracle whispers its tender secret of loveliness for hours—like all perfumes by Lenthéric it creates the precious illusion of breathing, living flowers! Now in the finer shops.

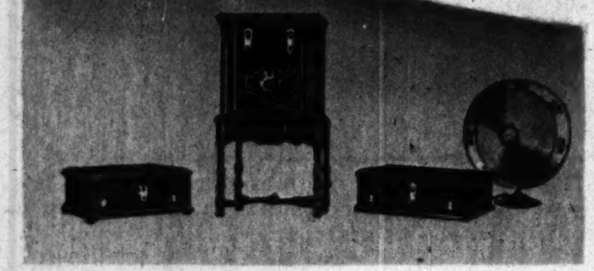
For selectivity sharp as a razor
—tune in a Graybar
RADIO



Sharp selectivity is rightly one of the prime features you should insist on before you choose any one radio. You get it in a Graybar.

Look to the Graybar line for an unusual emphasis on the essentials in radio design—tonal truth, clarity of reception and beauty of cabinet work, as well as selectivity.

Naturally so. An unusual electrical experience, 59 years old, is back of everything Graybar does.

In radio this includes the great work of installing over 140 of the nation's leading broadcasting stations. Enjoy the fruits of this experience. Put Graybar on the receiving end—in your home!

Graybar 330. The super-heterodyne, radio's outstanding circuit, now available in an all electric set. Eight tubes $175

Graybar 340. All electric, super-heterodyne; dynamic speaker. The last word in design and cabinet work $375

The new Gaytees
are at your shoe store NOW

The new So-lite Gaytees. Made entirely of featherweight rubber, they can be snapped on or off in a second. Lightweight, fast-color cloth linings make them smooth-fitting and comfortable. In brown, gunmetal or tan-and-brown.

The trim Gaytees below have an adjustable cuff that you can turn smartly down when streets are merely damp or you go indoors for shopping. Then turn the cuff up protectingly snug when there's driving rain or spattering slush. Brown, black or gray wool jersey. Fast-color linings throughout.

Two Gaytees with the new cross-strap that adjusts to snugness over the slimmest ankle. Below left, brown, gray or black wool jersey with rayon cuff. Below right, brown or gray rayon-and-jersey. Both styles have fast-color linings throughout.

New Colors!
New Fabrics!
New and Smarter Lines!

Six new features you will find in the 1929 Gaytees

1. New styles! Cross-straps; turn-down cuffs that adapt to the weather; a new pointed-back style (slender lines and spatter protection, too!).
2. New colors! The new rosy browns and tans; tannish grays; black.
3. New fabrics! Wools in tweed mixtures. Rayon-and-wool mixtures. All-rubber fabrics in tweed and reptile designs.
4. New lasts that fit the new winter shoes! New heels—four different heights! (A trim fit and smart lines for all your different shoes.)
5. Lighter weight in every pair—yet full protection.
6. Fast-color linings!

New Gaytees, utterly different from the heavy, clumsy overshoes of past years! As different as your smart, stubby little red and green and purple umbrellas are from the black, gangly affairs that used to make rainy days even darker! (When you buy your winter shoes, ask to have them fitted with the Gaytees that match your new winter costume.)

Wear your Gaytees for winter walking; for shopping; for parties. Wear them, just as you carry your umbrella—when there's a threatening cloud in the sky.

We think you will be astonished at the low price range of these new Gaytees. They run from $2.50 to $6.

Look for the name "Gaytees" inside the cuff of every pair. Made only by

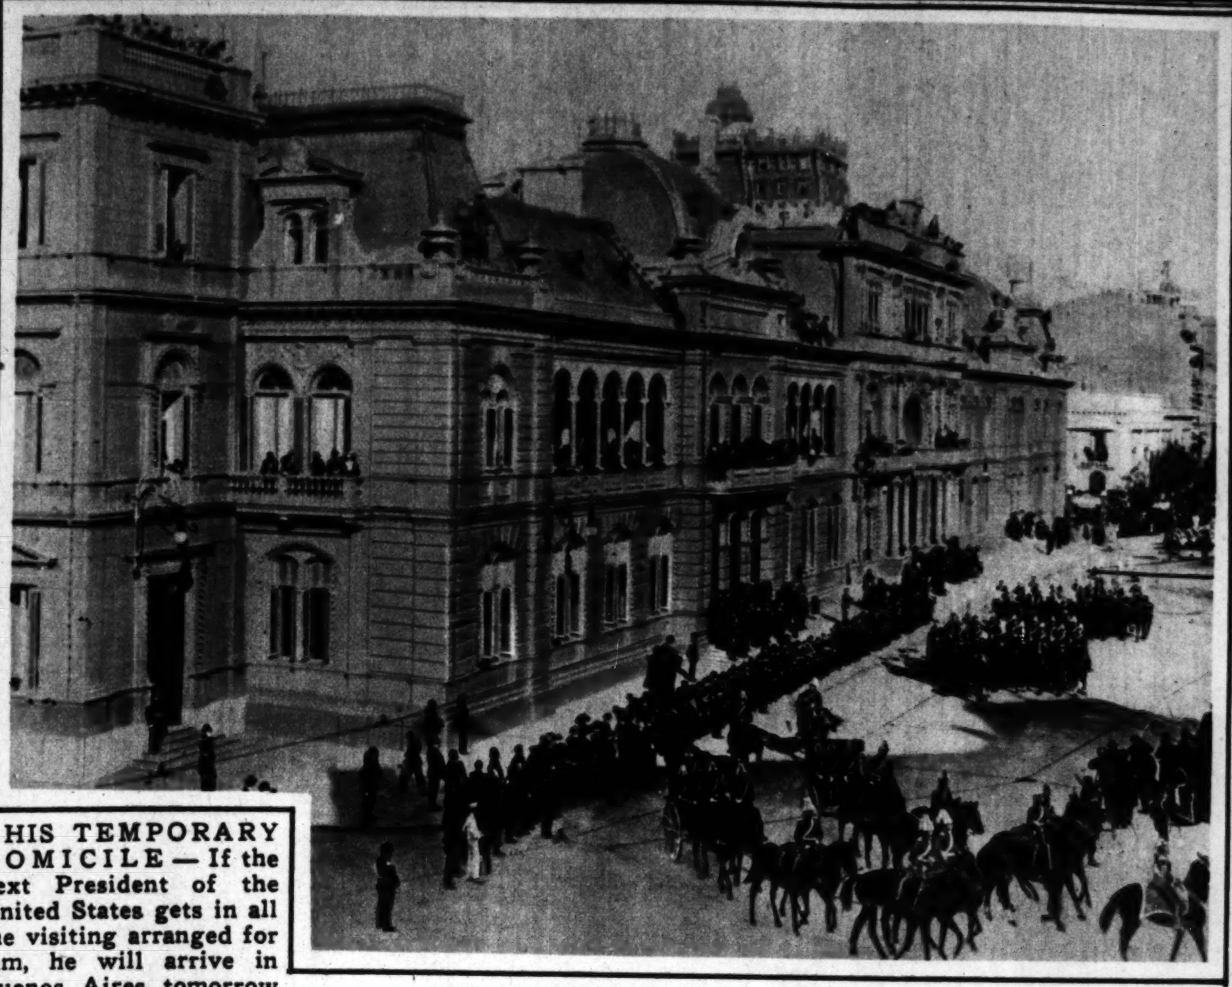
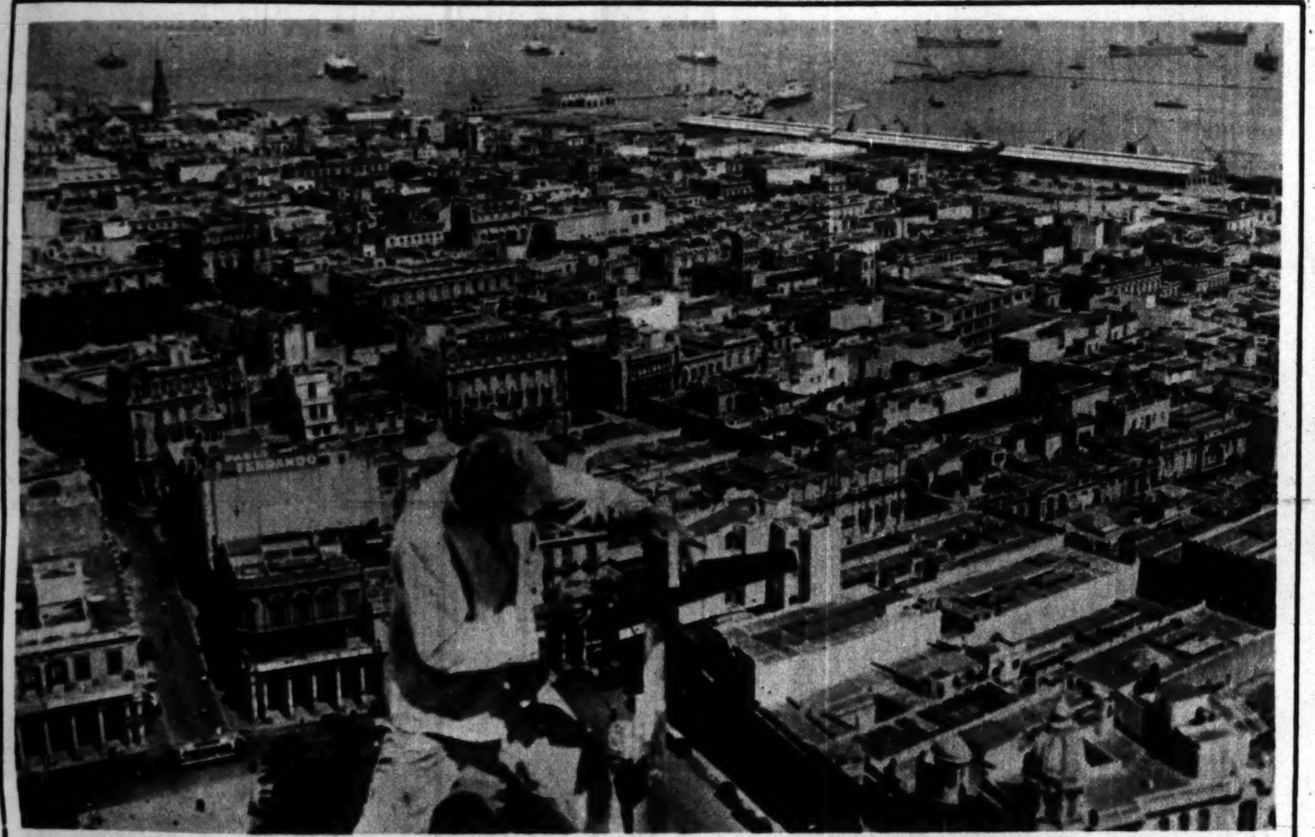
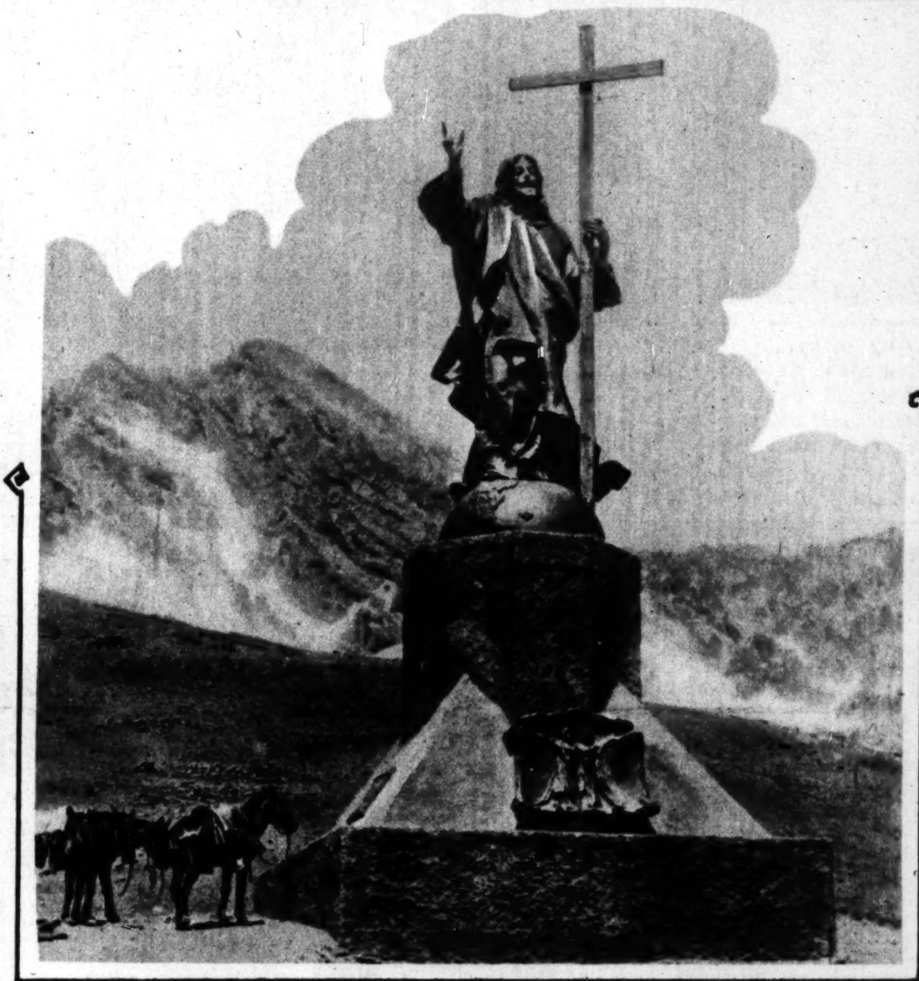
ON HOOVER'S ITINERARY FOR THIS WEEK—Rio de Janeiro's main street, Avenida de Branco. According to his schedule, President Elect Hoover is due to reach the Brazilian capital next Saturday, and to remain there for two days. (Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic.)



HIS TEMPORARY DOMICILE—If the next President of the United States gets in all the visiting arranged for him, he will arrive in Buenos Aires tomorrow morning, after traveling all night across the Argentine pampas, and will be a guest for a day and a night at the Government house, shown here. (Photograph from P. & A.)



IN FAR-OFF URUGUAY—An aerial view of the city and harbor of Montevideo. Mr. Hoover plans to reach there Wednesday of this week and, after a day's visit, to proceed from there to Rio de Janeiro, the last stop on his cross-country trip through South America. (Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic.)



"CHRIST OF THE ANDES"—Mr. Hoover's party was scheduled to visit this 40-foot bronze statue, 11,000 feet above sea level, last week. The heroic figure stands on the Argentine-Chilean line and, as a symbol of international peace, commemorates the adjustment of a boundary dispute between the two countries. Made to make lovely ankles... lovelier

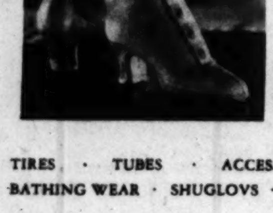
THIS year—it's fashion's command that the lovely contour of foot and ankle must be preserved.

So there's a new mode in footgear protection called Shuglov. Glove-fitting... the very shape of a lovely foot and ankle. Clumsiness and bulk have vanished—weight is found unnecessary. In their place are feather lightness—perfect fit. And Shuglovs are worn over loveliest shoes and stockings in utmost safety and comfort.

There are charming colors for different ensembles. Easy to wipe clean with a damp sponge. Lined for comfort and warmth. The Miller Rubber Company of N. Y., Akron, Ohio, U. S. A.



You will of course want Shuglovs—originated by Miller—immediately. Look for the name. Your favorite shop has them in Nude, Gunmetal and Brown—two styles—the concealed slide fastener and the button-over. Two types of heels—Universal and Cuban. Made of lightest rubber. The top is worn up or down with equal smartness. Sizes 2 to 8. Talon Slide Fastener, manufactured by Hookless Fastener Co. Used on the new Shuglov.

Beautiful Complexion Without Rouge

Do you want a beautiful complexion this week? Without the use of rouge? A skin that fairly sparkles? And color that is all your own? Then give your system just a tiny calcium wafer! Don't take that customary pill on Saturday night—let a Stuart calcium wafer do its magic work for you!

Stuart's calcium wafers clear away every impurity that keeps the skin sallow or dull. It keeps pores purged and the cuticle clean. You will feel and see the difference from the very first day you take a tiny, sugar-coated Stuart calcium wafer!

Don't take anything you have to double each time—take something you can cut in two each time.

The most marvelous and gentlest regulator in the whole world, and your druggist has them, five day test, pocket size 10c; or family size for 60c.

-FULL BOX FREE-

Enough for full test—ample to prove the value to you of Stuart's calcium wafers—will be sent you, if you mail this coupon to the Stuart Co., Dept. C249, Marshall, Mich.

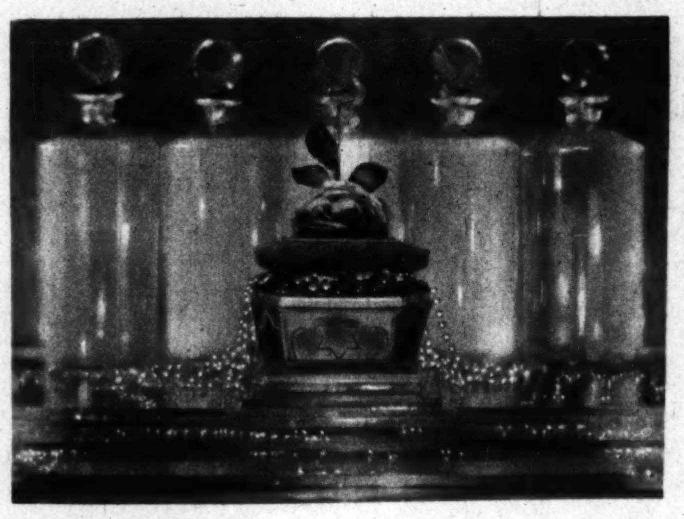
Exquisite Beauty

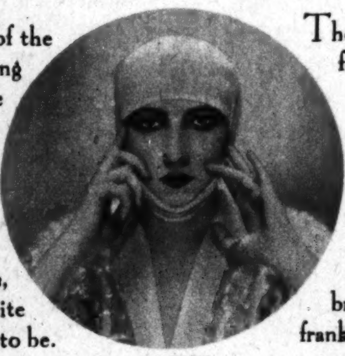
More luminous than a flower, starrier than a jewel is a lovely woman's face



Elizabeth Arden

More than any other woman of her time has added to the beauty of women

Her preparations are sincere and of the purest materials, her method of firming up sagging muscles and toning the color and texture of the skin is the triumphant result of understanding that faces, like flowers and precious gems, need skillful care to keep them finely chiseled and fresh and free from flaws. In the Elizabeth Arden Salons, quiet rooms and soothing fingers invite you in these driven days to take time to be.



DEMEYER

There you find not only fragrant release from strain, but also straight at your elbow, all the lovely gifts which your women friends hope that some wise, sweet person will give them. Many charming things — lingerie, jewels, boutonnieres, perfumes, and the incomparable Elizabeth Arden preparations, as well as rare collections brought from afar, as were the myrrh and frankincense, to lay at the feet of Beauty.

Elizabeth Arden has a charmingly appropriate gift for every woman on your Christmas list

POUDRE D'ILLUSION, Elizabeth Arden's most exquisite powder, in a satin-lined box. Illusion, Rachel, Ocre, Minerva, Banana, White and Mat Foncé. $3.

ELIZABETH ARDEN'S VENETIAN DUSTING POWDER, a delightful luxury, a smooth, fine powder, pure, soft and lightly perfumed. A large box gaily flowered, with a big puff. $3.

PETITE O-BOY, Elizabeth Arden's smart compact, a chased gilt case, containing powder or rouge or both powder and rouge. $2.50.

ELIZABETH ARDEN'S BEAUTY BOXES AND TRAVEL CASES are a perfect gift for the most important names on your list. Leather Travel Cases are $125, $100, $85, $75, $30. Rose lacquered metal boxes, $18, $14, $3.85.

LA JOIE D'ELIZABETH, a new vivacious perfume, with a subtle blend of enticing fragrances. In a smart cubical bottle and French gray suede container. $22.

LE REVE D'ELIZABETH—"The Dream"—a rich, heavy perfume, very effective on fur. Diffuses an air of luxury and regal charm. In container similar to La Joie. $22.

The BEAUTYREST

IN ITS STUNNING NEW COVER

BEAUTYREST

A Gorgeous Christmas Gift

for each of your dear ones this year

DAYS of new beauty, nights of sweeter rest! What more thoughtful and gracious Christmas gift could you choose for a loved one this year than this gorgeous new mattress—the Simmons Beautyrest?

Long famous for comfort, now, in time for Christmas, 1928, the Beautyrest makes its bow in a stunning new costume—a cover of real damask in two French patterns, and six lovely colors.

An all-over pattern of delicate leaves in light blue, rose and lilac; a medallion pattern in sea-foam green, beige and Venetian blue.

This mattress, the unique achievement of the Simmons Company—world's largest makers of beds, springs and mattresses—boasts a special form of construction.

Hundreds of inner coils, overlaid with thick upholstery, make the Beautyrest the marvelous piece of equipment that it is—the mattress chosen by the best hotels, and by women of nation-wide prominence for their own homes. Now they are expressing their delight in the glory of its new covering!

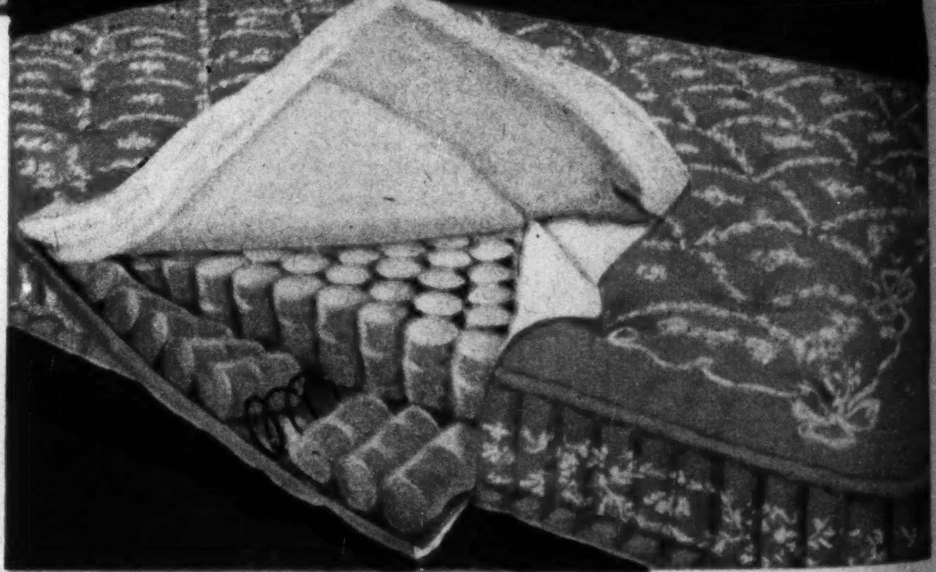
How much more practical is the gift of a Beautyrest than those hosts of pretty trifles you usually shower upon your dear ones at Christmas time!

It brings with it glowing new beauty and the gift of blessed slumber, and will serve to suggest other lovely gifts in years to come—until each "one's own room" is a place of lasting loveliness.

Your Christmas Beautyrest is on display in leading furniture and department stores in its new damask covering, at no greater cost than before! Simmons Beautyrest Mattress, $39.50, Simmons Ace Spring, $19.75, Simmons Beds, $10.00 to $60.00. The Simmons Company, New York, Chicago, Atlanta, San Francisco.

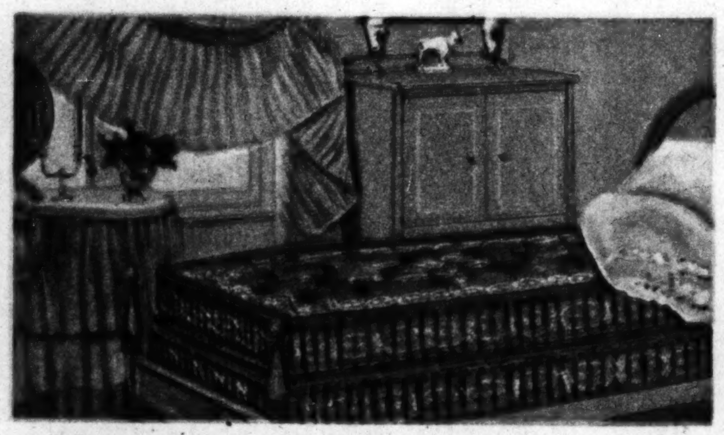
No spot in the home is as dear as "one's own room" and a gift that adds to its comfort and beauty is sure to bring joy to Mother, Dad, Sister or Brother at Christmas time!

A Simmons Beautyrest for Your Wife—will outlast by many years the pretty trifles you usually give her, will bring lasting beauty to her sanctum! Its trim, tailored lines and its edges that cannot be crushed are a boon to the fastidious housewife! Mrs. A. J. Drexel Biddle praises its luxurious comfort, and says, "An inner construction only a genius could devise!", The medallion patterned damask in sea-foam green is charming in the early American setting of this country house.



The New Damask-Covered Simmons Beautyrest Mattress—your Christmas gift this year! A center of hundreds of small, fine coils, each cloth encased to insure individual freedom of action and greater resiliency. Deep layers of luxurious upholstery. Satiny damask cover, two patterns, six colors. $39.50

Comfort and Elegance—are added to this already charming room by the handsome Beautyrest in the all-over pattern in pale blue. The Simmons Bed is model No. 1539.



A Beautyrest for Your Daughter—who will adore its new damask covering. In this room, designed for a young girl by Mrs. John Alden Carpenter. The mattress is in the medallion pattern, Venetian blue.

HERE'S SANTA WITH HIS REINDEER, already on his way south from his headquarters in Alaska. But his bag of gifts so far contains only tundra moss, the chief diet of his chargers in the far north. (Photograph from International.)

ONE OF SANTA'S WORKSHOPS, where his dolls are all provided with European and Asiatic costumes. And every single doll will go out to warm the heart of some little girl two weeks from next Tuesday. (Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic.)

DRESS REHEARSAL—Who says there's no Santa Claus? Here is—or are—an even score of him, practicing up for the big job awaiting him—or them—on Christmas eve. (Photograph from International.)

SANTA HAS BEEN HERE ALREADY, it would appear, and the poor little rich girl has received just everything—a sporty, two footpower racer, a cab for the dolls, and a three-wheeled gadabout, and lots and lots and lots of other things! (Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic.)

'TWAS THE NIGHT BEFORE CHRISTMAS, and all through the flat not a creature was stirring—not even the cat! You see, the cat's chief tormentors were waiting patiently to find out if their stockings would be filled with bones.

LINENS for GIFTS

Of all the gifts she receives, a woman really appreciates most the enduring one of linens. Chicago's largest and most beautiful linen shop invites the discriminating Christmas shopper to view a marvelous collection from the markets of the world.

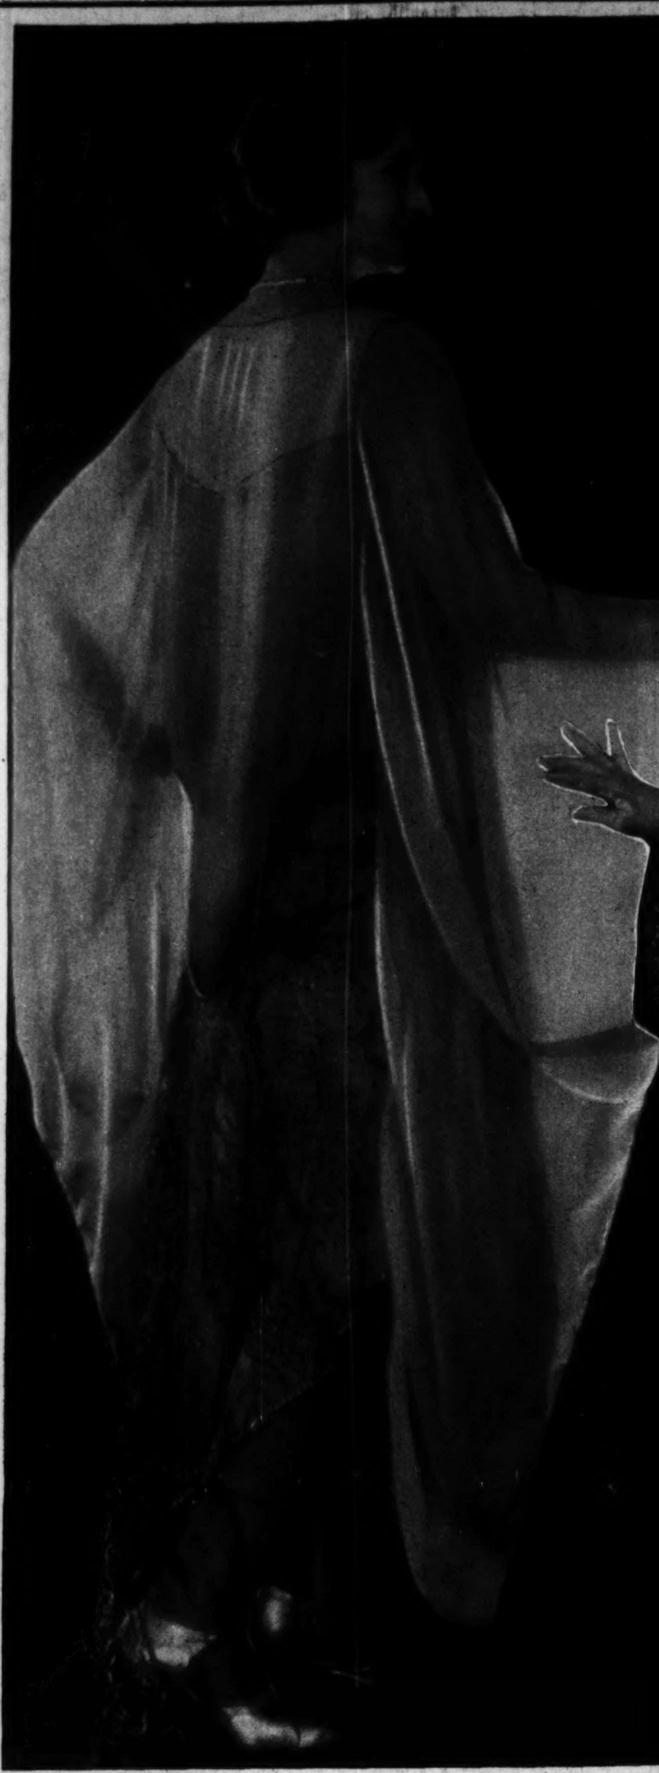
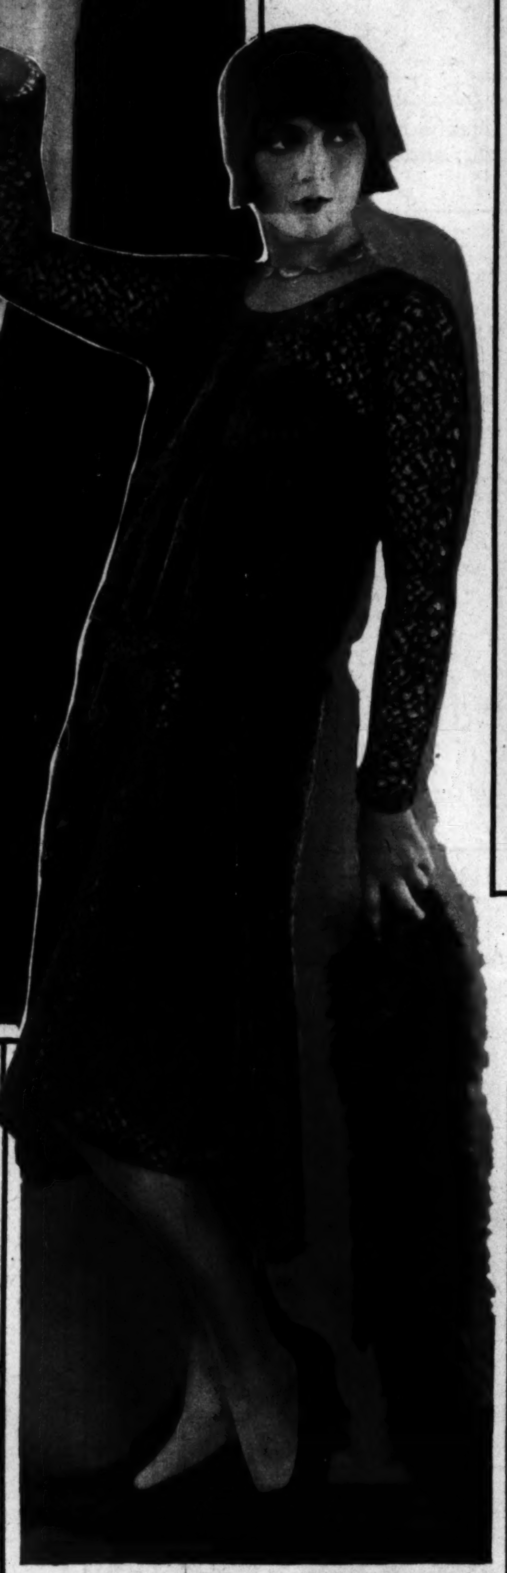
HINTS for HUSBANDS

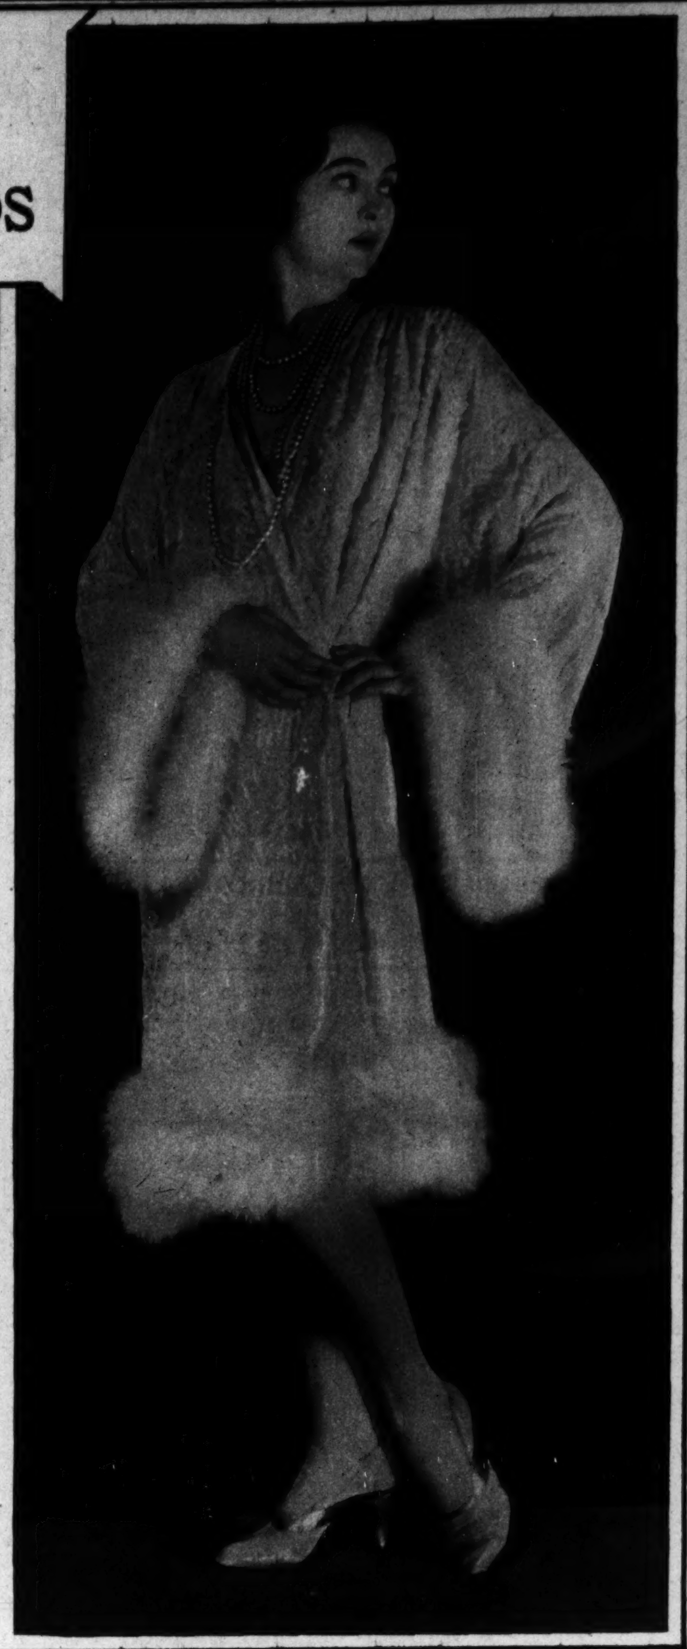


THE COLOR'S THE MARVEL in this lovely tea gown which should make a delightful Christmas present for any wife. The chiffon shades from pale blue to orange, and the front and little pointed train are of delicate gold lace, with a frosty glitter.

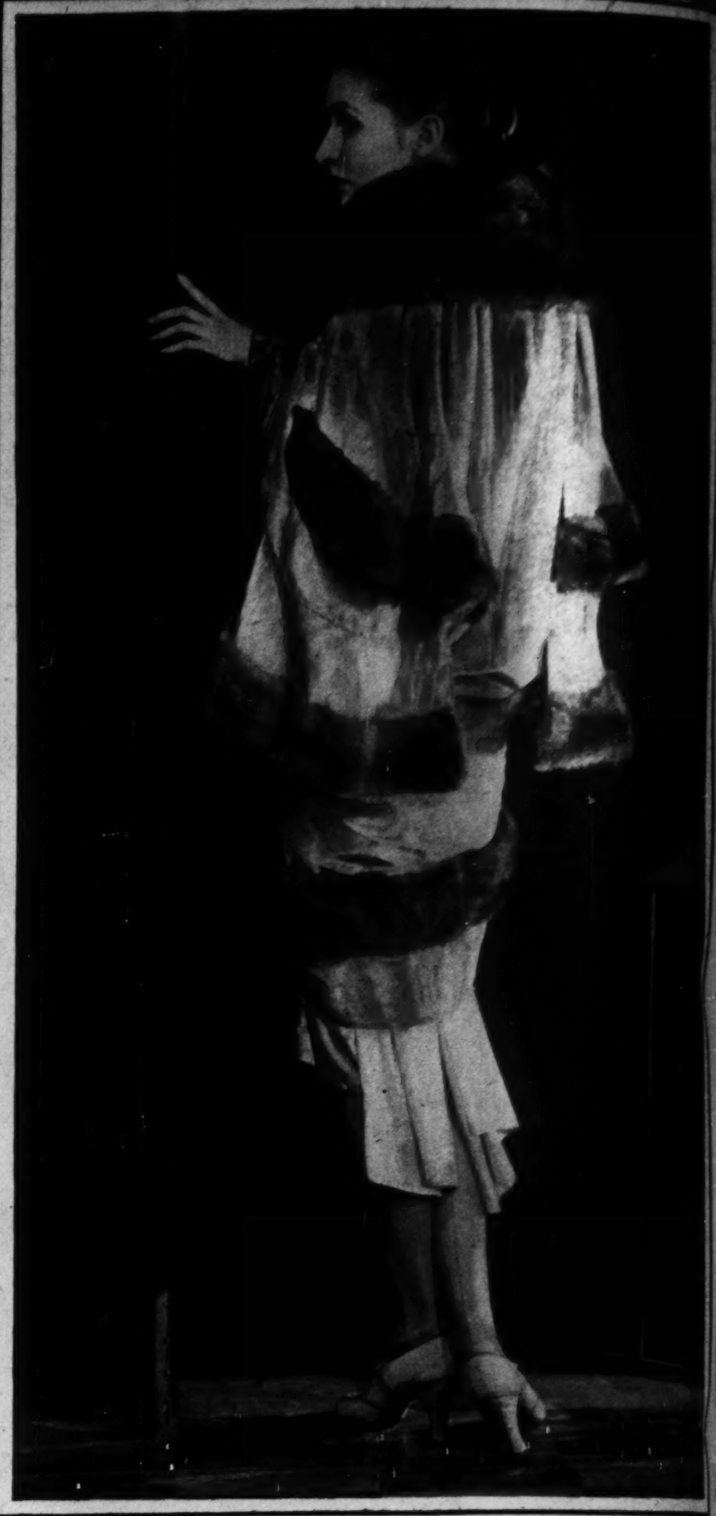
(Photograph from Fab.)



THE CRAZE FOR LACE continues, as is proved by this ultra-smart afternoon frock, made minus any trimming except that so gracefully afforded by the flowing jabots and the elongated flounce in back. The color is sunburn brown. Husbands going in for this sort of present must let the wives do the picking, of course. (Photograph from Fab.)

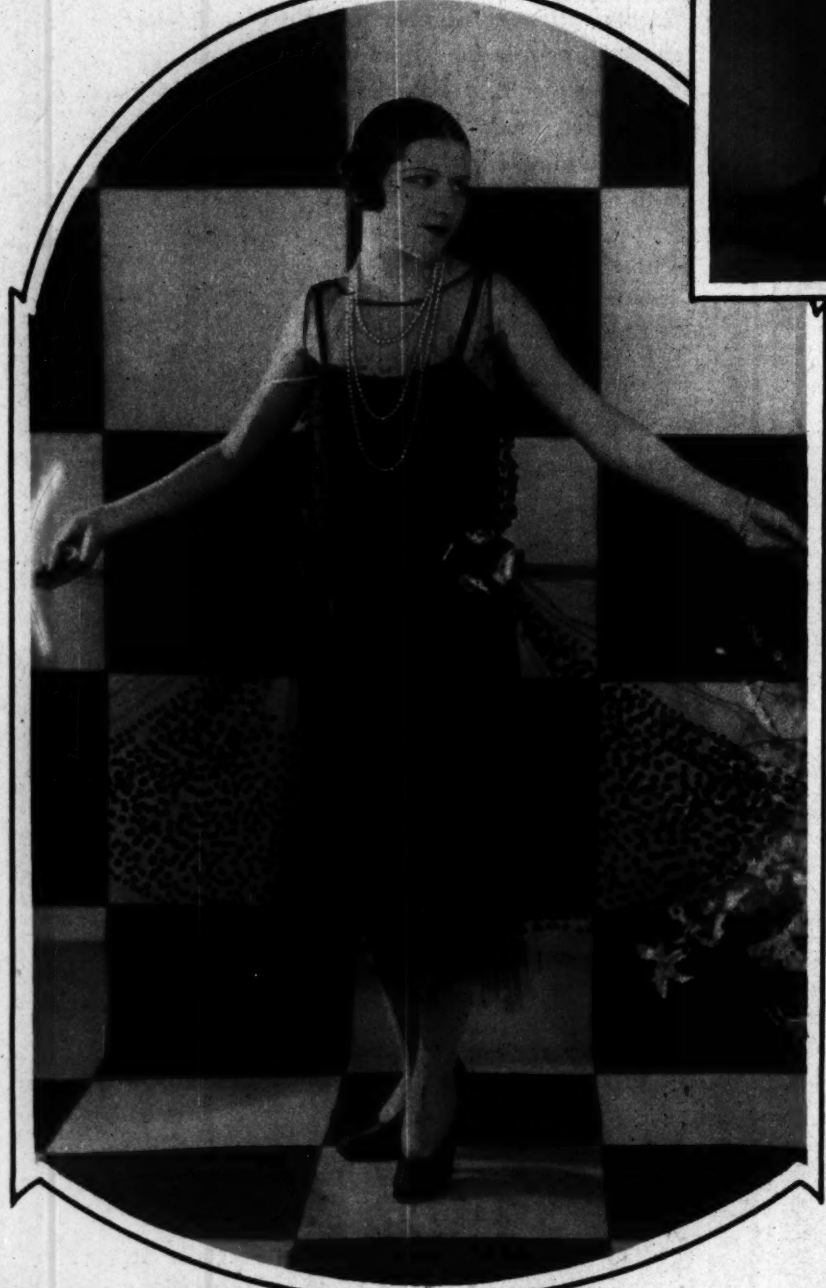


THIS WHITE DREAM is an evening wrap of transparent rayon brocaded on silk georgette. Fluffy marabou fashions the wide cuffs and encircles the hem of the skirt. What a Christmas present this would be! (Photograph from Fab.)



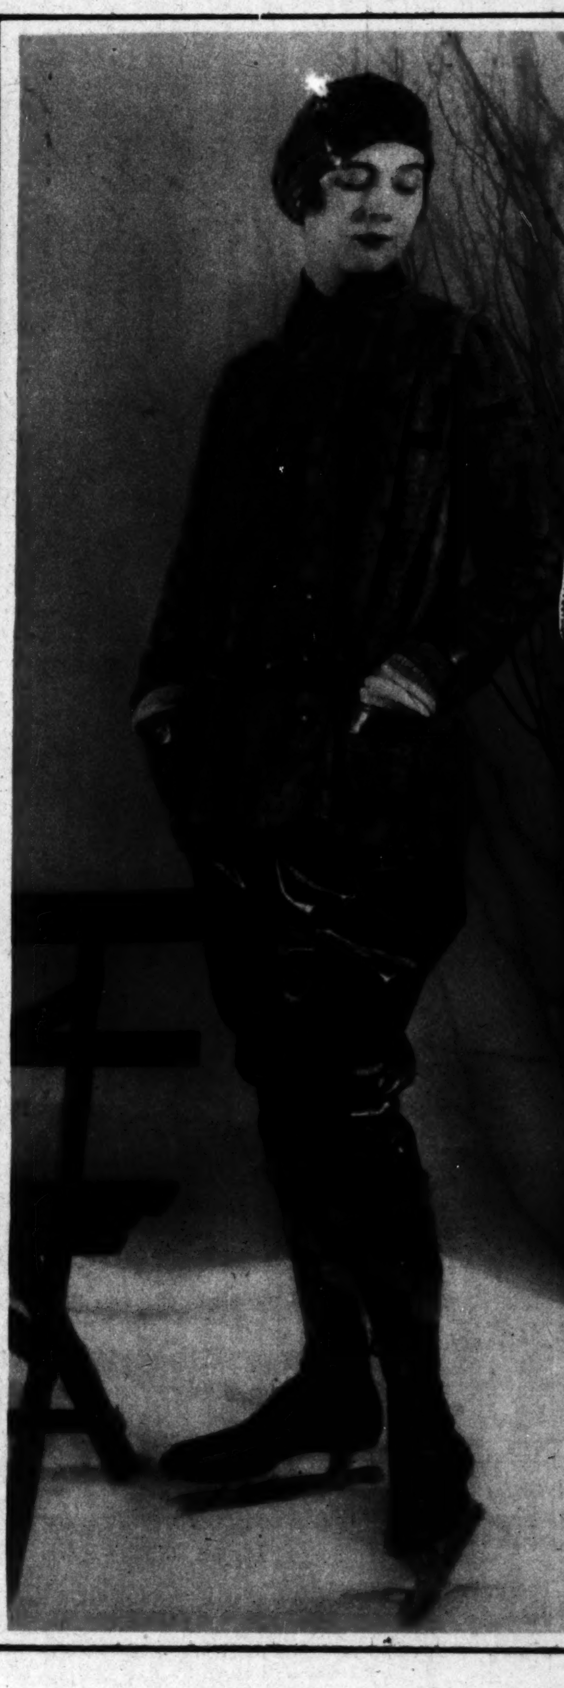
SOPHISTICATION AND GRACE are in every line of this evening cape, created by Paquin, of gold and rayon cloth. The fur—yes, it's Russian sable, the most appropriate choice for such a gorgeous material. It might be worn by a princess.

(Photograph from Fab.)

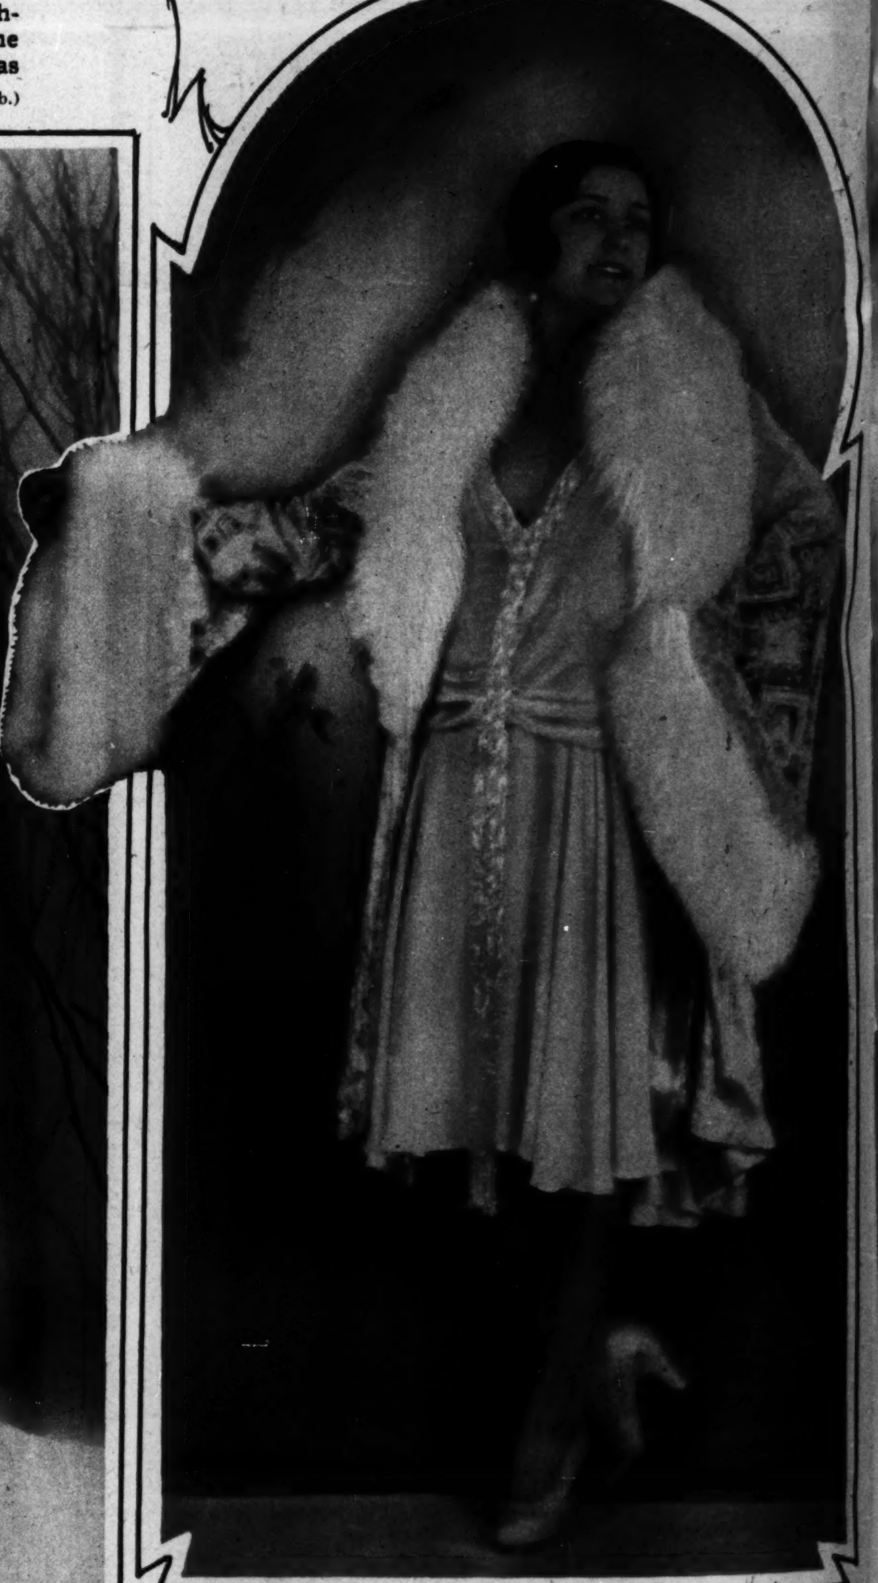


A DANCE FROCK from Doeuillet is of black net with panels of chenille dots—a fabric much the vogue in Paris at the present moment. It is worn over a slip of black satin and is set off by strands of pearls.

(Photograph from Wide World.)



POUR LE SPORT! In this gay costume for skating or skiing, the knickers are of leather; the jacket, of heavy wool in modernistic design of orange, Nile green and yellow, is trimmed with leather; and the debonair little hat is a combination of the two materials. 'Twould make an ideal Christmas gift for a flapper daughter or a young wife. (Photograph from Fab.)



AN ENSEMBLE deserving all the adjectives of beauty and lots of exclamation points besides. It comes straight from Paris. The coat is cloth of silver, embroidered in red tones on the sleeves and heavily trimmed with white fox. The simple little gown is of transparent velvet, with a glittering band of silver for added charm.

More Hints for Husbands

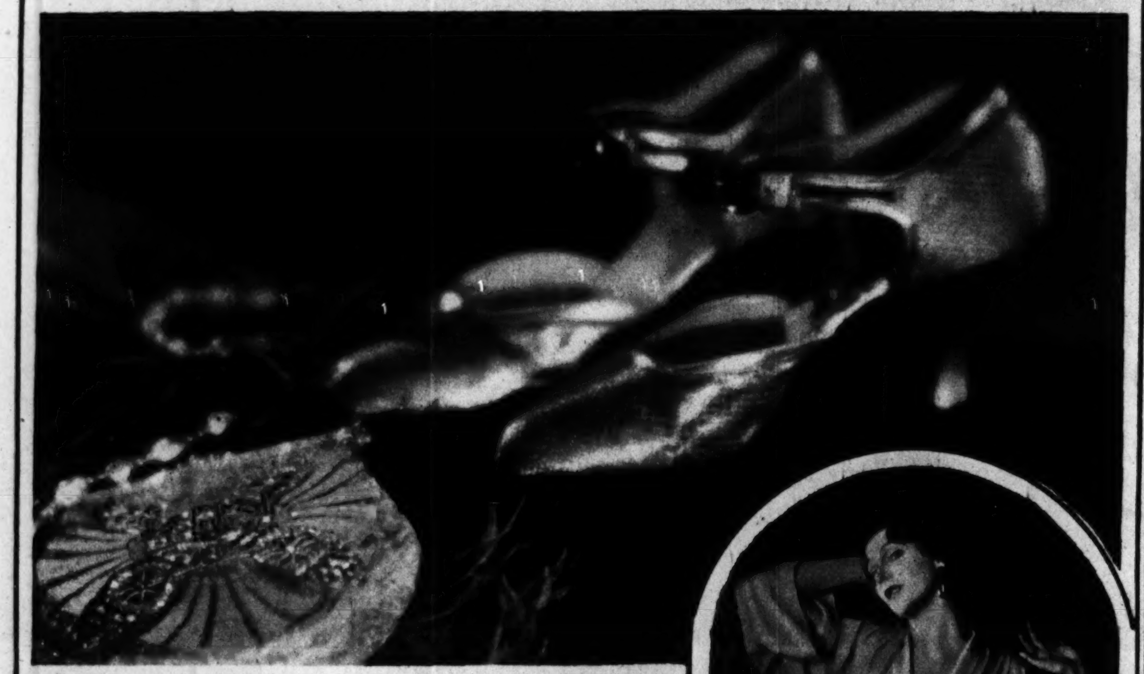
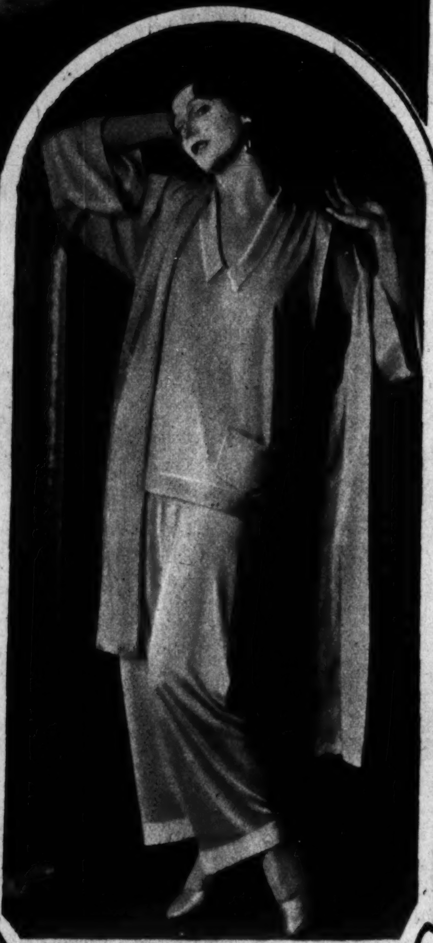
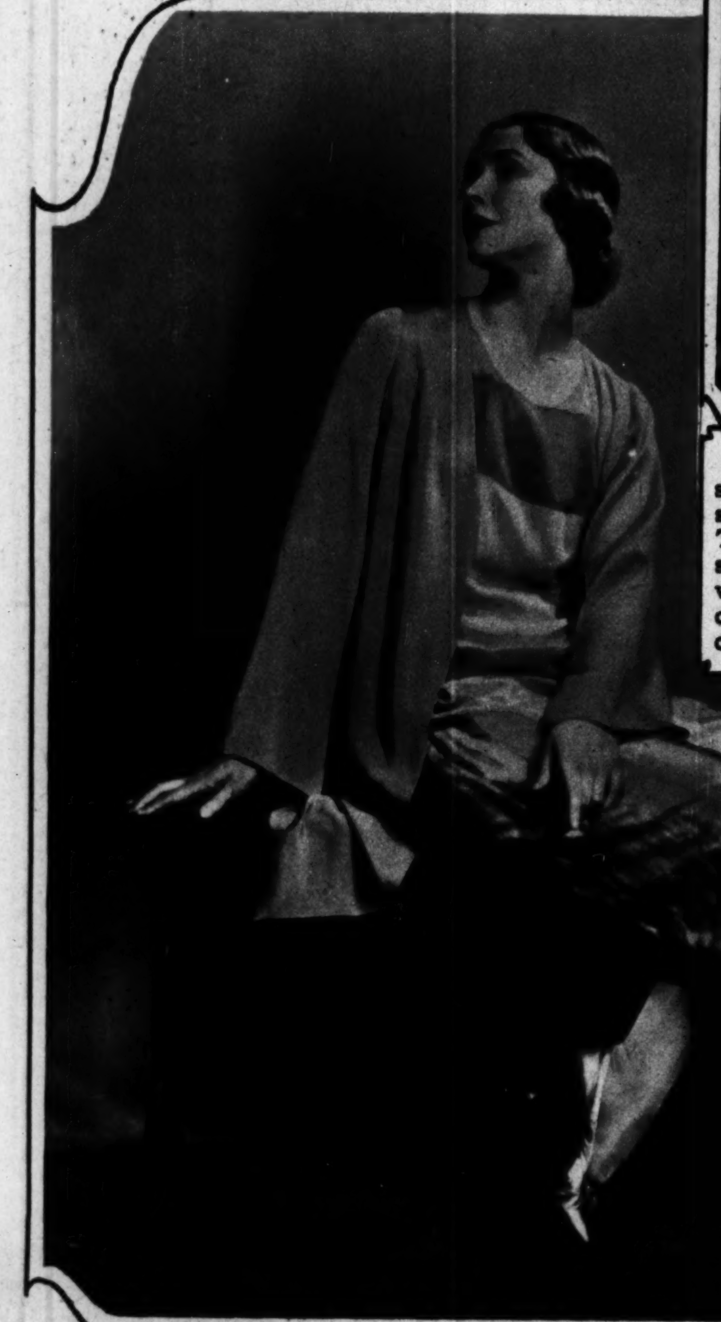
FOR THE GIRL WHO "HAS EVERYTHING" these sophisticated gifts will still be unalloyed joy. The debonair jacket of glittering gold sequins, worn over the dinner or evening gown, wards off the draughts that creep into the best homes; the fan of organdy is of the stuff dreams are made of; the nine strand pearl necklace is worthy of the smartest debutante, and the crystal ornaments are made to twinkle on the newest dance slippers.



WAITING FOR A CINDERELLA are these lovely slippers trimmed in gold kid and buckled with simulated rubies, and the thoughtful Christmas shopper will not go wrong in buying an evening bag, too, like this crystal one whose mountings match the fastenings of the slippers.



A LOUNGING COSTUME, strictly tailored, that is beautiful in shades of green, pink and in white. The coat hangs straight, with a softly rolling tuxedo collar and wide, graceful sleeves. Bands of contrasting material form the cuffs on the trousers.



LUCKY THE WOMAN who will spend a leisure hour in royal purple and pale coral crepe pajamas with a chic, little jacket to match. Bifurcated costumes are now the vogue of the boudoir. Husbands take note!

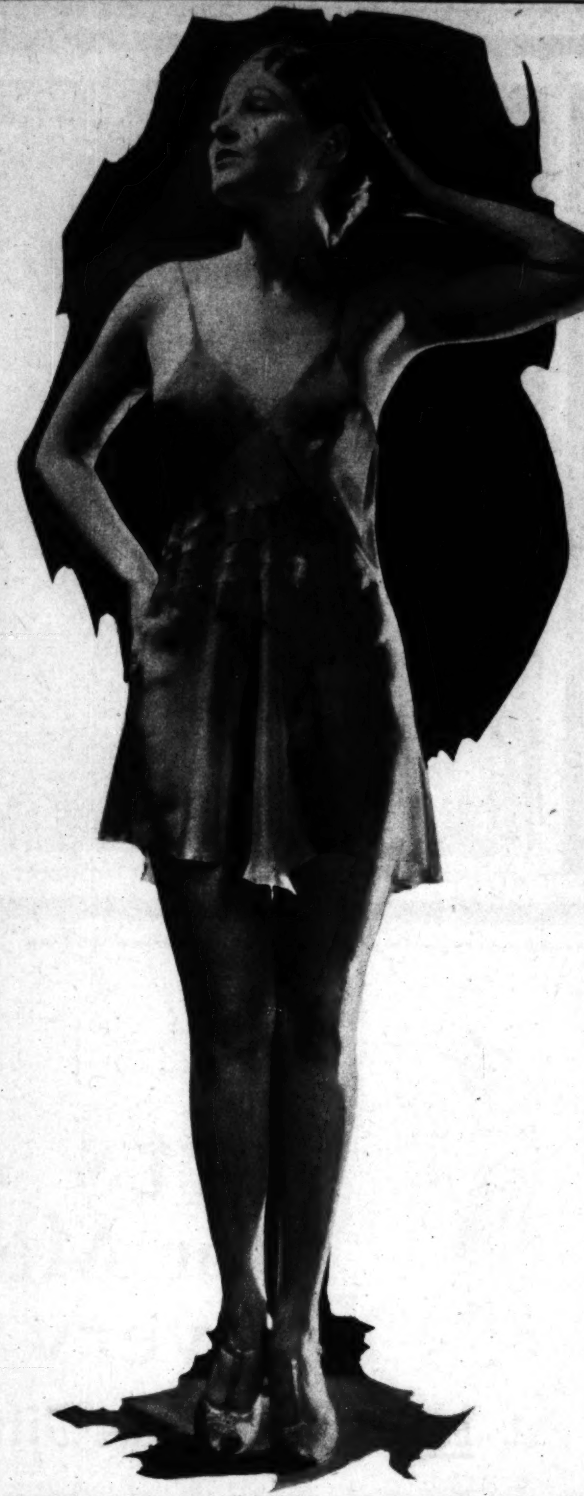
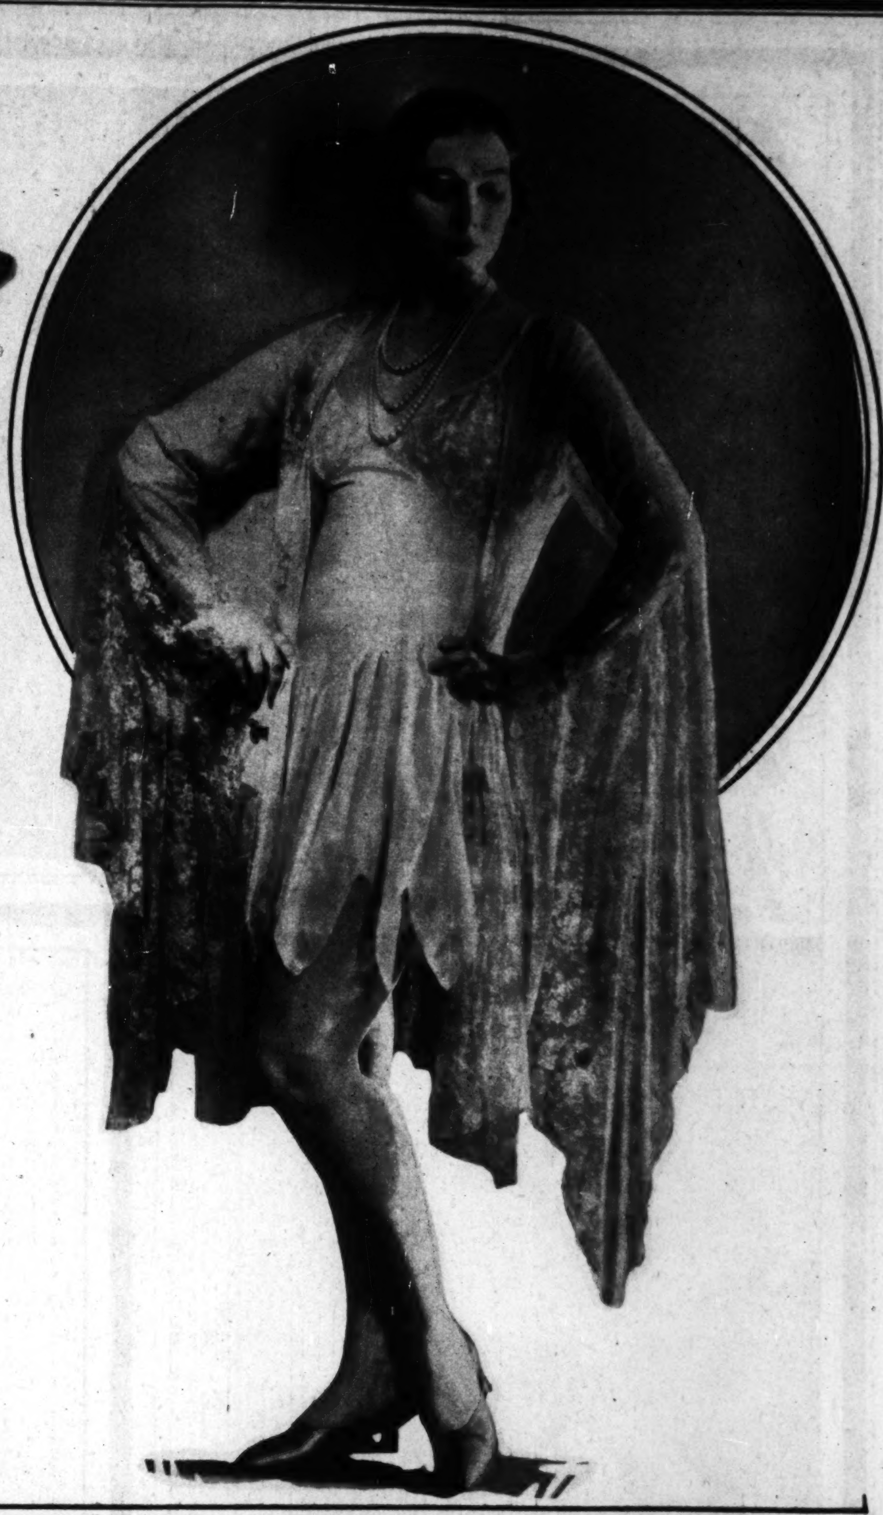
THAT CHRISTMAS CHECK might well be used for the filmy lingerie which every woman loves but hesitates to buy for herself. The fine plaits at the sides of this step-in achieve a graceful little flare, and the lace bodice, with insets of finely tucked and hemstitched crepe de chine, make it lovely enough to wear under the very best bib and tucker.



GRECIAN IN ITS SIMPLICITY of line is this French bit of rayon crepe, and the diagonal tucking of sheer rayon marquisette proves that what's new in gowns is new in underthings. Needless to say, this garment is handmade.



THIS STEP-IN of chiffon and lace, made to set off the modern form fitting evening gown, would bring a delighted smile to the lips of any Eve, and the graceful negligee of lace and chiffon is the last perfect touch.

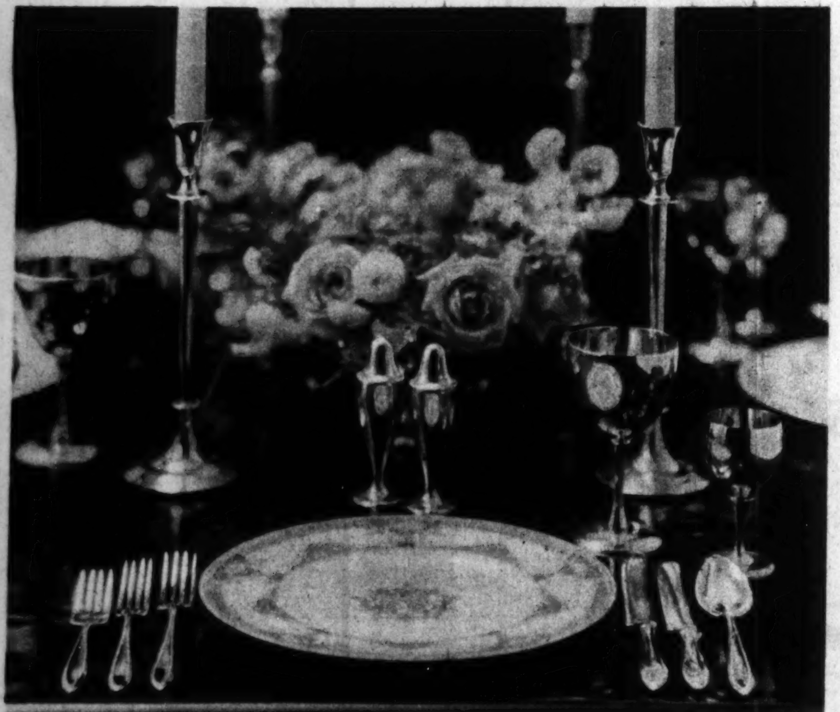
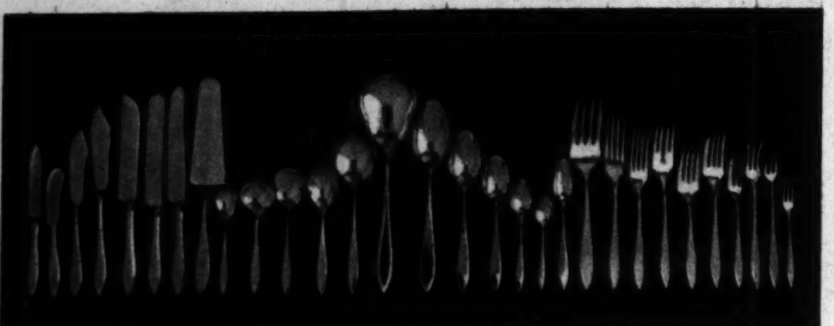
What joy – at Christmas – to give or to receive DIRIGOLD

the exquisite ware of enduring beauty



Dirigold is indescribably lovely when combined with colorful linens, laces, (on black, as illustrated) beautiful china, crystal and dainty flowers.



A complete assortment of knives, forks and spoons for all occasions enables one to increase a Dirigold table service to any amount desired.

Ask about the Dirigold Budget Plan

Dirigold

EVERY woman who sees Dirigold is fascinated with this lovely new tableware that brings the golden age of decorative ware to the home. Make her longing to possess Dirigold—if only a single piece—a reality on Christmas day. Your gift will be treasured for a lifetime.

Solid clear through, Dirigold has the beauty and lustre of pure gold but its price is very much less.

Dirigold contributes rare beauty to this modern age of color in the home—especially to the table. A few pieces combined with one's own linens, china and crystal or an entire table service—in either case, the effect is beautiful. Graceful candlesticks, a stunning vase or a dainty boudoir lamp—these are among many exquisite Dirigold pieces for other parts of the home.

You may see Dirigold in your own home before purchasing it, if you will arrange with our Service Department to have our representative call at your convenience. He will arrange in your dining room various table displays and demonstrate how Dirigold will add just the touch you are seeking for various other places throughout your home.

THAT'S WHAT I'M GOING TO DO.
UNCLE WALT, HOW DO YOU SPELL HETERODYNE?
I DON'T KNOW BUT IT SOUNDS GENEROUS. LET'S SEE YOUR LIST.
I SEE A LOT OF GIFTS WRITTEN DOWN BUT YOU HAVEN'T PUT DOWN WHO THEY'RE FOR.
OH, THEY'RE FOR ME!
THAT IS NOT THE PROPER SPIRIT, HONEY. YOU SHOULD THINK WHAT YOU ARE TO GIVE OTHERS, NOT ABOUT WHAT YOU WANT TO GET.
OH!
YOU SEE MY LIST! SOMETHING FOR AUNTIE BLOSSOM, SOMETHING FOR GRANDMA SOMETHING FOR CORKY-
YES BUT YOU'VE GOT ME DOWN FOR A NEW OVERCOAT AND I'D RATHER HAVE A CHEMISTRY SET.
YOU WILL FIND THERE IS REALLY MORE PLEASURE IN GIVING THAN IN RECEIVING.
THAT'S WHAT I WAS TRYIN' TO DO- MAKE IT NICE FOR OTHER PEOPLE TO GIVE ME THINGS.
HOW ARE YOU GETTING ON, SKEEZIX? GOT YOUR LIST MADE OUT?
PRETTY NEAR.
YOU SEEM TO BE LIBERAL ENOUGH. HOW ARE YOU GOING TO BUY ALL THESE TO GIVE AWAY?
YOU ARE TO DO THAT FOR ME.
NO, THAT WON'T DO. GIVING SHOULD MEAN SOME SACRIFICE. YOU HAVE SOME MONEY IN YOUR BANK. YOU MAY USE AS MUCH AS YOU LIKE FOR GIFTS.
AW RIGHT, UNCLE WALT!
I'VE GOT IT NOW. I'M GOING TO GIVE ICE CREAM CONES ALL AROUND.
WELL THAT'S RATHER A QUANTITY PROPOSITION. DON'T YOU THINK YOU'D BETTER PUT SOME THOUGHT INTO IT AND GET SOMETHING DIFFERENT FOR EACH ONE?

Decorative Negligees for the Lounging Hour

If You're One of the Lucky Sisters to Whom Afternoon Tea Is Not a Myth, You'll Be Interested in These Lovely, Lacy Costumes.

By Corinne Lowe.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—The world of women may be divided into two groups. One waits on breakfast and the other waits for it. Yes, there may be minor subdivisions but certainly this broad classification is enough to determine one need, at least. It is the character of our negligee.

It goes without saying that our former type, the women who scramble from their beds to squeeze oranges and "perk" coffee and fry bacon for husband and children, do not admit as their most poignant necessity a rose colored chiffon peignoir with a cobweb of lace for a jacket. What they want for those matinal flights of heroism is a warm robe.

Just because a garment is warm, however, it need not be doomed to complete ugliness. The frumpy Mother Hubbard of the last century has, in fact, no lineal descendant. Today the most practical negligee possesses some claim to smartness and distinction.

In the group of negligees which we have illustrated today we do not include any of the warm robe types. As a matter of fact, these models vary little from one season to another. Consequently we find the same tailored robes of flannel in plain, striped or plaided effect; the same creations of quilted taffeta, crêpe and satin built on lines severe as those of a man's dressing gown; again coat robes in velveteen and corduroy set off with Tuxedo collars are here to satisfy that martial spirit wrestling with cold, darkness and frying pans at 6 a. m.

Between the groups of lingerie clients—those who arise to get breakfast and those who merely arouse to get it, there is one possible compromise. It consists of the robe of velvet. As a logical outcome of a widespread interest in this fabric, negligees of all types have succumbed to the velvet spell. Of course, some of these models are "far too good for Human Nature's daily food." Set off with fur or marabou, combined with metallic brocades or various lamé tissues, they have no more place in the average woman's life than has the ice man in a home just fitted with an artificially cooled refrigerator.

But then, on the contrary, there are many others of tailored mien that combine feminine charm with fitness for womanly duties. To this class belong decisively those new models of printed velvet often set off with satin Tuxedo collar and revers. Imagine one of these velvets in a dark winey red printed in one of the confetti or floral designs now so much in vogue and blended with satin to match some tone in the print and you have imagined the ideal combination of warmth, practical coloring and beauty.

Now for the other type of woman. Suppose we start her off on her day of hardship with pajamas such as some of the celebrated French dressmakers have concocted for her. This being our purpose, we can do no better than point to the fourth of our group of four large sketches. For nothing could initiate you more thoroughly into the spirit of femininity which has invaded our bifurcated garments than does this dizzy recipe for making apricot crêpe.

The first thing you will notice about the upper section of this ravishing outfit is the peplum. Truly the lamp shades of night are falling fast—for morning boudoir wear—and a number of both pajamas and dressing gowns show the minaret or lamp shade flounce. It is unnecessary to comment that such flaring flounces demand a new and more ample sleeve treatment. They do. And, indeed, even when the flounce is not present, sleeves of today's negligees are apt to be exaggerated bellshaped affairs such as we find in three instances here on the page.

In the case of our pajamas, the bellshaped sleeves are embroidered in the same silver thread that finishes the peplum. And again this metallic thread is given play in the trousers—those fanciful creations alternating finely tucked sections with plain bands embroidered in silver. The tucking is repeated in a yoke effect that includes the top of the sleeves and the garment receives its diploma of individual elegance in a collar draped to achieve its choker top and tying in streamers at the back.

Now, here is one of the ways to be different as you sip your morning coffee or chocolate. If you wish to be more orthodox, however,—well there, after all, is the cocktail jacket. This garment has, in fact, taken as complete possession of the boudoir as it has of more public haunts and whether it serve as concomitant to the lounging pajamas or whether it top a tea gown of chiffon or metal tissue it marks a negligee as being of the latest inspiration.

They come in ever so many fabrics—do these jaunty cocktail jackets. Velvet, velveteen, crêpes, cire metal fabrics, metal brocades—all are on the honor roll of service. They are, however, perhaps at their very best in metal brocaded version. For instance, there is one current model made in pink, blue and silver brocade banded in gold and lined with blue crêpe which looks like a bit out of the Arabian Nights.

The beauty of this garment—it is a virtue common to the entire cocktail jacket family—lies in the fact that it will consort with various negligee foundations. Pose it over jumper and trousers of black satin and it will make the most enchanting outfit of lounging pajamas. Or set off a simple sleeveless tea gown of gold lamé with that colorful wrap and you can fancy nothing more finished.

Mention of the tea gown brings us to a domain of the negligee which may be shared equally by our two types of women. Even though we may have arisen to get the family breakfast, we like to forget that grewsome history at 4 p. m. The tea hour when some of our friends drop in upon us—here is an occasion knowing no distinction between the leisure and occupied classes.

Tea gowns run through such a gamut of styles that it is impossible to do more than indicate a few general trends. The flounce, the tier, the peplum, a frequent irregularity of hem, a partiality to lace and types of handwork—by this summary the situation is covered. One must, however, mention incidentally the influence of the princess silhouette, for this is to be marked not only in negligees but in lingerie as well.

For example, regard our third sketch. Here the fashion line is the line royal, for the upper section of that mauve velvet garment worn over a plaited slip of chartreuse chiffon exploits the molded corsage of the princess silhouette. The combination of colors in this imported creation is lovely, especially when we consider the final details. These consist of gold lace applied as a yoke in the back and bands in the front; a lining of pale mauve satin revealed in the train of the coat and in those sleeves of medieval amplitude and, last of all, a bouquet of flowers mingling the two tones of mauve with the chartreuse of the slip.

Typical of the season's fanciful range of negligee ideas is this model. Also is it eloquent of a present day trick of fusing tea gown and informal dinner gown into one.

Center: A model which will do duty for the hostess at either tea or small dinner is found in our first sketch, an imported creation of turquoise satin set off with cream lace.

Next, a rose colored ensemble of georgette trimmed with cream lace and embroidery reserves its feminine atmosphere for the tea hour.

Another charming hostess gown is found in a combination of plaited chartreuse chiffon slip with a lace trimmed coat of dark mauve velvet lined with satin in a lighter tone.

Last, new and elaborate lounging pajamas of apricot crepe invoke stitching of silver thread, much tucking and the minaret peplum for their novel feminine charm.

Left: At the top a slip of white crepe de chine is treated to godets and band of the popular Alencon lace. Below, a bandeau of the same lace. Third, an envelope chemise of rose georgette, finely plaited and trimmed with lace, dips fashionably at one side.

Last, a corselet of heavy pink satin brocaded in rosebuds.

Right: At the top a chemise of finest white linen is tucked and trimmed with real lace.

Below, step-ins with the popular fitted top are made of green georgette bound in yellow self-material and inset with bands of the latter tint.

Below, a pink glove silk combination is trimmed with lace.

Last, a rubber girdle with brocade front and a white satin girdle set off with real lace.

A DOLLAR FOR YOUR DREAMS

Only Half the Truth.

While taking some courses at college I met one of those big, blonde, silent fellows. Friends of his informed me that he was working his way through and supporting his mother. The fact that even after many calls I knew nothing or practically nothing about his work or about himself made me just the least bit suspicious of him.

One night I dreamed that my friend called and as he sat down on a rocking chair in our parlor a holster struck the arm. I awoke, startled. He was—a holster.

When he did call a few evenings later I slipped my hand inside of his coat and found—a holster. However I am proud to have a Federal officer as my beau. My dream did not tell me enough.

"IT'S GOOD" said the Druggist
"YOU BET IT'S GOOD" says Mr. McMahon

"My business is harvesting ice out of the river and selling it wholesale and retail," says Mr. McMahon. "It's pretty cold sometimes when we are cutting ice. Sometimes I come home with a bad cough. I found by experience that REM is the best relief. I saw about REM in the papers and John Kennedy, the druggist on Ontario St. near Park Ave., told me it was good, so I tried it with good results. My wife has given it to our six children and she likes it as well as I do. They like to take it and it certainly does the work."

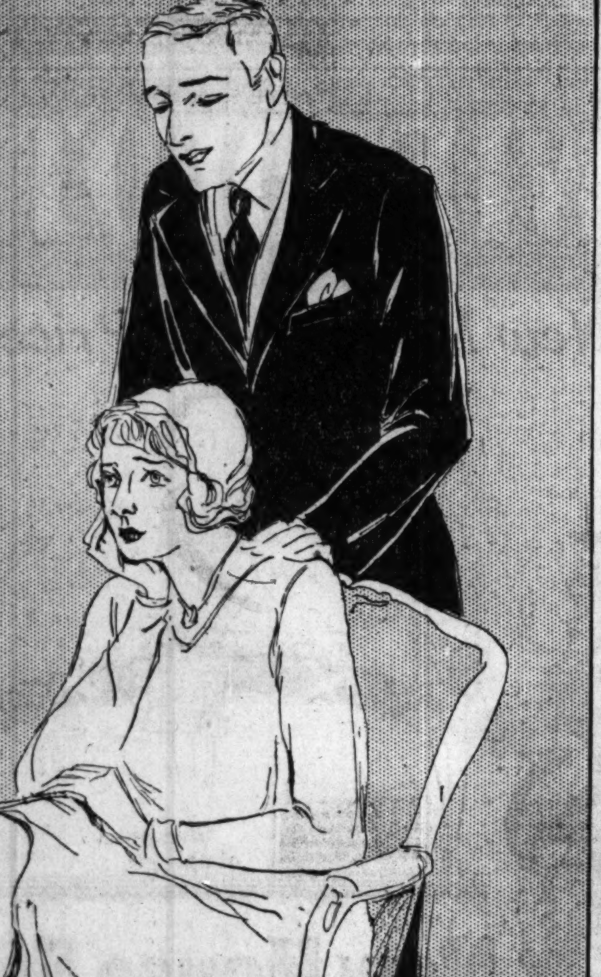
A Little Praise Works Miracles

We All Like It and We All Need It, So Why Be Stingy with a Few Generous Words?

by Doris Blake

Reg. U S Pat Off



EVERYBODY needs praise. Even that overbearingly confident person who gets on your nerves can take his praise and be better for it. The diffident one should be fed hearty portions of it. And the average person's response to well directed praise is to make a happier individual of him or her.

We were forced to listen in on a little domestic argument that hovered around this matter of praise. The wife, most of the time an inarticulate person, but driven by the pressure of pure economic needs, broke out in a rash of abuse at her poor, confused mate. The latter is one of the type who would prosper better were he served occasional generous doses of this thing we're talking about. His courage needs a good bolstering every now and then. A lovable person he is, and anything but a cringing soul, but just one of the kind who needs much helpful prodding to overcome that self-effacing manner of his and the feeling of inferiority behind it.

What happened after the scene referred to was that the poor fellow went out and got drunk and then there was another scene. For years, the wife, capable and energetic, herself, let the man's good points, and he has many of them, outshine in her fair opinion of him his peculiar backwardness when it came to wrestling more success out of his work.

To go back a few years in the man's history—he was a product of that peculiar family system which always withholds praise but never withholds criticism. What he needed in a wife was a woman who would try to undo the harm already done and one who would, in addition, set about to make generous amends. But he drew an inarticulate, a woman from whose lips praise had to be drawn almost by force.

Common Error Among Mothers.

And, speaking of this family system of withholding the approving word, one of our well known writers says that mothers are more often guilty than fathers. Also, he infers that it is the well known "silver chord" strain in the female parent, rather than self-deluded attempt to keep her child from overconfidence, that prompts it. A father, he thinks, has none of the female instincts characteristic of many mothers of hating to see their children grow independent of them. So the serious charge of withholding praise is, in a manner of speaking, a form of crippling so that the child may still have to cling to mother.

The theory is argumentative. Nevertheless the fact remains that there are parents existing at this very moment to whose lips rush far more readily the critical word than the building, helpful one. And fathers are among them!

My observation is that children who are encouraged by praise when it is justly due them attain success as adults far more quickly than the other type of rearing ever produces. In fact, there are persons of ordinary intelligence who attain heights simply through the confidence inspired by their loved ones.

The danger, on the whole, in connection with home grown plaudits is not in overdoing, but in underdoing. It is an easier matter for an adult to be cured of a superior feeling than an inferior. Contact with the world rubs down the aggressive edges of the former, but the latter is trampled on mercilessly.

Take the matter of personal appearance. Girls of ordinary physical endowment ride through life victoriously because of the poise and the sureness prescribed by a wise administer of praise. Another girl may be better looking, but if she does not feel that she averages up very well she simply muffs her chances.

To such bitter extent may the passion for criticism be carried that lives are simply ruined. There is today a single woman nearing 40, who, with another kind of mother, would not, at 22, have abandoned all hope of ever attracting a male. Yet, this is what the woman herself tells.

She was tall, about 5 feet 9, no taller than several famous beauties who have made pleasant history of their lives. Her height was harped on from her 'teens. Her feet and hands, no larger than became her weight, were criticized unmercifully, until the girl became a woman honestly believing she was an unparalleled freak. The fact that she was slender, had good features and remarkably fine eyes and hair was never touched on.

Thought She Was Hopeless.

Numbers of women could, if they would, relate their surprise at being told by an outsider of their gifts of charm. One girl relates that she nearly married the first man who told her she was pretty, though her better judgment argued that he was a profligate. She thought until that moment that she and the ugly duckling were cut off the same pattern.

The advice of a contemporary patron of the lovelorn was subjected to biting disapprobation because she advocated unsparing flattery. The particular paragraph that irritated was to the effect that you tell a man it was a crime of nature to make one so attractive as he. Now, is that such bad advice? Try it on one of your nearest men and see if he threatens to bring suit against you for calumny.

Try one on yourself. Listen open eared to some nice friend summarizing your fine virtues (or your looks) and then try to work up a serious case of hate against that friend.

So if I conclude with the remark that the one wide open road to popularity among your business associates or social is not to be parsimonious with your words of praise, the premise is based not on the weakness of the flattered, but on a characteristic common to us all. We all love praise, we all want it, and we all need it.

Vitality is the Watchword

By Antoinette Donnelly

It Isn't Enough to Be Pretty, Lovely, or Charming—One Must Be Full of Life as Well

NEW YORK. — [Special Correspondence.]—It would be that in our day of female accomplishment a new word, or words, would have to be coined, borrowed or stolen, to meet the exigencies of beauty claims.

Pretty, as a descriptive, hardly serves to convey any meaning any more. It has, in fact, come to be used as sort of a gesture of dismissal.

Lovely, of course, holds its own against the newcomers, because it conveys the idea of physical beauty plus beauty of mind and manner.

Charming is a word belonging more to mind and manner than to physical attributes.

Getting down to colloquialisms, a "knockout" may mean anything from a sharp wit to a person surcharged with that X-quantity known as IT. "A perfect peach" might be one whose good nature outshone her physical characteristics. And so on.

Feeling around for a word that would fit an age of channel swimming, airplane Atlantic crossing, tennis champion young women, to say nothing of the great army of young women with their feet on the ground every minute, one was hit upon that I think serves neatly the needs of the day. VITAL. It's so all-round embracing—mentally and physically.

I think I referred in a daily article to an occasion on which the word won for one of two young women undergoing lay judgment for their various charms of high order the hand painted scroll. Vital she was—therefore, of a more convincing order of beauty.

That judgment would certainly add another spell to the faints of yesteryear, when to be a beauty you had to anguish or at least look as if you could be overcome with the slightest strain.

The Age Demands It.

The life of our immediate ladies calls for vitality. And what the age calls for becomes the fashion. So, if you'd be numbered among the smartest models of pulchritude today you have to look into this matter of being VITAL.

It's meaning is simple. Your dictionary will tell you, "contributing or necessary to life." Read a little further on in the cramped paragraph: "Being that on which life depends."

What is being necessary to life today? What is that on which life depends if it is not being in a magnificently healthy state of body and mind? If you're not fortified in both respects, you certainly feel you're not necessary to life, and if you're destitute in one or the other or both, you feel the irony of "being that on which life depends."

But more to our point today is the surplus vitality upon which the bigger deeds are accomplished. Among these we have no hesitancy in placing bigger beauty conquests, because it is upon one's vitality one builds a greater beauty.

When I revert to the fundamental rules of sane living, as I frequently do, to reminders about the food eaten, the exercise needed, the body wastes expelled as first steps to the business of improving one's appearance, it is in recognition of the fact, to a large degree, that without the vitality lent by these fundamental rules you simply cannot or will not proceed enthusiastically with the local features of improvement.

Of course, there are the medical facts to sustain the claim that you cannot have brilliantly alive hair and complexion unless the blood stream is pure and in good circulatory order. Local measures of improvement are always of secondary importance. So, upon the sheer vitality of an individual rests her improvement.

What is it but a lack of vitality that women have who rise only to an occasional spurt to improve? When the mood, or more likely the energy is on, they go forth, interview an authority and come home filled with resolutions and supplied with cosmetic means of improvement. Energy gone, the bottles and jars lie idly on the cabinet shelf.

Getting a little closer to the matter of vitality, take the hair on the heads of the devitalized. It looks it. It's lack lustre proves it. The complexion, ditto.

Qualities That Win.

So, when one young woman outshines another young woman in our day of almost universal good dress, good grooming, good looks, it must be the vitality of her skin, her hair, her step, her body that wins her superior recognition.

The meaning I'm hoping to convey is that good enough health or average physical efficiency isn't enough to distinguish you today. You must be alive with health. There's no need of stressing the mental angle because it follows as day follows night that a vital mind and a vital body go hand in hand.

The impatience that is universally felt toward a person who complains of not feeling well continually, evidences in no slight degree the current demand for vitality. There was a time in business experience that because she was a woman employé an employer had to count on a certain loss through woman's more delicate constitution. They count now on women not only being present every day but vitally there every day.

Yes, we've come upon a new beauty era. The demise of the emaciated figure, for instance, in popular acclaim is still another sign of the times. Take it from that prize picker of pulchritude, Flo Ziegfeld, if you doubt me, that he turned down 9,000 applicants this year, the great majority of whom were too skinny, pale and lackadaisical to register a casual interest. They possessed neither attractive curves nor pep. So they were not detained for a second weeding out. The false god of ultra leanness worshiped over an empty plate was their undoing.

Perhaps I might have made my little sermon more intelligible from the start by introducing the word pep as the synonym for VITAL. That's what they're after, these days.

THERE is a new measure, a true measure of quality in Corsets—Kenlastic is identified. A wavy blue line now appears at top and bottom borders of every piece of Kenlastic. It guarantees the quality.

Take the Child to the Doctor Once a Year

by Mrs. Gladys Huntington Bevans

Those readers who wish to be sure to have carols sung in their home this Christmas may be glad to know of a small collection with melody for the voice which can be sent through this department on receipt of 12 cents. Please address Gladys Huntington Bevans, Chicago Tribune, Chicago, Ill.

LONG ago, one summer, we went visiting.

I can't say we had a very pleasant time. There was a little girl of 6 in the family, and she kept us in a constant state of turmoil. She screamed for this and she cried for that, and she went into a passion for something else. Our meals were frequently wrecked.

She had never been a controlled child but these displays eclipsed anything I had ever witnessed before. Finally, one day her mother remarked, "You know the reason for Jane acting like this, don't you? It's the aftermath of her tonsil operation. The doctor says so."

At the time I was skeptical, not knowing what I know now. But I did observe that the excitability and utter lack of self-control had disappeared by the next summer and the child was back to normal. I know, in the light of fuller knowledge, that the shock of the operation was undoubtedly the cause of this phase.

So what looked like a purely emotional thing had its origin in a physical cause—a very important thing to know. In fact, on the whole, people who have children under their care do not give enough importance to this very thing—the physical explanation of various emotional and mental states. Or, perhaps I ought to say, they don't quite realize that a physical trouble may be at the root of a behavior or other problem.

Familiar Cases.

We're all familiar with the cases of children being dull because of the condition of their tonsils and adenoids. When these have been removed they are like different children entirely. We know in our own everyday experience that a child's physical condition influences his actions. The tired child is apt to be impatient or cry easily; the child with a fever excitedly talkative; the hungry child cross. We recognize these explanations of simple variations in temper. They are only occasional and are very obvious.

But we must go further and look for the physical cause for long continued emotional or mental conditions which are not normal and for which we cannot ferret out a reason.

It might be interesting to cite a few examples of direct connection between the physical and emotional which was not, however, at all obvious.

A little boy of 5 went to kindergarten. He was adored by his family, of which he was the youngest. Apparently normal, of a healthy and intelligent family, he could not speak. When he wanted anything he pointed or screamed or cried. In fact, he had regular tantrums. He had the terrifying experiences of children asleep that are called technically night terrors. And he was inordinately spoiled.

This had been going on for about three or four years. Finally his parents, after trying strapping him, realized that something must be done. When he was a baby he had been examined and was called a "hundred per cent baby."

When he was a year old he had a serious illness, which was diagnosed as spinal meningitis, and from which he apparently recovered. He had never had a physical examination after the age of one year. Strangely enough, even when his parents saw the need of radical action, they didn't think of a physical cause.

At last he was taken to a doctor. He was found to be totally deaf in one ear and very deaf in the other. Of course he couldn't talk. He had, somehow, to get what he wanted, so he took what means he had at his command—crying, screaming, pointing.

Well, it's a long story. But to finish it briefly, he was sent to a school for the deaf, learned to speak, was no longer spoiled, but intelligently treated, and in a year or two all his tantrums and night terrors had disappeared.

Unable to See Well.

Another child, a little girl, was the daughter of brilliant people, with a brilliant brother. When she went to school it was soon found that she could not compete with children of her own age. She was called "dumb" by the children and comparisons between her and her brother drawn at home. She even began to look down on herself.

When she had been in school a year and a half she was examined—due to some one's belated display of intelligence—and found to have very bad eyesight. She had simply not been able to see in school sufficiently to master her school work, which, unfortunately these days, even for little children, is mostly concerned with the printed page—that is, intensive academic work.

Standing off as we are, able to see in perspective, the parents of these two children seem to us to have been particularly stupid in not taking their children to a doctor as one avenue of sensible approach to their problem. But they were not stupid people. So we can draw the conclusion that perhaps the majority of people would have attributed the trouble to everything but a physical origin.

Of course, we're not so sweeping as to say that most of the mental difficulties or recurring emotional displays like constant tantrums are due to a physical cause. But certainly the first step is to find out if there is something physically wrong and correct it. Or, after an examination, to be able to eliminate the physical as a possible cause, so that the trouble can be met from a psychological standpoint.

Yearly Examination Needed.

Children's doctors advocate the thorough yearly examination. We hardly need to have a visit to the doctor recommended when the children are babies. Most of us wear a path to the doctor's door when our babies are little—at least our first baby. But many of us, if our children seem well, don't even think of the doctor.

I know many people believe the yearly examination to be arrant nonsense. But it is not. Prevention is much more intelligent than cure. Even the old sages knew that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure. And while a child may seem well it is a good plan to have him gone over—heart, lungs, kidneys, etc.—to be sure he is in normal condition or to correct the beginning of any trouble. While, if things are not right with him—mentally or emotionally—the doctor should certainly be the court of first resort.

899—Woman's and misses' dress. Sizes 16, 18, and 20 years and 36, 38, 40, 42, and 44 inches' bust measure. Size 36 requires 2⅞ yards of 40 inch material, with ⅞ yard of 36 inch contrasting.

3409—Woman's and misses' blouse. Sizes 16 and 18 years, and 36, 38, 40, 42, and 44 inches' bust measure. Size 36 requires 1⅞ yards of 40 inch material.

192—Child's dress. Sizes 2, 4, 6, and 8 years. Size 4 requires 1¾ yards of 32 inch material, with ⅝ yard of 27 inch contrasting.

HOW TO USE THE PATTERNS

THIS smart coat dress, pattern No. 899, has a novel effect carried out by its diagonal closing, with the flare section giving that one sided treatment that is so well liked now. The back is cut in one piece, is unadorned, and the lines are perfectly straight, while the front is cut in two pieces.

Care will have to be taken if there is a right and wrong side, or an up and down to the material used to see that you are cutting the right and left sides instead of two for the same side. Never cut until each piece has been carefully looked over and you are certain no mistakes have been made. The right front extends well over toward the left side at a low waist line, and is cut in a chic manner to allow for a two button closing. This preserves the desired close fit about the hips, too.

The flare inset is set on under this extension. An unusual shaped shawl collar that extends to the end of the opening finishes the dress at the neck and a small vestee shows just above where the fronts cross.

The long, close fitting sleeves are finished with small turned back cuffs, and these, with the collar and vestee, will look well made of a contrasting color or material.

The dull and lustrous surfaces of crêpe satin in black, featherweight tweed, novelty woolens, faille crêpe, printed sheer velvet, plain velvet, velveteen, crepella, and homespun are suitable and chic materials.

Directions that come with the pattern tell exactly how to place the inset in position on the right front. Cut two pieces each for the collar and cuffs and stitch them together on the outer edges, turning and pressing carefully before basting them to the dress. It will look well to work buttonholes and really button the dress together, but, if you prefer, the buttons may be sewed on the right front and the actual fastening done with small snaps. If these are used be sure to set them well back from the right edge of the dress so that the fastening will be invisible. Put them on three-quarters of an inch apart.

Dotted English broadcloth makes this cunning dress, pattern No. 192, with the boyish collar and bosom front of plain broadcloth. The back at the shoulders extends over toward the front, simulating a shallow yoke, and to these edges the fronts are gathered. Put in three rows of shirring, about three-eighths of an inch apart. Making the inset and collar of a contrasting color lends quite a smart air to this diminutive dress, particularly when finished by a narrow ribbon bow at the neck. The full length sleeves are gathered into narrow bands at the wrists, while the short ones are finished with turned back cuffs.

French blue wool jersey with contrasting tan jersey, dark blue wool crêpe, blocked gingham, striped percale with plain pique in a harmonizing shade, red dimity with white dots, and slate blue velveteen with white dimity are attractive suggestions.

A smart addition to any wardrobe this season is a simple blouse of crêpe satin, silk crêpe, metalized georgette crêpe, or of plain or printed velvet. And what a comfort it is to possess two or three, for with a plain velvet or velveteen skirt you can have decided changes at small trouble. Back and front of pattern No. 3409 are each cut in one piece, and on the front at the shoulders are small clusters of tucks.

The neck is cut in a deep V in the front and finished with a right side applied band of the blouse material. A bow of the blouse material makes a jaunty finish at the lower left edge of the blouse, and the full length sleeves are set into narrow fitted bands at the wrists. The neck is cut deep enough to allow the blouse to be slipped on over the head.

LEAP YEAR PROPOSALS

Do you know of any girl who invited a man to leap into matrimony with her? Was her proposal met with eager acceptance or graceful refusal. If you'll send us a brief account of the affair, we'll pay $1 if we print it. Address Leap Year Proposals, Chicago Tribune.

Married That Week.

One evening I was humming the tune of "La Cinquantaine" ["The Golden Wedding."

My bashful boy friend, who also loves music, recognized the air, and asked "whose golden wedding are you celebrating?"

"Ours!" I flashed.

"Well," he said, "we've got a long way to go, then. Let's begin now!"

We did! We were married that week.

F. A.

Left Handed.

Julia invited Paul to a leap year party that was given by a girl friend. Most of the couples attending were engaged. Some one called across the room and said, "Haven't you taken advantage of leap year yet, Julia?"

Smiling at Paul, she answered, "No, and it is almost December. If I don't hurry up and ask somebody I'll get left out in the cold, won't I?"

On the way home from the party Paul said, "That sounded like a left handed proposal to me, but if it was meant and meant for me, well, you are more than welcome to me."

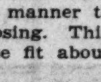
BEAUTY ANSWERS



by Antoinette Donnelly

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat-chested or flat-footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet, or a set of exercises for what ails you, and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply, send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, The Tribune, Chicago.

L. B.: A HARSH, ITCHY SKIN IS often caused by errors in diet, by dried salty foods such as fish and meats and by not taking sufficient water into the system each day. The remedy is a change of diet. Eat plenty of fresh fruits and green vegetables and drink eight glasses of water daily.

KAY: AN EXCELLENT EXERcise for reducing the legs is to suspend a pillow in the doorway on a level with your shoulders. Stand back about two feet; kick the pillow with the right foot, then with the left. Gradually increase the height of the pillow. Be sure to kick hard. Send a stamped, addressed envelope for other exercises.

MISS B. V. F.: GIVE YOUR HAIR a five minute bath in hot vinegar. After the vinegar has loosened the nits, comb them out with a well greased fine tooth comb.

G. B.: THERE IS ONLY ONE method by which the hair may be permanently removed from your face and lip, and that is electrolysis. You may, however, bleach the hair with peroxide to make it less noticeable. Send a stamped, addressed envelope for my booklet, "Superfluous Hair,"

Each Drop Like a Whole Vegetable!

FRESH vegetables would give us all a state of health, if only we would eat enough of them. Few of us do. But here is a little secret about assisting the peristaltic action so vitally important to our health; there is enough in one spoon of plain syrup pepsin to fill a market basket!

Several factors affecting sound health are often ignored in the average person's daily diet. But add a little syrup pepsin now and then, and watch what happens! Your appetite improves; so does your digestion, and elimination. Lots of folks who thought they were in perfect physical condition see a tremendous change after ten days with syrup pepsin.

When a scientific, vegetable corrective can put you in fine physical form so quickly, and keep the whole alimentary tract cleansed and sweet and free from need of powerful purges—it surely is worth trying! An actual test can be made in ten days. In this short space of time your stomach, and liver and bowels can be in shape to handle anything that's eaten!

Children thrive on almost any diet when pure pepsin syrup is given just occasionally to help assimilation, and make elimination thorough and regular. Elderly people have a far easier time, too, when this ideal combination of laxative herbs and pure pepsin is appreciated. Dr. Caldwell discovered this innocent means of keeping bowels normally active in 1875. Now, you couldn't find a drugstore without this famous prescription, all put up with directions enclosed.

Out of a Million Gifts...One...

that millions of women want most

MEN—Please accept from us a sensible gift suggestion about which there is no guesswork. And let us help you make this a Christmas long to be remembered in your home.

The day of trinket-giving has gone. The sensible wife and mother today wants the gift that will lighten household tasks. She wants more time for herself—her family—you and your interests.

There IS hard labor in the home today

There is a job in the home no woman should be asked to do. It's the job of doing the family ironing each week by hand. It's drudgery—pure and simple.

Now comes your opportunity, men, to put an end to this health-ruining, back-breaking job in your home. A gift opportunity unsurpassed in home appliance history. It is being sold to scores of thoughtful husbands and fathers this year whose first thought is the health, happiness and well-being of the woman in the home.

She wants you to give her this wonderful gift

Look at it—admire its beauty—and consider its remarkable time and labor-saving features.

It is electrically heated and electrically operated. Requires no work or effort—a simple hand lever within comfortable reach controls the entire operation.

It will iron the average laundry in about two hours—a job that took 8 hours before. She simply sits in a restful position and feeds the pieces through.

It has an ironing surface equal to 10 flatirons. Think of the speed and saving of time on flat work alone.

It is portable—weighs about the same as a four-year-old child. As easily carried from one room to another as a vacuum cleaner.

It presses trousers and skirts—Many tell us it pays for itself in a few months doing these two tasks alone.

Irons in any room — laundry, kitchen, sewing room or sun porch. Simply connect to any convenience outlet. It heats in 4 minutes.

Note its amazing low price

This new speed-type machine will do everything the large, costly irons will do. Yet—because we are selling thousands where hundreds were sold before — the price is less than half that of any ironer of equal quality and features.

Men — she doesn't want a lot of trinkets—expensive but useless—to be put away and forgotten.

The greatest of all labor-saving appliances—and the greatest of all sensible gifts.

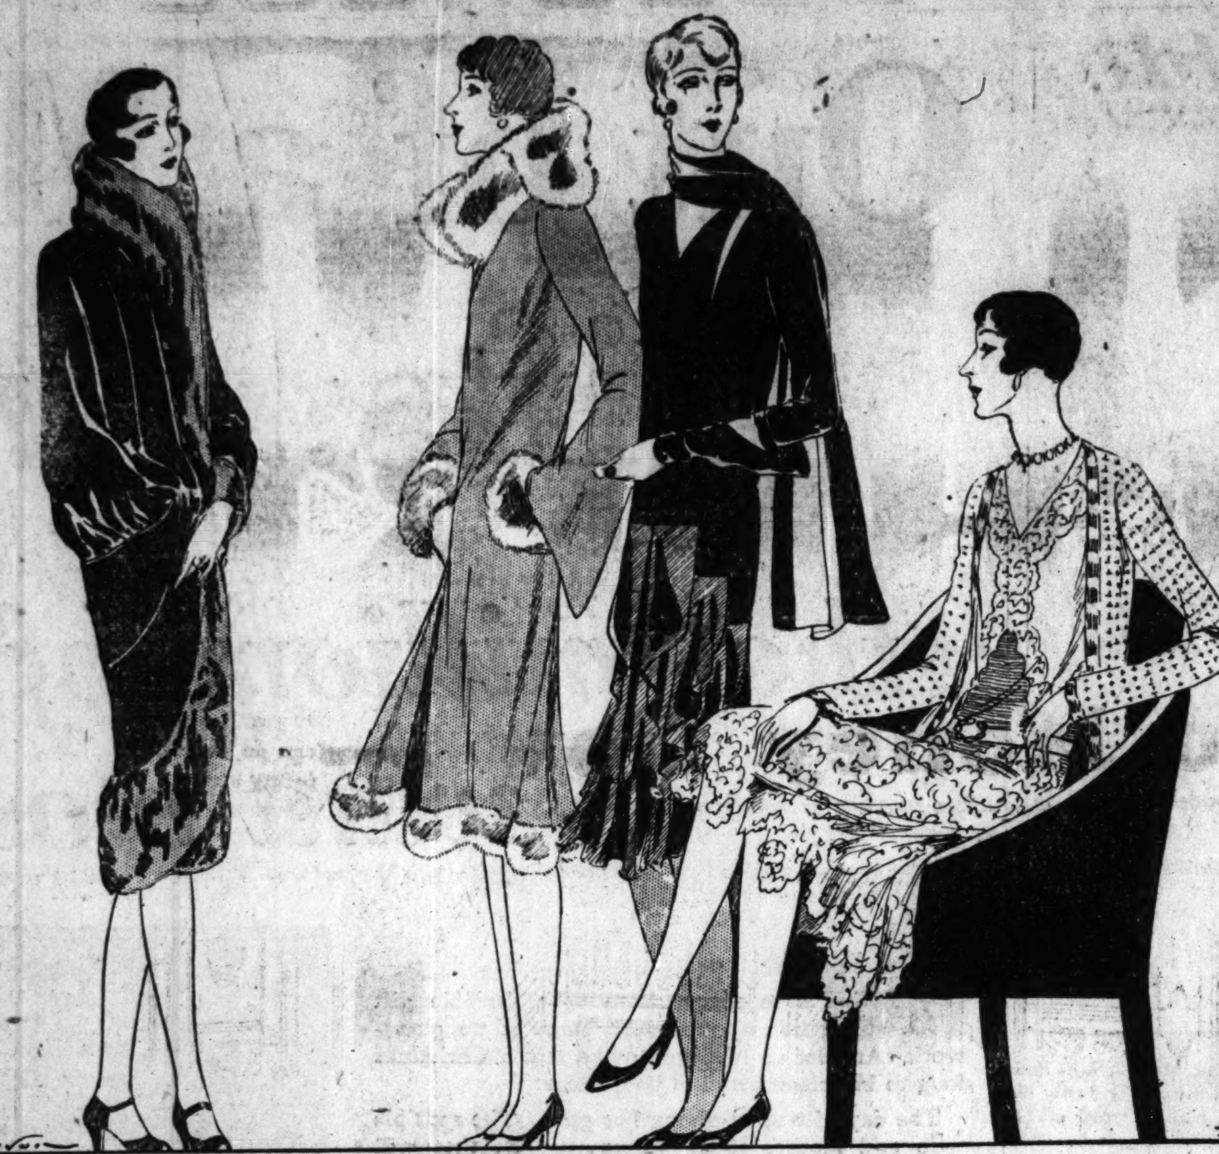
The Last Word in Paris Fashions

Smart Daytime Costumes Accommodatingly Glide Over to Evening Hours Without Any Loss of Style or Appropriateness

By Bettina Bedwell.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]



This cape, shown at the extreme left, with the cut away line of the skirt portion, is made of black broadcloth, trimmed with black astrakhan. Model from Lucien Lelong.

Second, Jean Patou makes this coat of sapphire blue woolen velvet, and trims it with beige fox.

Third, Burgundy red is the color selected by Jenny for this crepe satin dress with the modified princess silhouette. Insets of white appear on the shoulders, cuffs and scarf.

Last, the separate jacket of beige marocain embroidered in pearls and rhinestones gives a practical character to this Marthe et Rene dinner dress of beige lace and chiffon.

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—Fashions, at their very best, are imitative. This isn't any attempt to discover whether Paris influences Hollywood or whether the movies tell Paris what to wear. The imitation by fashion is taken from life itself, and both Paris and Hollywood are guilty, if you want to call it that.

In the so-called "good old days" fashions dictated, and while life as lived all around may have had something to do with the case, it was indirect. The epoch in which we live today is much more imperative. It is our lives which tell fashion where to get off, in slang terms, and fashion adapts herself to this. There is not, in all of the Paris salons, one garment created in the court of fashion which is not intended to fill some function of the life of today. And, more than that, there isn't even a sweater or waist or a pair of pajamas that isn't designed to fill some well defined need of women who are living right now.

To get down to cases, in the times gone by the separation between fashions for the day and for the evening was a good deal greater than the difference between daylight and darkness. Evening clothes were evening clothes, and that was that. Daytime clothes were for daylight—saving them for evening was worse than useless. Today, as you all know, there are plenty of dresses and coats, too, that glide gently and with propriety from day into night without the slightest offense to fashion.

Actually, Paris is always busy creating uncomplicated clothes which are equally good for afternoon or evening. She does this because our life demands such costumes. However much we might like to go home and get dressed with all the proper formal trappings, there are occasions when many of us find this as impossible as taking a trip across the Atlantic by the air route. So the frock and coat which may be worn both for daylight and darkness activities of modern life have become necessities of fashion.

The woman who can afford all conceivable clothes in her wardrobe for the season has such costumes. She has need of them. And for the woman who goes out chiefly in an informal way they are the bread of sartorial life.

There are two types of informal dress, both equally charming and correct, and your choice depends on the demands that are made on you by the life you lead. You may, if you are unusually active, have need of both.

The first is the kind of dress and coat that are so simple as to be inconspicuous on the street in the afternoon, and the second is something a bit more dressy, but which may at the same time be worn without fear of infringing on the proprieties of the most correct circles.

Color and fabric are extremely important in determining whether the informal costume belongs in the first or second class. In the first are velvets, crêpes, and georgettes. In the latter are chiffons, laces, some velvets and moires and satins. Daytime colors apply to both, and since daytime shades are the shades of evening this season, the color problem is extraordinarily simple.

There is red. It is a shade which may be worn for any occasion from sports to the formal ball. The simple dress of red, either bright or dark, is an excellent choice for the informal evening and formal afternoon frock Our third model shows the kind of red dress that can go almost anywhere that formality does not insist upon bare arms and neck, and it may appear equally for the covered occasions of daytime.

Jenny makes this dress of crêpe satin, in Burgundy red, and at the shoulders in front, on the cuffs and at the sides of the scarf appear insets of white. The line is the modified princesse silhouette, which is one of the most effective for either day or evening. The skirt is flared by a series of descending panels of self-material.

Such a dress might be employed in varying colors to suit the complexion and the taste of the wearer, as almond green, beige, black, or navy blue.

The cape shown in our first sketch makes an admirable wrap for such a frock. It is from Lucien Lelong, who makes it of black broadcloth, the cut alone making it dressy enough to be appropriate for informal evening wear. The collar and the curved bands that outline the cutaway skirt portion are made of black astrakhan. Such a wrap may be worn, also, over the decolleté dance dress.

The universal device which Paris has invented to give informality to the evening frock so that it may be worn also for afternoon is the little jacquette. Parisiennes have such jacquettes made for most of their evening dresses, formal and informal, and they slip them on when the dress must appear before the hour of evening dress. However, when the frock is to be worn also for afternoon it should be in an acceptable daytime color, such as the beige, which is the shade of our fourth model, a dinner dress from Marthe et Rene.

This dress is made of lace and chiffon, with a real daytime neckline and no sleeves. The narrow belt has a rhinestone buckle, and the straight cardigan jacquette that is worn over the dress is made of beige crêpe marocain embroidered all over with tiny crosses done in pearls and rhinestones. When the jacket is taken off the dress becomes a real evening gown.

Our second figure shows the kind of coat the Parisienne would choose to wear over such a dress on the street. This coat comes from Jean Patou and is made of sapphire blue woolen velvet, cut on slender lines and flared from hip to hemline. The fur which trims this garment is beige fox, the fox being used for the collar, cuffs and the band around the hem. The flaring sleeves are an individual detail.

An excellent rule to follow in the selection of informal clothes to bridge the gap from day to evening is that the cut should be daytime and the color and fabric suitable for evening.

$5 Apiece for Bright Sayings

The Tribune will pay $5 for each childish saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributions. Write on one side of the paper. Address bright sayings to Aunty Bee, The Tribune.

Billy is 6, and for the first time last week he was going to help with a play his class, the first grade, was to give on the school stage. He was very important about it.

"But what are you, Billy?" we asked. "What do you have to do?"

"Well," he said; "I renounce."

"Renounce? What's that mean? How do you do it?"

"I come out on the stage first," said he; "and then I renounce everything that's going to happen. I'm the renouncer. I renounce the 'Gingerbread Boy' and the little old woman and the little old man, and, O, I renounce just everything!"

And nobody dared smile. B. L.

Little Johnnie was not quite 2 years old, but had learned to talk very well, and, parrot-like, he tried to repeat everything he heard.

One day his mother and father took him with them when they went to the county fair. As they drove in at the gate there were several boys and all were yelling, "Drive in and park your car. Only twenty-five cents."

Later in the evening Johnnie and his mother were on their porch at home when some friends drove up in front and stopped. Little Johnnie called out, "Drive in and park your car. Only twenty-five cents."

have a little baby
And she has a little curl,
And when she is good
She's my good little girl.

But when she is bad—
O, as bad as she can be—
She twists her head around
And she whispers to me.

And the words that she whispers,
While I frown at her curl,
Are the ones that I have taught her:
"Dood, dood dirl!"

Stubborn Cough Quickly Ended by Famous Recipe

Here is the famous old recipe which millions of housewives have found to be the most dependable means of breaking up a stubborn, lingering cough. It takes but a moment to prepare and costs little, but it gives real relief even for those dreaded coughs that usually follow the "flu."

From any druggist, get 2½ ounces of Pinex, pour it into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup or strained honey. Thus you make a full pint of better remedy than you could buy ready-made for three times the cost. It never spoils and tastes so good that even children like it.

Not only does this simple mixture soothe and heal the inflamed throat membranes with surprising ease, but also, it is absorbed into the blood, and acts directly upon the bronchial tubes, thus aiding the whole system in throwing off the cough. It loosens the germ-laden phlegm and eases chest soreness in a way that is really astonishing.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway Pine, containing the active agent of creosote, in a refined, palatable form. Nothing known in medicine is more helpful in cases of distressing coughs, chest colds, and bronchial troubles.

Do not accept a substitute for Pinex. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.

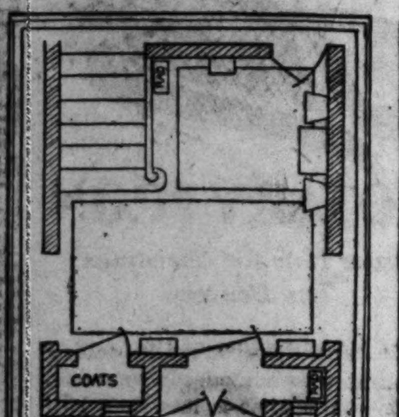
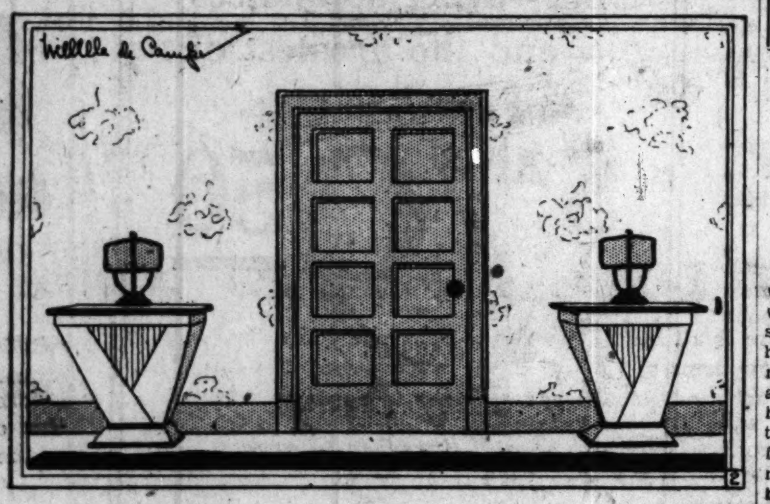
Entrance Hall Strikes Keynote of the Home

The Home Harmonious



No. 1.—Floor plan of entrance hall.



No. 2.—Unique tables flank the door.

Modern Art Is Combined with Old Pieces to Achieve a Charming Effect.

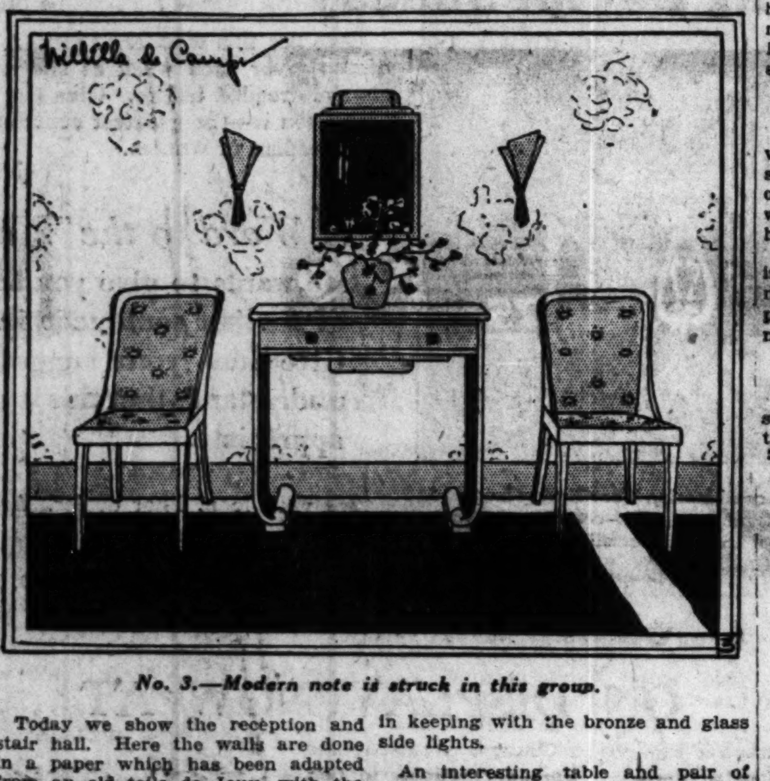
This is the first of a series of articles which will describe each room in an ideal house, giving floor plans and illustrations.

By WillElla de Campi.

HOW true it is that every woman dreams of some day having a house of her very own, to plan arrange and furnish in accordance with her own personality. Having long had just such a dream, we have at last happily made it come true. We have named our venture "The Home Harmonious," and have decorated and furnished it to suit ourselves from top to bottom.

It is carried out in a pleasing combination of the best of modern art, together with fine old pieces, for we are moderns of the modern world, and still we cling to our inborn love of tradition and the beautiful things of the old world. We have found that the old and the new may be used successfully in conjunction when the proper pieces are chosen. Old furniture which is not ornate blends delightfully with the simplicity of line embodied in the really good pieces of art moderne.

Perhaps you would like to see all of the rooms in our home harmonious? With that idea in mind, we plan to describe one of the rooms each Sunday, beginning today. There will be a floor plan of each one, to show the arrangement of furniture, and several illustrations as well as a description in text. We hope that our readers will approve of and enjoy this series, and that they may glean from our home harmonious suggestions which will help to make their own homes lovely and comfortable.



No. 3.—Modern note is struck in this group.

Today we show the reception and stair hall. Here the walls are done in a paper which has been adapted from an old toile de Jouy, with the design in tones of green on an ivory ground. The paper itself is so decorative that we have found it easy to dispense with wall hangings of any sort, excepting one simple mirror.

All the woodwork and doors are painted a soft green. Deep piled sage green chenille rugs are used on the floor.

Figure 2 shows a well balanced arrangement for the two narrow wall spaces at each side of the door leading in from the vestibule. An interesting pair of modernistic stands, made of maple burl and veneer, hold simple bronze lamps with frosted glass and bronze shades. These are in keeping with the bronze and glass side lights.

An interesting table and pair of chairs are placed against the only other real wall space in the hall. This table has a drawer to accommodate small odds and ends, and pen, ink and blotter which are often in demand at the front door when there is a check to be signed in a hurry. A deep magenta vase on the table adds a charming color note. The chairs are upholstered in a new, light wine colored damask.

The old appeal of a grandfather's clock makes it particularly pleasing against the toile de Jouy paper, while its fine simplicity of line brings it quite in keeping with the modern furnishings. This clock seems to rule over the house in majesty, being placed against the stair wall, directly opposite the entrance door.

My Happiest Christmas

Faith Justified.

I had been married but a short time when I happened to hear a woman, whose husband was employed by the same firm as mine, say to a friend of hers that she felt sorry for me, as my husband, she felt, would never amount to much and that she had a hunch the firm wouldn't have him on their pay roll long. I was just crushed, for I had every confidence in my man and knew him to have a good business head.

You can imagine my happiness when on Christmas day the firm gave him as a gift a promotion which carried a substantial increase in salary. I have always considered this an outstanding Christmas. O. D.

Back in 1918.

On Christmas morning of 1918 I was very blue. No word from my soldier sweetheart for two weeks. The eleven o'clock mail brought the word that he was in the hospital and would be home as soon as he was released.

O, the thrill of that Christmas morning! Today is our eighth wedding anniversary and I always think with pleasure of the Christmas letter that made me happiest of all. G. L.

Two Little Girls.

It was pitch dark. The snow was sifting through the open window and the arc lamp in the small park across the way made a twirling fairyland of the falling snow on that early Christmas morning.

Sister and I shivered in ecstasy and fear as we whispered reassuringly to one another that Santa Claus had surely come by now and that it was time we creep down stairs to the library to see what he had left for us. We crawled cautiously out of bed and down the creaking front steps; we passed through the cold hollow dining room and looked at the center table.

Mother told us the night before that when Santy came she would give him a piece of her fruit cake; and now only half the cake remained. What a proof that Saint Nick had certainly come! At last we came to the library; the faint birth of Christmas dawn revealed to us the biggest Christmas tree we had ever seen, and beneath it, gleaming with tinsel, were four beautiful dolls! Could even a good old saint expect two little girls to remain quiet after beholding the object of their hearts' desire?

Mother and dad, hearing our first shrieks of joy, soon joined us. Father started a fire in the grate, mother prepared breakfast, and two little girls rolled over one another in opening the joyful surprises.

All day long the snow banked up in the park, all day the fire in the grate gave forth warmth, and all day sister and I played with our dolls and dishes and toys. The shadows lengthened, we could no longer see the flying snow; our eyes drooped and we blinked and blinked. The sofa was so inviting, so we curled up together and, holding our favorite dolls, the angels swept us off to the land of nod.

Thus ended my happiest Christmas. F. A. B.

Today's Child Is Promised a Successful Life

By Jupiter.

THE aspects operating until 1:23 p. m. furnish favorable vibrations for religious, social, personal and domestic pursuits. No further aspects actually culminate during the day, but the moon's approaching sextile with Venus shortly after midnight will be felt in the form of pleasant association with others.

A child born today will be quick tempered, humorous, restless, intellectual, magnetic, and interested in the opposite sex. He will travel and will be subject to accidents and nervous diseases. Fame is indicated for today's child and this will be brought about by a public position.

He will have many changes and disappointments, but unusual opportunities will bring success if today's child learns to be adaptable and ingenious. He will succeed in any position that gives variety and social contact, such as public speaker, politician, writer or artist.

Monday, December 10.

This is a day of alternating aspects. For brief periods both good and bad hold sway, consequently it is not an auspicious time for important matters. Do not start a new project today, run risks of any sort, or be in a hurry.

A child born today will be original, energetic, scientific, erratic and intuitive. He will have to learn to finish all that he begins, to accept responsibilities and to acquire poise. He will be subject to accidents and severe illnesses.

He will be successful as a nurse, social welfare worker, solicitor, traffic manager, teacher or head of an institution.

Tuesday, December 11.

Not a benign aspect comes forward to help us through the day. Each configuration is either doubtful or adverse and one particularly affects the health. When the sun conjuncts the moon the vitality is lowered and people find themselves much more susceptible to colds and other indispositions. It is always advisable to watch the diet at this time and to avoid too much exercise.

A child born today will be nervous, supersensitive, impressionable, alert, dramatic, and intellectual. He will have many changes and sorrows and be subject to accidents, fevers, lung trouble and nervous breakdowns. If today's child is taught to overcome the tendency to hurry and worry he can avoid many of these illnesses. He will travel and will be lucky. A career as a musician, florist, social welfare worker, clergyman or artist would prove successful for him.

Wednesday, December 12.

Venus afflicts Jupiter and Saturn until 9:07 p. m. tonight, making this a poor period in which to try to please the girl friend. If you thought of selecting her gift today, put it off. Under this configuration you haven't a chance of pleasing her. It is also an adverse time for monetary matters and all social affairs. The moon's opposition to Mars and its approaching square to Uranus shortly after midnight makes it advisable for all law-abiding citizens to select this as a good night to stay at home. This particular aspect always causes the police and the hospitals plenty of trouble and work.

A child born today will be generous, talkative, light-hearted, mentally active, and much interested in clothing, luxuries, and the opposite sex. He will have many prominent friends and will become well known himself. He must learn to be practical and just. He will find his greatest success in some branch of commerce, and all the indications are that he will make money and have a fortunate life.

Thursday, December 13.

Everything that has ever been said about "Friday the 13th" will go for today. If there was any such thing as luck in astrology, it could be marked down as a very unlucky day, for the malefic vibrations which were making last night bad for those who like to stay up late are still holding sway today. Both the moon and Venus are in bad aspect to Mars, so that the less you depart from routine affairs the better this period will be.

Today's child will be ambitious, selfish, emotional, rebellious, headstrong, and quick-tempered. These characteristics, unless controlled, will cause misunderstandings with friends and estrangement from the parents. He will be subject to accidents to the legs and hips, sciatica, and stomach trouble.

Friday, December 14.

Important matters should be disposed of before 6:15 p. m. After this hour the vibrations tend to affect the health and people should avoid weariness, overexertion, and chills. During the day the aspects favor the making of new friends, meeting new customers and clients, the submitting of new propositions and the collecting of old accounts. It is also a splendid period in which to shop.

A child born today will be attractive, possess a great deal of magnetism, and have many friends. He will be mental, inspirational, intuitive and gifted in art and music. Many love affairs are indicated and there will be many changes in his life between the ages of 25 and 50. A career as an artist, soldier, inventor, public speaker or as an executive will prove sucessful.

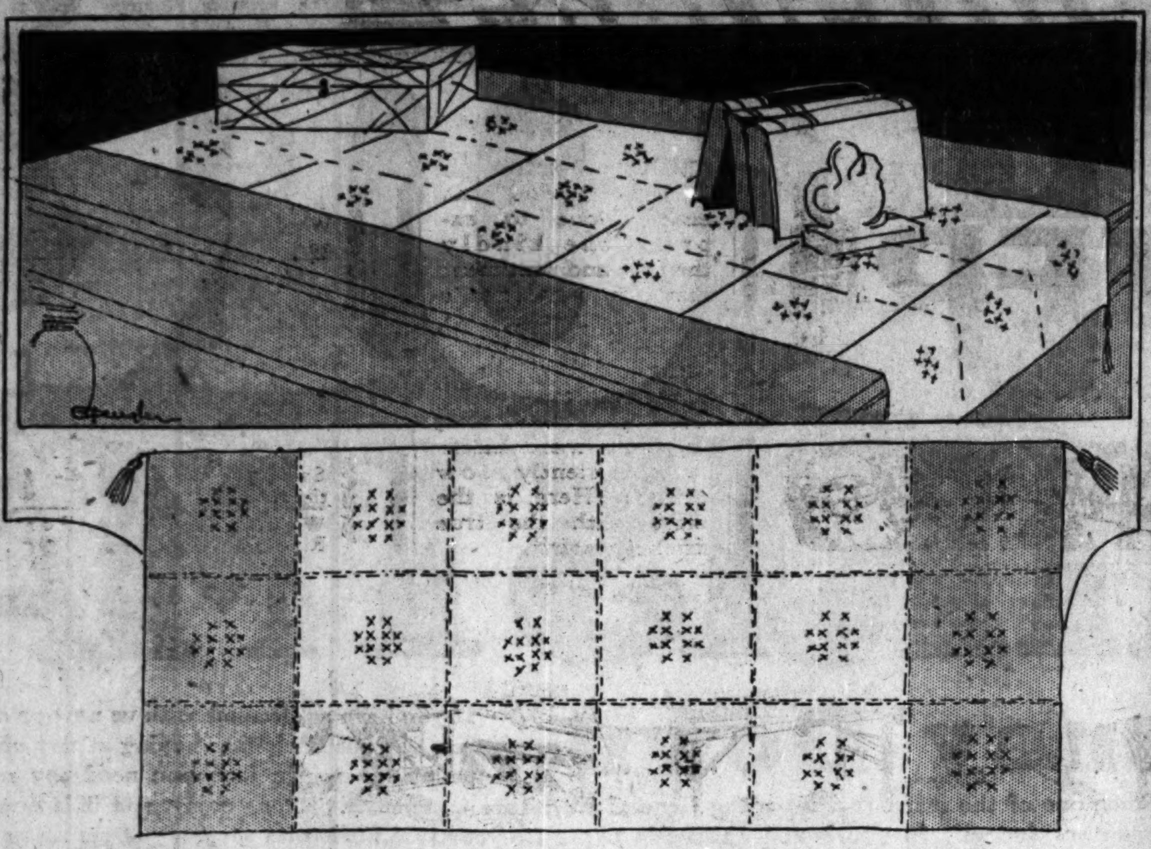
Saturday, December 15.

Until 9:48 this morning aspects are operating which tend to accidents from travel and transportation, so watch your step on your way to work this morning. From 10 a. m. until 5:47 p. m. favorable vibrations will aid all general business transactions, progressive, domestic and artistic matters and those on shopping excursions. The evening should be spent as quietly as possible. Avoid arguments and quarrels.

A child born today will be nervous, ambitious, cautious, persevering, sympathetic, courteous and artistic. Between the ages 25 and 50 he will have to assume responsibilities and the plans of others will interfere with his own life. He must learn to be poised, practical, obedient, tactful, careful of details and to finish everything he begins. He will succeed as a teacher, artist, adviser, diplomat or secretary.

Practical and Fancy Needle Work

BY Clotilde



A Linen Scarf Embroidered in Cross Stitch, Makes a Pretty Runner for the Table.

> What is your sewing problem? Do you have trouble in following a pattern? Do you find difficulty in making a skirt hang evenly or making a sleeve that doesn't twist? If there is anything you would like to know about these or other problems of needlework, write to Clotilde, The Tribune, Chicago, inclosing a stamped, addressed envelope if a personal reply is desired.

A GREAT deal of cross stitch in gay colors is seen on fancy work, especially the things that are imported. A table scarf that could be used in the dining room or on a large library table was made of heavy blue linen. The finished scarf measured twenty-seven inches wide and two yards long. This was marked off in twelve or thirteen inch squares by using white and black mercerized floss. Stitches that were one-quarter inch long on the right side and very short underneath were taken, first going straight across with the black, then directly underneath, using the white. After this has been done across the width and on the length you will be ready for the designs you have chosen for these squares.

First, though, I should have said that across each end of the scarf the squares were in orange linen. You would, of course, cut the linen by a thread, and seam the orange across each end, pressing the seams open flat. Then either the black or white could be used right over the seam so it wouldn't show at all.

Some conventional design or something geometric should be chosen, using the same design in the center of each square, or as many different ones as you like. In any of the cross stitch magazines you will find a great variety of designs, many of them showing the colors to use. The work is pleasant to do, and you will find it easier to baste canvas on the material and copy the design that way than to use a transfer. Be sure to take all the under stitches in one direction, and those on top in the opposite direction, for even one stitch taken the wrong way will be noticeable. The short canvas threads are easier to pull out first, then the long ones come quite easily.

If you prefer the Kensington stitch to the cross stitch, the work will be effective.

After the scarf is finished and pressed you will want to line it with sateen and sew a fancy tassel to each corner. There is no reason why you can't make these scarfs any length and width you choose, and if you want something really beautiful, satin can be used in place of linen.

A FRIEND IN NEED

MAKE IT A JOYFUL CHRISTMAS FOR OTHERS

By Sally Joy Brown.

I WONDER, girls and boys, how many of you are thinking of Christmas this morning? Most of you, I'm sure. You're planning you're gifts for every member of the family, and wondering what you'll find when Christmas morning comes. And what fun it is!

But, while you're planning to have new toys, new skates, perhaps books, and new clothes, wouldn't it be nice to give to some other girl and boy who can't have a Christmas unless you help?

Right now their mothers are trying to tell them not to mind if they don't get anything at Christmas—and they're trying not to!

But it's hard, when they see and hear about Christmas all around and know they can't share in the happiness most girls and boys will have. Wouldn't it be splendid to have a wonderful surprise for them when they wake up, Christmas morning?

You can do it easily—in the same way that many girls and boys I know are going to do. You have lots of things, I'm sure, that you've outgrown — playthings, a velocipede, or perhaps a sled. Maybe you have some clothing, an overcoat, suit or shoes, and dresses you've outgrown. Would not these things make a wonderful Christmas surprise for some poor girl and boy, and wouldn't you like to be the one to give it to them? Why not think about it right now?

Find out what you can spare and tell me what you can contribute. Then I'll arrange to have you give them where they will make a wonderful Christmas surprise, and when Christmas morning comes you will have the happiness of knowing that some other girl or boy is happy, too, because of you.

Let's start today, and make it the best Christmas ever — for the other little girls and boys, and happiness for ourselves.

Railroading.

"I have just started on a railroad career and am very anxious to obtain some books on railroading, especially on modern locomotives and railroad stop practice. I can't afford to buy them and would appreciate any your readers may have to give.

"P. W."

Does your library contain a volume or two which would throw a little light on the business of railroading for this young man who is anxious to make his career a successful one? I am sure he would find them most interesting and useful.

Asks for Lost Picture.

"In some magazine, during the latter part of 1927 or early 1918, I saw a picture entitled, I believe, 'The Little Brothers.' Do you think one of your readers would know where I could obtain a copy of it? A. T."

Perhaps you saw the same picture and rememeber the publication it was in, or you may have a copy of it you no longer want. This reader would be most grateful for a gift of the picture or any information as to where it might be obtained.

Will Give a Medicine Cabinet.

"I have a medicine cabinet I would gladly give to some family who can't afford to buy one. Let me know if one of your readers would like it.

MRS. C. B."

Here's a gift for the housewife whose funds permit buying only the absolute necessities. If you can make use of this cabinet I shall be glad to have you write me; please do not telephone.

Wants Fancy Work.

"I wonder if any of your readers has any fancy work unfinished which I could have. I would appreciate receiving it. MRS. G. F."

If you no longer find time for the embroidery and needle work you are so fond of, you might like to donate your unused materials to another person interested in this work. She, also, is fond of it but cannot afford to buy the necessary equipment.

Your Kindness Is Needed Here.

"In my church work I have become acquainted wtih a woman who has six children and who is badly in need of a cook stove. She is a frail woman, weighing not more than 90 pounds, and yet she goes out to scrub every day. Try to get her the stove, won't you? A. C."

Probably you are investing in a new stove and are at a loss what to do with the old one. Here's a family who would benefit greatly by such a gift. Won't you give it to them?

Family in Trouble.

"I wish to ask you if some of your readers have clothing and shoes for a man who needs them badly. I have been out of work and have just gotten a job, but I cannot afford to buy the things we need. I wear size 52 and 54 in an overcoat and suit, shoes size 10, shirts 17½. My wife wears size 44 or 46, and shoes size 7 or 7½. My daughters are 2 and 6 years of age. Anything you can get for us will be greatly appreciated."

"T. H."

Lack of employment and no source of income mean suffering and deprication for this unfortunate family, and during these winter months without warm clothing the children are exposed to cold and sickness. If you can supply some of the garments they are so badly in need of, it will help immensely.

Widow Needs a Daybed.

"May we ask your kind help in procuring a day bed for Mrs. D.? She is a widow with five children, the oldest 16 years of age. Although she receives a mother's pension, and is able to earn a small amount of money, she finds it impossible to purchase the day bed needed. H. T."

Perhaps you have one no longer needed. And when you know that your discarded day bed will mean a little comfort for this widow and her children you'll be happy to pass it on to her, I know.

Do Modern Girls Blush ?

Here's how to bring a glow to your cheeks! It is the modern blush and the only way to be certain of that rare freshness and delicacy of skin texture which is bound to attract attention. Surface cleanliness is not enough.

At night, before dressing or before retiring, dip a towel in hot water and hold it to your face and neck for a couple of minutes, until the heat opens the pores. Now apply an even coat of Edna Wallace Hopper's White Youth Clay. Lie down and relax while it dries. Then wash away the clay with cold water. The gentle, stimulating action of the clay brings a flattering rosy warmth. The pores are closed—skin firm, smooth as satin and exquisitely clear.

Now a bit of Edna Wallace Hopper's fragrant pink Youth Cream as a powder base and you are ready to complete a party toilette . . . or ready to retire.

Only this clay pack can remove from beneath the surface the accumulated particles of hardened natural oil, dirt and other blemishing foreign matted. If permitted to remain they mean a muddy complexion and enlarged pores, taxed beyond beauty's limit.

Give yourself a clay pack at home tonight. You can get Edna Wallace Hopper's White Youth Clay and Youth Cream at all toilet counters.

A COLD May Mean Flu!

If you've caught a cold don't be sneezing and hawking about others. That spreads cold germs. And any cold may end in grippe or flu. Protect your own health, too. At the first sign of a cold, go and get a package of HILL'S CASCARA-QUININE. These well-known tablets break up a cold in one day because each tablet combines the four helps a cold requires.

Only HILL'S gives you the complete treatment a cold requires. So accept nothing else, for half-way measures are dangerous. You need not lose a day from business or pleasure or expose yourself to grippe or flu if you'll take HILL'S in time.

HILL'S Stops Colds in a Day
1. Breaks up the Cold
2. Checks the Fever
3. Opens the Bowels

The Tangled Web

by ELIZABETH YORK MILLER

INSTALLMENT I.

Love—and War.

JOHN RAYNES, at the age of fifty, was a man who had every reason to be contented with what life had given him and, indeed, on the whole he was contented.

Tonight his lifelong friend as well as business partner, Thomas Tremlett, was coming to dine with him—as was their weekly habit—and after the port and nuts had been savored leisurely they would settle down for a session at the chessboard. They did not see each other in a social way as often as they liked, for Johnny Raynes presided over the city offices of the Raynes and Tremlett shipping line, while old Tom held the fort at Tilbury docks. It was distinctly a family firm, for the young lieutenants were sons and sons-in-law and the elder Raynes and Tremlett—both widowed now—looked forward with some reason to the happy day when their long association should be even more closely knit by the marriage of Jim Tremlett and Meriel Raynes.

Jim and Meriel—Jim and Meriel. Nothing else had been thought possible for years, ever since Jim the toddler had taken baby Meriel from her cradle and rocked her in his arms, giving to her then and there the whole love of his life. Now Jim was twenty-four and Meriel had but recently celebrated her twenty-first birthday, and in the opinion of the fathers it was high time they were thinking of the wedding. Yet, as far as one knew, they were not even betrothed.

As he waited for his friend in the library of the old house in Bloomsbury square, John Raynes' mind dwelt a little sentimentally on the past. It was in this very room, no doubt, that his own father had waited for news of his arrival in this world, and it was where he himself had waited on several similar and anxious occasions. This room, this house, his solid, old fashioned business, and, above all, his family, were infinitely precious to John Raynes. The children were so well settled in life and had been such a credit to him. All except Meriel, of course, and she was as the apple of his eye. The house might be a little empty now, but he had grown used to the gradual elimination, and besides, some of them were always coming back for visits and he was never really lonely.

The short October dusk was closing in and presently Edith, the middle aged parlor maid, entered to draw the heavy velvet curtains and switch on the lights. She brought with her the tray with sherry and glasses, and as she set it down on the table near the fire she said: "Miss Meriel's compliments, sir, and she will not be dining at home tonight."

A CURIOUS expression came over John Raynes' face, a mixture of anxiety and displeasure. This sort of thing had happened last week, but he had been busy with some correspondence at the time and hadn't thought much about it. Why should Meriel send her messages through Edith?

"Give Miss Meriel my compliments, please, and tell her that I'd be grateful if she'd spare a moment for me before she goes out."

"Thank you, sir," the maid replied. There was a little glint in her eye that arrested his attention. He received an impression that—as one says—"something was up," and that Edith did not approve of it.

"I suppose Miss Meriel is dressed?" he added.

The maid turned at the door. "Why, no, sir. She's still resting."

"What?" demanded Meriel's father. He looked at the clock, which announced the hour to be within ten minutes of eight.

"I don't think they dine until half past nine, sir," said Edith with prim disapproval.

"Upon my soul, I never heard of such a thing!" blustered John Raynes. "It's not—it's not decent." In his excitement he forgot to be formal, and, indeed, formality was scarcely necessary since Edith had been as one of the family ever since Meriel was born. "You tell her to dress herself at once and be quick about it, and come down here as soon as she can. If Mr. Tremlett arrives before, show him into the drawing room."

"Very good, sir," Edith replied, displaying distinct relish in her voice and manner.

John Raynes poured himself a glass of sherry and sipped it thoughtfully. He must not show temper or even alarm. Well enough was he aware of the fact that he was old fashioned. Yet in appearance he was not at all old—just a glint of silver in his dark hair and a certain affectation of the picturesque in his flowing neckwear and the velvet dinner jacket he always wore on home occasions. Very handsome he was, too—a father to be proud of, as his children never tired of saying.

Of course, he had spoiled Meriel, a pleasant process which her sisters and brothers had escaped. She was his baby, his little ewe lamb. O, how he hated the age into which she had been born!

He frowned to himself about it while he waited for her, but she did not keep him waiting long.

"WELL, daddy?"

"You've dressed pretty quick. Edith said you were lying down."

"O, that didn't matter. I'm a quick change artist."

"Are you, indeed! Come here, let me look at you. Um—I don't suppose it did take long to get into that thing."

"It just slips over the shoulders, daddy, and there you are," she replied with a grin.

Nothing so lovely in all the world as this girl creature of his, thought John Raynes; and had more reason for his opinion than the average fond parent. Hair like gold satin, sparkling eyes of a blue so dark that you'd call them violet, and a complexion which needed not the artifice it had received. He frowned at the too red lips and at the cigaret the brazen child was fitting into a holder.

"I got your message," he said, "and I'd like to know what it means."

"O, daddy, are you going to be Victorian?" Meriel cried in pretended dismay. "I'm dining at the Bric-a-Brac with a party Aunt Angel is bringing. She's going to call for me, herself, at nine. Edith said she thought you were annoyed at our dining so late. But why not? It's a dancing party."

"O, I don't know that I was annoyed," replied John Raynes, being slightly treacherous to Edith. "But I was surprised, and you know I don't care for the people Angela goes about with. She's always picking up wrong 'uns."

"How stuffy of you, darling. Your beautiful neckerchief's slid a little to one side. Shall I fix it for you?"

He let her rearrange his stock, the perfume of her hands, the sweet nearness of her, the tenderness of her youth filling him with such an access of paternal emotion as nearly brought tears to his eyes. If only her mother were alive. His sister, who had married into the war nobility, was just about the one person in the world he would have rejected as a chaperon for Meriel. Yet what could he do? Meriel, perversely, was very fond of Angel, as she called her aunt.

"Is Jim going to this party?" he asked, abruptly.

A faint color glowed through the bloom of powder on Meriel's lovely face.

"Good lor', no! Angel's fed up with him. He got into such a wax with her over something that happened last time, that she'll never ask him again."

"What happened?"

The color deepened. "O, daddy, it wasn't anything much. You know Angel's rather fond of cocktails. I mean, she sees no harm in them."

"I do know. Meriel, you haven't broken your promise to me?"

"Honestly, not, daddy." The dark blue eyes met his with perfect candor. "I don't break my promises."

"Thank God for that, anyway." John Raynes gave a deep sigh of relief.

"So when Angel insisted on my having one I took it, not intending to drink it, but for the sake of peace and Jim—he's as stuffy as you are, darling—saw fit to make a row."

John Raynes looked as glum as he felt. "I wish you'd stop going about with these people, my dear," he said, miserably. "Heaven knows I don't want to be a kill joy, but I don't like it. Look here, Merry-my-own, when are you and Jim Tremlett going to get married?"

The girl looked at him in that queer way she had, honesty mixed with something else.

There was a little catch in her voice as she replied, "Would it disappoint you too much if I said 'never'?"

John Raynes stared blankly at her. Was this just one of those jokes of hers which he sometimes found difficult to understand?

"Because—" she plucked coaxingly at his sleeve—"you wouldn't want me to marry Jim if I don't love him—would you?"

"But, bless my soul, you do love him!" her father exclaimed.

"Of course, I do, but not in that way," she murmured. "Jim's a dear, I've known him all my life, and if anything happened to him I'd be just as unhappy as if it was Hal or—or even you, darling."

"What's happened, then, to make you suddenly regard Jim as a brother? I think you'd better tell me."

There was a note in her father's voice which Meriel had never heard before directed towards herself.

"Nothing has happened," she said, breathlessly. "Only I do think I've got a right to say who I will or won't marry. It's my life, isn't it daddy?"

"Yes, it's your life, a very precious thing, Merry-my-own—and it's my business to see that you don't smash it."

At this rather tense moment the door opened and Edith presented herself.

"Mr. Tremlett's arrived, sir, and I've shown him into the drawing room as you said. But Mr. Jim is with him and would like a word with Miss Meriel, if she can spare the time."

This intervention seemed a master stroke of fate to John Raynes. Here was a chance to shift the responsibility for Meriel's wilfulness to shoulders better fitted to support it.

He was cheerfully brisk as he bade her go to the drawing room to see Jim, and told Edith that she might show the elder Tremlett in here without delay.

MERIEL went with obvious reluctance. Old Tom Tremlett kissed her affectionately, exclaimed upon her devastating loveliness, then winked at his son and followed Edith with that agile, sprightly gait often affected by elderly men of nimble wits and habits. He assumed that all was well between Jim and Meriel, although Jim's clouded eyes and set young face told a different story.

"Jim, I'm dining out and haven't much time," Meriel said with an assumption of ease which she did not exactly feel. "Was it something important?"

"Rather important—at least to me," the young man replied.

She ought to have seen how miserable he was; she ought to have known now what she was to know in after years, that Jim Tremlett—handsome, fine young Jim—was the true mate for her; perhaps the one man in all the world who answered to that description in every way. But for the moment Meriel was blind.

"Look here, Merry, I've got to tell you something, although I'd—I'd give everything I possess not to."

"Then why do it?" she asked, cruel as only a lovely girl can be.

"Because I must. You'll probably say I'm a jealous cad."

"You could never be a cad, Jim."

"Thank you. Well, I'll prove you wrong. Tell me one thing, is that fellow Saunders coming to this party tonight?"

"How should I know?"

"You do know. Is he?"

"Well, what if he is?"

"Merry, he's not fit to touch your hand. He's not fit to breathe the same air."

"How heroic!" She swallowed down a lump of rage; scarlet spots blazed in her cheeks. "Yes, you are a bit of a cad, Jim. I wouldn't have believed it. What have you got against Captain Saunders?"

"Captain be blowed! The man's reputation won't bear thinking about. I'm awfully sorry, Merry. I—I've had to do this for your sake. Please don't think I enjoy rummaging in dustbins."

"O, thank you very much. I'm sure you must hate it. Have you warned Aunt Angel against this—this monster?"

"Lady Pelbury can look after herself. It's her business if she chooses to keep a fellow like that dangling about as a sort of glorified dancing partner, but it's mine if she stands by while he makes love to you."

"That's quite enough," said Meriel. "I don't suppose I can stop you running to daddy with your silly tales, but I'm not going to listen to them myself. Captain Saunders at least is a grownup man, and you're only a boy, Jim. Forgive me, but you seem quite pitifully young."

SHE had touched him on the raw, but Jim Tremlett did not wince. Nor did he haul down his flag.

"You know how much I love you, and until this fellow came along you cared for me, Merry. You've got your head turned—that's what it is. You're flattered because Saunders will never see forty again and has deigned to single you out for attention. Why? I'll tell you. You're an heiress. When your father dies, I suppose you'll come into the spending of four or five thousand a year. Neither your father nor mine has lived up to anything like his income. It's all being conserved for us. Saunders knows what he can get his teeth into. Yes, I certainly shall run to your father with my tales, unless you cut that fellow clean out of your life. Trust Johnny Raynes to find out for himself how silly they are. He'll lock you up in your room, and serve you jolly well right."

A motor horn sounded in the street below, three short hoots.

"That's Angel come for me," said Meriel. "Afraid I must say good night, Jim. Thank you so much for all your good advice."

THE Bric-à-Brac club, as every one knows, is of the utmost respectability and frequented only by the best people. The dancing floor is not too restricted, the band is perfect, and the food reasonably good. Had it lacked any of these vital particulars, Lady Pelbury would never have given it her patronage.

Angela Pelbury was a happy go lucky woman of forty or thereabouts, determinedly young, possessed of a long purse and frivolous tastes. She had never in her life meant harm to anybody. She loved her husband, but he could not dance; and her affection for dancing almost equaled that which she felt for him. Her addiction to cocktails was not in excess of any of the others who gathered round her, but certainly wine—in the generic sense—flowed at the table where she was hostess and there often came a stage in the evening's hilarity when Lady Pelbury, herself, retired into a cushioned corner, smoked her cigaret and let the world glide by in the happy consciousness that she had done what she could to brighten the night life of London and had now earned a rest.

On this particular evening Lady Pelbury arrived at that peculiarly state of sobriety about midnight. It was one of those evenings when the license was extended.

Lounging in her corner, conscious of a slight weariness and a swelling of the feet which made her long to cast off her tight slippers, she became aware of the fact that her niece was dancing continually with Captain Saunders. And she became aware of more than that.

Lady Pelbury knew nothing against the man, but she was sufficiently a woman of the world to divine that there was something not quite pukka about him, although he was certainly charming. She had felt his charm herself, although she hadn't wholly believed some of the stories he told her about his affairs. There was, for instance, the tale of the wealthy uncle in South Africa who had sent him to investigate certain trade conditions in England. Eric was this person's heir, according to his story. Yet might it not be true? For on one occasion when the engaging captain had borrowed 50 pounds from Lady Pelbury—a sum which she never expected to see again—she was pleasantly surprised to have it returned to her by a check on a South Africa bank signed S. Saunders.

Still one had to be careful about men, particularly when a girl like Meriel was concerned.

Lady Pelbury extinguished her third cigaret, and decided it was time to go home. That sweet, flowerlike face raised to her partner's was getting on Angel's nerves. If Meriel wasn't careful she'd be imagining herself to be in love with Eric Saunders. Lady Pelbury sent somebody to find the absorbed couple, but it took a little time, since quite suddenly they had disappeared from the dancing floor.

IN a more or less secluded nook on the balcony a little love scene was being enacted. No one who witnessed it could have doubted either Eric Saunders' or Meriel Raynes' sincerity. The girl's face glowed and her lips were soft with emotion when he stole a kiss as opportunity afforded.

"Now I know—" the man was saying, "why I have waited all my life—it was for you." His voice shook with genuine feeling. "My lovely Meriel, promise, swear to me that nothing shall be allowed to part us. O, I know I've been a rolling stone—nothing seemed to matter. But now, it's different. I'll speak to your father tomorrow."

"Yes, I think you'd better," Meriel replied, unsteadily. "There'll be an awful row, I'm afraid, but in the end I'll get round daddy. When he sees how it is—how much I care for you—he'll give in. When he sees you—"

"I wonder," mused Saunders. He knew well enough that his popularity was confined to the fair sex. He dreaded the necessity of asking John Raynes' permission to marry Meriel. The answer he would get was scarcely in doubt. Meriel's father would most certainly want to know all about him, and there were things he did not care to mention. Nothing really discreditable, he told himself, but which might be regarded as undesirable in the past of a husband for one's daughter.

"Darling Meriel, if your father doesn't see eye to eye with us, then what will you do?" he asked, anxiously.

"O, but he will!" she cried. "It's only because he'll be disappointed about Jim that we're apt to have any trouble. Jim's been rather a beast." She looked into her lover's eyes with blind adoration. "But, of course, he's only a boy. He'll get over it." She sighed.

Saunders had a flare of intuition. "This Jim of yours—I suppose apart from natural jealousy, he doesn't approve of me?"

Meriel became miserably self-conscious. "I didn't pay the least attention," she said, quickly. "It was really only jealousy. He says you're too old for me, but that's one of the reasons why I—I like you so much, Eric."

There was no time for anything more, for at that point they were discovered by Lady Pelbury's emissary and told that she wanted to leave this scene of gayety although the night was still so young.

. . . .

Breakfast time seemed inopportune for Meriel to break the important news to her father, but she had no choice about it. Eric was coming at five o'clock to ask the great favor, and naturally one could not expect daddy to be pleasant if he were kept in the dark until the last moment. It simply had to be mentioned at breakfast.

Meriel was as tactful as she knew how to be, and her manner was so engaging, so really pussy cat, that John Raynes observed from behind his newspaper, "I suppose you've overstepped your allowance again, eh? How much is it this time?"

"O, no daddy! Indeed I haven't. I've been such a good girl ever since you read me that last lecture. Why, don't you remember, I promised!"

"So you did, to be sure."

"Daddy, I want to get married."

"Eh?"

"It's not Jim, darling. It's another man. I can't help it, daddy, because you see I care such a lot for him and he does for me and he's a man, not a boy like dear Jim, and anyway I—I know you'll let us when you see him. He's coming to see you this afternoon. We couldn't help it, daddy. Love's like that, isn't it?"

JOHN RAYNES dropped his newspaper and sat as one stunned.

"I'm old enough to know my own mind," Meriel added, a little defiantly.

"Who is this man? Where did you meet him?" John asked when he felt he could control his voice.

"His name is Eric Saunders. He was a captain in a volunteer regiment in South Africa. That's where he comes from, I believe. Anyway, his uncle is a wealthy business man out there and Eric is his only relation, and—"

"Wait a minute." John Raynes' face looked wintry as he fished a note book from his pocket. "Let me put some of this down. Now, where did you say you met this young man?"

"He's a friend of Aunt Angel's," Meriel replied.

"O, well that's something, anyway. Does Angela know anything about this?"

"N-no—not really. She was a little cross because I danced so much with Eric last night."

"Last night," murmured John to himself. "And what about Jim? I didn't see him after you left. Somehow I got the impression that he went out with you after all; that you'd made up your mind about him. O, this is ghastly!"

"But, daddy darling, it's nothing of the sort." By now Meriel was perched on the arm of his chair and exerting all her blandishments. "You do want me to be happy, don't you?"

"It is the only thing in the world I care about," her father replied.

"Then—"

"No, no, not so fast." He got up, pushing her aside a little coldly. Then he glanced at the clock. It still lacked half an hour of his usual time for leaving for the city.

"If you go around to Aunt Angel's now, you won't find her up," Meriel put in in a tone which missed being sulky by a narrow margin.

John Raynes made no reply to this observation, but, ringing for Edith, asked her to get a taxi for him. Then he turned to his daughter.

"I've let you have your own way too much. It's more my fault than yours that you've had the bad taste—the bad manners—to engage yourself to a man who is a complete stranger to me, to a man who, so far as I know, has never set foot inside this house. It was a mistake to trust you, but the mischief's done now. All I can say is that there must be something very queer about this fellow, since you've never so much as mentioned him before."

John Raynes was not prepared to be answered in a voice as hard as his own. It was flint against flint now.

"It is scarcely fair to start out with a prejudice against Eric. Shall I ring up and tell him that you do not wish to see him?"

"Certainly not. I do wish to see him."

The door opened. "Taxi's here, sir."

"Thank you, Edith." John struggled into the overcoat which the maid was offering him and snatched his hat and gloves.

It was the first time in the memory of them both that he had left the house without taking a loving farewell of his little daughter. He did not even say good-by.

MERIEL waited a moment until she was sure of the taxi's departure; then she went into the library and, seating herself at her father's desk, drew the telephone toward her.

She was startled, a little shocked, at the sense of hostility in her own heart. She did not mind that her father had not kissed her good-by; indeed, she would have experienced difficulty in returning such a tribute of affection. All the world was against her—daddy, Jim, and to some extent even easy going Aunt Angel. What would Angel say to this?

"Hello—hello. Is that Mayfair 060051? . . . O, is that you, Eric? This is Meriel. Somebody may be listening. Spoke to daddy and he's bitter. . . . Yes, he wants to see you, but you'd better bring your birth certificate and a recommendation for good conduct from your school mistress, and . . ." She laughed uneasily. "O, I'm only joking. He'll be all right, I expect. He's got to be, so don't worry."

Meriel herself grew increasingly uneasy as the day dragged on. It seemed as though five o'clock would never come.

She was in a state of fever when, a little after four, she heard her father's voice in the lower hall rapping out an order to Edith. She rushed down the stairs in fearful apprehension.

Had she heard correctly? "Shut the door in his face, Edith. Simply say you have orders not to admit him and shut the door."

Beyond all doubt, those orders were intended to apply to Eric. Yet only this morning daddy had [illegible] manners.

Suddenly her [illegible] left her and she [illegible]

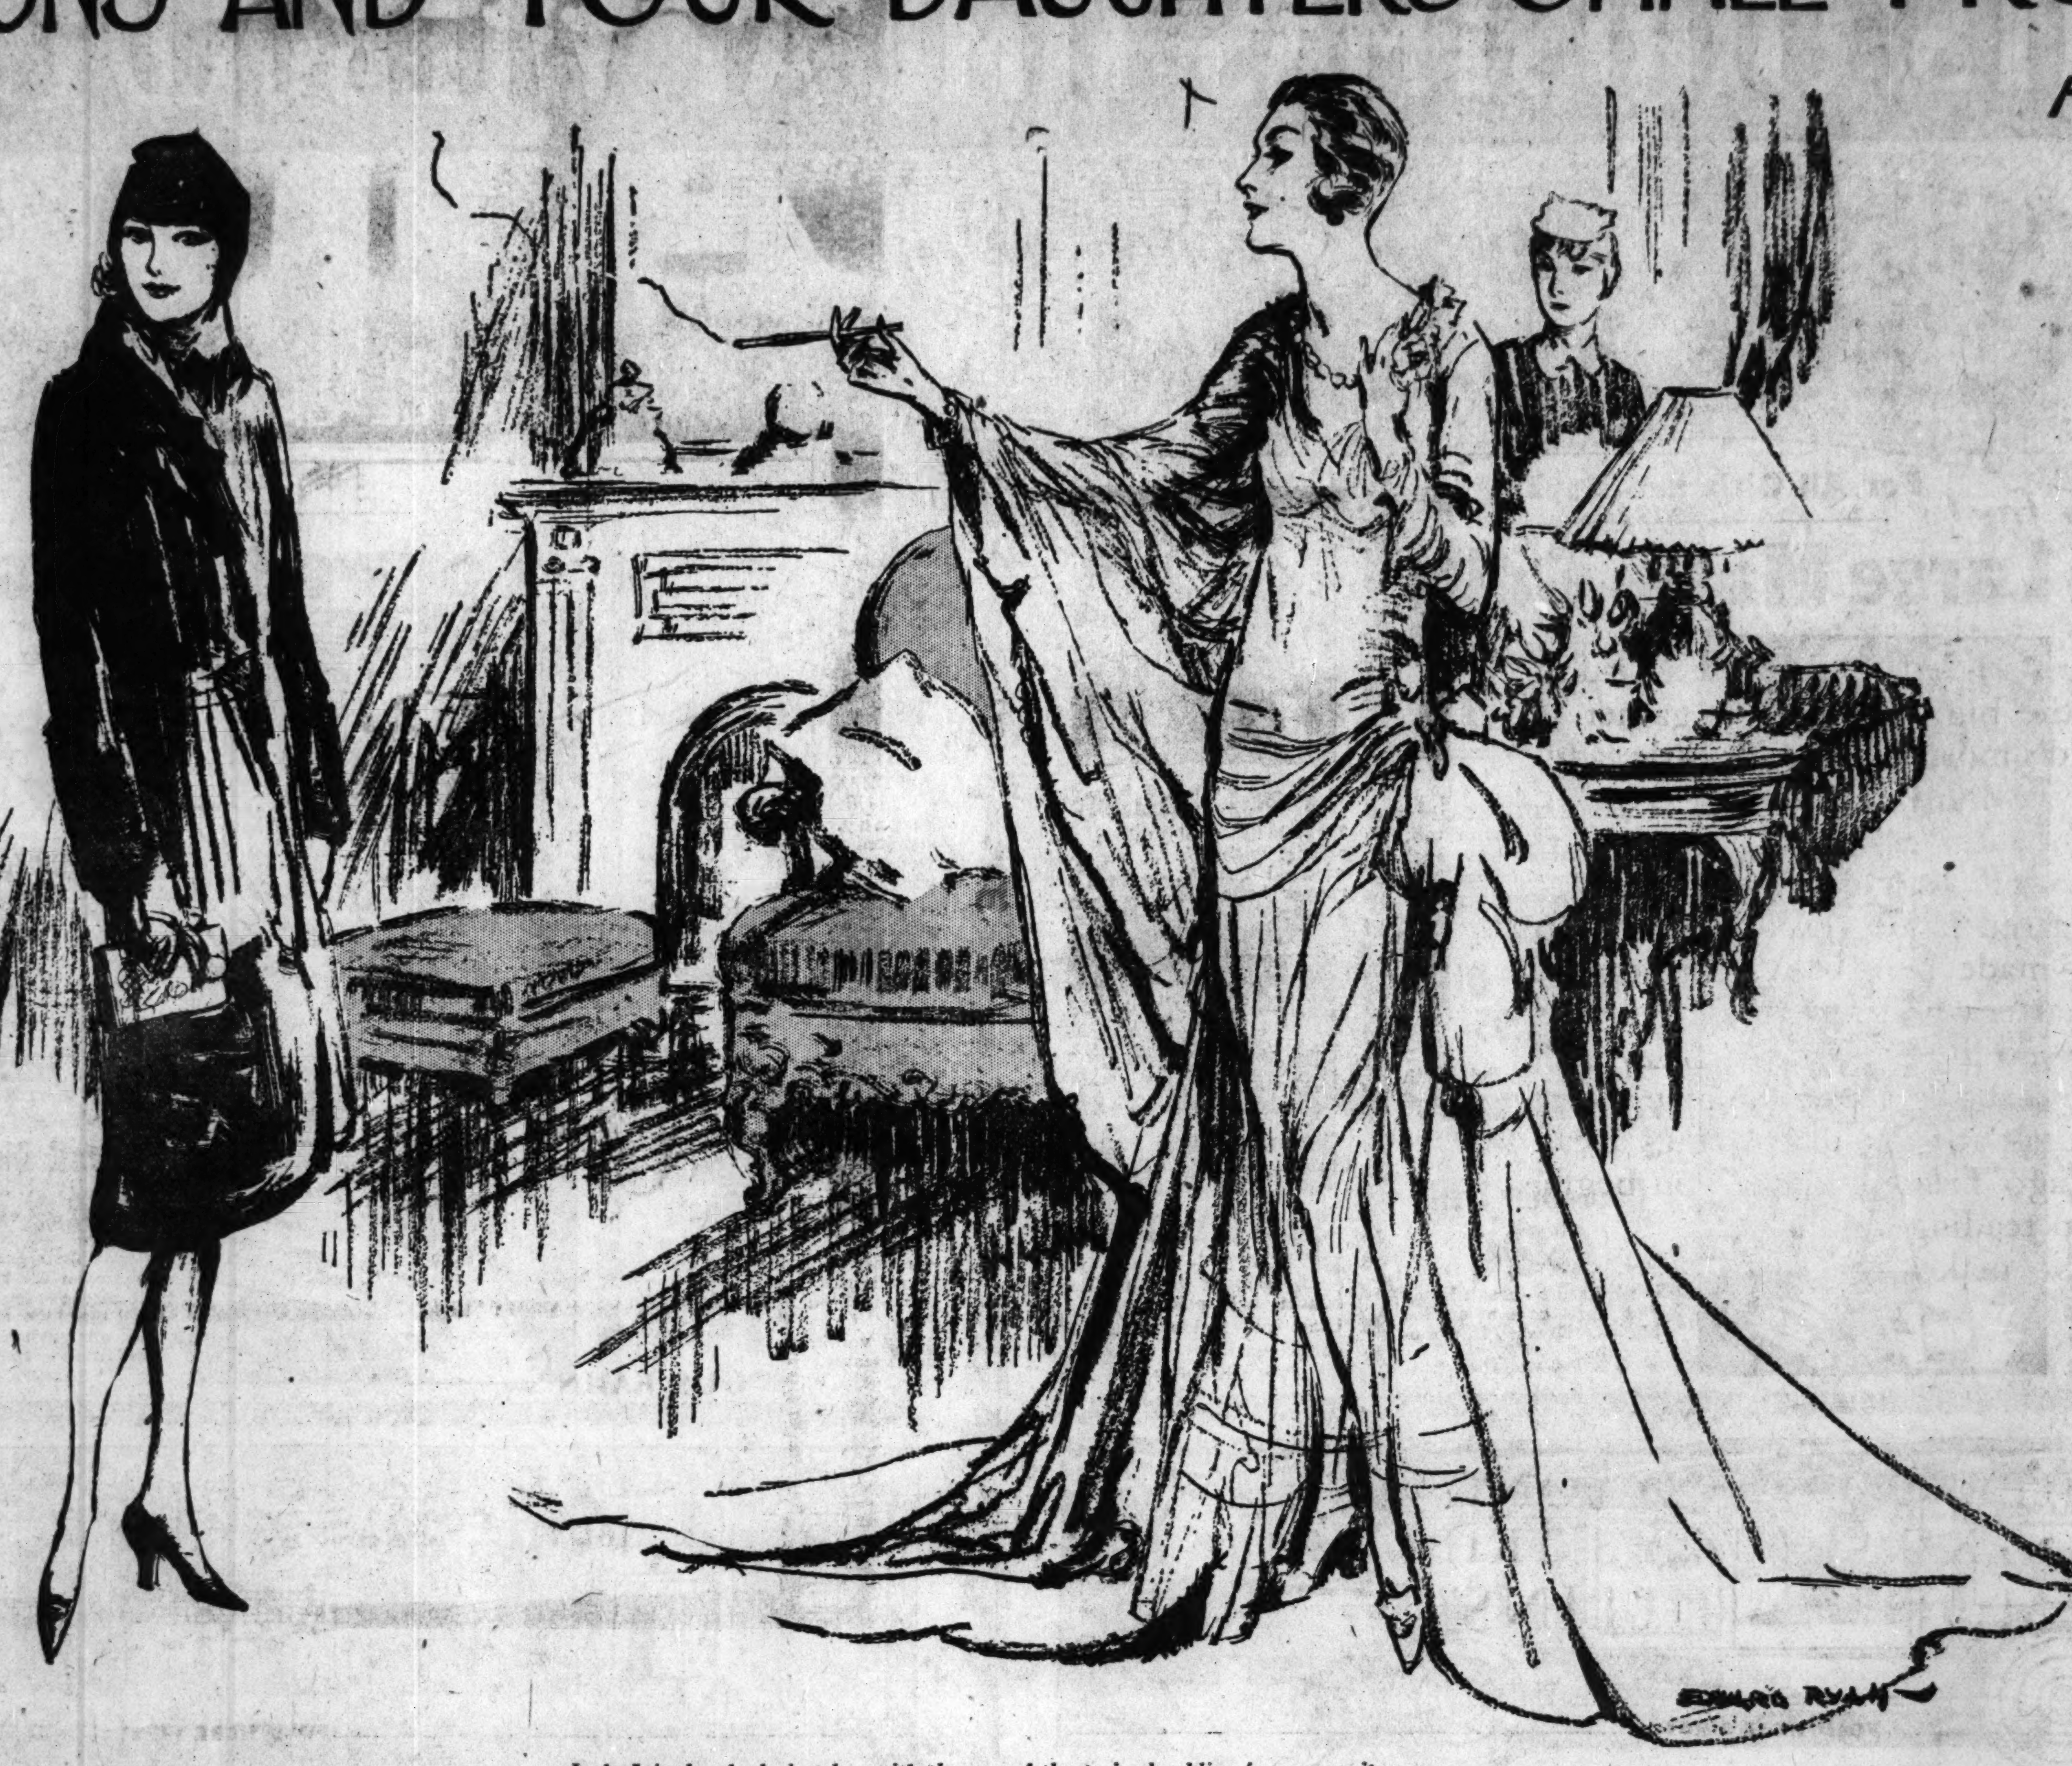
YOUR SONS AND YOUR DAUGHTERS SHALL PROPHESY

by F. E. BAILY

Lady Mary Ivinghoe Was Born to Luxury and Ease, but Something of Her Mother's Gallant Pioneer Spirit Lived On in Her and Surprised Her When the Moment for Action Came.



Lady Ivinghoe looked at her with the eye of the trained soldier for a recruit.

LADY IVINGHOE, who was fifty-five, sat in the long drawing room on the first floor of her house in Berkeley square and told herself that life is a gay business.

"And it isn't over yet," she thought, "and won't be for ever so long, not for people like David and me—particularly me. David hasn't any more worlds to conquer, at any rate none as big as the ones he has conquered, but I've several left. Once Mary's settled, I'll soon show them."

Curled up in the corner of a brocade covered settee, one hand managing a cigaret in a jade holder, the other resting in her lap, she seemed more like a bird poised for flight than a middle aged woman. Her fair hair showed scarcely a thread of gray, and not a neater shingle ever came out of Dover street than hers. She leaned back her head very slightly, as if waiting to be kissed. Her frock had the stark simplicity of genius and from it her legs emerged like the stem of some graceful flower.

She glanced about the long, lovely room with its exquisitely proportioned doors and windows, and thought how cold it must have been before the days of central heating. Basking in the genial warmth provided by modern engineering science, she came to the consideration of herself.

"I'm glad I was always on the small side. A girl of five feet four can do anything with a man of six feet two. I'm glad I've kept slim; but then, if your bones are small and you don't guzzle, that's not very difficult. My legs are better than Mary's even now, and my figure's delightful, if I did wear a corset at her age. Her hair's a more attractive color than mine, but my eyes are gray-green, and my mouth is more devilish. When she was born we'd already climbed half way up the ladder; I was thirty-two and David thirty-five. That's why she's got so much poise and restraint. She's tall like her father, and you can't pick up a girl of her height and whirl her round and round as David used to do with me.

"I'm glad I had the boy when I was twenty-two. David and I were pioneers then, our hands against every man's, and that explains the boy's hair being red like David's and why he turned out a tearing devil, always ready to hit anything twice his size. Now I get my frocks in Grosvenor street and give political receptions, and David's in the cabinet; but it's all one colossal bluff, just like Jo'burg in the boom days, although Mary doesn't understand. But, then, the young are more careful now than we were.

"She'll marry George Pont, who's going to be prime minister before he dies, and take no risks. I was a year younger than she is when young David was born at Klooffontein, and we hadn't twopence in the world, and the nearest doctor rode forty miles to look after me and arrived half an hour too late. She'll miss a lot, Mary will, and never know it."

IN her bedroom on the floor above, a modern room of great charm, with no suggestion of a bedroom about it except that it contained a bed, the Lady Mary Tring dressed herself exquisitely to take tea with a man she was not going to marry, and considered her future; in a frock to her knees and a little hat that weighed five ounces, would have folded up and disappeared in her vanity bag, and cost exactly ten guineas. Lady Mary polished her nails absently and began to think on exceedingly recent lines, being no more than twenty-three.

"After all, people of my generation know all there is to know about sex, and detest sentiment, and, personally, I've nothing but contempt for a girl who doesn't plan out her life and then stick to her plan. What I intend to do is to marry George Pont. The mere fact that one's hunted a good deal this season with a very attractive person called Bertie Maxwell needn't affect the question. If you're born the daughter of a man worth several millions, whom the king created an earl because of his services to the empire, you've got to live up to yourself. You can be a sentimental ass in your twenties, but what about your thirties and forties? I shall inherit a lot of things, and it'd annoy my sense of proportion and style to make a footling marriage.

"I like George very much, I admire him, it's a very old baronetcy, and politically George is the coming man. He's twelve years older than I am and that's about the right difference in ages. He's rich and that's important, because so am I, and for a rich girl to marry a poor man is fatal. He always has a feeling of inferiority, and God preserve me from an apologetic husband. George and I can make a most excellent marriage, do a lot in the world, and be a very important influence. If you're naturally constructive, like me, you can't endure driveling through life and spending the last part of it realizing your own futility."

She slid her arms into her sable coat, a supple miracle of soft fur, picked up gloves and handbag, gave a last look in her glass, and went down to the drawing room.

LADY IVINGHOE half turned at the sound of the door latch. There entered the room a tall girl in soft shades of brown from the deep copper-beech of her hat to the pallor of her stockings. Red gold side curls brought forward made two patches of color on her face; she had one of those clear, creamy skins that so often go with her coloring. The side curls, blue eyes, and the scarlet line of her lips were the only high notes of color about her. She closed the door and came forward slowly, pulling on her gloves.

"I'm going out to tea, darling," she said.

Lady Ivinghoe looked at her with the eye of the trained soldier for a recruit, a very promising recruit, faultlessly turned out, yet a recruit still. She contrasted her own vitality, a kind of irrepressible hurrying forward to look 'round the next corner, laughing high spirits that nothing could quench, with the controlled purpose of this tall, grave girl.

Mary smiled, and asked: "Do I look nice?"

"You're very beautiful," Lady Ivinghoe said, rather wistfully. Her voice seemed an echo of Mary's; both their voices had a caressing quality, as if they loved their words and had waited all their lives to say these very words to this very person.

"I s'pose I am, and yet, somehow, you don't sound quite happy about me. Is it the frock, or what?"

She held open her fur coat to reveal the frock, but Lady Ivinghoe shook her head.

"The frock's perfect. I was only thinking, somehow, that life's gone very smoothly for you, Mary, and one day I suppose it won't, and then I'm not quite sure what'll happen. You've never learnt to use your claws like I have. It's awfully useful to know how."

"I've never let it get as far as claws. My lot don't."

"I always got a certain kick at feeling their faces rip under mine. Pr'aps you'll never know. You are going to marry George Pont, aren't you, Mary?"

"I think so. It's not definitely settled, but sort of understood. I can't help admiring him. He knows what he means to do and lets nothing get in his way. I don't see any one else in the same world with him. Besides, he's very attractive. He treats me as an equal, for one thing."

Lady Ivinghoe smiled, because David, first earl of Ivinghoe, had never treated her as an equal—as a goddess sometimes, as a naughty child often, as a darling always.

"Do you love him, if it isn't a rude question?"

"Not in the crazy manner, but quite enough."

Lady Ivinghoe, who knew you can never love quite enough, nodded.

"Is it his tea party, by any chance?"

"No, Bertie Maxwell's. He's going overseas to make his fortune, and it's a kind of farewell celebration."

"O, is he?" Lady Ivinghoe said, quickly. "Well, be very nice to him, if you can, because I expect he's in love with you, and it's very lonely to go overseas without some one you love."

"Sentiment," answered Mary, smiling in her turn, "is always rather a weakness. Still I'm going to be very nice, up to a point. He rides awf'ly well; doesn't know what fear means. Good-by, my dear."

The door closed. In imagination, Lady Ivinghoe saw the Lady Mary pass down a marble staircase into first an inner then an outer hall. A middle aged butler, with the manner of one of the more expensive solicitors, to which he added charm, escorted her down a flight of steps to the pavement, and across it to the door of a big, silent limousine. A footman spread the rug for her, the door closed with a faint click, the footman mounted beside the chauffeur, and the great car rolled away in the direction of a young man with no possessions about to seek his fortune overseas, alone.

LADY IVINGHOE'S mind went back thirty-four years to the time when there was no Lady Ivinghoe but only Mary Packer, a fair haired girl of twenty-one, who rode awfully well and didn't know what fear meant. She had a singular attraction for men, an extremely pretty face, and her fair hair looked infinitely becoming when clubbed on the back of her neck beneath a bowler hat, the rest of her making a slender figure in a well cut riding habit.

Her father was the squire of Herewick, in the Shires, and Mary grew up under the personal supervision of five brothers older than herself. The old squire never seemed to have any money, but in those days money mattered very little, and somehow all the boys went to public schools and into the navy or army, or to the university. Mary had never known anything but a rambling old house and stables on a rather shaggy estate where she and her brothers played, quarreled, hunted, fished, and ferreted. When the last brother had gone away to school she remained at home with a governess, helped exercise the horses, learned housekeeping from her mother, and prayed for the holidays. Vaguely, at the back of her mind, she realized that she was expected to marry a rich man.

For Christmas, 1894, Vivian, her favorite brother, was bringing a young fellow barrister down from London, a certain David Logan.

Mary met them at the station, five miles away, driving herself in a dogcart with a liveried groom perched at the back, shoulders squared and arms folded. There was a touch of frost in the air, and the big horse felt inclined to play up a little. The iron tired wheels crunched melodiously on the graveled roads, and the candle lamps in the sockets of the dogcart spread a yellow, diffused light on either side. There was a faint smell of warm horse and well dubbined harness.

She reached the station with time to spare, for those were leisured days. The groom walked the horse up and down in the station yard, and Mary walked up and down the platform, nodding to people and servants whom she knew. She wore a sailor hat, a coat and skirt, the skirt reaching to the ground; boots, woolen stockings, and calico underwear. Over everything came an ulster, because sitting high up on a dogcart in winter time was cold work.

An air of excitement enlivened the platform, and a bearded porter hurried to and fro as the train came in. Mary saw Vivian emerge from a first class carriage, ulstered like herself, mustached and sidewhiskered. Vivian was dark like her mother, and of medium height. There followed him out of the carriage a red haired young giant of six feet two, a gray eyed Scot, who seemed to radiate all the strength and vitality in the world.

"Hullo, Mary!" Vivian exclaimed. "This is David Logan. My sister, Mary, David."

They shook hands and looked at one another. Mary turned to Vivian.

"Hobson has the float for your luggage, and I've got the dogcart. You'll have to sit at the back with Sykes, Vivian, and let Mr. Logan come in front with me. I won't trust you to drive, because Prince is very fresh and he can't bear the cold."

Sykes, standing at Prince's head, touched the brim of his cockaded silk hat. Mary climbed to the driver's seat and David Logan took his place beside her, arranging the black waterproof rug over their knees. Sykes let go Prince's head; Prince lashed out once or twice, danced a little and moved off, with Sykes springing for the step at the back of the cart. They whirled away through the night at a slashing trot.

"He moves well," David Logan said with his soft Edinburgh accent. "Do you have much trouble to hold him?"

"O no! He has a mouth like velvet. You can hold him on a snaffle quite easily. He's as good as gold, really only it's a cold night and he got bored waiting."

MARY, who had never been shy in her life, talked lightheartedly with this tall young man whom she liked at once. She wondered if he rode well, and prayed that the frost might break so that hunting need not stop. They came to the lodge gates, and a lodgekeeper's child opened them and stood aside, bobbing as the dogcart passed.

In the light of the lamps on the lodge gates, David Logan took his first real look at his friend's sister. She sat perfectly erect, reins sorted between the fingers of her little dogskin gloved hands, whip at the correct angle, eyes gazing steadily between Prince's ears. Her profile, beneath the brim of her sailor hat, struck him as delicious, with its firm chin and hint of deviltry about eyes and mouth. Then she sent Prince forward and they bowled along a dark avenue and drew up finally in front of the manor house entrance.

They went out of the dark into the warm glow of the hall, with a great fire burning. On either side of the fireplace sat the squire, still in boots and gaiters, reading by the soft light of the oil lamps, and his wife busy over her sewing. A son or two on leave and a number of dogs completed the group.

Vivian introduced David Logan to his parents. It was a time when parents still enjoyed respect, when the father was lord of his household and the mother mistress of hers. David Logan found his host and hostess a kindly and dignified pair. He liked the way their expression softened when they looked at Mary, the delightful mixture of daring and deference she showed in return.

DRESSING for dinner in his bedroom with the blazing fire, canopied four-poster, immense tallboy standing against the wall, and the kind of armchair depicted in Georgian sporting prints, David Logan's thoughts returned again and again to Mary.

He found her in the stiff, conventional drawing room before dinner, transformed into a very dignified young lady. Her green silk frock repeated the color of her eyes; it reached to the ground, and beneath it nestled a sequence of petticoats; it had shoulder pieces and very short sleeves, and the corsage cut in a deep V. Her fair hair, dressed high on her head, shone from brushing.

They made a stately little procession to the dining room, the squire with his wife on his arm, and David with Mary. They talked mostly of hunting.

"The frost is breaking," said the squire. "We shall be able to hunt tomorrow, and I can mount you, Mr. Logan, as it happens, in spite of your inches. You ride, of course?"

"Thank you, sir; I've hunted several seasons with my cousins in Leicestershire, and with the university drag."

The ladies drank very little wine. When they had left, the men remained a long time over port and cigars. David could see already that the members of this family were united in a very definite affection for their home and their parents, yet, somehow, he did not feel a stranger.

When he returned to the drawing room he found Mrs. Packer doing embroidery and Mary playing one of Strauss' waltzes, "Uber den Wellen," at the old fashioned grand piano. His gray eyes met her gray-green ones for a second. The faintest smile intensified for a moment the hint of deviltry about her mouth which he had noticed in the light of the lodgekeeper's lamps. Then she turned her eyes away.

With startling suddenness, David Logan realized himself to be in love.

Lady Ivinghoe, in her Berkeley square drawing room, smiled a little at this point, because her memories were about to become very interesting.

There followed many days' hunting, during which David Logan reached the standard imposed by a very critical company; then frost made the ground iron-hard again and brought hunting to a standstill. For this reason, in the blue gray of a deepening winter twilight, Mary Packer was walking homeward along a frostbound road beside David Logan. She had taken the opportunity, as hunting was out of the question, to visit an invalid in the village, and David insisted on walking with her to carry her basket. On the outward journey they talked and laughed, but coming back they said very little.

Mary felt instinctively that before they reached the manor, David would ask her to marry him. The idea made her very happy, because she realized that she had fallen in love with him at their first meeting at the railway station. It seemed somehow very companionable to be walking beside him with the frozen mud crunching beneath their feet and a great stillness all around.

Presently they came to a gate in the hedge and he put a hand on her arm. She looked up at him in pretended surprise, but the pressure grew more firm, and finally they halted. He looked down at her very gravely and said: "Mary, I want to tell you something, and this is the only chance I'm likely to get."

Devils began to dance in Mary's eyes.

"Well, David, you'd better hurry up. It's awfully cold."

He dropped the empty basket and took both her hands in his big ones.

"I love you and I want to marry you. Do you love me, Mary?"

Mary looked up at him and answered with a faint note of impatience in her voice: "Of course I do. Ever since the evening when I first saw you. It's funny, because I've never really been in love before in all my life."

HE bent down and kissed her, passionately. She closed her eyes and gave herself up to being kissed. Then she opened them, and saw that he still looked very grave. She put her hands up to the lapels of his coat, and asked: "What's the matter, David? Why are you so worried?"

"Because, darling, I'm going to South Africa in a few weeks' time and I don't know when I shall come back. I want to marry you at once and take you with me, but you mayn't want to go and your people are certain to be horrified at the idea."

Mary smiled and more devils lurked round the corners of her mouth. "I adore adventures. What are you going to do in South Africa, David?"

"I'm going there to make my fortune. I'm tired of sitting waiting for briefs that don't turn up. I've got just a thousand pounds in the world. I propose to risk it in a new country. Do you still want to marry me?"

"Yes, David, please. I'm quite used to making my own dresses. We've never been very well off, and the boys have always needed most of what there was. I'm afraid you'll find father very difficult, because it was always supposed I should marry Jack Butler. The Butlers have a place eight miles from here and they're immensely rich. Jack's coming to dinner tonight."

"And supposing your father won't let you marry me, Mary?"

Mary's chin tilted and her mouth set. "I'm twenty-one and I can do as I please, David. I'd rather not quarrel, because my father and mother have always been very good to me, but if you really love me and you really want me, I'll go to the end of the world with you in spite of anything."

The butler entered to serve tea. Lady Ivinghoe smiled at him and said: "If any one calls, say I'm not at home, please, Phillips—any one, you understand, great or small."

Phillips smiled back, with the air of one who, respectfully in the case of a butler, indulges a singularly charming child.

"Very good, my lady."

When he had gone Lady Ivinghoe sipped her tea and became engaged to be married all over again.

Naturally, there had been consternation at Herewick manor. The squire thundered in Jove-like majesty, and the squire's lady appeared very distressed. The squire declared that no gentleman would take advantage of a young girl's infatuation while a guest in her father's house and drag her, God knew where, into a quite uncivilized country to die of some outlandish disease or be murdered by natives.

Jack Butler, though not formally affianced, showed himself extremely proprietory and made a formal offer of marriage, only to have it refused very gracefully by the lady concerned. David Logan stood like a rock. If Mary consented to marry him, marry her he would, if not from her father's house, then elsewhere. At last, out of affection for Mary, the squire gave way.

After three weeks of whirling excitement, the buying of frocks and the packing of wedding presents, Mary found herself for the first time in her life in a great liner, alone with her husband, steaming towards the sun. Presently the Southern Cross looked down on them by night and the sun shone uninterruptedly by day. She lay in a deck chair beside a David immersed in Roman-Dutch law and felt wildly happy. At last they steamed into Table Bay, with Cape Town clustering at the foot of a great mountain, and began the long journey to Johannesburg, the City of Gold.

THAT was in 1895, when the boom in mining shares increased and the stock exchange boiled; not a bad opportunity for a young Scottish barrister with a constitution of iron and determination to match. At the end of the year little David was born in some remote dorp where his father had gone to investigate a mining proposition.

Then, during four years, David Logan laid the foundations of his career as a financier till the storm between Boers and Uitlanders blew up to a hurricane after the Jameson raid in December, '98; and in May, 1899, Sir Alfred Milner, high commissioner at the Cape, cabled to Mr. Chamberlain: "The case for intervention is overwhelming."

David Logan, riding the whirlwind till the last moment, reached Cape Town just before the Boer ultimatum made war inevitable. There Mary spent the three war years in a sort of crazy nightmare; the hectic early days when General French escaped by train from Ladysmith, on the point of being besieged, and Rhodes was shut up in Kimberley, having acute dissensions with the military; when Buller landed with his three ill fated divisional commanders, Methuen, Clery, and Gatacre; when the 1,000 casualties of Methuen's action at Magersfontein shook the empire to the core and brought Roberts and Kitchener hurrying to the Cape, to land on January the 10th, 1900.

Unforgettable days, with Lady Sarah Wilson and Winston Churchill war corresponding, all the Johannesburg Jews carousing in exile at the Cape, London society beauties enduring a willing exile in Cape Town to beguile the convalescence of guards officers, and Baden-Powell conducting a serio-comic defense of Mafeking.

But it was at Cape Town that David first met Kitchener. By June 5, 1900, Roberts had entered Pretoria, and David began to prepare for the reconstruction he knew must come.

IN 1903 he had made his first million and received a knighthood for his share in guaranteeing part of the reconstruction loans. In 1905 little Mary was born at her father's fine house in Parktown, the Mayfair of Johannesburg. Sir David and Lady Logan and family returned to England in 1913 because young David, aged eighteen, would be leaving Eton very soon and eight year old Mary's education had to begin. When the great war broke out in 1914 Sir David was forty-four and Mary forty.

Young David went at once into the guards, and his father gave a hundred thousand pounds to the Red Cross. That eventually changed him from Sir David Logan to Viscount Ivinghoe. He importuned the war office for a commission and the war office, acting under instructions, refused. Kitchener remembered the David Logan of Cape Town in 1900. This was to be a war of finance as well as fighting, and great financiers had other work to do.

Lord Ivinghoe spent the war years serving on financial commissions in allied countries, and the signing of the peace treaty brought him an earldom. Young David left the army with an honorable wound, two decorations, and the rank of captain.

At this point Lady Ivinghoe rang the bell for cocktails. Young David, now Lord Wendover, had been responsible for the few threads of gray in her fair shingle. "He was born," she reminded herself, "in our fighting days, but I didn't want him to die fighting, and he served with his battalion the whole time and the guards were in every big show."

Then Phillips came, bringing cocktails. Sipping gratefully, Lady Ivinghoe having reviewed her own career, summed up the situation as it occurred to her.

"I don't blame Mary a bit for deciding to marry George Pont. After all, there isn't much adventure left, and politics is always amusing. Besides, the young generation aren't taking any risks. They're in the shadow of the war and they play for safety. But I wouldn't do it myself, and I wouldn't have missed one second of the littlest dog fight David and I ever had for anything in the world."

THE big, silent limousine drew up at the ladies' entrance of the Plantagenet club. Mary entered with a certain mingling of triumph and trepidation. The Plantagenet club, for membership of which the names of boy babies careful in the choice of their fathers are put down at birth, has only of late permitted females to breathe its rare atmosphere. It was Bertie Maxwell's final gesture—"My club, therefore my home; my club, to which I belong not because of what I have but of what I am. Mr. Midas might take you to the Ritz, but he would never enter here except as a guest."

The ex-cavalryman commissionaire with the row of medals led her to a waiting room, and almost immediately Bertie appeared, a very pleasant sunburn-haired young man two years older than herself, with the Rugby football of his youth and boxing matches when he served his time in the shops still evident in rippling muscles and eyes and skin clear as crystal.

Mary said, "Hullo, Bertie!" gilding the casualness of 1928 with her nicest smile.

"Hullo, Mary! Jolly decent of you to come. I've got a table in a corner by a window, and you shall have muffins done our special way. Frowsy old hole this place must seem to a girl, but it's got something about it."

He led her into the ladies' drawing room, decorated by the committee with a kind of sacrificial charm, enthroned her at her superlative table and looked after her with the devotion of a well bred young man etherealized by hopeless affection.

Mary poured tea, rested her elbows on the table, leaned her chin on her hands, looked at him consideringly, and commanded: "Tell me all about everything."

"It's just the old, old story—the younger son digs out. As you know, my mother died a little while ago. She left me a few hundred—a thousand, as a matter of fact. I've got a very little more put by, and I'm going out to Tommy Hunter, a very old pal of mine, in Kenya. He's got a place right up in the blue Gil Gil way, and the coffee he planted when he went out is just about bearing now.

"He'll be glad of the extra capital, and, as I'm an engineer, I'm interested in the mechanical side. I shall take out a tractor or so and a couple of six

The TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

Candy Making Is but Another Phrase for the Highest Technique in Sugar Cookery

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

BY JANE EDDINGTON.

BOILING sugar is bombastic stuff, perfect windbag stuff, or the most bubbling stuff imaginable—greatly swelling bubbles. A small amount of wet up sugar in a kettle will rise up inches, in no time over a hot fire, and out of the pan it will go unless restraint is instantly applied to the fire by way of the gas stopcock, or by lifting the hugely bubbling stuff quickly away from the heat. This latter move is a disadvantage because we are wishing to cook the sugar to a point, while taking it entirely away from the fire is not a way to cook it precisely, but there is much to say about that, and we are not expert enough to say it all—expert we mean in sugar cookery.

And we have mentioned but one of the idiosyncrasies of sugar cookery. Sugar is a stuff that burns easily Even when coverted to a sirup it can readily return to sugar again, and not as good sugar as what we started out with, either. Then we can make scrap caramels, so all is not lost.

The Amateur Candy Maker.

There are lovelinesses in candies that the amateur can no more attain than she can ride to the moon on a moon glade. Yet, as Christmas nears, the one fond desire of many women, even those whose hand is not in on any sort of cookery and perhaps never has been, is to make candy for their friends. They are also quite likely to ask help of some one who perhaps can make a few kinds of candy and has attained some skill with the idea that this skill will be handed over to others on a pillow Whether on a pillow, or more roughly, it just cannot be done.

Yet there are a few sorts of sweets, hardly true or technical candies, which even the amateur can make, though rarely has she patience or discipline enough to really cook sugar. However, if she is a disciplined person in any art whatsoever, she can make candy somewhat, just as she can do almost anything in any line if she has the will. Sugar has to be cooked to a point or with a precision that is practiced but rarely in most sorts of cooking, not that it is not worth while in all sorts of cookery but because a failure to be thus exact does not show up so prominently as do sticky, rocky, or burned sugar failures.

Equipment Is Needed.

It is not always nor entirely the amateur's fault when she fails, but it will be a fault if she does not go ahead and discover why. And often one of the reasons is—we might say generally instead of often—because she does not have the necessary equipment for the particular sort of candy she has tried to make.

Necessity rarely drives a woman to the cooking of candy, so she has less of an impetus to obtain the necessary outfit with the essential thermometer, the right boiler, etc. We are constantly knowing of people who try to make candy without these first aids—the thermometer and a suitable cooking kettle.

A candy kitchen is an unimaginably different place from a kitchenette or the modern apartment kitchen. The spacious tables alone—one must have some spread in making candy if no more than space for trays of the finished product—are enough to excite the avarice of one who loves elbow room when a piece of work of breadth is to be done. Kettles, thermometers, marble slabs, and special implements for the making of the different varieties of candy will be found in a candy kitchen. If taffies are to be made there will be a hook or machine for pulling them, something to cut them up finally, and little papers to wrap them and caramels in. If candies are to be dipped there will be dipping forks.

For some candies there must be trays, and molds, and racks, and sirup gauges, and the simple measuring cup. Even this is lacking in some families, while three or four of these cups and the two tablespoon glass beaker perhaps, or as well, can be used in making one batch of candy or cake when all is properly got out and in order before the actual combining of ingredients begins.

Taffies and Toffies.

We hear a great deal about taffies now because people want to make taffy apples, and also a great deal about English toffy because people like it and want to make it at home since it costs so much or much more than the taffy candy, and is made superior with nuts, as plain taffy is not. When it is taffy candy the difference between that and toffy is that it is pulled and the toffy is not.

So many requests have come to me for a recipe for this "toffy" that I have finally got around to try out a variety or two, but have settled down to the idea that an imitation of it is comparatively easy to succeed with, partly because I can make fudge, and any recipe that we can adapt to numerous ends is the one I vote for.

The Two Cup of Sugar Kettle.

Because sugar puffs up so, and may stay puffed up while cooking not at all, we should use a saucepan holding at least two quarts, and, perhaps better, two and a half quarts, when we are cooking two cups of sugar. It seems to me best to use a flat bottomed aluminum saucepan with a stout handle. Heat spreads quickly through aluminum and spreads more slowly through other materials, so with enamel we are more likely to get a burned spot.

The kettle should have straight sides to fasten the thermometer to and be broad bottomed or wide of diameter rather than small bottomed and high of sides. A wooden spoon is always the best sort to stir anything with in such a kettle because contact of metal with metal can yield flavor, though so slight that most people will not notice it.

Dissolving Candy Ingredients.

Chocolate needs to be melted and cooked before sugar is added to it, and sugar must be dissolved entirely before it begins to boil. You can feel the difference between the sugar that is still granular and that which has been dissolved. The feel in the latter case, as you stir and touch the bottom of the pan, is velvetlike, while before that it has a granular feel.

One granular bit of sugar left somewhere may work havoc in the end, but there is more to that story. We say that the bottom of the pan will feel velvety, but that is not all. When the sugar is not dissolved at all it may be somewhat difficult to stir a mixture containing but a little liquid, while it becomes easier and easier to stir as the sugar is dissolved, until the spoon moves through the whole as easily as through water, finally.

These may seem fine-spun points, but cooking is more interesting and less a gamble when you will note them. And when we have chocolate we will save ourselves several kinds of trouble if we get every lump out of it before it is combined with sugar and then every lump of chocolate coated sugar that forms is dissolved before our mixture boils. So let us try!

Fudge Toffy.

In the making of many sorts of fudge I found that the more bitter chocolate I used the more like a caramel would be the product, hence this recipe: Four ounces of bitter chocolate, one cup of milk or cream, one tablespoon of butter, or none, or even more if you like it, two cups of granulated sugar, one-half cup of corn sirup, all cooked to 240 degrees, and then a teaspoon of vanilla.

First, put the chocolate on a piece of oiled paper on a table or board and with a medium heavy knife shave it onto the paper. This is an easy and even way to shave or cut up chocolate. Holding it in the hand and shaving it into the saucepan is hard. It breaks and gives far less desirable results.

Put the four ounces of shaved chocolate into a saucepan holding two quarts or more, add to it one-half the milk, and stir until it is melted and too thick to stir, then add the rest of the milk and stir until the whole is like a cream, without a lump. There is more than one advantage in getting the chocolate so cooked. None of it will then sink to the bottom of the pan while the sugar is being dissolved and try to stay there. Add the butter to the hot chocolate and stir it in, then add sugar and corn sirup and stir over a low fire until the sugar is dissolved.

When the whole may be allowed to boil, and over an increased fire with constant watching lest it boil over, but once it is swollen, while the fire has been lowered, it may stay so though it is hardly cooking at all. Put on more fire then, and more than likely the bubbles will subside for an inch or more. Then the cooking can go on without danger of boiling over if the fire and more of it is just right. Rinse off the thermometer with hot water and fasten to side of pan as soon as the cooking is well established, and cook to 240 instead of 238 as for ordinary fudge.

Finishing It.

Have ready a buttered flat dish—a glass utility dish warmed and buttered is good—and sprinkle chopped nuts through a strainer to cover the bottom of the dish. When the fudge has cooled, but not so much that it will not spread with a tablespoon, make a thin layer of this over the finely chopped nuts, sprinkle chopped nuts over it also, and as soon as it has cooled somewhat mark off toffy sized squares.

This is not like something cooked twenty degrees more, but is a pleasant candy. The nuts put on the bottom will be absorbed into the candy if you put it on them too hot. The other half may be stirred a little and made into caramel sized pieces of fudge.

Butter Toffy.

Two cups of yellow sugar, or brown may be used instead and may be preferred, one-fourth cup butter, one tablespoon vinegar, four tablespoons of boiling water, which is one-fourth cup; one-fourth teaspoon salt. Cook to 270 degrees and pour out thin after the bubbles have subsided, with or without nuts. With a dark sugar this would probably be nearer what most people would call toffy than most home made toffies.

Taffy Apple Toffy.

The following mixture, cooked to 290 degrees, is what some people call butterscotch, but I would not, and I would not cook it to 290 because a molasses mixture burns more readily at crack stage than a sugar, and at 290 this might be more suitable for "browning," or the base of kitchen bouquet, than a butterscotch. When cooked to 260 it makes a taffy apple cover like that seen on 99 out of 100 on sale: one cup of sugar, one-fourth cup of molasses, one-fourth cup butter or up to one-half, one tablespoon of vinegar (or corn sirup may be used), two tablespoons of boiling water.

If the risk is taken of boiling it to the hard crack stage—hurry it off the stove then—it should be poured out in a thin sheet and allowed to cool but slightly before it is cut up into squares. If it cools much it can only be broken. It is easier on the teeth than a butterscotch cooked to 270 only.

Another Taffy Apple Cover.

One cup of sugar, one cup of molasses, a few drops of vinegar, one-half cup of water and a little butter or not, as you like. If you have no thermometer cook until when it is tried in water it is a hard ball, or perhaps slightly brittle, in the small quantity tested, but we recommend 260 because we know that in all cooking very slight circumstances do alter cases a good deal. For instance, in covering many apples the mixtures must be kept fluid, and with some kinds of work it might get overcooked.

If anything, we should say that a taffy apple mixture should be undercooked rather than overcooked, in which latter case it will not run, whereas in the first case the apple may be dipped a second time.

THE GOOD RED BRICKS - - By Mary Synon

INSTALLMENT XIV.

Home.

BECAUSE there was but one thing Sally could do, the granting of Joe's prayer for return, she went out into the winter twilight and passed through the little iron gateway where Cora Gorman had been wont to come to meet Harry Gates. Old man Gorman himself opened the door to her ringing and, with friendly surprise, led her into one of the great, lamp lighted rooms of the big house.

"Tom all right?" he asked her, in evident understanding that her coming presaged trouble

"Fine," she said. "It's Joe." She saw his face harden, but she rushed on with a summary of the situation. "He must come back," she ended.

"Well," Gorman said, "what do you want me to do?"

She took from her purse the blue and white tickets of her pawnings and handed them to him.

"Will you loan me money on these?" she asked him.

"For what?"

"To bring him home."

"I thought," he said, slowly, "that I was the only fool who kept on helping some one who'd double-crossed me." He waved aside the tickets and took a checkbook from his pocket. "How much?" he asked, and began to write. "There was a time," he told her, "when I vowed I wouldn't help one of the Gates breed, even if he was dying in the gutter, but I've got over that. I'm not God."

"I don't know how to thank you," she gulped, as she took his check.

"Don't try. You can pay me back when you're rich." He patted her shoulder. "There's a lot I can't ever pay back, Sally, because it wasn't money. It's what your mother and you did for Terry—the things I should have been doing and wasn't."

"But they were nothing," she made protest. "We liked him."

"I know," he said, "but they count, just the same." He came with her to the gateway, deprecating her gratitude. "Forget it, Sally," he bade her. "We've all got to help each other in this damned world."

With the means in her hand for consummation of her final act of sacrifice for Joe, she turned back to the house, and met the homegoing throngs from the factories to the eastward. In the cold dusk they swarmed past her, heavy stepping men, bundled women and girls, chattering in strange tongues as they moved, a great army of toil. From the edge of the sidewalk, where their passing jostled her, Sally Gates scanned the dark, surging throng with the feeling that she and her city were meeting a portent. Chicago! She had been young with it, gay with it, glad with it, swift with it. She had pulsed with its power and sorrowed with its sufferings. She had sung on its summits and sobbed in its depths. She had lived in it and of it, and now she and the city had come to the end of youth.

In this gray December the year and the century were speeding toward close. Over the threshold waited the new year, the new century, with strength of the labor of these hurrying thousands, with splendor of the wrought visions of men who had already dreamed them in music, in art, in architecture, to make a more shining city; but they would not bear the flaming torch that the years gone by had held high for her and Chicago. As if she carried in her hands the spirit that had been hers and the city's, she held them out to the speeding crowd; but no one looked at her as she stood in the dusk of the street. With the consciousness of change pressing upon her, she hastened to cash Gorman's check and to wire to an Arizona town the money to bring Joe and Violet back to the city.

IN a storm that swirled and shifted over Chicago, piling drifts of snow against the great fortresses of factories, driving high and stinging winds through ice coated streets, Joe Gates came home.

Standing on the gale swept platform of the station, a forlorn, frightened girl, with her year of agonies visible only in her deepened eyes, Sally shivered as the snow crusted engine of the eastbound overland puffed past her into the train shed. Clutching her coat as if to steady herself against an emotion wilder than wind, she strained her gaze upon the crowd of incoming passengers until it narrowed to a thin stream. She was giving up hope when she sensed rather than sighted a little commotion in the lee of the last car. Toward it, sped by instinct rather than by reason, she hurried.

From the car platform the porters were lifting a stretcher. Beside them, directing their careful movements, Violet stood. She turned as Sally came beside her, her little face drawn and white.

"How is he?" Sally's voice came, husky. Her knees were shaking so that she had to cling to the side of the car. Her look fell on the stretcher, and held there.

"Pretty bad. It's been a hard trip."

They swung in behind the stretcher bearers, Violet mincing with nervous steps, her glance at Sally almost fearful. "I didn't want him to write you," she said.

"It's all right."

"It'll be a lot of trouble."

"That won't matter."

"Are you going to let me stay with him?"

"I hadn't thought of anything else."

"You're a good sport, Sally," she said; "better than I'd be."

The porters set down the stretcher on a truck inside the gates and turned away. Violet went over to it and pulled down the blankets. The cry that Sally had striven to hold back, the cry of her love and her fidelity, of her hopes and fears, her sorrows and yearnings, came from her lips at last. This ghastly, tight skinned, hollow cheeked wreck of a man—could this be the Joe Gates of the high game, the sleek haired boy she had adored, the gay cavalier she had loved? Under her stricken, sorrowful gaze he opened his eyes.

"Sally," he said, and smiled at her with a flicker of his old fondness.

In an instant, forgetful of time and change, she was beside him, bending over him with the radiance of joy that comes when parting is over.

"O Joe," was all she said, but into his name she put the love of all the years.

"I'm glad to see you, Sally." His gaze traveled over her. "Some clothes," he murmured. "You always looked just right." He lifted his hand from beneath the blankets and reached for hers. "How's the world treating you?"

"Fine," she said, chokingly.

"You've been good to us, Sally."

"It was nothing."

"It's everything."

"We're going home, Joe." She waited for the porters to bear him to the waiting ambulance she had ordered.

"Home, Sally?"

HIS hand still held to hers as the men carried him out. Violet, following them, seemed remote, insignificant. In the ambulance, moving slowly over the icy streets, she shrank into shadowy unreality as she crouched in a corner. Not once did she speak, even when the horses turned into Harrison street. It was Sally who answered Joe as the ambulance stopped at the curbstone.

"The red bricks, Sally," he said. "I've come back to them."

"The red bricks, Joe," she replied.

Afterward, when the nurse she had engaged was caring for him, she came downstairs to face Fred Damon's verdict.

"Days," he told her grimly.

"They're mine," she said, her eyes blue fires of triumph.

"They'll always be yours," he said. "We all lose in time the thing we call reality. Nothing lives but spirit. When you have that"—he spread out his strong, white fingers—"you have eternity."

She was in the kitchen, making ready the morrow's breakfast, when Violet came to her.

"I wouldn't stay," she said, "if I had anywhere else to go."

"I don't want you to feel like that." Before the realization that Joe needed her and her only through the little while of his lingering, Violet seemed once more the futile, fluttering outsider. "I knew you'd have to come with him."

"It isn't you, Sally." She began to cry. "It's Joe. He doesn't want me, not even in this little while he'll have." Her face writhed in anguish. "He doesn't love me. I guess he never did—much."

"We won't talk about that any more."

"We must," she held, doggedly. "I've got to straighten this. I was always crazy about him, even when I ran around with the ball players. I knew he cared for you, but I used to think that, if only you were out of the way, he'd have to care for me. I thought I'd die when he married you. Afterward——"

"There's no use going over it, Vi."

"There is," she persisted. "I didn't really mean to take him, Sally, when I used to come around and jolly him. I only wanted to be near him—and to hurt you."

"I knew it."

"I hated you for getting everything I wanted. We just drifted on, though, into—into what you saw. I thought it was love for me. It wasn't. It was never what he gave you, even when he married me. I think that at first he almost hated me for what I'd done. Then he got sick, and he didn't much care. He stood me. That was all. Down there in Arizona he used to lie out under the stars, watching, watching, never speaking. I knew he was thinking of you. You should have seen his face when I told him that you'd given me the money to take and keep him there!"

"You didn't have to tell him."

"O, yes I did. I'm not all rotten, Sally."

"I know, Vi."

"He's kept himself alive just so that he could get back to you. I've watched him count the hours." She flung her arms across the table and sobbed wildly. "I wish I could die instead of him," she cried. "He's yours, and he's always been yours."

THROUGH the gray-white days while the storm drifted snow high upon the pavements Joe Gates lay in spent quiet in the upper room of the old house. Once he asked for Tom, but when the older man came he could only lift his transparent hand to him. Again he asked for Pat Mangan, and smiled at the little bookmaker. Only when Sally came into the room, though, did he gain power to speak, to watch. With the gleam of a blue day of winter sunshine he seemed to flare into a semblance of strength. The nurse shook her head, but at his order propped him up in bed and went from the room at Sally's coming.

He watched her wistfully as she sat near him. "I wonder," he said slowly, "what life would be like for us if I'd stayed at Rush. Maybe——"

"Life's given us plenty, Joe, dear."

"It was good—while it lasted." He smiled wanly. "Maybe if you're not going to travel far, you make it up by traveling fast."

"Perhaps."

"We had our good times, hadn't we?"

"Yes."

"Do you remember the day we all sneaked school to go to the fair? And Terry took us to lunch on the Midway, and went off and left us the check, and we had just enough money between us all to pay it? And I beat him up that night?"

"I remember."

"And do you remember the night of the freshman fight up at Rush, when I smashed the big fellow from Iowa, and the wagon came clanging down the street after me, and you opened the door?"

"I remember."

She felt infinitely older, infinitely wiser, infinitely sadder than he seemed as she listened to him. Gone for her now was that terrible fear of death which had gripped her in Nan's going. Knowing now that the deeper hurts came from life, she saw parting not as the finality of today but as the opening of a door to a tomorrow. Pain and grief had taken much from her, but they had given her for compensation surety of her strength, clear-sighted honesty in the estimation of the values of life.

She loved Joe—as he was, as he had been—but, seeing how the tide of death was bearing back to her his love for her that the tide of life had swept away, she could not strive to stem it. There were moments when he seemed near to her as he had been in the golden sunset of their marriage afternoon.

"I was a fool," he told her in one of them. "The world was mine—and I threw it away."

"You didn't know."

"No fool ever does." He kept his eyes closed for so long that she thought he slept, and rose to go. "Don't," he pleaded. "I wish that you'd sing to me, Sally."

"O, Joe!"

"I used to think out there that, if I ever got to a heaven, I'd hear you singing 'The Wabash.'"

"That'd be a funny heaven."

"Do you think there is a heaven?"

"There must be some place—afterward."

"To finish out the draws?"

"That's it. We don't seem to end our jobs here—any of us."

"Sing for me, Sally."

It was the old, wistful plea he had so often voiced to her, and, as she had always done, she poured for him into the chalice of her voice all the wine of her spirit. Youth, with its glad sweetness and poignant longings; marriage, with its ecstasies of union and miseries of realization that, even in its bonds, each soul must go its own road; love, with its glories and pains; life, with its work; death, with its mystery—all these she put into one song.

For a gift of God had made Sally Gates a singer; but life had made her an artist. Into any song she could have set beauty; but into the song that was part of her living she wove all she had learned from her city in the days of springtime, and strength, and speed, and sorrow.

Pain, disappointment, chance, friendship, love, endurance—all these made thread for the pattern of the ballad she sang to him of man's eternal wish for home.

"The moonlight'll always be fair," he said, "if you're with me. You're my luck, Sally."

"I'll be with you," she promised. Achingly, she looked back to the day when he had said the same word to her in the gold hearted light of the boulevard, with their marriage vows still warm on their young lips. He had failed her and flaunted her, but he had built in her a love that had not failed itself. For that, all life was worth the living. Through the harrowed years she had been building to this summiting moment of knowledge. In its white radiance she saw beginning and end of the crowded street that is existence.

"You're my luck, Joe," she told him.

She was alone with him in the last hours of New Year's eve, when she saw an ominous change in his white stillness. The nurse and Violet were sleeping, and her father talked, downstairs, with Pat Mangan. She had the thought to summon them, but an understanding that Joe would wish her to call no other, if this was to be their parting, held her silent.

Not with passionate revolt that had maddened her when Nan had gone, but in patient resignation of inexplicable but inexorable certainty that death might be guide to a land where the moonlight might always be fair for them, she waited, her gaze on his closed lids, her hand upon his fluttering pulse.

"Luck, Joe," she breathed in call after him when his pulse beat no more, and fancied that, just beyond the border, he turned to call back to her, "Luck, Sally!"

SOMEWHERE to the southward a siren shrieked in shrill signal. From the street gongs banged, whistles blew, horns moaned. Shots flashed in a staccato barking. Human cries wailed. A bugle called. Over the humming roar of the city rose a din of sound, sweeping, surging in tremendous, terrible beat upon the house. Factories, engines, all the vast, chained, workaday power of Chicago swept up into a wild demoniac, torturing voice, yelling its New Year's message in tearing might. Not with the maudlin revelry of that other New Year's, the night at Wing's when Joe had ridden atop his world, but with a rolling, swelling majesty piled the immensity of the noise. From every street, every house, every throat rose voice, until the city spoke with one great, strident, sky piercing shout its work, and power, and pleasure, and speed, and sorrow.

Then, with glory of clamor, crashed the bells: bells of St. Jarlath's and Notre Dame, bells of the Jesuit and the Lutheran, bells of Epiphany, the bell in the tower of the Little Sisters of the Poor; bells of every creed joining in the one creed of the triumph of man's soul over time and circumstance. Clanging high over whistles and horns, shots and cries, they rang out the old, rang in the new; rang out a year, rang in another; rang out a century, rang in another.

Swinging high over all other sound, they caught up in their pealing thunders the minor disharmonies of the town. Soaring high over roar and revelry, they blended into the great unity of all life the combats and conflicts, the power and glory of the city; but for Sally Gates there beat beneath their wild, triumphant rejoicing the knell for that youth she and the city had spent together.

Under their pealing, under their tolling, she knelt with death, and saw in the white incandescence of her greatest hour the splendor of her own struggle. Joe Gates was dead, and the gay, gleaming, glorious nineties. The year was dead, and the century. Youth was dead; but the song of her youth lived, and that flame of valor she had lighted on the night when she had prayed for tool to carve the marble. There would be long years through which she would reap the rewards of tasks completed, of duty unforgotten. There would come other loves, other dreams. On the wide roadway of work she would go far from Harrison street, but always on the journey she would have two shining touchstones for strength and for solace: the knowledge that she had not betrayed the love of her youth; that, and the courage of the good red bricks.

wheel lorries. He's a bit far from the railway. The beauty of being an engineer is you come in all over the place in a new country."

"But, my dear, isn't there anything for you to do in England?"

"Nothing on earth compared to what I might do out there. I can't see myself in a Piccadilly motor showroom with a salary of about twopence, selling cars on commission. The really good works manager jobs are all filled, and besides, who'd give me one? They'd say I was a baby; you've got to have gray hairs before they respect you in England. I haven't the flair to be a crack racing driver; they're born. Somebody's got to go out and people the great waste spaces, Mary dear, and at least you're a white man out there. All being well in the long run, I shall own the equivalent of half an English county, and my children, if any, will be lords of creation."

"What about the old place in Sussex?"

"O, Peter'll have that. Poor Peter, I'm sorry for him. He can't do anything about it because it's entailed; he can't charge economic rents, because agriculture doesn't pay, and with income tax at four shillings in the pound, motor tax at a pound a horse power, and whisky at twelve and six a bottle, not to mention night club champagne at thirty-five bob, what's he going to do? Better be a younger son with all your responsibilities under your own hat."

"So you're not sorry to go?"

"O, yes, I'm sorry in a way. One'll miss one's friends."

"Any particular friends?"

"Well, a girl here and there, I s'pose."

"Any particular girl?"

"No questions, no pack drill."

For the life of her Mary could not forbear looking through him to his very soul and comparing him to Sir George Pont, ten years older, dripping with this world's goods, already a political power, scheduled as a future prime minister. Mentally she opposed him to Bertie Maxwell, both stripped to the waist, with nothing but bare fists and herself as the prize. Heredity being what it is, she knew whose hand in the long run would drag her off by the hair of her head. Girl-like, knowing how it would hurt knowing he loved her, she put him to the torture.

"Why don't you ask the girl to go with you?"

"Couldn't. It isn't done. Can't ask a nice girl to give up everything and go and live with an impecunious younger son in a grass hut up in the blue."

"Why not? Girls aren't made of sugar."

"Think of the loneliness. Think of what she'd be giving up. Do you realize the size of Africa?"

"A girl who's got any guts would give up anything if she were fond of a man. We like to do our share of building, Bertie."

"Mine's an exceptional girl, and anyway, she isn't mine."

"You can't think her very exceptional if you don't give her the chance to go with you."

"She'd have to give up more than any one has a right to ask her to give up."

"If you love her, you've a right to ask anything."

"Shut up, Mary! This is getting too personal. The girl's rolling in money and I haven't a bean."

"What's that got to do with it?"

"Everything. One has one's pride."

"Evidently one loves one's pride more than the girl. You're just a filthy egotist, a baby, a funk, in short. You don't want to marry an equal; you prefer a slave, something you've bought and paid for."

"Unfortunately," said Bertie Maxwell, with the sweat standing on his forehead, "the world would be with me and against you. The world would say I was a fortune hunter out after an easy meal ticket."

"The world might say that of ninety-nine girls out of a hundred who marry."

"It's natural for a girl."

"You might at least tell me who she is."

"Mary, darling, don't be so unkind. You know perfectly well who she is."

And then, with almost ludicrous precision, Lady Mary knew exactly the man she wanted above all others and that his name was not George Pont. Thereupon, being a girl and logical, she cast all her carefully acquired theories to the winds.

"Bertie," she asked in a calm voice, "are you going to make me ask you to marry me?"

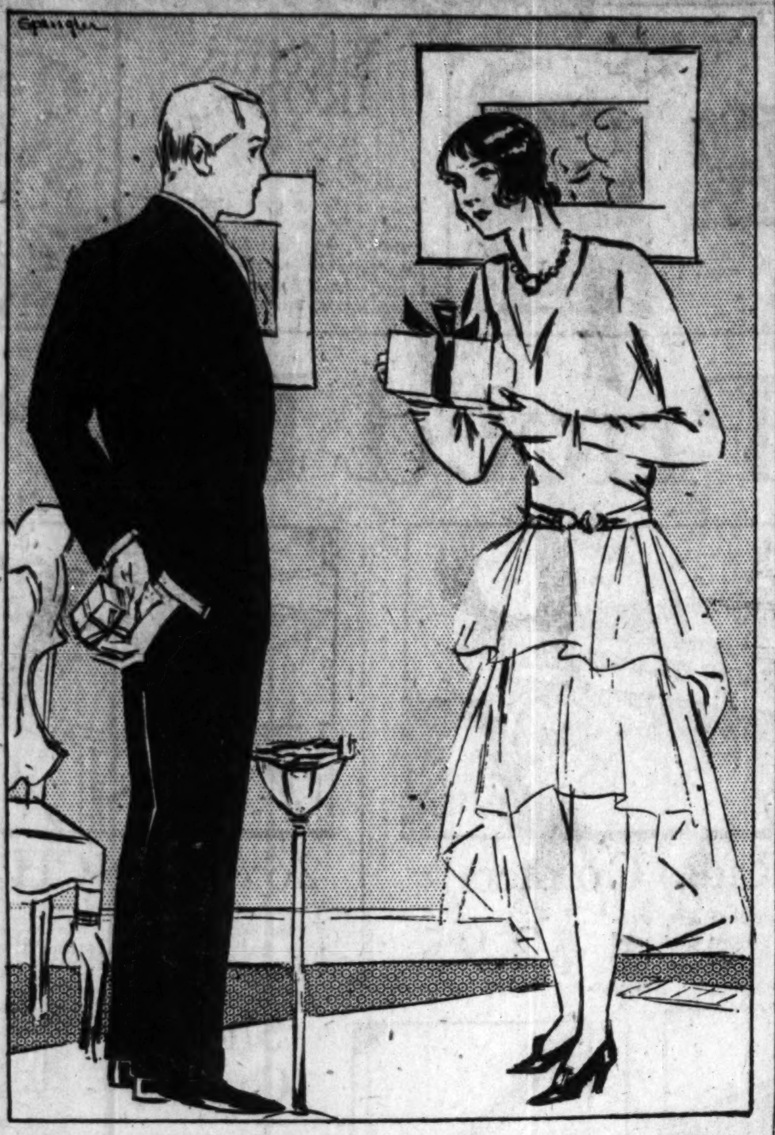
Dame Grundy on Christmas Giving

She Strongly Urges the Young Girl to Make Her Gift to Her Boy Friend Simple, Inexpensive, and Impersonal.

By Persis Standish.



As Christmas nears old fashioned young women wish to know, as usual, what Mrs. Grundy has to say about giving gifts to their young men. They annually dare Mrs. Grundy to object by phrasing the query something after this fashion: "Should a young girl give a Christmas gift to a young man who has been attentive to her and to whom she is not engaged, and what would you suggest as appropriate?"

Mrs. Grundy is thus disarmed and she suggests, as usual, the conventional gifts from an unengaged girl to an unengaged man—a book, or a book, or another book. And then the girls, having saved up the allowance or the salary or the patrimony for months to buy those pearl studs or that gold pen knife, fly into a rage and give the gallants in question just what they intended to give them in the first place, namely, the pearl studs, the gold pen knife or those expensive cuff links he admired in the jewelers' windows.

He Asks Advice, Too.

The young man, meanwhile, has written to Mrs. Grundy too and been advised that he must give neither jewels nor gold, and that flowers, perfume, candy, books, and trinkets such as traveling clocks and portfolios are the only perfectly perfect gifts.

He has had his sister or the office friend or a matron of taste go out and help him pick out his Christmas gift. He has been at pains to explain in detail just what kind of a girl Mary or Gerty or Beth is. His implicit, explicit, description of her qualities has not impressed the lady who is doing the choosing with any fact except that the young man, while he likes the girl, does not wish to be taken too seriously just yet, that he is not completely caught and does not wish, by his gift, to fetter himself.

So she, the chooser, picks out a discreet bottle of perfume or an impersonal pink leather clock or a quite elegant pale blue writing portfolio, and these, together with a box of still more impersonal chocolates or an unidentified poinsettia, she sends in his name, on Christmas morning, to the girl.

On Christmas Morning.

Imagine what happens next! And it does, every year, sadly enough! The girl opens her package before the eyes of her family—the scornful eyes of young Bobby, the anxious eyes of mother, the prying eyes of younger sister, and there is a very evident sigh, a sort of chorus superation of, "Well, is that all?"

Not, mind you, because the gift in itself is not enough. It is, as a gift, perfection. BUT, you see, young Bobby and younger sister and mother and father, too, perhaps, all know about the expensive thing that was sent to the beau against their advice and that of Mrs. Grundy, and they would not be human if they did not at least think, "I told you so."

Now, let us pretend we have television and watch the young man opening his studs, or cuff links, or whatever his expensive gift may prove to be. His family, too, manage to see what he got from the inamorata of the moment. They expect, perhaps, a book of poems if she is a sentimental miss, or a comic little book if she is a modern, or perhaps some home-made candy if she is domestically inclined. In fact, they expect almost anything amusing and inexpensive and thoughtful and light, and what do they find? "Jewels, by gum," says his little brother. Somebody titters.

Mother says, perhaps, in answer to, "Say, bo, what did you give her—a tiarrara?" "Well, I hope George had the taste not to send anything valuable."

In an Awkward Position.

And what of George himself? Somehow he feels that everything is all wrong. Of course he likes the cuff buttons, but as a gift from that particular source they have lost their charm. He feels his own gift has been made futile, in spite of mother's remark, in spite of Mrs. Grundy's advice, in spite of the fact that the most tasteful and tactful person he knows helped to choose it.

He is just masculine enough to hate to accept things from a woman. He loathes being the recipient instead of the donor. He is dismayed by his family's implied criticism of the girl friend; he is made uncomfortable in having to utter extravagant thanks for extravagant gifts, and worst of all, he is (though he confess it not) just a wee bit scared.

He may be more than a wee bit—he may be scared enough to fly. He is being taken too seriously, and though he may be serious, though he may have in the back of his mind always the thought that some day such and such a one will be THE girl, he wants to be the first to say it with gifts.

He cannot, to be sure, return the cuff links or the pearl studs, so he just pretends enthusiasm for them and THEN he fades out of the picture for fear the next closeup may turn out to be the altar. And Mary or Gladys or Beth wonders what on earth happened.

The Clever Girl Is Wary.

Such are the little stumbling blocks—the pebbles that throw Cupid's car into the ditch. Be warned this year in time, young women. Unless your man is caught, do not try to catch him with gifts. Let him be the first to throw the lasso of pearls at you. Make your Christmas gift something that might have come from any unidentified woman. Make it something that only your name on the card makes personal.

Be wary and wise. Do not give your young man much of anything but thanks for his gift, and give that whole-heartedly and enthusiastically, though you receive but a calendar that the milk man first gave him.

Fad and Fancy in Negligees

This model, for instance, will do duty for the hostess at either tea or the small dinner.

The same tribute may be applied to our first model, one of turquoise satin combined with cream lace. Here the molding of the hip line, the draping of the corsage into a sash at the back and the irregularity of the hem are, indeed, so closely identified with formal styling that the sternest requirements of the term, hostess gown, are fulfilled.

Exclusively for the tea hour, however, is our final sketch, that one of a negligee designed by Worth. Of rose colored georgette trimmed with cream lace and with delicate touches of embroidery, the coat and frock of this ensemble give the ideal atmosphere for the most intimate of afternoon groups.

Our final words must concern themselves with the lingerie of the hour. One can say of it briefly that lingerie is being worn—but not too much of it. For evening, for instance, one finds upon inquiry at the smartest of specialty shops that the foundation on which we build our toilette is scanty enough to be advertised as "ideal for the fireman's bride." One minute and a lady can be in the bandeau, the girdle, and the step-ins that form the approved trio of subterranean wear.

For daytime wear we may sustain this same program, one designed to eliminate any possible bulk under the fitted dress models of today. Yet it must be said that when it comes to daytime apparel womankind seems to be reverting to the combinations eclipsed for some months by interest in those bandeau and step-in sets. The new combinations shadow faithfully the lines of our exterior. Their corsages are usually molded and in skirt or bifurcated section there is nearly always a decided flare. Also, are asymmetric effects invoked and sometimes we even encounter irregularity of hem.

As to trimming, never was Alencon lace employed more widely. It is decidedly more in evidence than is any other type of ornamentation and only the tailored types of lingerie seem able to resist its spell.

Answers to Love Queries

By Doris Blake

Have you a perplexing love affair on which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care The Tribune, Chicago. If you wish a personal reply, please send a stamped, addressed envelope.

Why Be Timid?

"Dear Miss Blake: I love a girl, but I see her seldom on account of my bashfulness. Do you think this bashfulness will affect her liking for me? CARROTS."

Pick up your courage if you wish to make a favorable impression.

Just Use Your Wits.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am in love with a girl and I would like to know how I can get in touch with her. "GUS."

Telephone, communicate by letter asking if you may see her, or arrange an "accidental" meeting. The latter may be preferable.

Safety in Numbers.

"Dear Miss Blake: I love a boy and he said he loves me. At first he came to see me every day, but lately he goes with another girl. Please advise. DAN."

It happens that way. Better to see them less often. There's safety in numbers, Dan. If one neglects you, you have others to take his place.

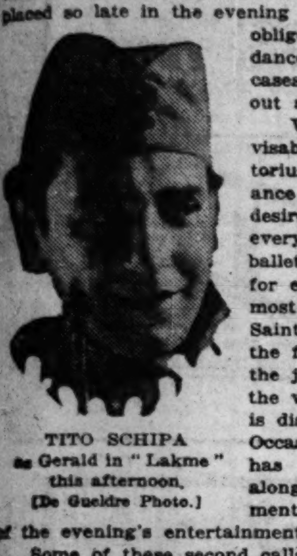
High Average Found in Opera's Corps de Ballet

By Edward Moore.

MORE than once in the season of the Civic Opera company thus far advanced it has become necessary to omit mention of the ballet. It is one of the complexities of an operatic series that the part of the entertainment devoted to the art of the dance is frequently placed so late in the evening that a morning newspaper is obliged to choose between the dance and the deadline. In such cases the dance generally comes out second best.



TITO SCHIPA
as Gerald in "Lakme" this afternoon.
[De Gueldre Photo.]

Wherefore it is sometimes advisable to return to the Auditorium for a subsequent performance of the same work if one desires to keep in touch with everything that goes on. The ballet in "Samson and Delilah," for example, contains some of the most attractive music in the whole Saint-Saens score, but it comes in the final scene of the piece, after the justly famous scene where, in the words of the libretto, Samson is discovered working like a horse. Occasionally, too, a short opera has its intermissions hastened along so that a set of divertissements may be presented as a part of the evening's entertainment.

Some of these second calls have revealed the fact that the opera company is unusually well off in good dancers this season. Supremely radiant stars of the dance are not numerous anywhere, but probably never since the opera company was organized has the corps de ballet maintained such a high average. This is equivalent to saying that the orchestra is full of well trained musicians who know their jobs, which is also true. In both cases it is the disposition and direction which counts.

On the roster of the company Vechslav Swoboda is rated as ballet director and premier danseur etoile, which means that he is responsible for both his own personal performances and those of the surrounding dancers. Maria Yurieva is premiere danseuse etoile, the female of the species; Muriel Stuart is premiere danseuse, lacking the stellar qualifications [these are official titles, remember], and the soloists are Julia Barashkova, Harriet Lundgren, Ruth Pryor, and Edward Caton.

Those Upstage Performers.

The "Samson and Delilah" ballet in its beginning aroused hopes. As a festival in the Philistine temple it was reasonably if not overwhelmingly bacchanalian in character, reasonably rhapsodic in spirit, and performed with reasonable accuracy and piquancy. Then it completely ruined itself at the end through a simple but fatal error. Instead of finishing down at the footlights with a flourishing climax, the dancers ranged themselves as far upstage as the scenery would permit them, and whatever wave of emotion might have been contemplated suddenly converted itself into a mild and gentle ripple.

It was the same sort of stage management as was shown by the chorus a few moments later. The choristers, instead of kneeling before the statue on a definite cue, began dropping down one by one and two by two. By the time they were all comfortably placed the musical number was nearly half over.

A few nights afterwards the curtains were drawn for some eight or nine divertissements. Here there was discovered what for years has been labeled the sincerest form of flattery applied to the magical Anna Pavlowa. In several cases the routine of some of her performances was reproduced fairly completely; in a few of these—not all—there was some revival of the spirit that always used to imbue her lovely dancers. There was even "The Swan," though, in the name of all good art, that one should be reserved for Pavlowa until another Pavlowa flashes upon the stage. Elsewhere the divertissements gave a distinct impression of being about as near to the present in the dance as "La Sonnambula" is in music.

The company's greatest need is a director who is also an expert choreographer, with both technical knowledge and imagination. I, for one, have never ceased to look back with regret at the time when Adolph Bolm held the post. The present dancing forces are larger than in his time; there would seem to be more time now for preparation and rehearsal. But his period of service was one when the art of the dance was made as important as it should be in a major opera company of the dimensions of the Civic Opera. Artistic conscience and public popularity both tell the same story.

Tito Schipa on Program.

The company sends word of two revivals for the week's program. "Lakme" is on for this afternoon, with Alice Mock, Tito Schipa, and Edouard Cotreuil as the leading participants; "Don Giovanni" for Wednesday, with Frida Leider, Edith Mason, Hilda Burke, Vanni-Marcoux, Mr. Schipa, Chase Baromeo, Alexander Kipnis, and Vittorio Trevisan. Charles Lauwers will conduct this afternoon; Giorgio Polacco on Wednesday.

These are pleasant works to contemplate, and from this distance they look as though they were well cast. At the time this is being written Mme. Leider's first appearance is still in the future. It is therefore still possible to consider Miss Mason as the perfect singer, and there is not the faintest chance that Mr. Schipa's tenorial glories are in danger of eclipse. And it is safe to predict that there will be other agreeable incidents in both operas.

First of the Spanish Dancers.

Returning to the subject of the dance, La Argentina is to make her first Chicago appearance this afternoon at the Studebaker. If you desire, you may have an advance view of her by turning to the rotogravure section of this morning's issue. She came to America rated as the first of the Spanish dancers, and they have continued to say just that about her in New York. In fact, she has been enormously popular there. A week ago tonight she gave her eighth sold out New York recital in three weeks.

Her name is Antonia Argentina and she was born in Buenos Aires. No guaranty is given as to whether her stage name is her own. In spite of her birthplace, her mother was Andalusian and her father Castilian. He was a professor of the dance and her teacher, and at the age of 9 she started her professional appearances in the ballet of the Royal Opera in Madrid. Soon she was prima ballerina; but the classical dance lost its appeal for her and she soon went into Spanish dances exclusively.

Her program ranges all the way from a peasant dance of Toledo through the classic dances of the eighteenth century, pausing with excerpts from De Falla's "El Amor Brujo" and other modern works and going up to her "Impressions of the Bull Fight." They speak enthusiastically of her beauty, her technical accuracy, and her high spirits, and they add that what she does with the castanets is a revelation.

"Chicago's Best Advertisement."

From K. L. King, who is in the practice of music in Fort Dodge, Ia.:

> Mr. Moore: The Chicago Symphony's broadcast last night was wonderful. It is the smartest thing musical Chicago has done yet. It brings to people in the "great open spaces" a realization that Chicago has something besides gunmen and from a strictly civic standpoint (if nothing else) is the best advertising Chicago can have.
>
> Was especially pleased with the English horn, oboe, flute, and clarinet work. Woodwinds are the weak spots in most orchestras, and Chicago's woodwinds are fine. Also wonderful horn section.

"SOME ONE TO LOVE."

Produced by Paramount. Directed by F. Richard Jones. Presented at the Oriental theater.

THE CAST.

William Shelby	Charles Rogers
Joan Kendrick	Mary Brian
Aubrey Weems	William Austin
Michael Casey	Jack Oakie
Mr. Kendrick	James Kirkwood
Harriet Newton	Mary Alden
Simmons	Frank Reicher

(You see stars! One star preceding a review means just another movie; two stars, fairly good; three stars, excellent; four stars, extraordinary.)

By Mae Tinee.

GOOD Morning!

This is one of those mornings when I come bearing glad tidings! "Some One to Love" is a charming picture!

Its story [by Alice Duer Miller] is clean and clever; the acting is intelligent throughout; the sets, scenery, photography and direction are all that a reasonable person could ask, and its featured players, Charles Rogers and Mary Brian, are a pair of darlings, if I know darlings when I see them.

MARY BRIAN
is the charming heroine in this gay film.

No fooling—Paramount should keep these youngsters together. Each brings out the best in the other. And they ARE such a comely, refreshing team!

They have one love scene on a hilltop that you will adore. It sparkles and dances and is vibrant with ardent, innocent, yearning youth. And it is just one of many that will delight you.

* *

Three Male Gold Diggers.

The story is like this:

William Shelby and his roommates, Aubrey Weems and Michael Casey, clerk in a fashionable music store. A music store, I mean, that is patronized by fashionable people. Unknown to the first, the other two are engaged in a deep conspiracy. They have made up their minds that one or all of the three shall marry money, and with sleuthlike astuteness they have compiled records of the social and financial standings of the various women, young and not so young, who patronize the shop. When Joan Kendrick comes in they jot down findings on her.

She and Shelby meet. It's love at first sight. After a joyous season of courting, during which time the youth hasn't an inkling that his girl is the daughter of a millionaire, she drags him home to meet father.

The boy is surprised and hurt when, while waiting outside for Joan to bring out her father who, he believes, is employed on this magnificent estate, he learns the truth from the butler who appears to usher him in.

"Why did you do this to me, Joan?" he asks his sweetheart, who comes running to him.

"Because I was afraid you wouldn't have me if you knew I was rich," she tells him.

The boy gives her a forgiving bear hug—they are so SWEET, these two!—and, a true young aristocrat, goes forward, head up and in no wise overcome, to meet Mr. Kendrick——

Whose chill, suspicious courtesy thaws under the youngster's sincerity. Papa likes Will'um even as Joan has done!

Next day he, with his daughter, calls to take Mr. Shelby to lunch.

Records Tell the Tale.

BUT—in the meantime things have been happening. The proprietor of the store, appealed to by an indignant lady who has had her hand requested in marriage by one of the fortune hunters, discovers the records that have been kept. And they are in William's drawer . . . !

Accordingly, when Mr. Kendrick asks smilingly that Mr. Shelby be excused and adds, "I'm going to take the young man into my family," the owner says grimly:

"You're making a grave mistake, Mr. Kendrick!" The incriminating book is produced. And there is Joan Kendrick's name and rating in it!

Well—better see the picture for what happens after that, hadn't you?

It has more or less straight comedy finish.

You'll like "Some One to Love." If not, tell me why, and let us argue together.

VARIETY tells the following. Send in your guesses as to the identity of the happy pair.

"One of Hollywood's most happily married young couples, both prominent screen players, make no bones about admitting that they care absolutely nothing about the "art" of the screen and are interested only in their possible income from pictures. Likewise, they mingle comparatively little with the film crowd.

"When marrying they figured on how much principal they would need to provide them with a comfortable income for the rest of their lives to permit them to follow their own particular hobbies, the most mutual of which is golf. They decided to quit when they had amassed that sum.

"Pooling their resources, at the end of the first year they found themselves only a couple of thousand short of one-third of the goal. They are now nearing the end of the second year, are nearly half way, have built themselves a home and are as fixed as ever in their determination to quit when the goal is reached.

"At the time of their wedding the wife's salary was considerably higher than her husband's, but since then his progress has been steady and his weekly stipend is now much higher than it was. Besides, he is under contract and drawing it every week, while the wife is a free lance player and doesn't work all the time.

"So there have never been any domestic troubles over the difference in salaries."

A Nation of College Graduates

By Clifford Raymond.

IN 1915 and '16 there were 259,000 young people enrolled in American universities and colleges and in the graduation classes there were about 30,000. In 1927 the estimate of the enrollment was 850,000, with 300,000 entering and 150,000 being graduated. This year there are probably a million college students. What it will be five or ten years from now is predictable only on the basis of the census. There may be as many young people in college as there are young people in the country.

Whatever experiences and consequences may be covered or produced by going to college it is apparent that they will be the common experiences of nearly all American youth and the consequences will be as wide as the nation.

Democracy thus has stepped out in another direction. What once was regarded as the good fortune of exceptionally well fixed and lucky boys or of exceptionally aggressive and ambitious ones is now to be counted in the prospects of all of them.

The flood already has almost swamped the schools and it shows no signs of abating. It is rising, not falling, and the American educational system is such that it must provide for all the applicants who can qualify for entrance. Endowed schools may tighten their restrictions, as they are doing, but Americans have the idea that the state itself must offer higher education and make it universally available. Therefore the sky is the limit.

A state university being supported by general taxation and appropriations must be open to all on equal terms. It cannot restrict attendance arbitrarily. Admission cannot be by hereditary right, father to son, by Masonic code, by stature, religion, race, or color of the eyes. The schools which potentially have the most money behind them are the widest open.

They are supported by public money. They are, consequently, under public control. Arkansas dictated a course of instruction by popular vote. Tennessee did it by legislative act. The dictation of instruction is not restricted to saying no. The sovereign may also say what shall be. It may require the teaching of hog Latin, horseshoe pitching, and close harmony.

Under popular sovereignty and the rule of the majority a state university might give a course in soup mixing and safe blowing. The sovereign people certainly may require of their publicly supported schools the teaching that the sun moves around the earth. In these schools controlled by the people's money the people's will must prevail, if it insists on it, regardless of consequences.

The endowed school may restrict its attendance. It may say that it will admit only the blue eyed, left handed sons of fathers who were graduated in the odd years. It may say that if a football team has three losing seasons no descendant of that generation will get in. It may restrict and it may teach what it wants to teach, subject to a few considerations.

One may be offered by the religious sect which founded the institution. That sect may be going strong in the school or it may be retiring into the background. The notable tendency is that as a school piously, purposefully, and idealistically founded, grows older, bigger and stronger, it loses religious and gains secular character. Then it may fire a radical professor to gain a conservative gymnasium or subdue a synod to get a pagan stadium. A perfect college president in an up and coming endowed school has a good bedside manner, great influence in the making of last wills and testaments and a neat taste in football coaches and promising high school half backs.

Nevertheless, the endowed school has freedom if it can survive the tribulations required to get it.

Going to college formerly had definite intents. It was to prepare for the professions and the boy or the parents of the boy frequently had a purpose well in mind at the beginning. College was thought to be a detriment, on the other hand, to a young man if his plan was to enter business. Business was its own college and there was prejudice against any other.

American youth now needs no charted purpose for the liberal arts colleges. The choice of a school of technology indicates a general or specific intent, but an increasingly large proportion of young people enter college and accept it as they would any other normal, expectable event or experience in life.

Apparently this is soon to become a college bred nation within the American meaning of college. No other large country is disclosing the growth of such a phenomenon. In 1927 the estimated number of college students in England was 65,000, in France 53,000, and in Germany 123,000. Even proportionately to population these numbers are small compared with the 850,000 in American colleges that year. The smaller number of university trained men in Europe no doubt were better trained. The average product was better, measured by scholastic standards, but the social effect of their introduction into the population was much less.

Whatever the American graduate has in the way of scholarship understanding and improved mental faculties he unquestionably injects a great vitality and tremendous energy into American life. His college experience has sharpened his competitive instincts, broadened his horizon, increased his confidence and quickened his ambitions. It has given him new wants and demands and made him more eager to possess what he wants. It has given him permanent associations and relationships renewed from time to time in a stimulating fashion. It has made him less tolerant of failure in himself and more determined not to be the confessed mediocrity in his own college group.

These impulses and stimulants will not come naturally to many of the young people of small towns, rural districts and villages or even to the young people of large cities. They didn't in the old days. They do come from the competitive contacts of great masses of youth in colleges at the time of life when they can be most vividly inspired by ambition.

The evident exhilaration of the American picture, its creative energy and bounding vitality may be largely derived from the stream of eager and undaunted youth pouring into national life year by year from the colleges.

As has been pointed out, the system of state universities in America makes the general restriction of college going impossible. Harvard, Yale, Princeton, the University of Chicago, Williams, Dartmouth, Duke (once Trinity), etc., etc., may decide to keep the number of students down to the possibility of teaching them, but boys and girls thus kept out of the endowed schools will have the state universities open to them.

Football has been the great democratic leveler which makes the matter simple. A boy or girl would prefer the University of Illinois with a great team to Princeton with an uncertain one. Not many modern applicants will regret closure at Harvard and Yale if Iowa, Nebraska, Northwestern, and the University of Alabama win games. Closure cannot stop the rush of American youth into colleges and universities.

Activities which have almost nothing to do with education have made four years of college the most desirable and brightest period of life and the young people look to it as to one of their major experiences. But when they come bouncing out of college at the rate of a million a year what are they to do? The old professions cannot absorb them. The technical professions soon will be saturated. A great mass of young humanity highly stimulated if not highly educated will be all over the place. Business will get some of their energy. It does now. It will get more. Evidently that will not take up the whole stream. It will flood into all the occupations. The man on the truck will have an alma mater and it will not be a garage, and the man who tells the tenants that the heat is coming up will have a fraternity badge and a son on the freshman squad.

People Have Outgrown "The Age of Innocence"

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Katharine Cornell steps out of an old Harper's Bazaar to play the unhappy Countess Olenska in "The Age of Innocence" at the Empire. And after a brief vogue here, followed by a nice comfortable road tour, I suspect she will step back again and the thrill of her emergence be quickly forgotten.

KATHARINE CORNELL
is the unhappy countess in "The Age of Innocence."
[White Studio Photo.]

In plainer words, I cannot see our most gifted emotionalist as a very great success in this dramatization of Mrs. Wharton's Pulitzer prize story. First, she is burdened with all the handicaps that settle upon the dramatized novel and, second, she is unable to bring the period romance sufficiently to life to overcome them. Her histrionic struggles are interesting, but rather futile. She loves Newland Archer (Rollo Peters) desperately, but nobody cares. [Of course when I say nobody I mean that Mantle didn't care.] There is a suggestion of Edward Sheldon's still sweetly remembered "Romance" in the new play. And likewise a touch of John Drew's almost forgotten "Rosemary."

There is "Romance" in the old costumes and stuffy interiors of New York in the 70s. And the "Rosemary" touch comes at the end when Archer, forty years after his loss of his heart to Olenska, appears in Paris with his oldest son thinking to have a last visit with the light of his dreams.

He does not see her. She sends down for her cane and bids the butler tell Newland that she will receive him in the sitting room upstairs. He had rather keep his older picture of her and pleads to be excused. This neatly staged bit is the most moving moment of the play.

In Which, as Usual, the Woman Pays.

Margaret Ayer Barnes has made the adaptation. She introduces the Countess Olenska (the American heroine married to one of those noble beasts of Europe) and Newland Archer at Mrs. Van der Luyden's ball. It is the night Newland becomes engaged to May Van der Luyden and is a little thrilled to remember her cousin, the countess, as the playmate of his youth.

Thereafter Newland is on with the new love and disturbed about the old, but finally, after one melting encounter, the countess sends him back to May while she makes the greater sacrifice and returns to Paris with the Polish husband she detests.

Newland fathers May's four children and achieves the United States senate, where I'll swear he must have been a terrible bore. May dies and Newland takes Junior to Paris to induct him into school. It is then he decides it is better to have loved and lost than to take a chance of having the illusion dispelled.

Gilbert Miller has staged the piece beautifully. The period furniture and the period costumes are enough to thrill any collector. Miss Cornell is gorgeous in the pictures, and as moving as may be in the emotional scenes.

Rollo Peters, I think, is rather sadly miscast as Archer. He is not a romantic figure at best and the period costumes make rather a gawk of him. Arnold Korff has a nice scene as the loyal Beaufort, Eden Gray plays May, and there are pleasant glimpses of three veterans, Katherine Stewart, Isabel Irving, and Frazer Coulter.

"Holiday" Contains Clever Satire.

My choice of the plays of the period of which I write is Philip Barry's "Holiday." I am tremendously fond of Barry, anyway—and probably you are, too, if you remember his "You and I" and "Paris Bound"—and "Holiday" happens to be another comedy in his happiest vein.

The inspiration for this play was furnished by a Social Registerite named Hope Williams. She came out of New York society and the exclusive Comedy club to play the rôle of the smart flapper, Fanny Shippan, in "Paris Bound." Barry was so taken with her performance that he promptly went to Italy and wrote "Holiday" for her.

In this comedy he deftly satirizes and exposes the Park avenue set about whom he writes most knowingly. Exposes both their shams and their sincerities. Makes great fun of those artificial formalities that the smarter generation recognizes as bunk. Reveals their gold lust and their snobberies.

Miss Williams' rôle is that of Linda Seton, the second daughter in a banker's family. She has in her middle twenties come upon a rather disturbing disillusionment so far as her people and her life are concerned. She has narrowed her real friends down to six or eight and refuses to play up socially to the yapping ermines.

At this juncture her older sister Julia returns from Lake Placid engaged to a young lawyer named Johnny Case. Johnny, being in love, does not mind loving a rich girl, but he has ideals. He wants to make his own fortune, and after he has a few thousand dollars put away he wants to quit and enjoy at least a part of it. He has not the slightest ambition to go on grubbing for gold until he is too old to get any fun out of it. Life is a great big fascinating mystery to Johnny and he wants to explore it for the tick as well as the kick.

True Love Treads a Rugged Path.

Linda meets Johnny and they get along beautifully, but Johnny still loves Julia. He continues to love Julia through

ENGLISH WITHOUT A DON'T
"PREDICATE ADJECTIVES"

By Wallace Rice.

MAWKISHNESS disturbs the rational consideration of such a sentence as "She looks bad," particularly when she herself wishes to convey the idea and says "I feel bad." The adjective to such a mind takes on a moral (or immoral) connotation, and men say "She looks badly," and women "I feel badly."

But "look" and "feel" have meanings both subjective and objective, and "She looks badly" may mean that she squints, and "She feels badly" that her tactile sense is impaired.

Goold Brown gives a sound rule: "In order to determine, in difficult cases, whether an adjective is required, the learner should . . . consider whether quality is expressed, or manner: if the former, an adjective is always proper; if the latter, an adverb. 'She looks cold—she looks coldly on him. I sat silent—I sat silently musing.'"

I feel warm—I feel warmly: the meanings are distinct. The first sentence deals with the speaker, his quality, an adjective; the second with the way he feels, his manner, an adverb.

But Whitney points out a group of the type seen in "He stands firm, the sun shines bright, the messenger comes running, the tone rings clear and full," in which the predicate adjective distributes its qualifying force between the noun and verb, and is therefore partly adverbial.

"Truth stands independent of all external things; as through the falling glooms pensive I stray." Brown calls "independent" an adjective and "pensive" an adjective used with adverbial force by poetic license. Both are adjectives forming an adverbial predicate.

Sometimes a nice distinction can be made. The car goes slow—the car goes slowly. The first indicates engine or other internal trouble, subjective, a question of quality; the other is an external observation, objective, a question of manner.

This Thing and That Thing of the Theater

By Frederick Donaghey.

ONE of the striking illustrations of the change that is come in what the general public desires in the theater is the revival in the Goodman of "Dear Brutus." (This isn't to say that the revival will not have a sufficient public for the time in which it is held in view: as I said in my next-morning report on the disinterment, a ticket apiece bought by those who have spoken to me in tones of ecstatic wilfulness about "Dear Brutus" would mean a packed theater for at least four weeks.) I doubt that any manager, here or in England, would care nowadays to put much money into something new by Barrie if the new play were of the texture and fibre of this one or of any of his other pieces. So far as I know, he hasn't of late written a play: the last, in 1920, was "Mary Rose," given in Chicago with Miss Ruth Chatterton. Experiments in the resuscitation of other Barrie pieces in recent years have not been successful,—save, perhaps, in the case of "What Every Woman Knows," which is, to me, the sturdiest of Barrie's stage-pieces. And in this the especial appeal of Miss Helen Hayes, rather than the play, explained the measure of popular interest. "Peter Pan," "The Little Minister," and "The Legend of Lenora" (which in the book-stores is called for by its original title of "The Adored One") have been unprofitably restored to the American stage in the last five years; and "Peter Pan" is now merely an item in the répertoire of Miss Eva Le Gallienne in her dollar-fifty theater in New-York. True, the piece is revived annually in London for a fortnight or so; but that is one of those quaint gestures of respect for a tradition made so dutifully by Englishmen in all departments of life. "The Private Secretary," "Charley's Aunt," and "The Belle of New-York" (despite its being of American make and origin) are never out of use in the English theaters, although there isn't a titter among the three of them for an American audience in 1928.

DONN COOK
He's the husband who slips in the comedy of "Paris-Bound."

As flat an evening as I recall having spent in a theater into which I had gone with high expectancy of enjoyment was devoted to an after-the-war revival of "The Admirable Crichton" in London, where the cast was made up of favorite players, headed by the late Dennis Eadie. I had not, when the comedy was new, regarded it as an original work of Barrie's so much as a free (and unacknowledged) adaptation by him of Ludwig Fulda's German piece named "Robinson Crusoe's Isle"; but his version had for me, even when William Gillette was the inept actor of Bill Crichton, a vast quantity of what it is statutory to call the "Barrie charm." The charm seems to fade and to vanish after an interval; and, as Barrie's plays have ever lacked vitality, there is nothing much left wherewith to recapture the first reactions. I have an idea that I should find his "Walker—London," a Cockney farce of his I saw in my boyhood, as exciting today as any of the later and more celebrated plays. Or "The Professor's Love-Story," a placid, thin little comedy wherein the late E. S. Willard in the 'Nineties won for himself a profitable place on the American stage after he had failed to catch the fancy of our public with many a better and meatier conveyance.

And, as I started by saying, Barrie in current revival merely presents an illustration at-hand of an unbelievable change. I'm not pounding the case of Barrie. Pinero is said to have had a new play ready these last three years, and unable to get even a bid for it from any London producer. It doesn't seem three years ago since the mere announcement that Pinero was about to start work on a play would have been first-page news the world over. He was held to be a radical in the matters of tale and treatment: who today would have a second's concern about "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray" or "The Notorious Mrs. Ebbsmith"? Or "Iris," or "Letty," or "Mid-Channel"?

Henry Arthur Jones was another dramatist able to dispose of a new play on handsome terms without even submitting a scenario or "argument," as we used to call the synopsis of plot and action. He held the respect of the critics and the sincere interest of educated and civilized theater-goers; and I have to go back at least thirteen years, to "The Lie," if I am to identify him for the average playgoer in Chicago. I doubt that even one of Mr. Tyler's "all-star" casts would serve to reawaken interest in the best of Jones' numerous plays; and he wrote some that were uncommonly good. For all I know, he may still be writing plays just as good.

Names and the News of Their Owners.

Miss Clare Luce, a Chicagoan before Mr. Ziegfeld undertook her glorification, and Nelson Keys, known here merely for a Summertime week in the (old) Palace, are said to be nothing short of perfect in the English venture with "Burlesque," in which they have the respective rôles performed here recently by Miss Barbara Stanwyck and Hal Skelly.

Mr. Belasco, who expects to have his belated venture with "Mima" ready for New-York by Wednesday, says he will not permit patrons not seated at 8:20 to go to their seats until 9:05. . . . He is asking five-fifty a seat; and that is high for a piece without songs and girls and the like.

Noël Coward, who stated that he would remain but twelve weeks in the American production of his revue named "This Year of Grace," now says he will remain till the end of the New-York run, at least;—and, from report, the brokers are able to get eleven dollars a seat for the show even on what are known in the trade as off-nights.

*

A. E. Matthews, whom Jed Harris desires to hire for the part of the wise butler in "Serena Blandish," is now being urged to take up a part in A. A. Milne's "The Perfect Alibi," said to be immensely liked by the populace in Manhattan.

Miss Elsie Ferguson, who recently resumed activity in a piece named "The Last Lover," is not to be in it long, owing to the belief of its sponsor that it isn't much good as a play.

George M. Cohan is said to be writing a revue; and this is about the time of year that the same thing is annually printed about Mr. Cohan, who, although he wrote and put on three revues that were bang-up, hasn't found revue a profitable article of commerce.

*

Eddie Cantor is again ensconced in an entertainment, "Whoopee," that is liked so well by theater-goers in New-York that they pay to stand up.

*

Miss Anne Nichols, who wrote "Abie's Irish Rose" and is believed to be at least a millionaire because of having written it, hasn't of late had much to say about a sequel to that piece, although she once stated that she would have it ready for showing ere now; and she explains that she is at work on a song-and-dance version of "Just Married," a farce she helped to write.

Arnold Rothstein, recently shot to death, is said to have furnished the money wherewith Miss Nichols was able to meet the overhead and keep things running while "Abie's Irish Rose" was in the first weeks of its five-years run in New-York; and it is added by those who like to speak kindly of the dead that he never saw the play.

Finds High Average in Corps de Ballet better for broadcasting purposes than numbers where the entire orchestra is playing in ensemble, as the very full heavy numbers are liable to come in rather "muddy." But the other type of numbers is beautiful. There is nothing wrong with the ensemble, but numbers featuring different sections and displaying the different "tone colors" are the most effective, and last night's program was along that line.

I think you should play up those broadcasts in your Sunday columns. It's the biggest thing musically that ever came out of Chicago. Millions hear it, far more than would hear it if the orchestra went on tour for a year.

Ganna Walska in Recital.

Musical activities at Orchestra hall this week will not be confined exclusively to the Chicago Symphony orchestra, though that organization is bulletined for four concerts. Undoubtedly the most interesting of the nonorchestral events will be the first Chicago recital by Ganna Walska. Advance notices refer to her as lady of mystery and singer with personality. She will begin her program with "Dich, teure Halle," from Wagner's "Tannhäuser," and continue with songs by Bach, Mozart, Schubert, Schumann, Brahms, and others.

Mr. Stock and the orchestra will give the fourth concert of the Tuesday afternoon series on that day, with Remo Bolognini, second concertmaster of the orchestra, as soloist. Mr. Bolognini is a native of Buenos Aires and studied there under Hercules Galvani. He has concertized in Italy and South America, and won the place of concertmaster with the Philharmonic orchestra of his native city through competitive examination. He has been with the Chicago Symphony orchestra as violinist two seasons.

Thursday evening the orchestra presents the seventh popular concert, with a program including a composition by Eric De Lamarter, assistant conductor of the orchestra, with Clarence Evans playing a viola solo.

For the Friday afternoon and Saturday evening concerts this week Mr. Stock has brought Fernando Germani, noted organist, as soloist. Mr. Germani, a native of Italy, has been official organist with the Augusteo orchestra of Rome since he was 14 years old. He is now 22. He recently represented his native land in the dedication program at Princeton university, when its new chapel was opened. At that time he played Franz Liszt's "Ad Nos," the first time in ten years this composition has been played in public by an organist. He is now completing a transcontinental tour of the United States. He made his debut last January in New York.

Rosa Raisa will make her reëntry into the affairs of the Civic Opera company on New Year's eve as Norma in Bellini's opera of the same name. It will be almost ten years since she last sang it here. The Adalgisa of the performance will be Coe Glade, the Pollione, Charles Marshall; the Oroveso, Virgilio Lazzari, and Giorgio Polacco will conduct. And, lest you forget the date, the prices will be $10 down.

Here and There in Music.

Roland Hayes, the Negro tenor, having spent the season just past abroad and reaped some commendatory notices from Holland, Italy, Russia, and Germany, will appear at Orchestra hall tomorrow night in a recital sponsored by the Y. W. C. A. The proceeds will go to the building fund to erect a gymnasium and swimming pool next to the Y. W. C. A. building at 4559 South Park way.

Christmas carols will be sung in the Chicago and North Western railway terminal by the Chicago and North Western Railway Choral club from two until six o'clock Saturday afternoon, Dec. 22. Handel's "Hallelujah Chorus" will be sung at three o'clock and again at five-fifty. The rest of the program will be as follows: "Hark, the Herald Angels Sing," Mendelssohn; "Joy to the World," G. F. Handel; "Holy Night, Silent Night," Michael Haydn; "Hail, Smiling Morn," Spofforth; "We Three Kings of Orient Are," harmony by John Stainer; "It Came Upon the Midnight Clear," R. S. Willis; "Good King Wencelas," "The First Noel," "God Rest You Merry, Gentlemen," and "Good Christian Men, Rejoice."

Harry Slater is musical director and Miss Harriet Pawson accompanist. The club will be assisted by its own newly organized orchestra of twenty-five pieces. All members of both club and orchestra are employés of the North Western.

The Lake View Musical society will give a concert for the benefit of its scholarship fund at Orchestra hall Wednesday evening. Rudolph Reuter, pianist, and Coe Glade, mezzo-soprano of the Civic Opera company, will present the program, with Violet Martens as accompanist and Ella Smith as organist. The film, "Monsieur Beaucaire," is announced as another feature.

EDITH MASON.
[De Gueldre Photo.]

One of the best possible reasons for going to the Civic Opera company's performance of Mozart's "Don Giovanni" will be the chance to hear Miss Mason in the part of Zerlina. For Mozart takes singing, honest, genuine singing, and Miss Mason is a jewel of a singer, as well as having one of the best voices of this generation. They do not come any better.

Many Have Risked Plays of the Press

By Figaro McGee.

HOW many theatrical managers have told how many authors that there is no public for, and in consequence no money in, what are known as newspaper-plays, meaning plays wherein the main action and the characters derive from the art, the craft, the profession, the business, the trade, and the glory of getting out a daily newspaper? I fancy that every play-producer who has been more than one year in the business has told that to at least one author per season. The same thing, in fact, has been a rubber-stamp reply to the authors of plays about baseball. When the successful Charles H. Hoyt failed with "A Runaway Colt," producers were certain that baseball could not be translated into the traffic of the stage. When, nearly a generation later, the successful George M. Cohan failed with "Fifty Miles from Boston," producers were more than certain: the notion had become a religion with them.

That Cohan, working on the basis of a piece written by Ring Lardner, put over "Elmer the Great" in Chicago was held to have smashed the tradition. Chicago went to and roared at the comedy for three months or more. I was among those who didn't see how the play could fail in New-York. I met few astute observers of the Theater who were out of agreement with me in this matter. And "Elmer the Great" was among the quick, definite flops of the early season down there.

Then, while the Cohan-Lardner piece was still fun in Chicago, the tradition about newspaper-plays was seemingly smashed in New-York by "The Front Page." Like all or most other newspaper-plays, this one was written by practiced newspaper-men: not by managing-editors or "feature writers" by by-line lads with a local vogue, but by two chaps who had gone about the work of getting food and raiment by doing what they were told by realistic city-editors day after day. A difference between newspaper-plays and baseball-plays is that the former are always written by men who know something about newspapers, while no baseball-play has yet been written by a ball-player. Therefore, I should say that the chances of success are greatly in favor of baseball-plays' being better than newspaper-plays. That is, assuming that the respective authors know something about writing for the stage. My reason is that a newspaper-man is likely to see something dramatic in one or another phase of his business that isn't dramatic at all in its reach for the emotions of the average theater-goer.

It may be that I can easily illustrate what I mean by telling of the dénouement of a play called "Paganini" which was acted about twelve years ago in Chicago. The famous violinist was really the "heavy" of the play: he had, by 10:30, all the other characters tied up in knots, and malignantly refused to give an inch to the claims of virtue. Prayers, cajoleries, arguments, money, and even threats failed to move him: whatever it was of wrong the author had planned for Paganini, that was the thing Paganini was going to do. Then, in what was designed as the great climax, one of the characters seized Paganini's treasured violin and threatened to smash it; whereupon the old scoundrel gave in, and vanished, a beaten villain, from the stage, leaving the virtuous characters victorious. As a climax, it was a dud: the audience, night after night, yawned, took its wraps, and wandered into the street with regret for a wasted evening and two dollars.

Well, just as ninety-nine theater-goers in a hundred couldn't get a jolt out of the threat to smash a violin, however precious the instrument might have been to its owner, so ninety-nine in a hundred wouldn't get a jolt from happenings that to a newspaper-man would be dramatic beyond description. "A yellow primrose by the river's brim," etcetera. The multitude takes its daily newspaper for granted, just as it takes a fiddler's fiddle for granted.

I doubt that more than one person in ten who see and like "The Front Page" gets the real thrill that the authors hoped for when Hildy Johnson beholds the escaped murderer crawling into the big press-room in the Criminal Courts Building, nor understand the especial passion that makes the lad put aside his waiting bride and all else and set himself to the task of isolating the murderer until his newspaper shall have had the indicated "scoop." The melodrama of the proceedings rather than the motivation of Hildy and his managing-editor is what catches the crowd. In brief, if "The Front Page" had been written, directed, and acted in another and an obvious key—that of heroic sacrifice for duty's sake on the part of upright and steadfast men—I doubt if it would be the popular success it has been in New-York since mid-August and seems to be at the present writing in Chicago.

Of its predecessors among the newspaper-plays, the best of those easily recalled was, I think, "The Fourth Estate." In that, too, venal politics was involved with the work of getting out the paper; but the spirit was melodramatic rather than satirical, and there was no hint of travesty. I thought "The Earth," put on in Chicago about the same time that "The Fourth Estate" was staged in New-York, far removed from the real spirit of the newspaper-game, even as it is played in the England of its author, James Bernard Fagan. "The Lost Story," by Jesse Lynch Williams, was just a futile play with scenes laid in a newspaper-office. I didn't see "Ink," staged last year in New-York; and I've been told that it was bad. I don't remember "The Editor," put on years ago; and I do remember "What the Public Wants," which, although called a satire on modern newspapers, was merely Arnold Bennett's attempt to be ironic about something he didn't understand. I have heard praise for some aspects of Ward Morehouse's "Gentlemen of the Press," current in New-York, but haven't yet seen it.

MAKING BOOM-BOOM IN A GOOD REVUE

Ten Years Ago in Chicago Theaters

SUBJOINED are news and comment on plays and shows printed in THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE of December 8, 1918—the date most nearly corresponding to today. The excerpts are verbatim, and not rewrites or summarizations.

Raymond Hitchcock comes to the Illinois tonight with his 1918 edition of "Hitchy-Koo," which, if it is patterned upon its predecessors, is a fulsome lot of music and nonsense about absolutely nothing. Mr. Hitchcock, it is presumed, will engage in his customary jocular buffoonery, aspersing with satanic humor the triumphant Prohibitionists, cracking jokes about this and that current event, and taking such chances with life and limb as befall the ingenious comique who is eager to please. Miss Adele Rowland, more or less familiar to us hereabouts, has joined Mr. Hitchcock's company for the Chicago engagement as his principal feminine support. Miss Ray Dooley, of the Dooley family in vaudeville, will help Mr. Hitchcock out in some of the fun which requires two or more to make; and Miss Eleanor Sinclair and Miss Florence O'Denishawn, solo dancer, whose work has found favor, will also be in the cast, which includes George Moore, Miss Ruth Mitchell, Earl Benham, Gene Roberts, Charles Howard, and Jack Donahue.

Although he had talent in his troupe, Mr. Hitchcock didn't fare so well with the second issue of his revue. . . . It is noted with interest that the roster included Jack Donahue, whose pay in support of Miss Marilyn Miller is said to be in excess of $3,000 a week, although he was an unknown ten years ago in "Hitchy-Koo."

The badly-battered Oscar Wilde comedy, "An Ideal Husband," makes a discreet exit at the Princess after the performance this evening. Succeeding it tomorow night is a farce by Mark Swan, called "She Walked in Her Sleep" which drew remunerative attention for four months in New-York.

The venture with "An Ideal Husband" was a joke—as is any venture with one of Oscar Wilde's plays. . . . "She Walked in Her Sleep" was just stupid.

Miss Valeska Surratt, erstwhile of the nickelodeons, will be seen at the Palace this week in black lace, jet, and "The Purple Poppy," a snappy opus by Paul Potter and C. B. Devonde.

Miss Surratt's name is in the list of erstwhile celebrities who fared forth into the nowhere. She had no talent, but was a millionaire in nerve.

A happy report has it that John and Lionel Barrymore will act together before the season is over in a play from the Italian, the identity of the author and producer of which has not been disclosed. Such a combination cannot too devoutly be desired: these brothers possess a heavy share of the vendible genius on the American stage.

The play indicated was the one that became known in this country as "The Jest"; and both Barrymore men were in it.

Twenty Years Ago

GOING back through the files of twenty years ago, or to the corresponding Sunday of 1908, the interests of theater-goers were catered to in THE TRIBUNE of November 6 by the paragraphs that follow:

Marie Doro, whom Charles Frohman elevated to stellar prominence last year in "The Morals of Marcus," returns to Powers' tomorrow evening for an engagement of two weeks. This year she has a new play; and advance information is to the effect that she is given greater opportunity for histrionic effort than before. The new play is "The Richest Girl," written by Gavault and Morton, who gave John Drew his "My Wife," last season. Miss Doro is seen as a young lady of moods and caprices, petted and pampered, who has had her own way in everything because of her riches and her father's devotion. In the end, however, she is shown the error of her way; and love is the issue which changes her character and attitude toward things in general. In Miss Doro's company are Orrin Johnson, Louis Massen, Frank Burbeck, Desmond Kelly, Fred Eric, Beatrice Moreland, Fred Tiden, Anne Meredith, and Harrison Carier.

Although he had a genius for making woman stars, Mr. Frohman was not successful in turning Miss Doro to box-office account. She was a lovely creature to look at; and her talents were slim.

George Sidney, a popular comedian in the Stair-Havlin circuit, will begin an engagement in the Great Northern today, appearing in the newest of the Busy Izzy series. This one is called "Busy Izzy's Boodle," and is a farce with musical incidents. There are a number of active assistant comedians and a chorus to help Mr. Sidney entertain; and the music includes a number of popular songs.

Yes: he was immensely popular in those days where the best seat cost seventy-five cents. Chicago liked him long afterward at two-fifty in "Welcome Stranger!" He hasn't been here since he and Louis Mann acted in 1924 in "Give and Take" in the La Salle: He was soon thereafter sent to Hollywood to take the place in Potash-Perlmutter films made vacant by the death of Barney Bernard.

"The Mimic World," will be the Christmas attraction in the Auditorium Theater, beginning on December 20, following a week in which the great playhouse will be devoted to public and semi-public entertainments. Gertrude Hoffmann is with "The Mimic World."

"The Mimic World" was the 1918 notion of revue; and Miss Hoffmann, who now trains units of girls for the big shows, made what wasn't then called whoopee by dancing in counterfeit of Genée.

New in Manhattan

Of five new plays listed for the week in New-York theaters, two are pieces that have been postponed—"Mima," which Mr. Belasco says he will have ready between now and next Saturday, and "Tomorrow." The three others are:

"Wings Over Europe," by Robert Nichols and Maurice Browne, with Ernest Lawford, Frank Conroy, Alexander Kirkland, Hugh Buckler, Joseph Kilgour, Grant Sewart, Robert Rendel, and A. P. Kaye: not a woman in the cast. This is a Theater Guild venture. . . . Both authors are English. Mr. Nichols is a poet; and Mr. Browne is remembered well in Chicago for his venture with the Little Theater, up in the Fine-Arts Building.

"Sign of the Leopard," by Edgar Wallace, with Campbell Gullan, Miss Elsa Shelley, Miss Flora Sheffield, Warren William, and Thurston Hall . . . This is the first of Mr. Wallace's plays to be acted in this country: it is known in England as "The Squeaker."

"The Lady of the Orchids," from the French of Jacques Natanson, with Miss Peggy Joyce and Edward Crandall.

About Play-Reporters.

Any American playwright who exhibits faint symptoms of what is known in the theater as intelligence, which is to say a sum of wisdom and sagacity amounting in the world outside the theater to the cerebral quotient of a bright lad of eighteen, is serenaded as a prodigy, and very soon thereafter as an international genius. Any local playmaker who can write even half as well as the second level of native novelists is praised unreservedly as a great artist; and any one of enough sophistication to let his Magdas and Paula Tanquerays smile at least once during the evening as a super-Continental and a slick dramatic philosopher.

That the American drama has made big strides in the last ten or fifteen years surely no one will deny. That is not the point. The point is that many of our commentators have become so excited over the strides that they have lost all sense of judgment and values, and, like youngsters at a circus-parade, so deliriously throw their hats into the air during the passing of the bespangled goats and asses that they have no strength left when the elephants go by.—George Jean Nathan in the American Mercury.

By-Activities of the Theater.

The annual performance for the benefit of the American Theatrical Hospital will be this afternoon, in the Erlanger Theater, with promise of a special program representative of all the attractions now in the Loop theaters. . . . The advertising-men of the Chicago theaters will have their annual ball tomorrow night in the Trianon; and they, too, promise that the attendance will include all celebrities of the theater who are now in the city. . . . The Drama Club of Evanston announces for Thursday afternoon, at 2:30, in the Evanston Country Club, a program of dances by Miss Angna Enters, who describes her endeavors as "compositions in dance-form."

Movie Version.

And had too many children; but she knew what to do:
In spite of their numbers, she didn't

For she got them all jobs with the

LETTERS POSTED TO THE DRAMA-EDITOR

COMMUNICATIONS about plays, actors, and such may be addressed to Mr. Donaghey. However, there is neither interest in nor space for complaints about the charges imposed by ticket-brokers, about the broken hatracks beneath seats, about the department of ticket-sellers in the box-office, or about other matters whose correction lies readily within the power of the theater-goer who is offended or annoyed.

(1) Yes. (2) Immense!

SIR: Have you read George Jean Nathan's article on the rottenness of American theatrical management in the present day? If so, what do you think of it? To me, it explains a great deal as to what is wrong with the Theater of today in this country. I say, what do you think of it?

CHEYNE WALK.
Chicago: December 1, 1928.

"The Front Page."

SIR: Say what you will, Mr. D.—and you've said plenty!—I'm afraid the popular reaction to "The Front Page" has to do with its langwidge rather than with its gorgeous fun at the expense of you newspaper-fellows. After all, wouldn't it be going far in optimism to suppose that the general public would catch all the fun that is in the piece? Aren't the people of Chicago "too close to the picture," so to quote, to realize that what they are shown in "The Front Page" is really but a crystallization in stage-form of what is going on every day in the eternal tale of their bamboozlement at the hands of the politicians, the office-holders, the yellow press, and even, in a measure, the decent press when it nods from sheer weariness at the supine stupidity of the Chicago public? For one thing, however, you and your confrères of THE TRIBUNE and colleagues of the other Chicago newspapers may be thankful: that is, that sensible persons do not take the newspaper-characters in the play too literally. Otherwise, Mr. D., you and your good desk, however far removed from police-reporting you may be, might lose some of the high esteem in which they are held by many others besides

GABBY LA BRUNE.
Chicago: December 3, 1928.

Profanity.

SIR: I have until today been trying without much success to reconcile my enjoyment of plays like "What Price Glory!" with my sense that profanity is wrong. Your article of this morning about the text of "The Front Page" and "What Price Glory!" strikes me as a sort of solvent of my confusion. As you say, the men who use the set terms and the clichés of strong objurgation do not mean what they say. There is really nothing more to their oaths than there is to the traditional "By Gosh!" or "Great Jehosophat!" of the comic New-England farmer.

The fault, if fault there is, lies with the multitude rather than with the realistic writers for the stage. If the boys in France had not talked that way, there would have been no inspiration for the authors of "What Price Glory!" to put such language into the mouth of their characters. If the newspaper-lads, the police, and the politicians didn't talk that way, there would be no reason for such text as that of "The Front Page." You've certainly made that clear to anybody with ordinary intelligence.

LEWIS R. THOMPSON.
Chicago: December 2, 1928.

SIR: The perfect complement of your Sunday feuilleton on profanity in realistic plays like "The Front Page" and "What Price Glory!" is to be found in the skit called "What Price Morning-Glories!" in the program of the Grand-Street Follies. I saw the show Sunday night after having telephoned twenty or more of my friends in the course of the day to be sure to read what you had written on the subject. Too bad that the skit wasn't on view here at the time some Chicagoans were yelling murder because of the dialogue in "What Price Glory!"!

ARTHUR L. WARDE.
Chicago: December 4, 1928.

SIR: When all is said and done, wouldn't the men and women who go ga-ga with rage against the dialogue in plays of topical realism exhibit some glimmerings of intelligence in trying to discern the likelihood that the use of strong language on the stage might serve the purpose of curing some of us who use it off the stage? Believe me or not, Old Man: I've sworn off swearing since hearing O'Neill's "Anna Christie," six years ago.

EX-DAMN.
Chicago: December 5, 1928.

Press-Agents.

SIR: There will be, I fear, great mortality among the old-line theatrical press-agents when yesterday's article in THE TRIBUNE gets into full circulation among them! If you listen to them as they talk the season over in their little gathering-places in New-York, each of them has been on a tour that lacked only a bit of humanness from THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE to make it one hundred percent perfect. I am one of them, and am always immensely amused by these narratives. They talk as if THE TRIBUNE existed for the suppression of the press-agent, and for no other purpose. Yet, here is a fair, square, sane, knowing article on their present troubles that is not only better and more informative than any of them could have written, but also has the merit of being of interest to the general reader, especially if he is a theater-goer.

Sometimes, really, I think that as a bunch we press-agents make actors seem like dummies when it comes to an exhibition of vanity and alleged "temperament." As you know who I am, and don't care to seem to the gang to be trying to make a bet on the future, you'll excuse me for asking that, instead of my name, you carry me as Songs for One Finger.

Popular music reminds us that it's a short strain that has no returning.—From Life.

Match this—if you can—for a thrill on Christmas Eve!

SUCH A CHRISTMAS has few equals. Such a Christmas comes but twice in a woman's life. First, as a bride, when that first modest budget is proudly stretched to include a modest piano. Then comes that glorious day—when the family budget is a bit more pretentious—and the first piano is exchanged for a truly distinguished instrument that will glorify her home for the rest of her days. Christmas time is piano-time the world around. Why not make it this year? And it is so easy to own even a fine piano—even a Weber—companion of the masters—and one of the three great international instruments.

*$100 this Christmas—the balance in low monthly sums—The Five-Foot Weber—$1085—for Christmas Eve!

This model is the newest creation of the Aeolian laboratories, designed for the restricted space of the modern home. For the first time in the history of music, a piano name of the first magnitude appears on an instrument of petite proportions—the goal of fine piano makers for the past ten years. The modern hostess wants floor space for entertaining—for dancing—for bridge tables, etc. She must have her piano, but her ideal is one that is not too large. Unfortunately, the great piano names were not to be had on a piano so small in size until the advent of the Five-Foot Weber only two months ago. Bring her to Lyon & Healy's! Let her see it—hear it—just once! It will sing its way into her heart.

Aeolian Christmas Instruments

At this store you will find dozens of pianos to match her fondest dreams of a truly sumptuous possession. Most of them are made by the Aeolian Company, whose instruments enter more homes in more corners of the globe than all the rest.

World's Outgrown "Age of Innocence"

By Burns Mantle.

innumerable disagreements about his determination not to give up his silly dream of trying to enjoy himself before he is rich and powerful like Banker Sexton.

Finally Johnny and Julia break definitely and Johnny goes away to Paris. Then Linda, discovering that Julia doesn't much care, that she feels a sort of relief in being rid of him, realizes how much Johnny has meant to her all this time and goes flying down to the boat to follow the boy lawyer and his ideals abroad.

Miss Williams is again refreshingly natural and awfully funny with the Barry patter. But when the play puts her into the drama she has not as much to give it as the part demands. Her genuineness and likeableness will do much to overcome this lack.

Ben Smith, the young Texan who came north with the Dallas Little Theater players years back, is a nice choice for the wholesome Johnny, Dorothy Tree plays Julia and Donald Ogden Stewart, humorist, is happily himself as a society kidder.

Another Brainstorm Drama.

Austin Strong has come forth, after many seasons, with a brainstorm drama called for no very good reason "A Play Without a Name." Strong you should recall as the author of "Seventh Heaven," which probably is still playing somewhere.

In his nameless opus Mr. Strong takes a familiar, but always interesting, situation and adds novelty to it by exposing the workings of the mind of the chief character. In this way the drama's form faintly suggests "Strange Interlude," but Mr. Strong has documents to prove that he filed his plans for the play in 1922.

John and Anne Russell, ambitious young married folk not long out of college, have been working to fit John for a foreign appointment by taking the Columbian extension courses. John is a little fed up with the grind of it and the morning he hears the appointment has been given to another he is inclined to bolt. At this psychological moment Billy Neuman, a charmer out of his past, happens in and they plan to take the day off together.

The scene then changes to a view of the interior of John's brain. In its center a masked "control" speaks John's thoughts and they are all for rebellion and making the most of Billy's offer of love and a good time. Above are the visions passing through. To the sides are boys operating levers controlling the various emotions.

Back to the play and we find the president of John's company come to tell Anne that the reason her husband did not get the appointment is because there is a better one awaiting him. He is to be sent to China.

Light Filters Into His Fogged Brain.

John, of course, doesn't know this and Anne can't find him. At the moment, as the next scene shows, he is a little tight and considering the wisdom of staying the night as well as the day with the fascinating Billy.

While he is slipping and about to fall, we go back to the working brain and see him as he teeters and finally backs away when visions of Anne and all she has meant to him come floating past his vision.

Back home John sneaks, ashamed and ready to confess his threatened infidelity, only to find Anne dressed up in velvet and black lace and the table set for a jubilee dinner in honor of the new appointment. Hence a happy ending.

A better idea than it is a play. Should make a grand talkie. The brain scenes are novel, but a little of them is sufficient. The story, too, is underwritten. Mr. Strong has not developed it as fully as it deserved. There is a lot more drama in the last act than he has put into it. What if the firm had heard of John's day off and threatened to cancel the appointment after all?

The Armchair Playgoer

By Fanny Butcher.

For those who like to do their theater going in the armchair or who like to read the plays they see.

IN NEW YORK.

THE only opening that armchair playgoers might have attended vicariously was the Provincetown Playhouse's production of Upton Sinclair's "Singing Jailbirds," a play about the I. W. W.'s. That reminds us, however, of Mr. Sinclair's novel, "Boston," which, after running serially in the Bookman for how many months one can't remember, has just appeared in two volumes. It is about the Sacco-Vanzetti case, and it is not so long ago that "Gods of Lightning," the drama from the fertile pens of Maxwell Anderson and Harold Hickerson, was playing in New York, bringing to Broadway the same message that Mr. Sinclair proclaims in "Boston."

UPTON SINCLAIR, author of "Singing Jailbirds."

IN CHICAGO.

The Drama House of Chicago will present next week at the Chicago Art theater "The Taming of the Shrew" in modern dress and also James Branch Cabell's sole excursion into drama, "The Jewel Merchants." A little polishing up on your Shakespeare is a pleasure at any time, and Mr. Cabell's little drama is characteristically Cabellian. He is one of the few real jewel merchants of literature. His gems are always beautiful, even if they sometimes are only semiprecious, as they are in this slight play.

LONDON.

A play called "The Brass Paper Weight" has interested London playgoers who have a literary turn, because it has been made from that perennially dramatic tale, "The Brothers Karamazov."

The Moscow Art Players did one version. At first the London version was called "Lust." It is taken from that part of the famous Dostoievsky novel which is concerned with the crime of passion, and the actual murder is the climax of the play. Those who know "The Brothers Karamazov" remember that lust is far from being the dominative motive of the novel. However, the author of the play, M. Komisarevsky, said, in a note in the program, that although he had taken the plot for his play from the story, the drama was not intended to be a representation of the novel.

Armchair playgoers will read one of the great novels of all literature if they read "The Brothers Karamazov."

Last year in New York Ashley Dukes' adaptation of Alfred Neumann's "The Patriot" was produced with marked lack of success. It was published and delighted readers who did not see it. Now it is being done in London. Its title has been changed to "Such Men Are Dangerous," but it is the same dramatic tale of Count Palen, who was a patriot before he was the czar's devotee, but who even in his patriotism suffered for his lack of loyalty. Read aloud, as many armchair playgoers find it amusing to read plays, it had a real grip. Nothing in the play as published explained its failure as a play produced. It was a very successful motion picture in the meantime.

My Most Embarrassing Moment

Saved.

In the sorority house where I live it is the custom to have a freshman made the parlor hostess for the evening. One evening when I knew the girl had just gone down, and, believing no one was there yet, I called down the stairs and said, "Madge, if my date comes early, keep him amused. It will just save me a half hour from him."

It was my date who answered and said, "I'll save you the whole evening from him," and he walked out.

B. R.

Calling Him Down.

During the summer I was employed in the loop. Often when I went out to lunch I did not wear a hat. To while away my short recess I often browsed about the book section of a certain department store.

One warm day I became particularly interested in a volume. While I was thus engaged an elderly woman spoke to me, asking where she might find a certain textbook. I told her frankly I did not know and resumed my browsing, forgetting entirely about her.

A short while later I realized I was the subject of rather bitter conversation. While an amused group looked on the elderly lady berated me loudly to a man standing nearby, suggesting that I should be put out of the store, that I was not earning my wages, and that I was not even civil to a customer asking a simple question.

I tried vainly to explain, when the real floorwalker intercepted, telling the lady that I was not employed there. I don't know who was the more embarrassed when she fled shamefaced, realizing she had been calling down an utter stranger for something he was not responsible for.

A. L.

Returning the Gift.

My most blushing moment happened some years ago when I had taken a studio in New York on one of the most prominent streets.

At first I had made no arrangement for the disposal of rubbish and garbage so I used to lug around the corner large newspaper packages of refuse. This I did in the early morning hours, putting them in front of a vacant building.

One afternoon in bringing some wealthy clients to the studio my feeling can best be imagined when the week's accumulation was found in front of my door with a large note pinned on the door saying: "Play in your own back yard."

The owner had found my home on the newspapers, in which I had tied the rubbish. Nuf said!

RCA RADIOLA 60

SUPER-HETERODYNE

RCA RADIOLA 60—Table model of the incomparable RCA Super-Heterodyne. Finest receiver of its type ever designed. Super-selective. Super-sensitive. A.C. house-current operation. $147 (less Radiotrons)

The broadcast receiver used by radio engineers in their own homes

THE Radiola Super-Heterodyne—finest achievement of the radio art—is the broadcast receiver that the engineers in RCA, General Electric and Westinghouse Research Laboratories use in their own homes.

Because of its super-selectivity and super-sensitivity, the Super-Heterodyne is used wherever the best possible reception of radio programs and messages is required.

It is used on ocean steamships in that wonderful instrument, the radio compass. It is used in marine coastal stations. It is used in high-power broadcasting stations, where reception must take place directly under the transmitting aerials.

The Super-Heterodyne meets two exacting requirements of radio reception—the sharp separation of programs in congested broadcasting areas, and the clear reproduction of programs from distant stations.

Developed exclusively by RCA and its associated companies, the Radiola Super-Heterodyne is in a class by itself. It not only embodies all the world's knowledge of radio design, but it has been made an amazingly simple instrument to operate.

When used with one of the new RCA Loudspeakers, a Radiola Super-Heterodyne gives greater musical range and finer fidelity of tone than ever before known in radio.

On the Field of Glory.

In a green French meadow she knew and loved, where the poppies lift their scarlet heads to the sun, and where, as the afternoons wane, a friendly wood reaches forth a grateful shade, all that was mortal of her has been laid away.

This actress, it should be explained at about this point, was not a renowned celebrity, as one might think, but just a humble and amiable cow, who was the pride and joy and the only dairy supply of our battery during those days when, near Belleau woods, we were taking "pot shots" towards Germany.

Shortly after the regiment had toiled up hill and down across France to take our part in the great struggle near the Chateau-Thierry front, this cow—the abandoned possession of some hapless refugee family—was encountered peacefully nibbling away at the grass in a ravine, and was straightway adopted by our battery. For some time she supplied enough good milk not only to ameliorate the coffee for battery breakfast, but to make an occasional bread pudding something more than an idle dream. Therefore she was jealously guarded by every one in the outfit, from the captain to the men on K. P.

She was kept tied to a tree in the woods, where she was as much out of sight from every one as possible, until one morning she was reported missing—a plain case of A. W. O. L.—so scouts went forth in all directions. It was the captain himself who found her held prisoner by another battery; found her tied to a tree so she could not rejoin her command; found her artfully concealed behind a camouflage screen designed not so much to hide her from the German aviators as to hide her from our outfit.

A private was engaged at the moment in milking her, and he was left on the ground, with one hand suspended in midair, while our indignant captain took hold of her rope and led her home in triumph.

A few nights later she was wounded by some shrapnel, but, if anything, her output seemed to increase after that, so the bunch got busy and started digging her a safe, underground cow yard all her own. Then the unexpected happened. Another shell killed her outright, and her name had to be dropped from the rolls.

Loved and cherished by all, and killed in the line of duty, she should have been furnished with an eternal resting place, and buried with full military honors—but instead she furnished the battery with "slum beef" for four days. W. J. G.

SOUBRETTE

MISS NANCY SHERIDAN

She's Bellabruna in the performances of "Blossom-Time" in the Studebaker—a rôle that would classify in this country as a "heavy," indicating that it is that of an adventuress, but on the Continent, whence comes "Blossom-Time," as a soubrette's.

Sludge.

I hope to see the day when there will be more Jolsons in our family. Ruby likes the stage; but she has a yearning for a nice little home, a warm fireside, and chuckling youngsters hanging over her, asking: "Mammy, will Daddy come home tonight?"—Mr. Jolson quoted in Universal Service.

All together, children: "Mam—my!"

OPEX
$1.00 BOTTLE
LASTS TWO MONTHS

Insists His Discovery Opens Up Catarrh Stuffed Nostrils In Three Minutes — Sometimes Less

Advises All Catarrh Victims to Throw Away Stomach Medicines. End Catarrh with Opex

30 Days Free Trial Says Walgreen and Economical Stores

Catarrh is caused by germs—wicked, vicious, persistent pests that multiply rapidly and by digging into and devouring the tender membrane cause soreness, swelling, inflammation and mucous discharges.

A few years ago, Catarrh was considered incurable, because no one was clever enough to get together a formula that would spread over the membranes of the nasal tract a purifying substance in which catarrh germs could not exist.

But Opex changed all that and now all you have to do to get rid of catarrh is to spray on Opex and send the germs to eternity.

Just note the picture showing how Opex puts catarrh out of business. See the steam-like smoke going in one nostril and out the other.

When you use Opex you see the healing, purifying vapor as fine as smoke coming thru the nostrils—and it will come thru no matter how stuffed up they are.

That's the way to end catarrh and to lessen those annoying, ringing, buzzing noises in the ears. Many people say it is the only way.

The price of a bottle of Opex that will last two months is $1.00—it is easily worth one hundred dollars to any man or woman who wants clean healthy nostrils free from disgusting mucus.

Opex will end the most stubborn case of catarrh in a few days, because it soothes and heals the sore, inflamed membranes, reduces the swelling and purifies the entire nasal tract.

To make it easy for catarrh sufferers in this vicinity to secure a bottle of Opex and a specially constructed Opex atomizer, all Walgreen and Economical Stores has agreed to keep a supply on hand at all times and will gladly show anyone how easy it is to get rid of disgusting catarrh at trifling cost.

Opex is for sale with the distinct understanding that if you are not satisfied at the end of 30 days your money will be gladly returned. Opex is delightful to use because of its wholesome fragrance.

MARKS BROS.

AND FROM NOW ON—
All Pictures at the Granada and Marbro Will Be Talking or Sound
This revolutionary announcement, the first of its kind to be made in the entire country, comes from the organization that first brought talking pictures to Chicago.
Marks Bros.' leadership in the field of synchronized pictures has enabled them to perfect plans for a permanent policy of talking and sound pictures. We are delighted to inform our North and West Side patrons that they are the first in the United States to have such a notification come to them.
The well-planned, built-in equipments at the Granada and Marbro are incomparably superior to anything in the city and the acoustically perfect results secured furthered the completion of this policy.

American Exhibition in Last Week

Paintings Will Tour Canada and the Middle West

By Eleanor Jewett.

THERE is one more week in which to enjoy the current exhibition of American Paintings and Sculpture at the Art institute. It may be that you are one of those who cannot enjoy the paintings, with some exceptions, but the sculpture will prove an unlimited delight. It is one of the finest sculpture exhibits the institute has ever had. From here, when the exhibition closes on Dec. 16, two groups of fifty paintings each will be sent on tour. The first group will go to Des Moines, Ia., Lincoln, Neb; and Kansas City, Mo. The second group will be shown in Canada at Toronto and Ottawa, and in Buffalo, N. Y.

With the end of the American exhibit the east wing galleries will be closed until the opening on Dec. 27 of an exhibition of old masters. It will be a loan exhibition and there will be some extraordinary paintings to be seen. The canvases will be rare and valuable; they will be loaned by dealers and will be for sale. A suggestion at the back of this exhibit is the hope that art collectors in Chicago may find canvases here which will greatly enhance the importance of their collections.

In addition to the old masters, the Art institute promises a number of one-man shows—American Indian paintings by Winold Reiss; lithographs and paintings by Odilon Redon; mural paintings by Anto Carte, James Chapin, Guy Pene du Bois, John R. Grabach, Ross Moffett and John Sloan, the last three names those of earnest and sincere modernists.

Example of English Humor.

There opened last week in the print department of the Art institute a capital exhibit of English humor. Caricatures of English political and social life during the period of years between 1721 and 1850, make up the exhibit. Over 400 prints have been lent by Thomas Furness of Chicago, and the choicest among them are hung.

Holland was the birthplace of caricature and from Holland the art found its way into England. One of the earliest great English caricaturists, who today might be called cartoonists, was Hogarth. He seized upon the exploitation of the wild financial schemes rife at the time and did a series of lampoons. His "South Sea Bubble," in 1721, led to the founding of a regular school of caricaturists, some of whom became famous the world over.

Fun was made of the king, sports, politics, anything and everything that was in the public eye. Among the best known of these clever punsters in ink and color were Hogarth, Bunbury, Woodward, Rowlandson, Gillray, Dighton, Allen and the two Cruikshanks, father and son. These names are all illustrated in the current exhibit. Much of the humor is still alive today and a visit to the print department provides food for mirthful reflection. The exhibition will continue to Jan. 1.

News of the Institute.

The Antiquarian society of the Art institute, one of the oldest organizations in Chicago, each year stages an unusual exhibit. It opened its well-considered exhibition this year on Thursday and those who went to the opening enjoyed the Empire furniture and paintings from the collection of Felix Wildenstein of New York. The exhibit is in gallery 4 of the decorative arts wing, and will continue to Dec. 27.

Last Tuesday night the new play opened at the Goodman theater. It is Sir James Barrie's delightful drama, "Dear Brutus." It will run through the month with performances every night in the week, except Sunday, and with a Friday matinee.

An extremely valuable Roman glass "lekythos," or ointment jar, is on view in the classical gallery of the Art institute. It is lent by Mrs. Alexander Scott. It is arousing great interest because whereas there are a few other examples of this beautiful cameo glass in existence today, most of them are fragmentary or broken, and this piece is in perfect condition. The most famous vase in cameo glass is the Portland vase, discovered in the sixteenth century and bought in the eighteenth by the Duke of Portland. Like the Portland vase, the lekythos is of blue glass overlaid with white. It probably dates from the first century A. D., though it may have been made earlier.

Well Worth Seeing.

The Chicago Woman's Aid has procured for itself the most attractive new quarters, and in their rooms there is current an exhibit of paintings by Jean Crawford Adams. Miss Adams is a delightful modernist. You don't know how delightful she is until you have seen a number of her paintings together. Her art gains by being seen in full. An example here or there is hardly enough to rate it by. Her pictures, found in the group, fall naturally into place with each other and establish her as an extremely skillful master of color.

Miss Adams uses the familiar puzzle piece landscape, when it suits her. She introduces bulk upon bulk (but her masses have depth as well as weight) and she occasionally suggests a figure, not always normally drawn, but invariably picturesquely drawn. In the name of art, all things are possible. However, it is not with her drawing or her arrangements that the effect of her painting has to do. That effect depends entirely upon her color. And there she triumphs. Her color schemes have such poignant beauty they wring ejaculations of delight from the coldest lips. Her paintings decorate a room, and one walks in their reflected warmth. By all odds, her current exhibit is one of the choicest and most exquisite of those to be found today.

Illinois Society Show.

Last Sunday there opened in the Stevens hotel the third annual exhibition by members of the All-Illinois Society of the Fine-Arts. It is a pleasant exhibition, though not startling. It is rather extensive this year, and excellently hung. Nearly every taste will find something to its satisfaction. Possibly it leans towards weakness. You cannot put your finger on any one outstanding brilliant piece of painting and say: "Here is a master!" but, if you cannot do that, at all events neither can you leave it without finding some excellent work.

The "Pheasant" by Stark Davis remains in one's memory for its powerful challenge. A magnificent bird stands alone against a silver-gray background. Gerald A. Frank's "Floral" is a superb painting of a mass of flowers. Anna Lynch has another delightful flower piece in "Gaiety." Miss Lynch, by the way, was represented in the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts, in their annual water color and miniature exhibition, with a charming miniature of a little girl, "Betty."

Adolph Heinze shows two paintings done in Glacier National park, each a striking piece of painting; Charles E. Hallberg has an exquisite painting of a lake and low sky, "Summer Evenings"; Irma Rene Koen shows a delicate, "The Peaceful Harbor." "Marfield, Mexico" by Charles P. Killgore is one of the outstanding paintings in the show. Ben Silbert, who is now living in Paris, has two characteristic canvases, "The Marchessa" and the "Monastery." Mr. Silbert has caught the simplicity of structure in vogue among certain Frenchmen and uses it to good advantage. His painting is tranquil, very matter-of-fact, modest in color, yet virile, forceful and beautiful.

Kate A. Townsend shows a lovely still life, "Spring Flowers." It is in a similar mood to that other flower piece which brought her recognition last winter in the Chicago Artists' exhibit at the Art institute. Ralph Fisher Skelton has some delicious red roofs in his "The Thames." Beauford Floyd Jones and William H. Eppens have both looked upon the dunes with a lover's eye and each man has given us a beautiful painting as a result. "Back Porch" by Edward W. Mathews has points. The painting of the flowers is very convincing.

Strange Men Depicted.

"The Man with a Mallet" by Ivan Le Lorraine Albright is a startling affair of menacing grays and bulk. It is a question where young Mr. Albright finds his models. Do such gray, curious, abnormal creatures exist in realty? Or does he take quite average persons and let his imagination give them their fantastic color and build? This is the fourth of his studies of people I have seen, and each of the four persons has been like an obscene monster rising from uncharted depths in a sea story by Wells.

A new graduate from the Art Institute school, Alice Mae Jackson, suggests Francis Badger in her colorful experiment, "The Departure of the Fleet." Another Art institute graduate, Ethel Spears, shows three most amusing pages from current life. Claude Buck is present with a charming portrait of his little daughter, "A Girl in Red." Signe Palmblad has two paintings. One is a delightful forest scene and the other is a painting of her summer studio in Wisconsin.

Among the water colors there is fine work. Frederic Dalrymple shows several vivid and colorful scenes in which boats play a part. Harry L. Timmins shows three delightfully soft and shaded color poems, "Tours, Old Quarters," "San Reitto" and "La Turbie." Walter Alvis Weber has several fascinating bird studies.

Among the etchings there is good work by William H. Eppens, Fred T. Larsen, Eugenie Glaman, Rose Crosman and Irving C. Christenson. Jane Johnson does some clever things in black and white and so does Mary Louise Fitch.

The exhibition will continue through Dec. 15.

An exhibition of thirty paintings and several pieces of sculpture by eight young modern American and European artists is current at Mandel's. The artists represented are Eduard Buk Ulreich, Nura Woodson Ulreich, Alice Flint, William Schulhoff, Peppino Mangravite, John Grahham, Phil Evergood and Herman Trunk.

Current Exhibits.

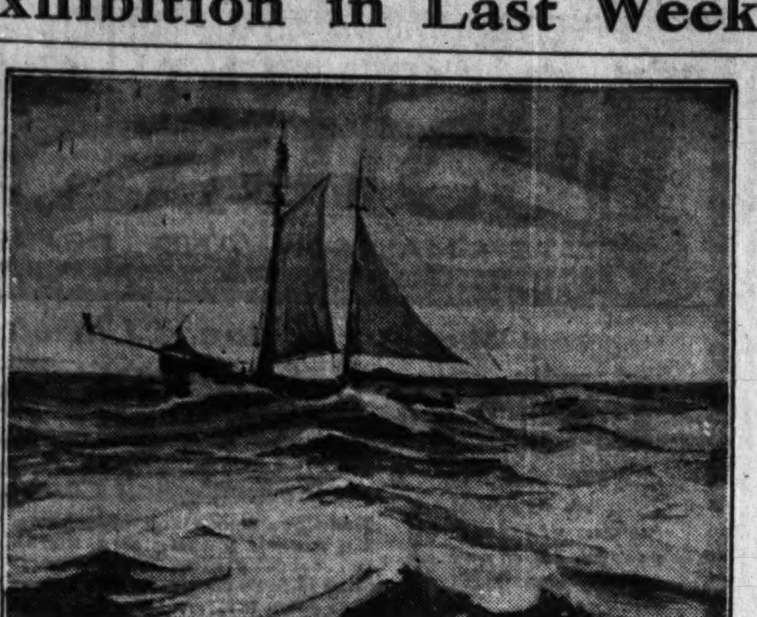
The Polish Arts club is just concluding an interesting exhibit of paintings and sculpture by Polish-American artists at the Home bank.

Gerald Frank has recently finished a successful portrait of Thomas Mosely, the fine Negro actor who plays the lead in "In Abraham's Bosom" current at the Playhouse.

There opened last Wednesday at the Carson Pirie Scott galleries an exhibition of water colors and oils by J. Theodore Johnson. Among the paintings are portraits of Mrs. Walter Paepcke, Mrs. William H. Bush, Prof. Harry A. Bigelow and Miss Elizabeth Eckhart.

The Romany club, 36 Bellevue place, announces an exhibit of water colors by Frances Foy.

The third annual exhibition of the Illinois Academy of Fine Arts opens today in the rooms of the Illinois Women's Athletic club. The exhibition will continue through Dec. 23.



"FISHERMEN AT SEA," by Charles Biesel, a striking painting of the lonely seas where adventures are still found, to be seen in the Chicago No-Jury Society of Artists' exhibition at 210 North Michigan avenue. The exhibition closes tomorrow after a very successful showing.

My Greatest Thrill

Write and tell us about the greatest thrill you ever experienced, and if we print your letter we'll pay you $1. Make your letters short and snappy. Address them to "Greatest Thrill" Editor, The Chicago Tribune.

An Illusion.

We were on our vacation and driving along a country road late at night. It had been raining in torrents and the way was dark except for the lights from our machine. Two of our party were asleep in the rear seat.

My husband was driving and I was at his side. We, too, were sleepy as we had made a great many miles that day. All of a sudden, I heard a great rushing of waters far below us and we were on a bridge which apparently was devoid of flooring in large places. I screamed. Every one was awake instantly. I shall never forget the horror I experienced in that moment as we drove into what seemed to be death in the waters below. It was all so sudden, my husband did not stop until he had crossed the bridge.

Then I breathlessly explained what I had seen. The holes in the flooring proved to be pools of water that had been caused by the heavy rain and our lights shining on them made them look like holes in the bridge. It took quite a while before all of the party recovered from the fright. G. W. L.

Down a Mountain Side.

Two years ago I was driving down a mountain road in North Carolina with a friend in a heavy closed car. It was a dark night and our lights were not very bright so we were ambling along slowly, talking at the time about the idiots who drove roads like that at forty miles an hour, when suddenly around a horseshoe curve came tearing a big car with the brightest lights I have ever seen.

It swept around that curve and literally ran us off the road. We turned over and over and over down the steep mountain side.

With each revolution I knew we would certainly die. Nobody ever had gone over those mountains at that point and lived. Finally, a ripping sound, and the car stopped dead. We had caught on a stump that had crashed through the glass on my side, and were firmly wedged against the old tree roots. I was sitting on the stump minus my shoes and hat. The driver of the car was wedged between the two small front seats.

About that time I was conscious of shouts, and nobody will ever know the thrill I experienced when I heard a raucous mountaineer voice shouting, "Before the Lawd, they's a car down the mounting! Guess all the folks is killed. Is you killed?" And heard those men breaking through the brush and slipping on the rocks down that cliff side.

I climbed up over my stunned companion, stepped up on the wheel and reached above my head and opened the door and called to the rescuing party.

After that it was a matter of dragging us out, but my knees did not stop shaking for three days.

All-Colored Casts Invade Hollywood

By Rosalind Shaffer.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—[Special Correspondence.]—Negro films are becoming a field in themselves in Hollywood. The popularity of the Negro plays and dancers and musicians that originated in New York some few seasons ago is finding an echo in film production, although the limited scope of subject matter allowed in films will preclude any screen Lulu Belles.

Among the film dramas now in production with all colored casts are King Vidor's "Hallelujah," being made for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer; Christie-Paramount's Octavus Roy Cohen's story, "The Melancholy Dame," which concerns itself with darktown Birmingham, and William Fox's production of "Hearts in Dixie."

Universal is completing "Showboat," which, while not all Negro by any means, contains much of Negro music and characterization. The Paramount-Christie comedy has in its cast Evelyn Preer, said by David Belasco to be the best colored actress in the country. She understudied Leonore Ulric in "Lulu Belle," and played the lead herself in Lyle and Miller's "Rang Tang."

* *

All Colored Casts.

Hollywood casting offices have a wealth of Negro talent to draw from locally, due to the existence of the Lafayette players, a Negro stock company which plays all the season at successes, white or black, but with all-colored casts.

The Los Angeles Lafayette players are so renowned that they have been obliged to set aside stipulated performances every week for wholly white audiences.

The vaudeville circuits are another fruitful source of talent to be drawn on and film casting offices have been quick to seize the best colored actors to incorporate in their casts.

Folks that get dewey-eyed over Dixie and the thought of mint juleps and colored mammies are due for something of a treat when "Hearts in Dixie" arrives on the talking screen. The entire cast is Negro and all the songs, of which there are plenty, are authorized Negro melodies of the period prior to 1870.

A large company left the Fox studio this week to make scenes in the cotton fields around Bakersfield, Cal. A chorus of thirty-five voices, selected from the best colored talent on the coast, will sing the songs of the cotton pickers as they work in the fields

Not a Rastus in It.

"All the jokes I ever heard about Negroes concerned a Negro named Rastus. I was goaded into writing Hearts in Dixie' to prove that a story of Negro life need not include a Rastus. All the years I lived in the south, in Charleston and in Virginia as well, I never knew a single Negro named Rastus."

Thus spake Walter Weems, author of the story. It is a marked departure in its treatment of its subject, the colored worker. It does not glorify nor sentimentalize the black man, nor does it carry any strife between white and black. It is a story of the Negro as he really was after he became politically free but remained bound by his own limitations.

The story concerns an old Negro laborer who is wise enough to see the futility of the voodooism and howling revival religion of his race and who gropes to find the answer to puzzling problems of ignorance, superstition, and indolence that surrounded the post-war Negro.

He saves enough money out of his wages to send his youngest child, a boy, north to get the schooling that means a chance for him. The old man realizes that by so doing he is separating himself forever from the boy, who will outgrow the ignorance and squalor of his childhood home, but he feels that it is the only way to give the boy his chance. The story ends with the boy going blithely north on the river steamboat, leaving the broken old man behind.

Notes of the Players.

Wallace Beery is well known as one of Hollywood's most enthusiastic aviators. He is also a camera hound and the combination of the two has resulted in a lot of aerial photography that Wallie is using for propaganda for aviation purposes. He has a lot of pictures of cities photographed from the air, and he uses them on every available opportunity to try to convince city officials of their need for municipal airports.

Jack Holt, who is now making scenes in the Paramount studio to complete his rôle in "Sunset Pass," is eagerly looking forward to getting back to his polo playing. He is a mainstay of the Midwick polo team and was obliged to miss the first few workouts of the team while he was on location in Arizona.

Voice of the Fan

In Defense of "Sunrise."

My dear Miss Tinée: Have just been reading several of the "Movie Fan" letters and feel I, too, must voice my thoughts, but entirely different from many, I wish to laud the talkies to the skies.

Aren't people funny, Miss Tinée? They are like spoiled children. They expect the moon over night. It makes me so indignant! They ought to know that it takes time to perfect all things, and they aren't willing to go through the slow, painful steps that are always in the period of discovery of anything new. They don't stop to think or understand that even now it isn't the finished product, yet they will condemn it.

Criticism is what makes or breaks, but unless it is constructive, what is the use of saying anything about it? One letter in particular spoke of Murnan's "Sunrise" as "boring positively—such a hulking, clumsy, overdrawn picture."

I grant that we all have a right to our own opinions, but I simply revolt when they say things like that about such a gem. To me it was one of the most beautiful, the most subtle, the most grippingly dramatic pictures I have ever been lucky to see. "Sunrise" was not glamorous nor magnificent. It was great because of its utter simplicity. I think the trouble with a lot of people that saw it is that they were expecting something frilly and light, and when confronted with anything as deep as that well, they just couldn't grasp it. Don't you think it was symbolical?

I do hope this hasn't bored you. I enjoyed it so thoroughly, though, and it hurt me to think it affected anyone else in such an adverse manner.

I enjoy your delightful columns too. You are so refreshing. NONA.

Editor's note: So are you refreshing!

Reader Fails to Agree.

Dear Miss Mae: Phewey! I'm holding my nose, Mae. Reason: Your review of "The Melody of Love." Gosh, I almost fell over when I read it, and I've always sworn by you all these years. Nobody could shake my faith in your judgment as to the merits of a picture, and here comes the first time that I must disagree with you. But, there must be a "first time" for everything, I guess.

You will have to admit that its trite plot was only held up by one Tom Dugan, and his mania for shooting craps—I agree with you there—he IS good. As to the rest of the cast—phewey!!! I certainly wouldn't even mention Mr. Pidgeon's piano playing. I'm no piano player, but his rendition would not indicate that he played the piano for a livelihood—it did not have the spontaneity, snap or self-assurance that is characteristic of a successful song writer.

As for Mildred Harris—more phewey!!! She is what I would call a "ham actress," with a voice in the same class.

Then the war scenes—a series of old "weeklies" assembled together and displayed to the tune of "Over There," or what have you.

The musical synchronization was positively terrible.

Faithfully yours, BENNY.

Editor's Note: Now, Benny! Now Benny . . .!

About Modern Youth.

"Our Dancing Daughters" impressed me as being the best movie I've ever seen. It presents one of the finest defenses of modern youth. In spite of her love of fun and her apparent frivolity, Joan Crawford, down in her heart, had a sincerity which appealed to me. Mere outward actions do not reveal the depths of feeling and conviction which modern youth possesses.

Acting is at its best, also, in "Our Dancing Daughters." J. K.

True to Life.

"Sally's Shoulders" held much food for thought for those sacrificing kin who are compromised by selfish relatives who care not for the former's welfare and very often, through indulgence, ruin their own careers.

Sally, true to life, took all the burden of the family on her slim shoulders, uncomplaining, while they ruthlessly threw her and their own reputations to the winds, causing much suffering.

This bit of drama enacted daily in homes was well played by all and we were glad to see Sally receive her just reward in the finish. W. F. D.

IN FIRST APPEARANCE

GANNA WALSKA.

LADY OF MYSTERY, as the press notices call her, she has at one time and another been announced for appearances in the United States, but so far expectations have remained unfulfilled. This time it is definitely stated that she will give a song recital at Orchestra hall next Saturday afternoon. The European appearances recorded to her credit have been operatic. Her Chicago program records only one operatic number, an aria from "Tannhauser." Otherwise it is a rather strictly classical song program.

Schubert "Sketch" Heard in Gotham

By Joan King.

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—[Special.]—The annual visit of Nikolai Sokoloff and his players to New York brought forward one of the most interesting premieres of the season. This was a performance of Schubert's so-called "sketch" symphony in E major, written in 1821 and given but one previous reading in America—that also by the Cleveland conductor, in his home town, in November. Probably the New York performance was the fourth ever given the work, as, according to record, it was heard on only two other occasions, in 1883 and 1884 at the Crystal palace concerts in London.

Schubert is said to have written only 110 measures in full score, the rest being sketched in outline and the Englishman, John Francis Barnet, was left to write out the full score at the instance of Sir George Grove, author of Grove's dictionary of music, from the manuscript. The performance which Mr. Sokoloff gave the novelty apparently suited the taste, and held the interest of the evening's audience, which was a brilliant one.

Composer Is Lionized.

The lion of the day hereabouts, musically speaking, has been the noted Italian composer, Ottorino Respighi, who arrived upon these shores some days ago in time to witness the first performance of his "La Campana Sommersa"—the second new offering of the Metropolitan this season. On that occasion, he received many ovations and was called and recalled before the great curtain many times during the course of the performance.

At a matinee recently, the Philharmonic-Symphony orchestra, under the able baton of Willem Mengelberg, gave another of the works of Signor Respighi—his new "Toccata." This is the latest musical contribution from the prolific pen of the composer and is written for piano and orchestra. Completed no earlier than last August, at Capri, the work which is in three movements played without pause—a Prelude in the form of a fantasia, an Adagio and an Allegro Vivo—bears a dedication to William B. Murray, New York radio impresario.

According to the composer himself, the composition "approximates the old form of the 'Toccata' as found in Frescobaldi, naturally filled with the modern spirit and modernized through the character of the harmonies."

Signor Respighi was himself the soloist for the occasion, which was the world premiere of the "Toccata.' Critical opinion in the metropolis concurred in the judgment that the piece scarcely merits consideration, as on a level with the other Respighi products such as "The Sunken Bell," or the symphonic suites, "The Pines of Rome" and "The Fountains of Rome."

Hebrew Suite Played by Orchestra.

Another novelty had a place in recent programs offered at the Carnegie Hall performances of the Philharmonic Symphony society. This was a Hebrew Suite, by a young composer and member of the second violin section of the orchestra, Nicholai Berezowsky. Born in Russia in 1900, Mr. Berezowsky graduated at 16 with highest honors from the Royal capella, Leningrad, and in 1918 was appointed professor at the Saratoff conservatory. Soon after, he came to America and joined the Philharmonic. In 1925 he won the Stadium audition and the following year gave a successful New York recital. He is a member of the Graduate School of Juilliard and the composition class of Rubin Goldmark.

The recently performed work was not his first, as he has written "Prince Batrak," an operetta; four string quartets, a quartet for soprano and strings, two sextets, a piano trio, a symphony, a cantata and many songs. The Hebrew suite was composed in New York in 1926. It is in five parts, namely: Pastorale, Berceuse, Serenade, Recitative for solo clarinet with string accompaniment, and Dance.

Another American Makes Debut.

Even the Metropolitan had its part in the general introductions, of late. But at the old brownstone hall of opera, the new appearance was that of a musical proponent instead of a composition: Impresario Gatti-Casazza's sixth introduction of the year. The lucky one was another midwestern product, the second native of Cincinnati to join the glittering circle of the chosen few—Grace Divine—having made her debut only three weeks ago in "Manon." This latest acquisition was Pearl Besuner, soprano, who made her bow in the rôle of Siebel in "Faust." She is another example of American musical training. The Cincinnati conservatory, the Juilliard Graduate school and Mme. Sembrich, Minnie Tracy and Dan Beddoe have provided her instruction.

Contrary to the usual Metropolitan debut, Miss Besuner showed no "first time" nervousness and displayed a voice sufficiently large, clear and fresh. Her audience, which contained some of 'the home town folks, was cordial.

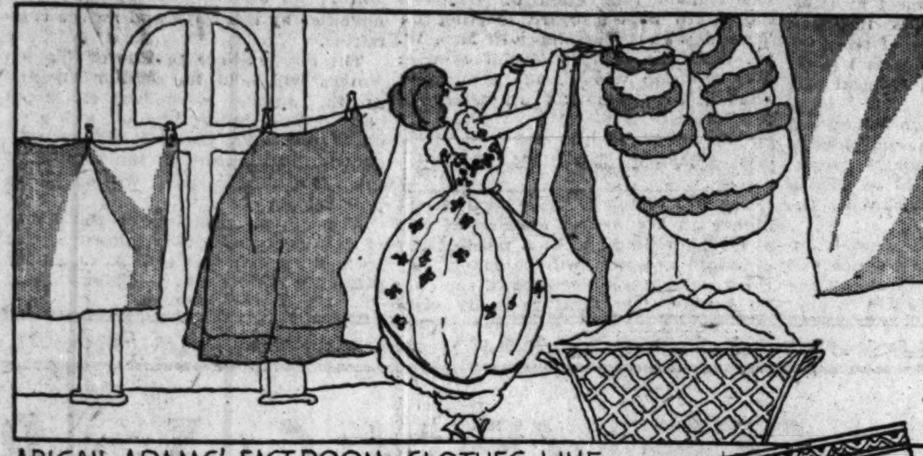
WASHINGTON—DEMOCRACY'S DRAWING ROOM

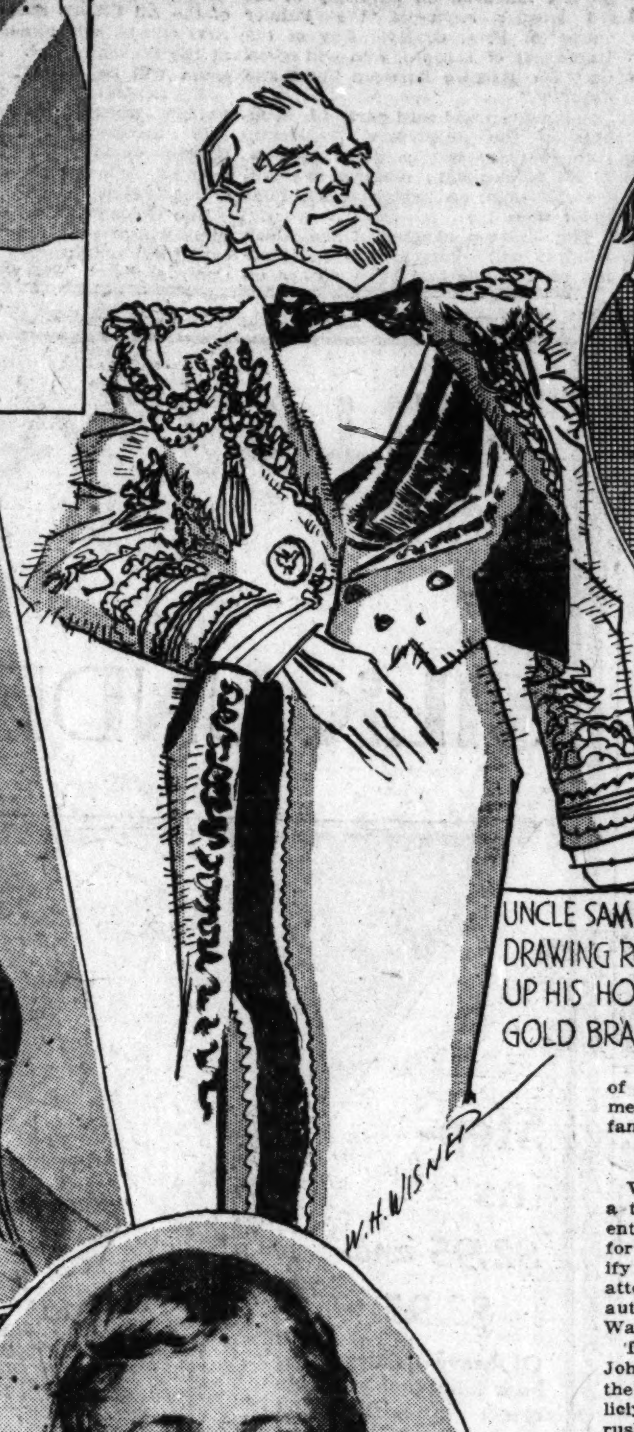
by GENEVIEVE FORBES HERRICK

Where Socially Obscure Can Get First Foothold

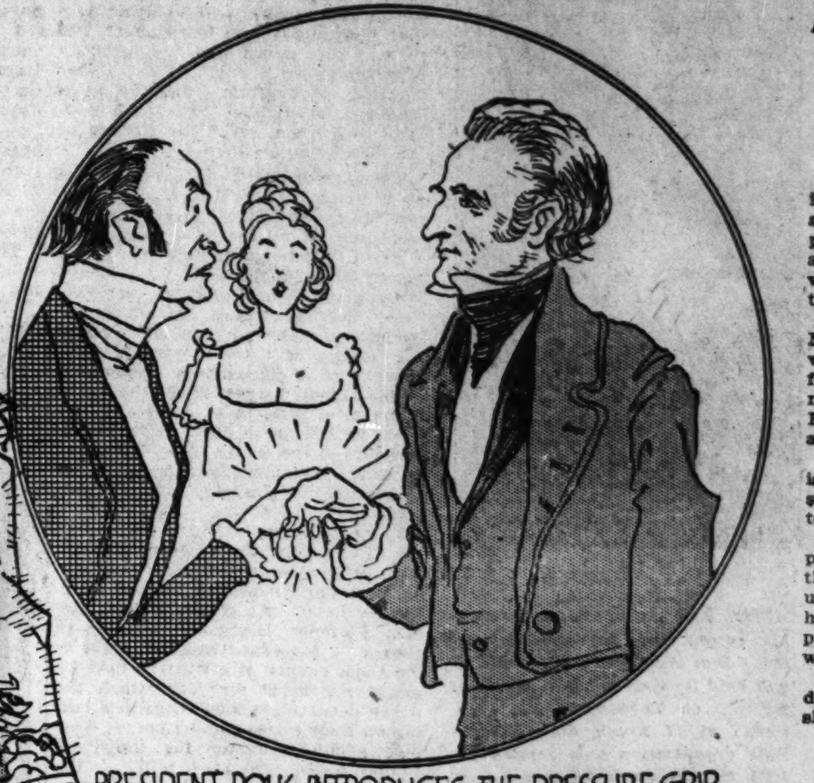
Battles Around Dining Table as Fierce as on Field



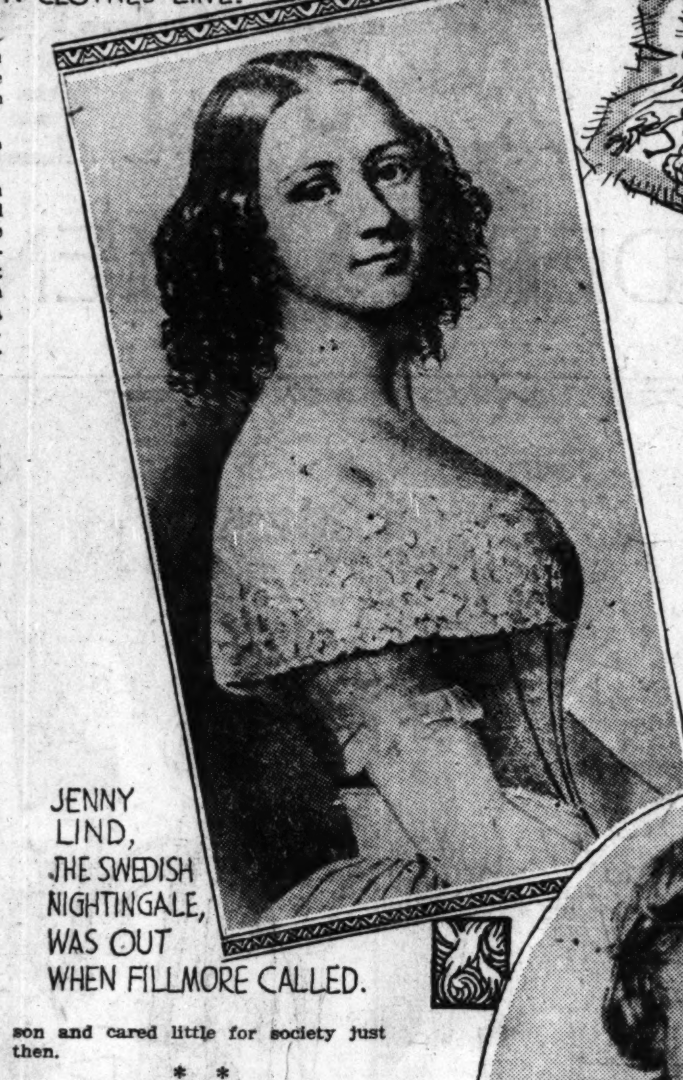
ABIGAIL ADAMS' EAST ROOM CLOTHES-LINE.



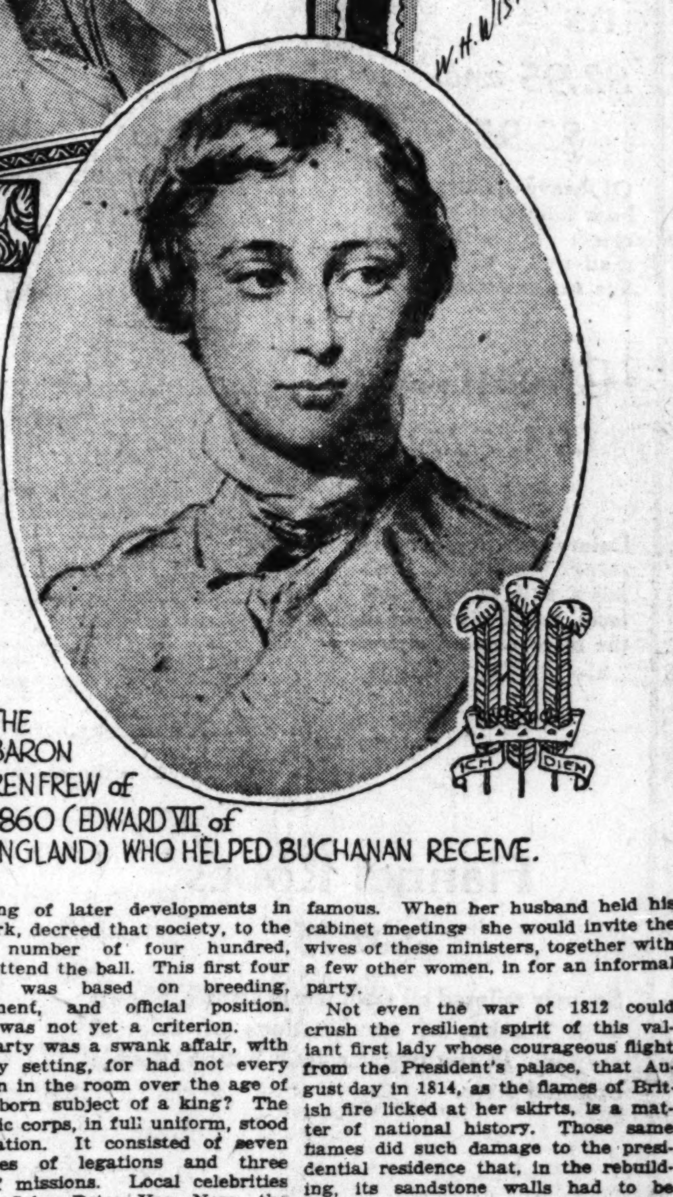
UNCLE SAM, IN A WASHINGTON DRAWING ROOM, HAS DRESSED UP HIS HOMESPUNS WITH GOLD BRAID.



PRESIDENT POLK INTRODUCES THE PRESSURE GRIP.



JENNY LIND, THE SWEDISH NIGHTINGALE, WAS OUT WHEN FILLMORE CALLED.



THE BARON RENFREW of 1860 (EDWARD VII of ENGLAND) WHO HELPED BUCHANAN RECEIVE.

In last Sunday's article, beginning this series, Mrs. Herrick introduced the reader to the circles within circles, the wheels within wheels, that make the national capital's social's maze. This article is the second of the series.

WASHINGTON has ever been the brilliant battle ground of social conflict.

Founded by British born subjects and grounded in the reactionary amenities of an English court, but nurtured by the adventuresome ideals of a new democracy, the nation's capital has furnished, throughout the years, a fascinating and an inevitable mosaic of a cavalier and a pioneer.

Uncle Sam, in a Washington drawing room, has dressed up his homespun with gold braid.

The stylish bow of royal routine has been elbowed by the informal gesture of a casual commune.

The front door has always stood open, but he who entered was expected to know well his catechism of etiquette, his creed of precedence.

A Social Battle Ground.

For more than a century now, Jefferson's free-for-all social code and Monroe's imported tricks of ceremony have walked their contradictory but interweaving ways down Pennsylvania avenue. As a result, today, your nation's pivot city is the fairest spot in all this land of liberty for the hitherto obscure countryman to get a first foothold. But it is the most difficult in the United States for the social free lance to feel really secure.

The history of our country is usually set on a battle field or in a congressional hall. But there is also a history that swings gracefully about a drawing room and a dining table. Nor is it any pale, pretty echo of more stern events. For in between the lines on the national calendar of balls and dinners are written bitter struggles, battles of nations, and diplomacies.

There was Abigail Adams and her now famous washing. There was Tyler's gold dessert service and Harriet Lane's wit. There was Dolly Madison, vivacious hostess to a growing country; there was Mrs. Taylor's corncob pipe. And there was Princess Alice.

Each reign added a new motif to the pattern the capital was weaving on the national loom. Each new motif supplied new color schemes to the design. The picture of social Washington changed from the frugal outlines of a sleepy village to the fuller curves of a shabby, happy town; it grew brighter as southern hospitality flowered, and dimmer when the civil war fired its shots; it blossomed in radiance at the turn of the century and changed into a puzzling diagram, confused and crowded, when the world war cast its shadow. And now it has emerged, still a gorgeous tapestry in royal purple and ancient silver; in shining new gold, in khaki, and in a thread or two of conservative gray.

Hamilton Made the Rules.

Our first capitol wasn't in the present capital at all. The social code was established by our first President after a serious conference with John Adams, James Madison, and Alexander Hamilton. It was the suave Hamilton, however, who made most of the rules. The other revolutionary fathers sat around the table and thought up the by-laws. This new country of theirs may have been a wilderness, but they wanted it to have the suits and trappings of a republican court.

This was not displeasing to George Washington, nor to his wife.

A picture of Martha before her spinning wheel, is all very well for the text books, but she found a drawing room every bit as attractive as a sewing alcove. Across her breast she twisted a white fichu; but to many of her guests it had the authority of a regal toga.

George Washington brought to the presidency the hospitality of a Virginia planter. His enemies declared he brought also the airs of a British lord. They objected to his liveried servants, his formal receptions. They even criticized his bow. The first President, nettled by this comment, wrote:

". . . that I have not been able to make bows to the taste of poor Col. Bland (who, by the by, I believe, never saw one of them), is to be regretted . . . would it not have been better to throw the veil of charity over them, ascribing their stiffness to the effects of age, or to the unskillfulness of my teacher, than to pride and dignity of office, which, God knows, has no charms for me?"

Then he added this pregnant sentence:

"For I can truly say, I had rather be at Mount Vernon with a friend or two about me than to be attended at the seat of government by the officers of state and the representatives of every power in Europe."

Washington's Levees.

Nevertheless, his bi-weekly levees were stately affairs. This new country showed its independence, by the way, in taking the word levee from the French "lever," meaning to rise, and applying it with revolutionary etymology to afternoon and evening parties. We have the report of one William Sullivan, frequent guest at Washington's levees, that the visitor was conducted into the dining room "at three o'clock or at any time within a quarter of an hour afterward." He was taken up to Washington, who stood with his back to the fireplace bowing to each guest, but also contriving to be so engaged that handshaking was impossible.

As the callers were presented they stepped back into a circle formation. At a quarter past three the doors were closed. Then the President, beginning at the right, made the rounds, speaking a few words to each. When he again reached the fireplace he stood silent as his guests in turn came forward, bowed, and withdrew.

It was all over by four o'clock, the dinner hour.

This dinner hour in Washington has climbed 240, sometimes a good 270 minutes in the years. Where the modern capital hostess waits 15 minutes for the laggard guest, the first President grudgingly allowed a lean five minutes, explaining, "I have a cook who never asks whether the company has come, but whether the hour has come."

* *

Washington's Public Dinners.

Once a week, usually on Thursday, the Washingtons held what was called a "public dinner," to which they invited as many as the table would hold. Ten, possibly twelve, was the saturation point then, whereas the present formal dining table at the executive mansion can be stretched to seat ninety-six about its bulging crescent sides.

That these public dinners were none too jolly seems to have been the opinion of at least one of the guests, Senator W. Maclay, who wrote in his diary:

"Dined this day with the President. It was a great dinner—all in the tastes of high life. I considered it as part of my duty as senator to submit to it, and am glad it is over. The President is a cold, formal man. It was the most solemn dinner I ever was at. The President played with the fork, striking on the edge of the table with it."

At the evening levees, more exclusive than the afternoon assemblies, it was Martha who invariably, with blunt directness, enunciated the closing rule, saying:

"The general always retires at 10 o'clock, and I usually precede him by fifteen minutes."

It was a stupid guest indeed who hadn't found his hat by 9:45.

When the nation's capital was moved to the Potomac wilderness, the public guardians of official etiquette determined that it was more than ever necessary for the manners and modes of metropolitan centers, like New York and Philadelphia, to prevail. But it was like rehearsing a sophisticated drama at the cross-roads. Most of the stage properties were lacking.

Adams Cold and Formal.

President and Mrs. Adams were rather cold and formal. Their house was very cold and formal. They moved into the "People's Palace" in the summer of 1800 and found a rude structure in a crude town; a big, bare house, that required twenty servants, and not a bell in the place. The East room, once the fall came, was too chilly for even a stilted levee. So Abigail Adams strung across it a clothes line that has wound its way into history, and on that line hung up her washing.

To get into her home Mrs. Adams had to climb up temporary and unsteady stairs, on to a teetering platform. But all Washington climbed the stairs and came a-calling. The reason was climate, not conversation. Everybody in Washington that first winter was literally freezing almost to death. The government officials, most of whom had come without their families, piled two, four and even eight, into icy rooms to sleep, and went calling to get warm. The early legislators were perpetual pilgrims after the radiance, not of a hostess' smile, but of her stove. And by the time central heating was introduced the vogue of calling, which so definitely distinguishes Washington from every other city in this country, was so deeply established as not to be jeopardized by even an oil burner at home.

The three most popular hostesses that cold winter were the three women with the warmest houses: Mrs. Thomas Custis Law, a relative of Washington's, on Capitol hill; Mrs. Thornton, wife of the doctor who helped lay out the town, and Mrs. Samuel Harrison Smith, whose husband was a newspaper man.

The Capitol of 1800-1801.

Decidedly, that year of 1800-1801 was no brilliant season. Albert Gallatin, dubbing the town "a hateful place," wrote home to his wife in this fashion:

"Around the capitol are six or eight boarding houses, one tailor, one shoemaker, one printer, a washing woman, a grocery store, a pamphlets and stationery shop, a small dry goods store, and an oyster house. This makes the whole of the federal city as connected with the capitol."

As a matter of statistics, there were, besides the "President's house," exactly 370 other dwellings.

The first public event celebrated was when the town, on June 5, 1800, tendered a formal reception to President and Mrs. Adams. It wasn't very gay.

Helen Nicolay, daughter of Lincoln's friend, John G. Nicolay, herself an old time Washingtonian, after surveying old documents, sums up that first season in these words:

"So Washington's first winter of official life dragged along with the tacit assumption that everything was comfortable and satisfactory, when everybody knew quite well that it was not."

Slowly and half heartedly Mr. and Mrs. Adams built up a social system. Slowly, because everything was so new, so green; and half heartedly because they were in mourning for their son and cared little for society just then.

Jefferson's Simplicity.

Barely had the foundations of the system settled when the whole structure was knocked topsy-turvy by the coming of that vigorous apostle of simplicity, Thomas Jefferson. Theoretically his rule of pêle-mêle may have been the basis of democratic simplicity. Actually it caused bickerings that were complicated. The theory was: no special place for any one. The practice was: grab first place.

One vivid instance of this, and one which had an international reflex, is the story of Anthony Merry, minister from Great Britain. As envoy from the mother country, Mr. Merry felt his claims to distinction sufficiently great to make it proper for the President to escort Mrs. Merry to the dinner table. But Jefferson, with nonchalant carelessness, took out a pleasant but officially unimportant woman who chanced to be dining in the party.

Mrs. Merry was humiliated; her husband, furious. He offered his arm to his wife, seated her, then cast about for a partner for himself. His eyes fell upon the charming American wife of the Spanish minister. He started over to her side. A brisk, busy little fellow blocked the way, and snatched the vacant chair. Mr. Merry's agile and successful competitor wasn't even a senator; he was a congressman, and such an obscure congressman at that.

Democracy, the envoy reckoned, has its drawbacks. So he sat down that night and wrote a letter to his home office, protesting the incident in the name, of course, of injury to his government's prestige, and not at all of injury to his own pride. It is a custom that is still invoked when an unskilled hostess seats her guests incorrectly.

Mr. Merry's Predicament.

Great Britain set in motion an investigation, thorough but slow. Meanwhile, Mr. Merry discovered many pleasant things in this unpleasant land, and it is reported that he was considerably dismayed to learn, many months after the congressman had snatched his place at dinner, that his government, acceding to his earlier request, had removed him from the obnoxious post. Then, so capricious can even an envoy be, Anthony Merry, so the story goes, protested his recall.

England, for many subsequent years, sent to this strange country only bachelor representatives. Later days and other nations have found it convenient to adopt a similar policy in times of social crisis.

Jefferson drew a blue pencil through the fortnightly levees, and substituted daily dinners, casual and informal; and two quasi-formal receptions a year, on New Year's and the Fourth of July. And he always shook hands. Calling at the White House was taboo, so Washingtonians, not to be denied their tradition, called on each other, at all hours of the day and evening.

Enter Dolly Madison.

The city of Washington was but nine years old when, on the first Saturday in March, 1809, a blithe woman in a buff colored velvet gown and a twisted turban of velvet walked into Long's hotel (the present site of the Library of Congress) as the band began to play at this, the country's first inaugural ball. But under the warm and spontaneous hospitality of Dolly Madison, for it was she in the buff colored gown and the turban, Washington grew up, socially. She regarded the nation's guests as her guests, and when she said, "My province begins at the drawing room door," she was mindful of her duties.

Mathematics, with a curious foreshadowing of later developments in New York, decreed that society, to the precise number of four hundred, should attend the ball. This first four hundred was based on breeding, achievement, and official position. Wealth was not yet a criterion.

The party was a swank affair, with a courtly setting, for had not every American in the room over the age of 32 been born subject of a king? The diplomatic corps, in full uniform, stood in formation. It consisted of seven secretaries of legations and three heads of missions. Local celebrities included John Peter Van Ness, the wealthy congressman from Kinderhook, New York, who had stayed on to marry Marcia Burnes, daughter of old David Burnes, owner of much of Washington; and John Tayloe of Mount Airy, Va., owner of the famous Octagon house at 18th street and New York avenue, and John Law, son of Thomas Law.

The ball began at 7. About 10 o'clock the chairman invited Madison to stay for supper, and he said he would be glad to. Then, turning to a neighbor, the fourth President of the United States, in weary words that his successors may have echoed, whispered, "But I'd much rather go home to bed."

When Dolly Went Calling.

Dolly Madison, most beloved of all mistresses of the executive mansion [for all that some voters criticized her annual turban bill of $1,000], met her official duties with enthusiastic carefulness. Her Quaker ancestry made her punctilious about even social obligations; her Virginia background made her enjoy those obligations. One of the biggest chores was the returning of all calls made at the mansion. It was still some years before geographic difficulties and international jealousies were virtually to forbid the President or his wife to make any call save on a visiting ruling monarch.

As the wife of the secretary of state, Dolly Madison, for eight years, had returned all her calls, with comparative ease. But Washington was spreading out and the task grew more difficult. True, the vogue of the calling card helped some, but many women forgot to pencil their addresses. The President's wife would, however, stop her carriage and make inquiries until she had located every name on her list. Calling started early in the morning, for there was much to be done. Later in the day she attended congressional debates and was voted a seat on the floor of the house. Society dined, formally, at 4; and supped, simply, at 8.

Dolly Madison's "dove parties" were famous. When her husband held his cabinet meetings she would invite the wives of these ministers, together with a few other women, in for an informal party.

Not even the war of 1812 could crush the resilient spirit of this valiant first lady whose courageous flight from the President's palace, that August day in 1814, as the flames of British fire licked at her skirts, is a matter of national history. Those same flames did such damage to the presidential residence that, in the rebuilding, its sandstone walls had to be splashed generously with the white paint which gave the dwelling, informally, the name "White House," a name which nearly one hundred years later was made official.

President Monroe's Wife.

Dolly Madison fought war and fire to widen and deepen the dimensions of national hospitality, but she had to step down from the center of the picture with the coming of James Monroe and of his wife, who seemed ever conscious of her European training.

One of her contemporary critics declared that Mrs. Monroe had "cosmetics but no cordiality."

She was never at home to callers. She put the servants in livery. She wanted to put the cabinet in uniform; but happily, doubtless, for the later prestige of Secretary Mellon's calves, and of Secretary of Labor Davis' rotund figure, the President's official family won out over the President's wife.

Of course she made enemies. Many a Washington matron vowed she'd never enter the executive mansion if that was the way its mistress felt about it. But one spring morning a van drew up to the back door of the White House with a load of knickknacks imported from France. The news flew in and out of the drawing rooms. Neighbors were eager to see if the figurines on the French clocks were really nude. So they accepted invitations; wooed them, in fact, to find that it was an exaggerated rumor, that yarn about the nude figurines.

Mrs. Monroe shoved the dinner hour up sixty minutes to a fashionable five o'clock. Candid guests admitted the dinners weren't much fun, but, with a social reasoning that is still a potent factor, they argued that it was more comforting to go and be bored than to be left out of the party. Appropriately, it was during the Monroe administration that the emphasis on precedence began to strike with authority. Wives of cabinet members insisted that they should receive the courtesy of first calls from the wives of senators, since their husbands were members of the President's official family.

How Adams Settled Quarrel.

Wives of the senators said that such a theory was all wrong. They were entitled, they maintained, to first calls, for didn't their husbands have to ratify the cabinet appointments, else an attorney general would have no more authority than Mr. Coolidge's friend Warren, a few years back.

The quarrel was going strong when John Quincy Adams, making a jest of the whole controversy, wondered, publicly, if the senators ought not to rush around and call on all members of their respective state legislatures since, in those days, the legislatures elected the senators.

The cabinet wife won the fight, but to this day an occasional radical senate wife renews the debate.

The diplomat, at this early date, was shaping into a social magnet; this, in spite of the fact that the Monroes had rebuked the foreign envoys for the easy, unannounced manner in which they had been wont to drop in at the White House. Particularly powerful was the lure of the British diplomat, and this piqued the home-spun citizenry who could still hear the shots at Bunker Hill.

For instance, to choose one incident from many, Secretary of State Adams accepted an invitation to attend the christening of the British minister's new baby. Softly gossip whispered that Adams was to act as proxy for the prince regent; loudly gossip shouted that such a procedure was "too damn friendly to England."

John Quincy Adams.

John Quincy Adams had to watch his invitations even more closely when, a year or so later, he went to the White House, as the nation's President. As it grew older, the Adams' administration grew gayer, not grayer. The marine band which, in the time of the other Adams, had played sedate hymns at the capitol, was now bidden by the son to come up to the mansion and play dance tunes.

The town was growing more elegant. There were new buildings and new faces; customs from London and costumes from Paris. Mrs. Andrew Jackson, despairing of the city's wickedness, exclaimed:

"The extravagance is in dressing and running to parties—there are not less than from 50 to 100 persons calling in a day."

Dinners were a little smarter, which meant a little later. The rules of rank and precedence were forging chains so strong that not even a Farmer-Labor Shipstead could later break them.

Toward the end of this warm, hospitable, fulsome epoch came sickness, epidemic, and misery. With sickness came charity; and with charity came the social climber. More than one woman, kindly enough but on the border line of society, made a strategy of a virture and visited the poor, hopeful that she was casting a Dolly Madison shadow across the threshold.

* *

The Eaton Controversy.

For the purpose of this brief survey the Jackson régime is important for the Eaton controversy, which was to influence later social policies.

Peggy O'Neill, a buoyant lass whose father kept the Franklin house, grew up the pretty pet of the inn which was host to many officials. She married Timberlake, a sailor, who went with his ship to the Orient, where he took his life, leaving a widow, comely and not too sad. Gen. John Henry Eaton, former senator, proposed marriage. About the same time President Jackson proposed Eaton for his secretary of war. The wives of the other cabinet members shouted that they'd never associate with the tavern keeper's daughter. Jackson, bitter at the way he believed gossip and slander had hastened the death, but a few months before, of his own wife, determined to stand between the prospective bride of his minister and the other cabinet ladies.

Eaton and Peggy were married just a few days before the inauguration, and many of the guests came to the inaugural ball as much to glimpse the new bride as to view the new President.

The social test came with the state dinners. Here, as in the earlier case of Merry, the bachelors had the best of it; they had no wives to whom they had to explain their courtesy to a woman the women disliked. So Van Buren, a widower, found it not unpleasant to carry out the presidential command and be nice to Mrs. Eaton. The Benediks had a harder time. The wife of the Dutch minister left the table one night. Mrs. Calhoun, wife of the Vice President, refused to call on the bride.

Jackson's Ultimatum.

About this time Andrew Jackson thundered his ultimatum—he proposed to fashion a cabinet for a nation, not for the ladies. And he ordered his friend, Richard M. Johnson, to order the cabinet members to order their wives to be courteous to Margaret O'Neill Timberlake Eaton.

This put the cabinet ministers in the middle, between wife and President. One, at least, Attorney General John M. Berrien, took his stand and declared that Jackson might be President of the United States and commander of the army and of the navy, but he was not the governor of any man's hearth and that he, Berrien, was ready to turn in his portfolio, but he was not ready to have another man meddle in his own family affairs.

The quarrel dragged along, but its back was broken when the cabinet was disrupted in 1831. In 1834 it was found expedient to transfer Eaton and his controversial lady to the Florida territory, of which he was made governor. She complained here; and she complained two years later when her husband went as minister to Spain. Gen. Eaton died; his widow married a youthful Italian dancing master and returned to Washington, to live in obscurity, and to die in meagerness.

* *

The Scene Changes.

It is with a dramatist's flair for contrasts that the Emily Posts and Lord Chesterfields of early Washington swung the curves from the wide sweeps of simplicity to the narrow bands of exclusiveness.

So the Jeffersonian sturdiness which characterized Jackson's hospitality ended, sharply, with the inauguration of Martin Van Buren. Van Buren was the first President who had not been born a British subject; yet they called him "royal." His son, just home from Europe, they christened "Prince John." And when he bought a few gold dessert spoons, and had a glass screen erected in the White House vestibule, as much to keep out the drafts as inquisitive visitors, they proclaimed him a veritable monarch.

If you came a-calling too early in the morning, you couldn't get in. This particularly irked a certain Pennsylvania congressman, who made impassioned speeches against "the court fashion of sleeping out the day and walking out the night."

When the New Year's levee actually omitted refreshments [the crowds at Jefferson's receptions had ground the food into the lawn and spilled wine over the best furniture], Van Buren's enemies read over the Declaration of Independence and wondered what the country was coming to.

Back and forth the social pendulum oscillated from formality to informality, and back to formality. Nor did the pendulum swing quite clear each time. Each reign of formality left a deposit of social silt which added to the mound already there, and dropped a few more rules in the book of etiquette.

There wasn't much, however, that the social code acquired from the administration of William Henry Harrison, unless it be the trio of mutually antagonistic inaugural balls which ushered in his reign. Harrison's rule of ceremony was simple and singular. It was this: Whoever calls is asked to stay to dinner.

White House Becomes a Home.

Washington was an expanding city of 25,000 when John Tyler brought his large family to the White House in April, 1841. Foreshadowing the Roosevelt régime, the Tylers made of the mansion a home, with the tenth President of the United States strumming the fiddle, and the marine band playing under the trees.

Important, for this chronicle, is the tragic explosion of a gun on the warship Princeton Feb. 28, 1844, killing five men, two of them cabinet members. Their death focused congressional attention on the hitherto vague law of presidential succession, and later legislation had a corollary in the rules of precedence, which ranked each cabinet member in order of succession.

Following the death of his first wife in 1842, Tyler married young Julia Gardiner, whose father had lost his life in the Princeton disaster.

Julia made the most of her new honors. Older matrons were furious when, upon calling at the White House, they were massed in the drawing room until, with a dramatic third act entrance, the delighted girl, a long purple train trailing in back of her and plumage bowing from her hair, walked across the room and up onto the dais, where she received.

Again the pendulum swung rapidly. Mrs. Polk, successor to Mrs. Tyler, wore no purple robes, no waving feathers. Under her competent, businesslike direction the mansion, says Helen Nicolay, "sank into austere and immaculate order once more."

Her chief contribution to our story is her remark: "I never discuss a subject on which my sex is supposed to be ignorant."

Mr. Polk's gift to the national pageant of pomp was his technique of the handshake. For now, with a population of 25,000 at the capital, the handshake was assuming those vast proportions that it was later to take when Mrs. Taft said of it:

"The chief occupation of the President of the United States is, of course, shaking hands."

President Polk's Handshakes.

Here was Polk's formula:

"If a man surrender his arm to be shaken by one horizontally, by another perpendicularly, and by another with a strong grip, he cannot fail to suffer severely from it; but if he will shake and not be shaken, grip and not be gripped, taking care always to squeeze the hand of his adversary as hard as his adversary squeezes his, he will suffer no inconvenience from it. Now I can generally anticipate a strong grip from a strong man, and I then take advantage of him by being quicker than he and squeezing him by the tip of his fingers."

Zachary Taylor and the social program? His wife smoked a corncob pipe!

Mrs. Fillmore gave the White House its first library and its first bathtub. Mr. Fillmore had no patience with the unwritten mandate, just then beginning to be expressed, that a President should not go calling.

When Jenny Lind came to town he hurried over to the Willard hotel. The singer was out and he left his card. This is said so to have excited her that she was all for rushing over to the executive mansion immediately. And, for once, it was Barnum who played the rôle of the conservative and persuaded her to delay the visit until the following day.

The Franklin Pierces, who had seen their son killed in a railroad wreck on the way to inauguration, had small desire for any entertainment.

Buchanan's Wet Inauguration.

It was a great day for statistics when James Buchanan took the oath of office in 1857. Some 15,000 guests, gathered at the National hotel for the inaugural ball, consumed $3,000 worth of wine. The tower of cake was four feet high, and there were at least 400 gallons of oysters. The dance lasted until the shocking hour of 4 o'clock in the morning, and feminine commentators, in describing the gowns, the music and the ceremony, quite squeezed dry the sponge of adjectives.

Harriet Lane, gracious and witty niece of America's only bachelor President, was well liked. So was the President, who initiated two pleasant observances. One was the Mayday parade and picnic for the children from the Protestant Sunday schools. This is no longer in vogue. The other was the egg rolling contest, formerly carried on in hit or miss fashion on Capitol hill, but now the most important official event on the White House grounds on Easter Monday. This ceremony fell by the way during the hard days of the civil war, but was revived, against the advice of landscape gardeners, by Cleveland, and now flourishes to the happiness of all Washington's children.

Washington Dresses Up.

Slowly the town was changing. Mrs. William M. Gwin gave the first costume ball. Dress suits were coming in, and the dinner hour was making its continental way around and up the clock. Visiting celebrities paraded the streets, today a prince from the Orient, tomorrow a potentate from the south. The climax was the arrival of Baron Renfrew who, at the behest of his mother, Queen Victoria, came down from Canada long enough to set the national capital agog.

For exercise he went, properly chaperoned, to play a game of tenpins at a girls' schools. For entertainment, he stood by the President's side at at elaborate evening reception and did the bowing as the President did the handshaking. And for rest, he went to sleep that night in the President's own bed while the country's chief executive, so runs the tale, stretched out on a cot in an anteroom.

It came time, presently, and inevitably, for James Buchanan and Harriet Lane to leave the nation's pleasant, polished drawing room which they had fashioned so skillfully. Urbane society, speculating on the next swing of the pendulum, lifted a challenging eyebrow as it looked at those plain folks from Springfield. A few even used the word "barbarians," and made a grimace.

Abraham Lincoln and a "short lady at his side" in blue and white checkered silk, held their first reception at the Willard. The inaugural ball danced its way across the floor of the "white muslin palace" on Judiciary square, so named from the yards of muslin which festooned the walls. The diplomatic corps paid its respects. The first public reception became history.

Gay, if simple, events were being scribbled across the social calendar of democracy when the reverberation of the shot fired at dawn at Sumter stopped the gallant compliments, stilled the laughter, and quieted the fiddle. Overnight, almost, the happy village, for it wasn't much more than that, for all its new cut clothes, sobered down to a grim fortress and the whole world came to a wartime national capital just as, half a century later, the whole world was to come again to a wartime international capital.

Woman's University Club to Open New Home

January Will See Organization in Permanent Quarters

By Roberta Nangle.

THE seclusion and relaxation afforded by the purely social club is becoming as attractive to modern women as it has been for centuries to men. All over the world, groups of women with common interests are banding together and are erecting for themselves prototypes of those sanctums in which the male is wont to withdraw from the distractions of a busy world.

Chicago has several clubs of this type, all of them boasting large memberships and numerous activities. A new and rapidly growing organization is the Woman's University club which was founded in May, 1926, with the object of maintaining a club home for college women in the loop. Early in January it will move into its new permanent quarters on the seventeenth floor of the Medical and Dental Arts building.

Members will then have for their use a spacious and comfortably furnished lounge with windows commanding a view of the river to the west and a cheerful dining room overlooking the lake where luncheon, dinner and afternoon tea will be served. There will also be card rooms, committee rooms, and a large lecture room.

Club Has 735 Members.

Mrs. L. A. Corboy, chairman of the house committee, is in charge of the decoration, and equipment of the rooms and is being assisted by Miss Marion E. Clark of the home economics department of the University of Chicago; Mrs. John T. Wheeler, Mrs. Merle B. Snyder, Miss Mildred Whitcomb, Mrs. Henry Holsman, and Miss Eleanor L. Hall.

The club at present has 735 members, all of whom desire the convenience of club facilities in the downtown district and the opportunity for acquaintance with women outside of their immediate business, professional and home circles. Alumnae of the colleges and universities on the accepted list of the club are eligible.

Reception Will Open the Club.

The rooms will be opened formally with a reception shortly after the first of the year. Sunday afternoon teas are to be a feature of the club, and educational dramatic, and musical programs are being planned by their respective committees as part of the regular club routine.

Mrs. May Wood Simons of the department of economics of Northwestern university is president of the organization and the other officers include Mrs. Carey Culbertson and Mrs. Clarence Frazier, first and second vice president; Miss R. Louise Hanna, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Merle B. Snyder, recording secretary; Miss Florence A. Partridge, treasurer, and Miss Mildred Whitcomb, auditor.

MRS. NEIL ANDERSON.
[Monfort Photo.]

Mrs. Neil Anderson is serving her second year as president of the Social Economics club, which will hold its next regular monthly meeting on Tuesday in the club rooms at 17 North State street. This organization was formed in 1894 for the study of social and political science and to increase the facilities for public education. Philanthropic work has been done for the crippled and deaf children of the Forward Movement Settlement, the Park Ridge School for Girls, the Woman's Shelter, Speedway hospital, and the South Side Crippled Children's Aid. The club is affiliated with the first district of Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs and with the Chicago and Cook County Federation of Women's Organizations.

DOWNTOWN CLUBS

Several departments of the Illinois Federation of Women's clubs will hold meetings at the new federation headquarters, 30 West Washington street, during the coming week, including the music department at 10:30 o'clock on Tuesday morning, the law enforcement department at 10:30 on Wednesday morning, and the tenth district music department at 2 o'clock on that same afternoon; the board of directors of the sixth district at 10 o'clock on Thursday morning; the junior membership department at 10 o'clock on Thursday morning also; and at 10:30 o'clock on Friday morning a meeting of the committee on the Park Ridge school for girls.

The Chicago Woman's club will meet on Wednesday at 2 p. m. to hear a lecture by Herbert Richard Crane, formerly of the University of Michigan, on "Contemporary American Architecture." At 12:30 tomorrow there will be luncheon meetings of the Celia Parker Woolley committee on race relations, and the Le Salon Francaise, with Vice Consul de Franc as the principal speaker. At 2 o'clock Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis and Henri David of the University of Chicago will address the French group. The December meeting of the board of managers will be held on Tuesday at 10:30 a. m. and at 12:30 a luncheon will be given under the direction of the committee on moving pictures, followed by the showing of two new films. On Wednesday at 10:30 a. m. there will be a business meeting of the home and public welfare department, and at 11 o'clock the literary study class will have a Kipling recital. On Thursday the committee on the education of the adult foreigner will have a luncheon at 12:30, and at the same hour the committee on mental hygiene will have a luncheon at which Dr. Warren G. Murray of the Dixon state hospital will speak on feeble minded delinquents, and Dr. Paul Schroeder on mental defectives. The bird study class will meet on Friday at 10 a. m. and the forest and garden class at 10:30.

The civil service committee of the Woman's City club will have a service luncheon on Tuesday at 12:30 o'clock. At the club's monthly dinner on Wednesday George O. Fairweather will speak on "The City's Money: Its Sources," and Ald. Guy Guernsey will discuss "How the City's Money Is Spent." Preceding this meeting the foods and markets committee will have a discussion on "The Trend in Modern Homes," by Inez Cunningham and Carola Rust. At 3:30 the president will give a tea for new members. At a meeting of the civics art committee on Friday at 12 o'clock Thomas E. Tallmadge will speak on "Chicago's Architecture," and there will be a program of Christmas carols.

The second of a series of travel talks sponsored by the art and literature department of the Chicago Woman's Aid will be given tomorrow at a luncheon at 12:30 o'clock by Miss Clara Laughlin, on "Spain and Alhambra." The child study committee of the education department will hold its regular monthly tea on Tuesday at 2:30 p. m. The civics and philanthropy department will hold its regular monthly meeting on Thursday at a luncheon at 12:30. Prof. Arthur J. Todd will speak on "The Future of the Family."

The treasurer of the Illinois League of Women Voters, Mrs. Walter Benson, has asked the presidents and treasurers of all the local Leagues of Women Voters in Illinois to be her guests at a luncheon at the Chicago Woman's club on Thursday, at 12:30. The collection of dues, the making of budgets and the new finance plan of the league will be discussed. The department of efficiency in government of the Illinois league, under the chairmanship of Mrs. B. G. Jamieson, will meet on Friday at 10:30 at the headquarters of the league, 203 N. Wabash avenue. Plans for the opening of the legislature in January will be discussed.

The next regular all day meeting of the Chicago and Cook County Federation of Women's Organizations will be held on Wednesday at the Auditorium hotel. At the afternoon session Florence E. Scully, who is in charge of the educational program at the Cook county jail, will tell how inmates are fitted for jobs which the police department aids them in securing on their release, and Ransom Kennicott, chief forester for the Cook county forest preserves, will ask the federation's aid in formulating a program to educate the public in the care of the preserves. A musical program will also be given. At the morning session reports from presidents of affiliated clubs will be heard.

The study class of the Catholic Woman's league will meet on Saturday at 1 p. m. and at 2 p. m. "Laws in the Making" will be discussed at the regular club meeting. The speakers include Mrs. Flora Cheney, Mrs. M. Wright, Mrs. Charles M. Conkey, and Mrs. Bertha Baur.

The Woman's Roosevelt Republican club will have a card party for the newly elected Republican women on Wednesday afternoon in the Florentine room of the Congress hotel.

The Tuesday Art and Travel club will hold its December literary meeting on Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the Illinois Women's Athletic club. There will be an exhibit of oriental rugs and a discussion of their history.

The Social Economics club will hold its regular monthly meeting on Tuesday in the clubrooms at 17 North State street.

The English Speaking union will have a luncheon on Saturday in the red lacquer room of the Palmer house for Prof. C. Ryle Fay of the University of Toronto, who will speak on "The Balance Between Town and Country."

A luncheon and card party for members of the Physicians' Fellowship club auxiliary will be given by Mrs. J. M. McDonough, program committee chairman, on Friday at the Food Craft shop.

The Midwest chapter of the Alden Kindred will commemorate the landing of the Pilgrims by a dinner on Tuesday evening at the Stevens hotel. Morris H. Trescott of the Oak Park library board will be one of the speakers, and a musical and dramatic recital will be given.

The Council of Jewish Women will hold a meeting tomorrow at 2 p. b. at the Masonic temple, at which Dr. Frank D. Slutz will speak. The religious study class will meet at 12:45.

The third annual artists' luncheon of the All Illinois Society of the Fine Arts will be held tomorrow at 1 p. m. at the Stevens hotel. A musical program will be given.

The Central Eleanor club will have a twilight musical in the club lounge this afternoon. The monthly membership dinner will be held on Friday evening, followed by a recital by the dramatic club.

The Chicago Council of Jewish Juniors will give an informal dance and card party on Saturday evening at the Congress hotel. Proceeds will be contributed to the council's recreation center at the Lamon school.

The Woman's Ed-So-Phil club will be hostess at a luncheon and Christmas party for dependent crippled children of the Martha Washington home to be given on Thursday at the Blackstone hotel.

The Second congressional district of the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs will hold a board meeting on Thursday at the residence of Mrs. W. W. Seymour of 7126 Euclid avenue. The program will include a morning session, luncheon and an afternoon program.

SOUTH SIDE CLUBS

The Arché club will give an informal dinner on Wednesday evening at 6:30 at the Shoreland hotel. A musical and dramatic program will be given. At the regular weekly session of the club on Friday the literature study class will meet at 11 a. m. and the general club program will be given at 2 p. m.

The Woodlawn Woman's club will meet on Tuesday at 10:30 to hear a lecture on violins. The afternoon program will be presented by the educational department, and will include a talk by Dr. William S. Sadler on "Tricks of the Subconscious." There will be an all day sale of Christmas novelties by the ways and means committee.

The South Shore League of Women Voters will hold its regular meeting at St. John's Methodist Episcopal church, 7350 Jeffery avenue, at 2 p. m. on Wednesday. Clark M. Eichelberger, who was present at the signing of the Kellogg peace pact, will speak on that subject.

The regular meeting of the board of the Jackson Park sanitarium will be held tomorrow at 10:30 a. m. at the residence of Mrs. W. C. Thompson of 4522 Greenwood avenue.

The Hyde Park Travel club will meet tomorrow at 2 p. m. at the Windermere East for a Christmas program. At 11 a. m. the fine arts department will present a playlet with music.

The Chrysolite club will meet on Tuesday at the Hotel Plaisance to sew for disabled war veterans.

The League of Women Voters at the University of Chicago will hold a meeting on Wednesday at 4 o'clock in Harper Memorial library, room M-11. Dr Rachelle S. Yarros and Mrs. H. N. Toiles will be the speakers.

The Fortnightly of Englewood will meet on Tuesday at the residence of Mrs. Henry Boettcher at 6336 Harvard avenue.

The Auburn Park Thirty club will meet on Friday afternoon at the residence of Mrs. William L. Pringle of 2215 West 110th place.

Winter Festivities Reach the Highwater Mark

Two Balls Mark Gayest Week of Social Season

By Mme. X.

MRS. JAMES H. DOUGLAS JR., MRS. STEPHEN Y. HORD, AND MRS. DEXTER CUMMINGS.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

MRS. JAMES H. DOUGLAS JR. (Grace McGann), Mrs. Stephen Y. Hord (Catherine Norcross), and Mrs. Dexter Cummings (Emilie Hoyt) were the young matrons composing the receiving line at the Bachelors and Benedicts ball held recently at the Congress.

THE last week has set a high water mark for winter festivities so far. Three big and important balls, besides minor entertainments, brought out society's cohorts in fine array and still finer spirits. The Aeroplane ball on Monday evening assembled a large and cheerful throng which divided its attention between dancing and looking at those amazing mechanical monsters that crouched about the Coliseum and the Armory in austere and aloof fashion as if to say: "You poor earthworms, creeping hither and yon, look at us, owners of the upper air and masters of space, time, and power! What are your jiggling dances to our soaring flights, our looping the loop, our bankings and swift dips?"

There were many famous aviators there, among them that celebrated sextet that made the circuit of the globe in three airplanes four years ago. Your scribe sat by Lieut. Wade, one of this notable six, at the large and gay dinner given before the ball by Mr. and Mrs. John H. Winterbotham, and was much interested in the airman's comments on his flight and on aviation in general. He admitted that after that historic terrestrial trip our old planet seemed much smaller than before, quite a negotiable bit of cosmic dust (though that is not just the way he expressed it).

He also gave some of his views on the proper procedure in developing this new means of travel along the uncharted aerial highways, opinions which are worthy of study by all of his earthbound contemporaries, as we are shaping and evolving an entirely new—what shall I call it?—art, industry, occupation, sport, element, expression of power? He said that he thought the entire business of aviation should be under federal control, a strict and cautious management that should require the highest standard in the personnel running airplanes. He seemed to be of the opinion that alcohol was of no value to aviators, that indeed it was a detriment, and that no trustworthy aviator would be found addicted to it.

Against Private Ownership.

He said that correct legislation should prohibit private ownership of airplanes, and that only those who have passed the strictest sort of mental, physical, and other tests should be permitted to take to the upper air. He also touched on the possible spiritual effects of aviation and held the opinion that in aviation and the new contacts it would establish between people of diverse origins and traditions lay the hope of world peace. The more we know of each other the better will be our understanding of each other, the firmer our mutual confidence.

Not from any words of his, but from this talk with him and other aviators I am getting the impression that those who are accustomed to flights high up above the earth acquire other points of view from ours, that that relativity which makes certain things bulk large to us in looking from the surface of the globe to the east, the west, the north, and the south, is quite changed to aviators, just as is their actual outlook which eliminates mountains and makes nothing of valleys.

Perhaps this new race of birdmen will bring peace on earth and good will to all. Certain it is, these travelers in the skies seem more placid, more detached from small things, than do their kind whose lives are passed on the earth's surface.

An Eye Opener.

That show at the Coliseum and Armory was an eye opener to every one not an aviator. Those huge and, for the time being, silent monsters were truly awe inspiring in their proportions and effect of power, and when one peeped into their interiors and saw beds made up and card tables set forth, as well as comfortable easy chairs and other paraphernalia, it was inviting and reassuring to even the timidest. The bombing planes were formidable, almost sinister, in their expression of latent and irresistible power. A giant bug like those could drop an egg that would destroy the Woolworth Tower in New York in the twinkling of an eye.

By the way, the airmen don't use the word motor to express their sources of power. You must speak of this as the engine, a delicate distinction which to the layman is a little baffling, so long have we been used to thinking in terms of motor power. Furthermore, Lieut. Wade stated that Chicago was the logical place for the nation's principal airport and should be so developed.

But this is a disquisition, not on airplanes or mechanics but on society's doings. Pardon the diversion.

First Assembly Is Gay Affair.

On Friday evening the first of the two Chicago assemblies was held in the gold ballroom of the Congress hotel. This was, as always, a gala occasion. These balls are the most important and representative functions of their kind in Chicago. There were many dinners preceding this gathering of the clans, among them being the large and gay affair given by the William A. Scudders and the Wallace Kirks and one which the Arthur Meekers set out to give for their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd of Santa Barbara. Unfortunately the latter were called unexpectedly back to California last week because of a motor accident which seriously injured Mrs. Lloyd's eldest child by her former marriage. Late news from there, however, is reassuring.

Last evening the Potter Palmers gave a charming festive supper dance for their daughter, Miss Bertha Palmer, one of the season's most attractive debutantes. She is piquant, alert in manner, of medium height, rather brunette in coloring, with regular features, and, as the vernacular expresses it, is very "easy to look at." This affair was given in the Palmer mansion and will probably be the last ball of the kind given in a Chicago residence. The lovely drawing rooms and the spacious and famous picture gallery permit of a gathering of this size, and make a delightful background for it.

A Charming Musicale.

One of the choicest entertainments of the winter was the musicale given at their home by the R. T. Cranes and their debutante daughter, Miss Florence Crane, last Sunday afternoon, when Tito Schipa sang and a young and brilliant pianist (whose name I've forgot) played. That charming Tudor drawing room was well filled with guests and so enthusiastic were they that they encored M. Schipa again and again and recalled the attractive young pianist to show their appreciation.

There arrived here last week another young Chicago debutante, Miss Inez de Soriano, and her mother, Mme. Ricardo de Soriano. The latter is a daughter of the late Chauncey Blair, and is a sister of Chauncey B. and William Mitchell Blair of this city. Chicago born though she be, Mme. de Soriano is as Spanish looking as any Castilian beauty. And her daughter is also of this type.

Mme. de Soriano and Miss Ines de Soriano are giving a reception tomorrow afternoon at the Casino. They are the house guests of Mrs. Waller Borden.

MRS. CATHERINE BARTHOLOMAY OSBORNE.
[Moffett Photo.]

MRS. CATHERINE BARTHOLOMAY OSBORNE is chairman of the doll booth for the Grant Hospital bazaar to take place on Tuesday at the Drake hotel under the auspices of the Woman's auxiliary of the hospital.

The opening of the Casino, in its new quarters on East Delaware place, eight days ago was one of the red letter events of the winter. This is an institution unique in its idea and management and radiant in its charm and in its expression of our daily existence. It fills a remarkable place in Chicago's social life. The passing of the family residence, or rather its change from the spacious mansions of yesterday into the luxurious but less roomy apartment makes necessary some such an enterprise as this gay little club. Vanishing are the days when debutante daughters can be presented to the friends of their parents in the family mansion. It is in only a few homes still left here that wedding receptions can be held.

A Change in Customs.

It is thirty and more years ago since it was the general custom to give balls in private houses. In those days such well known families as the C. B. Farwells, the Franklin MacVeaghs, the Marshall Fields, the H. H. Porters the Arthur J. Catons, the Perry Smiths, the Cyrus H. McCormicks, first and second of the dynasty, the Potter Palmers, the George M. Pullmans, Mrs. H. O. Stone, the Ralph N. Ishams and many other well known families had houses with ballrooms or drawing rooms that could easily be turned into ballrooms, and it was in these that they entertained their friends at gay dances wherein the now extinct cotillion, or "German," as it was called, used to be a feature.

Nowadays these larger, more formal functions have to seek for space in hotel ballrooms, of which Chicago has many very handsome ones.

It is this change in our domestic customs and environment that makes such an institution as the Casino so invaluable, with its many requirements and modes of expression, with both ease and elegance. The new home for this club wears outside a smart and original coat of dark, rich green with a dado and trimmings of lustrous black. Indoors, from the minute the visitor sets foot in the semi-circular vestibule, he or she is greeted with a charming blending of color and design that is utterly novel, elegant, gay, chic, and delightful.

It is the creation of Mrs. John A. Carpenter, in her way the most remarkable genius in this form of art that ever gave an enchanting background for its social life to any community. There is nothing at all like this club the length and breadth of the country. Neither in New York nor in Boston, nor in any city in the U. S. A. nor in any other country for that matter, is there so exquisite a setting, nor a club so organized for smart and brilliant entertaining as is the Casino of Chicago.

At the inner entrance on either hand curving iron railed stairs, wide and shallow, descend to the dressing room below and ascend to the reception, card rooms, and big ballroom that open out from the main lobby.

Lounge Is Enchanting.

The lounge into which one enters first is enchanting. Its walls are a glistening black against which the crystal electric light chandeliers glitter brilliantly. Yellow taffeta curtains are gracefully draped at the long French windows that let in the daylight at either end of this lounge. Oyster white satin covered settees flank the two open fireplaces that give warmth and cheer on either side of the main entrance to this lobby. A few charming pieces of old inlaid furniture further adorn it.

Beyond is the ballroom, or assembly room, an oval salon surrounded with slim, silver columns set in pairs. Above these is a frieze of soft gray on which float a galaxy of softer, grayer swans. The walls of this lovely "salle de danse" are of a moiré green, and thickly set with old and exquisite mirrors, all deliciously frosted, so that there is a shimmering effect without the distractions of perfect reflections of passing events. A dozen crystal chandeliers hang from the ceiling and are supplemented by other crystal electric light fixtures on the walls. Green satin benches rim the room, their backs imbedded in the wall.

A few pieces of antique furniture give elegance to the hall. Its encircling set of little glass topped tables that used to be black are now painted a gay saffron pink that goes well with the brilliant green background. The whole is an enchanting background for either daytime festivities or evening's more sumptuous and formal affairs.

Opening off this main hall are three charming smaller dining rooms, each full of character and as chic as can be. At the left of the entrance to the ballroom a delightful little hall passes to the two card rooms that lie at the east end of the building; one quite large and done in the classic style of the "empire period," and the other smaller and with a similiar but more gay note of this motif.

There is a small but sumptuous ladies' dressing room upstairs and a larger and even more exquisite one downstairs, where also are the men's dressing rooms and lounge, or smoking room. Mrs. Carpenter says that the general style of the club is "directoire." The directoire period, you know, merged into the empire. Her husband, the well known composer, describes it all as being "accented jazz, with its quick tempo and emphasis, against a background of the classic," which is quite a perfect interpretation of it all in musical terms. For there you find the gay, free spirit of today expressed with a hand restrained by a thorough knowledge of and belief in the traditions of other times.

I don't think that anywhere else is there quite such a board as that which directs the affairs of the Casino. It is a mixed body of men and women of standing in the community. Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman has been its president since the club was founded, sixteen years ago. Arthur Meeker is vice president; George Ranney is treasurer, Barrett Wendell is secretary, and Howard Gillette is house committee.

This afternoon the Casino and its board of governors are giving a reception to a distinguished visiting Frenchman, M. Pierre Etienne Flandrin, vice president of the French chamber of deputies and vice president of the Interalliés association in Paris, an important organization with which the Casino is affiliated. He is also deeply interested in aviation and is well known in many of today's activities in France. Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman, president of the Casino, will receive the guests today at 5 o'clock and present them to M. Flandrin.

Hunting Season Over.

The coming of December marked the close of the hunting season in Lake Forest and other neighboring countrysides. The Onwentsia Hunt club had an especially strenuous time this autumn. Hunting as they did over a new set of fields and woodlands brought new problems to the riders, not the least of which were a fine outfit of badger holes, which accounted for many a tumble.

It may be an error, but it seems to the average onlooker that more than the usual number of bothersome accidents afflicted this gay outfit of riders. Both our ambassador to Cuba, Col. Judah, and his wife were thrown and suffered fractures, while Mrs.

SOCIETY

Functions Honor Persian Prince

By Mildred Jaklon.

ENTERTAINING seems to be at its height at this juncture of the social season, with numerous affairs intime sandwiched in between the larger and more official occasions. Prince Mozuffar Firouz of Persia has been the raison d'être for a round of gatherings this week-end, concluding with a luncheon to be given by the Byron Harveys at their Lake Forest residence and a supper to be given by Judge and Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin this evening.

There is also on todays' program the Casino reception for the distinguished Frenchman, M. Pierre Etienne Flandin, about which Mme. X tells you, a luncheon being given by the Charles H. Hamills at the Casino, and the debut supper Mrs. Theodore White Smith is giving this evening at the Fortnightly for her daughter, Miss Theodosia Smith.

Luncheon for Turkish Notable.

Tomorrow's various events include a luncheon sponsored by the Chicago Council on Foreign Relations at the Palmer house at 12:30 o'clock for Halide' Edib Hanum, who is to speak on "The Face and Mind of New Turkey"; a debutante luncheon to be given by Miss Anita Blair for Miss Priscilla Higinbotham, Miss Ynez de Soriano, Miss Betty Borden, and Miss Dorothy Ranney, at the Casino; the debut reception to be given, also at the Casino, by Mme. Ricardo de Soriano for Miss Ynez de Soriano; an Arts club tea, opening an exhibition of some of the Brainard Lemon silver from Louisville, Ky., and a sale sponsored by Mrs. Robert B. Gregory and Mrs. Lynden Evans at Mrs. Evans' residence at 1240 Astor street of Albanian native work.

For Tuesday is scheduled the Grant hospital woman's auxiliary bazaar at the Drake hotel. Mrs. Charles Bohling is president of the organization. Mr. and Mrs. James M. Hopkins are to give a dinner-dance for Mrs. Hopkins' niece, Miss Mary Elizabeth Johnston, and Miss Abby Beveridge at the Casino.

Musical Society Raises Funds.

On Wednesday evening the Lake View Musical society is sponsoring a musical and motion picture program at Orchestra hall for its scholarship fund, and on Thursday there are two debutante parties listed, a luncheon by Mrs. Charles Pope at the Casino for Miss Theodosia Smith, Miss Florence Crane, and Miss Dorothy Ranney, and a dinner dance at their apartment by the James Ward Thornes for Miss Barbara King.

David Thompson and Lawrence M. Viles are giving what will, I imagine, be a large and smart dinner-dance on Friday evening at the Bal Tabarin, and on Saturday evening Mrs. J. M. Patterson is to give a dinner-dance for her niece, Miss Florence Crane, at the Blackstone. Saturday is also the date set for Mme. Ganna Walska's (Mrs. Harold F. McCormick) matinee concert at Orchestra hall, sure to be an interesting event.

Miss Loretta Galvin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Galvin of 7135 Oglesby avenue, spent the early part of Thanksgiving week in Philadelphia with Mr. and Mrs. T. F. Reilly. From there she went to Boston for the Yale-Harvard game and was the guest of her sister, Mrs. R. J. Migely of Forest Hills, L. I., on Thanksgiving day.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Goldblatt of 6852 Merrill avenue announce the birth of a son, Marshall Ernst Goldblatt, on Nov. 29.

Mr. and Mrs. Gerhardt Meyne have taken an apartment at 1448 Lake Shore drive.

NEWS OF CHICACO SOCIETY

MISS JEWEL FELDMAN.
[Camera Art Studio.]

Mr. and Mrs. Morris Feldman of 1865 South Avers avenue announce the engagement of their daughter, Jewel, to David Aronson of Chicago.

MISS BERNICE DE VRY.
[Gibson Photo.]

The engagement of Miss Bernice De Vry to Roland Gerhard Lueder, son of Postmaster and Mrs. Arthur C. Lueder of 636 Gary place, has been announced by her parents, Bernard De Vry and Mrs. Minnie Schoellkopf De Vry of 1149 North Sacramento boulevard.

Howell Howard, formerly Miss Hines of Evanston, had a bad spill from which she has not yet recovered, I hear.

These tumbles gave rise to a new set of rules for conduct on the hunting field. The unfortunates who take headers are divided into two classes; those who go through them without a whimper, and those who give a cry when a bone snaps or a big bruise comes. To do this is the worst of bad form, don't you know; it shocks both hunters and the listening badgers. We shall soon evolve a race of stoics among these various bands of intrepid horsemen and women.

Meanwhile, many an onlooker and even some of the participants are glad that the hunting season of 1928 went by without a fatal accident.

Col. and Mrs. Noble B. Judah are now on their way to their post in Cuba, where they have a delightful villa or plazzo outside of Havana, the island's capital. They are famous for the delightful manner in which they entertain there the many distinguished people who pass that way, among them American officials, foreign notabilities, and native Cubans, as well as friends of theirs from Chicago, Dayton, and elsewhere.

The Donald M. Ryersons, who stayed with them last winter, may make them another visit this spring. The Ryersons are thinking of taking the John T. McCutcheon's lovely winter habitat near Nassau, the capital of the Bahamas, a deliciously remote spot named by its owner "Treasure Island." The latter are planning a trip this coming spring to South America instead of, as usual, spending three months on the island. Already, though the winter is but just begun, people hereabouts are planning for their annual late winter or early spring begiras.

Huge Prices for Real Estate.

We are used in Chicago to fluctuating values in local real estate, especially in that part of the city that lies north of the boulevard link bridge, but the price recently paid for what has for three-quarters of a century been known as the Poole property on the southeast corner of Erie street and North Michigan avenue is of dazzling proportions to old residents of that part of town. It is a piece of property bought by the grandfather of the present members of this well known Chicago family from the Indians who originally owned it. No other name appears on the deed during the long years since it was bought from the red man. The father of Ralph Poole, who is the only one of three sons who lives in Chicago today, died in 1910. Shortly before his death, by the advice of his son and others, he refused, most reluctantly, an offer of thirty-five thousand dollars for this piece of property. A fortnight or so ago, eighteen years later, his heirs sold this homestead for one million one hundred and twenty thousand dollars, quite a sizable increase in value of real estate for that period of time.

I suppose that there are other city lots that have remained in the hands of the first purchasers from the aborigines, but there are not many such. A few years ago the once well known family of Legrand Burton owned property in the neighborhood of Lake and State streets which their ancestor bought from the Indians in the thirties of the last century. I think that this is still in the possession of members of the same family.

The Bridge Nuisance.

I wonder how many people on their way to catch trains lost them last Tuesday morning when those two mud scows held up a quadruple row of southbound automobiles that stretched from the bridge up Michigan avenue and the Lake Shore drive to North avenue, while the scows fought for the right of way. It took one couple, Mr. and Mrs. William J. Chalmers, on their way to an important engagement, an hour and a half to drive from their apartment on the corner of Cedar street and the Lake Shore drive to St. Luke's hospital on South Michigan avenue and Fourteenth street, where Mr. Chalmers' sister was lying very ill from a serious operation.

To get there at all they had to beg the courtesy of nearby automobiles to let them out of the jam and so make their way westward to find an exit from the north to the south side, which they did at Wells street. Near them were countless cars stacked with luggage, some of which probably failed to make the trains which their occupants were trying to catch. This matter of open bridges is getting to be an intolerable affront to modern civilization and should be soon settled for the benefit of the community now suffering daily from such delays.

Chicagoans whose traditions go back to an earlier age will be interested in the item published in an eastern paper announcing the fact that the Rev. Dr. John Insley Blair Larned was recently elected suffragan bishop of the diocese of Long Island under Bishop Ernest M. Stires. Dr. Larned is of a well known Chicago family, his father having been the late Walter Cranstoun Larned and his grandfather the late Edwin Larned, both prominent citizens here in their day.

The latter's sister married the late Joseph Turner Ryerson and therefore was the grandmother of Joseph T., Donald M., and Edward L. Ryerson, all well known in Chicago's business and social life today. Dr. John Larned is also a grandson and namesake of the late John I. Blair, famous in his day as one of New York's great financiers. The Rev. John Larned has made a distinguished place for himself in the Episcopal church and is spoken of as having "a reputation as a preacher, an organizer, and an evangelist."

His sister, Mrs. Frank Blatchford of Winnetka, is the only member of the Larned family left here. Bishop Stires is also from Chicago, having filled for several years the post of pastor in an Episcopal church on the south side, where he was much beloved.

Grace Moore Wins Parisians' Praise

By May Birkhead.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

[Copyright: 1928: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, Dec. 8.—[Special Correspondence.]—Our compatriots in Europe are taking great pride in the success of American singers who have made Parisian debuts in the last few months. American artists more than ever are seeking the stamp of a Parisian reputation.

An outstanding figure at the moment is Grace Moore, whose pulchritude and charm of manner won as much praise as her remarkably sweet, clear voice. She made her debut two months ago in the Opera Comique and from that moment critics predicted a brilliant career. Since then she sang at the Royal Opera of Brussels in a gala performance in the presence of the king and queen of the Belgians, and scored a real triumph.

Mary Garden Interested.

Her two best rôles are Mimi and Manon. The artist herself favors the latter, but her success in one is no greater than in the other. She has just given a last performance of "Manon" before sailing for home, the most brilliant audience of the season giving her an ovation after every act.

The artist was fortunate in having Mary Garden interested in her career, as well as in getting her able advice. Miss Garden shortened her rest period on the Riviera and came to Paris especially for this performance.

Chicagoans in the Audience.

While Miss Moore made her début here, she is far from unknown at home. Upon her arrival in New York she will resume her engagement with the Metropolitan, where she made her début last January. Before that she was a star of the Music Box Revue. She started as a choir girl in her home town in Tennessee.

After the performance Miss Moore gave a big farewell supper party at which Mary Garden was present. Among the Chicagoans in the audience were Mr. and Mrs. Livingston Fairbank. The latter is making a place for herself here in musical circles. Mr. and Mrs. Carlton Holdrege and Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Chatfield Taylor also were present. Miss Moore, who will give concerts in America, is returning to Paris to resume her engagement at the Opera Comique this spring.

CLUB ETHICS - - - By Maude Swalm Evans

"I MET Anna Chester downtown yesterday and had a long talk with her," the life member told the long time member as they visited back and forth while waiting for the club meeting to begin.

"I haven't seen her in ages," answered the long time member. "She never comes to club any more. What's she doing now?"

"Running the business her husband left when he died about two years ago, and making a success of it, too, I should judge. She's putting her two boys through college, and, if you please, she declares that the only reason she was able to take hold and carry on successfully was because of her experience in club work."

"She certainly did plenty of it," recalled the long time member, "and all kinds, too—through the offices to the presidency of her own club and then several years on the state board."

"She says every bit of it helped her in her business—the organization work, the training in promptness and reliability, the working in harmony with other people—she has 200 employés. She told me on the quiet that after her experience with some of the club groups even labor troubles seem easy."

"They would," voiced the long time member. "Volunteer workers often have to be handled with tact plus."

"The unusual part of Anna's case is that she's the only woman in her line. I heard from one of the men in the employers' association to which she belongs that she keeps them all straight. She knows her rules of order and she's used to addressing groups. The dear man even conceded that she was one smart business woman."

"And if she'd been a nice little home body without club training?" suggested the long time member.

"She'd probably have wrecked her business while she was trying to learn the things that stand for success in club life as well as in business."

Question.

"Of what use are by-laws to a club when the members do not adhere to them?—C. A."

Reply.

It's the right of any member who notices the breach of a by-law to insist on its enforcement.

NEW YORK SOCIETY

The Charles Amorys Spend Honeymoon at Florida Resort

By Nancy Randolph.

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—[Special correspondence.]—Every one is going to feel just a wee bit odd this winter when it comes to greeting the one time Margaret Emerson, now Mrs. Charles Amory. The former Mrs. McKim-Vanderbilt-Baker has been quietly honeymooning with Charles Minot Amory in the place one would expect them to be—Palm Beach.

For several winters one thought of Margaret and Charlie as being inseparable. Wherever Margaret went in Palm Beach, there Charlie was to be found, her faithful squire. As I said ages ago, it was a foregone conclusion that just so soon as Margaret was free she would become Mrs. Amory. And, of course, as soon as the wedding took place, they dashed for Palm Beach and have been living quietly until their swarms of friends descended for the winter.

Last year, Margaret had Chiora, the south ocean boulevard villa of Mrs. Charles Harding, but for this season she and Mr. Amory have taken the Brelaford house, on the lake trail, a much more romantic thoroughfare, which Margaret occupied in other years. They intend to do a lot of entertaining, since between them they know every one of note who ever comes to the Florida spa.

Foresees Brilliant Season.

Incidentally, as I also have said, this is to be the biggest season yet in Palm Beach. Here it is only the first week in December, and already the cottagers are in residence. Some of them have been south for quite a time now. The colony of exclusives who have opened shops and real estate ventures in the quarter about the Everglades club are naturally the first to arrive and several interesting dinners have already been given. Addison Mizner, the architect, and his niece Ysabel Chase, are esconced in Addison's apartment, the Via Mizner, while the Howard Majors, also architecturally interested, are in their apartment in Major Alley.

That, of course, is one of the advantages of being a builder. One can name a little court after one's self. And the different little streets, running off the main roads, are delightfully old-world, with their balconies, court yards and deep set shops.

The Lewis Quentin Jones are already in their villa on Sea Breeze avenue, having practically gone south as soon as they left Newport at the close of the summer season. The John N. Steeles are settled on Gulf View road, while Hugh Dillman is busy observing the construction of an addition to Playa Riente.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Bai Lihme have leased the villa of the Arthur B. Claflins. Princess Lobkowicz and Mrs. Clement A. Griscom, III., daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Lihme will be their guests this winter. The Claflins are not to be in Palm Beach this winter, from present plans. Their daughter, the former Mrs. Claflin Breese, having married the Earl of Gosford in Southampton this summer is now at Falmouth House, Hyde Park, London, and the Claflins consider themselves too old for the gayeties of Palm Beach, preferring the quiet of the north, and travel.

Gotham Gay as Ever.

It must not be considered, however, that if Florida is growing populous New York is dead. Far from it. Besides the veritable flood of debuts, this preholiday period is also devoted to the little dance series and the large ones also, for that matter. The junior assemblies at the Ritz-Carlton are still with us, as well as the series of Yorkville dances, which will run well into February.

Of the debutantes, the notable ones are now making their bows. Of course, last week-end the Manville-Bernadotte wedding held the spotlight. It was an amazing function, with color everywhere. The whole village of Pleasantville, N. Y., including fire and police departments, turned out to see the daughter of the H. Edward Manvilles become the bride of Count Folke Bernadotte, nephew of the king of Sweden, with the son of the crown prince as best man. The church was a mass of chrysanthemums, a fit setting for the red and white costumes of the bridesmaids and the white ivory gown of the bride. The Swedish ushers, in their blue uniforms, finished the motif of red, white, and blue.

Vincent Astor Pays Newport a Visit

NEWPORT, R. I., Dec. 8.—[Special correspondence.] — Many homes are still open in this Rhode Island resort. Much extensive alteration is being made in several cottages in preparation for the next season.

Vincent Astor was a visitor early in the week, having come to Newport on the Nourmahal to attend a meeting of the St. George's school corporation, of which he is a member. He left for New York the next day, and is to sail this coming week for the Bahamas. Early in 1929 Commodore Astor is to take a yachting trip on the Nourmahal to the Mediterranean.

Others who have spent the autumn here are to go directly abroad, as well. Dr. and Mrs. George Cerie are leaving this week for Italy. Mrs. Andrew J. Turner is closing Cliffside this week and with her daughter, Miss Beatrice P. Turner, is going to Philadelphia.

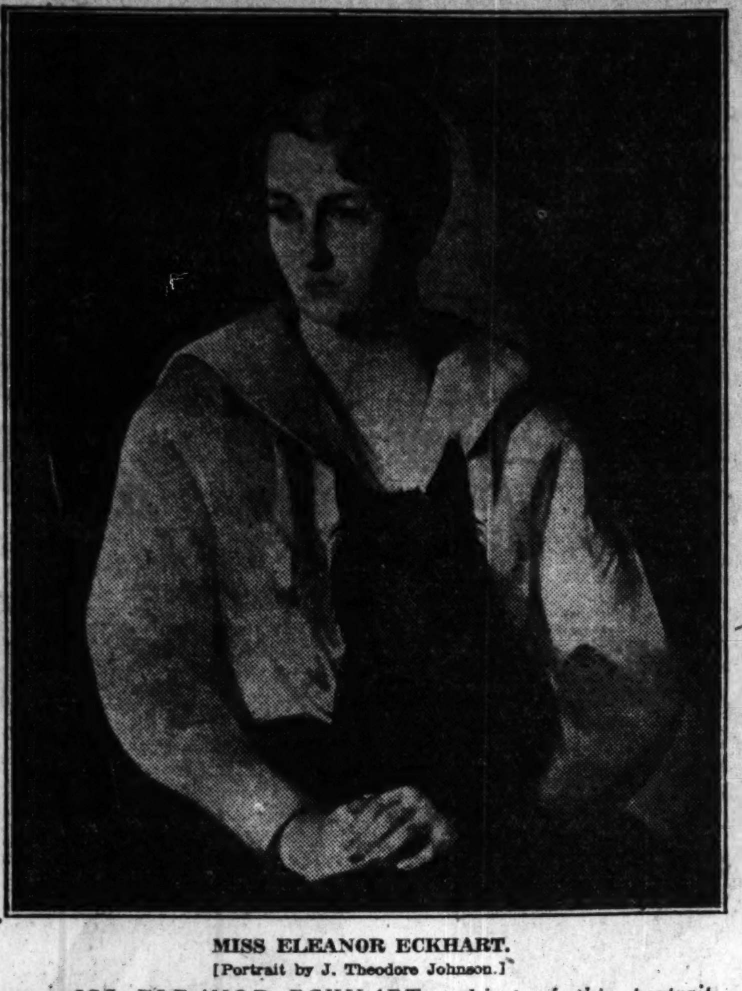
Influx of Guests Increases at Resort

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, Va., Dec. 8.—[Special Correspondence.]—The Greenbrier is decidedly populous at present and will increase in popularity beyond the Christmas holidays.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward B. King and Mr. J. Robinson Ward are coming from New York for a stay and will do a lot of riding. Judge and Mrs. Chauncey B. Parker and Miss Dora Parker arrived from Washington. Mrs. Lothrop Randolph is to leave this week for Palm Beach, where she will spend the remainder of the winter.

Other arrivals include Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Gallagher, Mr. and Mrs. Clark Thomason, Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Carleton, and Mr. and Mrs. George Garmony.

A SOCIETY PORTRAIT



MISS ELEANOR ECKHART.
[Portrait by J. Theodore Johnson.]

MISS ELEANOR ECKHART, subject of this portrait by J. Theodore Johnson who has won several prizes in the recent American exhibit at the Art institute, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Percy B. Eckhart of Kenilworth, and the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard A. Eckhart.

Friends to Fete Raymond T. Bakers

PALM BEACH, Fla., Dec. 8.—[Special Correspondence.]—Preparations for the formal opening of the season failed to detract from the interest here this week in the marriage of Mrs. Delphine Dodge Cromwell to Raymond T. Baker, which is to be followed by a honeymoon here.

Quite a group of friends of the couple went up to New York for the ceremony Tuesday, and a number of affairs have been planned here in honor of the Bakers. They are expected to spend at least a part of their time at the great home overlooking the ocean purchased by the Dillmans from Joshua Cosden several years ago.

Breakers Opens Tomorrow.

The Breakers, whose opening Dec. 10 always ushers in the season, is preparing to entertain an unusual number of Chicago guests. The big list of Chicago reservations shows that the midwesterners will be there in numbers, even though they are coming late. Almost a score of Chicagoans have made reservations, some for as long as three months. Among them are Milton Florsheim, A. D. Plamondon, R. H. Ritchie, R. H. Ripley, Mrs. D. S. Pate, C. U. Snyder, W. W. Forrester, Albert T. Evans, Leon Hartman, W. C. Miller, A. Jackson, Mrs. Carroll D. Keeler, Mrs. A. A. Newman, and George Rockwell Skinner.

Cardinal Expected.

Cardinal Mundelein of Chicago, who purchased a winter home at Olympic Beach last season, is sending a decorator there to put it in readiness for his occupancy. It is possible that the nearby house may be occupied for a time by Cardinal Hayes, to whom it has been offered by the owners.

Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Beatty of Highland Park have leased their winter home here to Col. Albert Russell Erskine of South Bend, Ind., for February and March. Mr. and Mrs. Earl Phillips Sedwick, who are neighbors of the Beattys, are at their new Palm Beach house.

NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS WORLD

Churches Observe Bible Sunday Today

Other news of churches will be found on page 12 of this issue.

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

IN MANY of the churches there will be special emphasis and attention brought to the observance of Universal Bible Sunday today. This observance is sponsored by the American Bible society, whose sole aim and object is "to encourage a wider circulation of the Holy Scriptures without note or comment." This year the theme for the day is "Sowing the Seed," based upon the interpretation of the parable of the sower, which is one of the parables fully amplified by Christ when he first told it. "The sower went forth to sow and the seed is the word of God" Thus the colporteurs are going abroad throughout the world today distributing and selling Bibles and Scripture portions over rugged mountains and across deep rivers, through impenetrable jungles and weary deserts, often the very first touch of civilization and religion that has come to regions hidden in intellectual and spiritual darkness.

The officers of the American Bible society have felt that a general observance of Universal Bible Sunday will have a stimulating effect upon the Bible reading campaign of the opening weeks of 1929, and this campaign in turn make a wholesome impression and introduction to the Lenten and pre-Easter period. The ministers today will have an appropriate occasion for emphasizing the fundamental place the Bible occupies in Christian faith.

At a recent meeting of the Church of the Covenant, North Halsted street and Belden avenue, Dr. John Timothy Stone, presiding as moderator, it was unanimously voted to merge the interests of the Church of the Covenant with those of the Seminary and that hereafter the church be known as "The Seminary Church" [Church of the Covenant Foundation]. By the terms of the merger the property will be transferred to the seminary and held for the joint use of the seminary and the church. The seminary will assume and be responsible for the mortgage of $30,000 now on the property; the seminary will provide and maintain preaching Sunday morning and evening throughout the year, midweek prayer service, Sabbath school, and all other usual church religious societies and also maintain the services of a member of the faculty mutually acceptable to act as pastor with student assistance.

The congregation at once extended a call to the Rev. Robert Clements, professor of pastoral theology and church polity in the seminary, to act as pastor as provided for in the merger. Members of the church and of the seminary in mutual coöperation will have a dual direction and control of the church property. The Church of the Covenant thus becomes an organic part of the seminary as "The Seminary church."

Bishop Charles P. Anderson will dedicate the new parish house building of the Episcopal Church of the Good Samaritan, 1127 North Humphrey avenue, Oak Park, this morning at 11 o'clock. The building has been erected at a cost of about $20,000, under the direction of the Rev. Mansel B. Green, who took charge of the portable building about 18 months ago, then serving for church services. The new parish house has been fitted up to serve for church purposes until a church proper can be built. Bishop Anderson will confirm a class at the dedication this morning.

"Religion: Its Inventions and Discoveries" is the subject of the address at the Sunday Evening club this evening in Orchestra hall by Dr. C. Wallace Petty, pastor of the First Baptist church, Pittsburgh, Pa. Frank F. Winans will take part and Clifford W Barnes will preside and give the informal Bible talk. Men from the Union Trust company will assist the ushers during the month of December.

Attorney Frank J. Loesch, newly appointed assistant to State's Attorney John A. Swanson, will address the Congregational Ministers' union tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock at 19 South La Salle street on "The Conscience of Chicago." The Rev. John John, pastor of Englewood North since 1913, will lead the devotional service.

The solemn national Christmas novena in honor of St. Therese, the Little Flower, one of the most important devotions of the year, will begin Tuesday at the national shrine, 64th street and Woodlawn avenue, the Carmelite church, and it is expected that about 15,000 persons will visit the shrine daily during this nine day devotion. Last year there was an average daily attendance recorded of 11,000 persons. The Rev. Martin O'Donnell, O. Carm., will conduct the opening service and among other speakers will be the following: The Rev. Sylester L. Snee, rector of the New Jersey shrine; the Rev. Anselm Werner, O. Carm., rector of the national shine; the Rev. Matthew T. O'Neil, president of Mount Carmel college. The closing services will be Dec. 18 and 19 and the preachers will be the Rev. Clement J. Sullivan, assistant director, and the Rev. Albert H. Dolan, O. Carm., national director of the Society of the Little Flower.

THE REV. HENRY PRYOR ALMON ABBOTT, D. D.

The Rev. H. P. Almon Abbott, D.D., has just become rector of St. Chrysostom's Episcopal church, 1424 Dearborn parkway, succeeding the Rev. Norman O. Hutton, D. D. Dr. Abbott comes from Baltimore, Md., where he was rector of Grace and St. Peter's Episcopal church for the last eight or nine years.

The Jewish people have begun the celebration of the Feast of Lights, known in Hebrew as Hanukkah, and on Friday evening the candles were lighted in home and synagogue, one the first night and one added each night until eight have been lighted. The celebration lasts for eight days, ending Dec. 15. The feast commemorates the triumph of Judaism over the paganism of the Syrians, whom they had imported from Greece. The Syrians had subdued the Jews and were gradually wiping out Judaism completely when Judas Maccabeus and his brother arose in rebellion and saved and rededicated the temple to the worship of God. During these eight days the Jewish congregations in the city are celebrating this victory with appropriate services.

The Wellington Park Community Sunday school, 3015 North Austin avenue, under the auspices of the Austin Swedish Methodist Episcopal church, will dedicate its new building today, a gospel tabernacle. There will be two services at 3 and 8 p. m. and in the morning the Sunday school will hold its third annual rally when the Rev. L. Gibbs from Africa will speak. Dr. John Thompson of the Chicago Temple will preach at 3 o'clock, the Rev. T. J. Westerberg, pastor of the Austin Swedish church presiding.

In the evening Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes will preach and conduct dedicatory services. Edward Oakes, Charles Carlson, August and Eric Skoglund are four Methodist laymen who have been instrumental in securing the land and erecting the tabernacle at a cost approximately of $30,000 and making possible a place for the large and growing Sunday school as well as the gospel service which is held every Sunday evening. The work was started about two and a half years ago as a mission, and is developing into a large modern Bible school. A. P. Olson is Sunday school superintendent and as a local preacher has charge of the evening gospel service each Sunday. The Rev. Eric P. Swan is district superintendant.

Dr. Edith Hale Swift of the American Society of Social Hygiene will be the speaker at a massmeeting of the Episcopal Young People's association, the Girls' Friendly society, and the Brotherhood of St. Andrew at St. James cathedral, Cass and Huron streets, at 5 o'clock this afternoon. Dr. Swift is in Chicago for a series of conferences under the direction of the Episcopal department of social service. Tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock she will address the Chicago clergy's round table at St. James Community house, tomorrow afternoon at 4 the Visiting Nurse association, and tomorrow evening at 8 the District Association of Graduate Nurses.

At a meeting last Sunday in the neighborhood of Chatham, on the far south side, a movement was launched for a new Jewish congregation under the leadership of Rabbi David Bronstein, formerly of Butte, Mont., and at one time professor of philosophy at the New Mexico Normal university. Dr. Tobias Schanfarber of the K. A. M. temple addressed the meeting and a committee was appointed to organize a Sunday religious school for Jewish children in the community and to carry out the preliminary work of the congregation. Two business men, Samuel Swartz and Louis Frank, are coöperating with Rabbi Bronstein in the work of organization.

On last Sunday a new Presbyterian church was organized in the Chatham Fields district, on the far south side, at a meeting presided over by Moderator Alva V. King. The petition for the new church contained the names of 110 persons. Dr. F. L. Seldon received members by letter; Dr. A. S. C. Clarke, on reaffirmation of faith, and Dr. A. C. Zenos received one member by baptism and on confession of faith. After the election of three elders and three deacons the meeting was turned over to Elder O. C. Hagen of the Second Presbyterian church for the election of trustees, five of whom were elected. Elder Frank S. Shaw of the Evanston First Presbyterian church spoke words of encouragement, and after the adjourning of the meeting the newly elected officers met for consultation with Dr. Henry S. Brown, superintendent of the church extension board.

The Rev. David E. Gibson, priest in charge of the Cathedral Shelter, Washington boulevard at Peoria street, has sent out his annual appeal for support of the Christmas work of the Shelter. This work is supported almost entirely through voluntary subscriptions and each year thousands of poor unfortunates are given Christmas cheer at the Shelter.

NASSAU

ISLE OF JUNE

OFFERS ALL THE PLEASURES OF A TRIP ABROAD—60 HOURS FROM NEW YORK—OVERNIGHT FROM MIAMI.

¶Nassau—Isle of June—away from the hustling world—an isle of peaceful pleasure—keyed to the tempo of modern sports and gaiety, yet different in its old-world charm. Golf—over fortressed hills to the shores of the blue Atlantic—battle finny monsters on the famous fishing banks where pirates lurked in olden days. Swim in a mild southern surf—dance and dine 'neath sighing palms by the light of a golden tropic moon. ¶Nassau's hotels and boarding houses are modern—luxurious. Transportation is of the finest type. Plan to spend at least a part of your vacation in this interesting and unusual British colony. It's a trip abroad—yet only 60 hours from New York—overnight from Miami.

The American way to Europe experienced travelers usually select one of the famous American cabin ships

From New York to England, Ireland, France, or Germany, depending on route of ship you select: George Washington Dec. 12 and Jan. 12; Republic Dec. 19, Jan. 23; America Dec. 27, Jan. 30; Pres. Harding Jan. 16.

WHETHER you can afford to disregard cost or not; whether you are going over alone or with your family; whether you're on business or pleasure bent; under any circumstance you'll enjoy the cuisine, comforts, and service of your own six American ships.

Via THE DECK WALKS of the "NEW YORK" (21,500 Tons)

Ashore—the mosques and minarets of Constantinople, the mystic face of the Sphinx gazing ever desertward, the craggy shores of Dalmatia reflected in the still fjords of the Adriatic.

And yet—aboard the S.S. NEW YORK—the atmosphere of the metropolis. In the cabins, in the dining saloons, among the passengers,—ever present, that smartness, sophistication, careful carelessness that has come to mean—New York.

The "NEW YORK", flagship of the Hamburg-American Line, is sailing from New York January 31st, to the Mediterranean and its legendary lands—70 days of quickened pulse and tingling spine, and all the while aboard ship, the comfort and luxury of Gotham.

Rates—$900 and up—include a great program of shore excursions. Send for descriptive itinerary and plan of the S. S. NEW YORK.

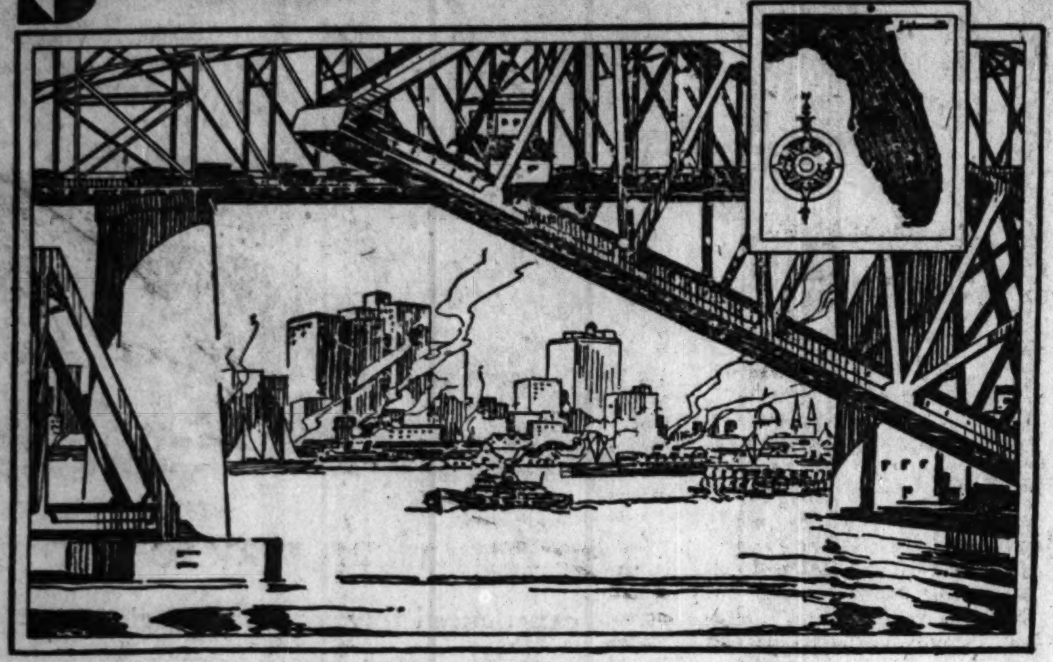
JACKSONVILLE



Make this Gateway City of the SUNSHINE STATE Your Winter Headquarters

TOWERING steel beams span the St. Johns River . . . superb highways wind along its banks . . . they lead to miles of ocean beaches . . . to Ancient Spanish forts . . . to lakes and wonderful springs. If you long for open spaces, for warm sunshine and for recreation you will find happy days waiting for you here.

Jacksonville charms its visitors with an endless variety of things to see and do. Golf, bathing, tennis, yachting, horseback riding, fishing and hunting are enjoyed here all winter. Whether you come to Florida by rail, sail or smooth highway—Jacksonville is your logical headquarters—the Gateway City of all Florida.

Come to Jacksonville for your most delightful vacation. You will enjoy its hotels, shops, theatres and cafes . . . its metropolitan conveniences and cosmopolitan people. And more than that, you can profit by your visit, for Jacksonville is the Key City of the Southeast—the South-eastern Corner of the United States.

only 24 Hours from New York to JACKSONVILLE

Decide now to come to Florida and you can be in Jacksonville tomorrow. If business calls, you can return quickly—economically. Here is a winter playground just a few hours away. It is described accurately and impartially in our new booklet.

"The Cloister" Hotel

For men who love Gun, Rod and Golf, the South offers a delightful new playground and charming new hotel in the semi-tropics.

Where the Spanish flag flew for the last time on the Eastern seaboard . . . and French nobility found refuge from the soldiers of Robespierre . . . here, deer, fox, wild turkey, quail, duck and possum abound in a 60,000-acre preserve . . . and great schools of channel bass and kingfish and trout play in the streams and challenge your skill . . . Sea Island Beach, new paradise for sportsmen and their families.

Open now . . . with a charming new hotel—THE CLOISTER—on Sea Island Beach, fronting the Atlantic. Architectural charm of old Spain with all modern hotel comforts and appointments. Private bath in every room. Cuisine that cannot be excelled—the famous Diamond-back terrapin, shrimps and oysters from our own beds; fresh vegetables from the historic Hamilton plantation. Here Southern Sunshine and tropical sea breezes add warmth and health to winter days, with a pep and tang in the air that invites you to rest and play.

A delightful home colony where cottages of unusual charm, attractively furnished, will lure you to spend the Winter.

SEA ISLAND BEACH is on the Florida Passage and the New Atlantic Coastal Highway at the seaward end of the Motor Causeway from Brunswick.

It can be reached by Royal Palm Limited or Dixie Flyer to Brunswick, Ga., via Southern R. R. Automobiles direct to the Cloister.

THE MAN BACK OF THE INSTITUTION

AN HOUR'S extra sleep in the morning is often a life-saver after an exacting day. And at the Morrison Hotel, even after the "Loop" traffic gets into full swing, a guest can enjoy his rest undisturbed.

Tallest Hotel in the World

The height of the building, with the lowest guest-room floor above the level of the Cameo Room, places all visiting guests aloof from street traffic. And in the silent tower rooms, hundreds of feet high, a patron is as remote from city noises as on a mountain peak.

Rooms, $2.50 Up. Why Rates Are Low

At this location, to which the Terrace Garden and Boston Oyster House have given a special identity, the revenues from subleases pay all the ground rent—making rooms obtainable at $2.50 to $5 that would cost $5 to $8 at other leading hotels.

You can afford a winter in Florida's sunshine ~ because these low hotel and apartment rates are waiting for you ~ in TAMPA!

Is it a mistaken idea of cost that has robbed you of the joys of a winter in Florida? Expenses need concern you little if your winter vacation is spent in Tampa. It will cost you no more to live in this delightful Florida center than to remain at home.

Here you may enjoy the luxury of modern hotels in the heart of the city's activities, for as little as $2.50 to $3.50 a day for room and bath. Or if you prefer to "keep house" large, conveniently located, beautifully furnished apartments are waiting for you at rates as low as $45 to $65 a month.

These are not MINIMUM RATES, but represent an average cost of a winter vacation in delightful Tampa. You may pay more or less for accommodations. But whatever your family budget at home, you can live as inexpensively and as well in Tampa, in an atmosphere of tropical beauty, warm winter sunshine and outdoor play, as you can at home.

Tampa knows the art of entertaining visitors, and you will find a hearty welcome here. You'll feel at home. Plan to come.

It Costs Less to Live in TAMPA

Thousands of Hotel Rooms at these* LOW RATES!

You can live in beautiful hotels like the above in Tampa, securing a delightful room and bath at an average rate of . . $2.50 to $3.50 a day

Furnished Apartments

If you prefer to "keep house" you may rent a furnished apartment in Tampa at surprisingly low rates. Apartments in modern buildings in beautiful locations at monthly rentals as low as . . . $45.00 to $65.00

A winter of delight~

~and at so little expense!

SURPRISING FACTS YOU OUGHT TO KNOW

IT IS surprising to know that modern hotel and apartment accommodations cost so little in Tampa. It IS surprising that you can avoid the discomforts of northern winters and enjoy a healthful, joyous vacation playing in the Florida sunshine day after day, at no greater cost than remaining at home. Here you will have no coal bill, no heavy winter clothing to buy—and you'll save on doctor's bills because a winter in Tampa is more healthful.

Most surprising of all, perhaps, is the fact that in Tampa you don't pay a penny for the sunshine. Free playgrounds and parks offer you unlimited opportunities to enjoy your favorite sports. Tourist societies provide congenial social life. A score or more golf courses within a comfortable driving range in and around Tampa offer unexcelled golf at reasonable greens fees. Fishing, boating, bathing, tennis—all are here for you to enjoy.

Tampa has many big-city attractions you'll like—fine theatres, a Spanish quarter as alluring as Havana itself, the famous Gasparilla Carnival and South Florida Fair. Big league baseball.

And Tampa is the most convenient city in which to make your Florida home while visiting other sections of the state. Within a comfortable driving distance of Tampa are most of Florida's greatest attractions and beautiful cities. You can visit any part of Florida in a few hours' drive over fine highways from Tampa. Direct steamers to Havana and New Orleans.

EVANSTON PLAY PROGRAM DRAWS EYES OF WORLD

Annual Attendance Over a Million.

BY OLLIE W. CROUCHER.

Man gets a better appreciation of his life's work after he has been properly taught to play. With sufficient evidence to support such a statement as a fact rather than a theory, Evanston, in 1924, organized, as a department of the city government, a bureau of recreation, which is believed to have made it the only city in Illinois with an international reputation for its system of playgrounds.

Five years ago, Henry E. Chandler, second ward alderman, then chairman of the parks and playgrounds committe in the city council, presented before that group a plan of organization for a bureau of recreation. Despite the fact that he lived and died a bachelor, Alderman Chandler is today remembered by Evanstonians as one of the greatest civic leaders in child welfare work. The scope of his plan not only provided for supervised activities of boys and girls of all ages, but it was drawn to include healthful and wholesome recreation for adults who lived and labored under the handicap of restraint.

After the approval of the city council the next step was to find a man skilled in the art of playcraft with the vision of a builder and the heart of a humanitarian. The search ended when the recommendations of Maj. Wilbur C. Bechtold were accepted and his qualifications approved.

Director Came from South.

Maj. Bechtold was at that time a

LANE TECH HIGH TO RECEIVE TWO NAVAL PLANES

Ald. A. K. Mose of the 50th ward reports that Lane Technical High school, 1225 Sedgwick street, is to receive from the Great Lakes Naval Training station two complete airplanes and parts to make five additional planes. Word was brought to Ald. Mose several month ago that many complete planes and parts to others were being junked by the training station, and that any public institution desiring to obtain any of the material might have the planes by paying the hauling charges.

It was through the alderman and William J. Bogan, superintendent of schools, that the planes and parts were obtained for the school, which has a curriculum in the mechanics of aviation.

Mr. Mose also announced that safety zones have been obtained for the intersection of Robey street and Lawrence avenue, and will be installed during the week. The Robey-Lawrence Business association requested the establishment of zones at the corner.

Safety zones have also been installed at the intersections of Western and Devon avenues, Western avenue and Ardmore street, and Western and Peterson avenues.

Rogers Park Library Clubs to Give Christmas Parties

Christmas parties will be given by the fifth, sixth, and seventh grade clubs of the Rogers Park library, on Dec. 19, Miss Laura E. Howe, children's librarian, announces. Children will contribute clothing and toys for Christmas baskets to be distributed to needy families in Rogers Park during the holiday week. The fourth grade club will hold its party Wednesday at the library.

YULE FESTIVAL OPENS TUESDAY AT IMMACULATA

Tableaux, music, and gymnastic exhibitions will feature the annual Yuletide festival at Immaculata High school, Irving Park boulevard at the lake, to be given Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday evenings this week.

The combined glee clubs of the school, under Prof. Otto A. Singenberger, will sing "Calm on the Listening Ear of Night," by Harker, and a Wagner number.

Besides the ordinary gymnastics with dumbbells, wands, and long poles, folk dances, the "Artiste Moderne" and "Navy Tactics" will be given. A tiny electric bulb at the end of each club illuminates the Indian club drill.

'BEAU BRUMMEL' READY TO STRUT AT SENN HIGH

Play to Be Given Thursday and Friday Evenings.

BY VIRGINIA SCHMITZ.

The gay eighteenth century, with its lace cuffs and snuff boxes, its high hats and high hat manners, its feuds and intrigues, and, above all, the "beau," will be revived next Thursday evening at Nicholas Senn High school when the dramatics class presents Clyde Fitch's "Beau Brummel."

How to wield a cane in a gentlemanly manner, the exact number of fans per second allowed a lady of fashion, and what to do with a monocle are a few of the items the players did research on in order to perfect the illusion of the period.

MISS JOHANNA DONIAT.
[Lewis-Smith.]

MISS LOUISE M. TONNESEN.

And the beau, with the other boys who are to take part in the play, had to let his hair grow into what might be called a movie bob before his preparation for the play was considered complete.

Object to Sideburns.

"Some of them didn't particularly care for the long hair idea," said Miss Louise M. Tonnesen, director of the players, "and they have been begging to have at least the sideburns cut off."

"But they really don't mind it as much as they say. It sets them apart from the rest of the students, and they rather like that."

Short hair was taboo for the girls as well, but since longer hair is the thing now it was no hardship for them to let it grow.

The scene is set in the days when

OUR TOWN

Paragraphs Anent the Passing Throng.

BY FRED PASLEY.

SPUG MYERS of our federal building is being hailed as the champion gourmet of the village, Spug having got away with seven hot gods at one sitting.

* *

There is nothing of special mention from Goose Island this week other than that the gas tank has just been painted, we learn from the social secretary of the Royal Order of Boneheads, 1317 North Halsted street. There may be something next week, or at the latest the week after, as the rumor is current the tank will get a second coat.

* *

Harry Meeker and all the uptowners are right proud of the fact they've been put on the main timetable of the Chicago and North Western. As Charley Powell, the enterprising ticket agent, boasts: "A regular stop for through trains to Milwaukee, Green Bay, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Rochester, Duluth and other important intermediate points." Charley says the holidays promise the usual yield of stopovers with a considerable letup in hangovers, they having gone out of style.

Henry Horner, our highly esteemed Probate court judge, reports a lull in the Lincolniana market.

We are reliably informed that the persuasive eloquence of Marshall E. Keig, the coal man, was a vital factor in obtaining the Rotarians' 1930 silver jubilee convention for Chicago, Mike's plea reaching an irresistible climax in his peroration, "Try our town on approval."

EMIL SWANSON is bidding his many friends a tearful farewell. He is leaving soon to spend the winter in Biloxi, Miss., golfing.

Roger P. Minwegen, the realtor, is no longer buttonholing passersby with "Have you lost your dog?" and he respectfully urges that people quit calling at his house at 1760 Granville avenue. The Boston terrier he found on Devon avenue last week has been reunited with its own, and Roger does say that when the reunion occurred the terrier almost wagged its tail off. "It reminds me all over again," he philosophized, "that money will buy a pretty good hound, but it won't buy the wag of its tail."

Robert H. Leitz, the big railway benefit man, who resides at the fashionable Admiral hotel, [illegible] Foster avenue, is taking no chances with scoffers as regards the jacksnipe he brought back from his Lake Zurich hunting trip. He is having a taxidermist mount it, which will set him back $5. "I have held the bag for many a jacksnipe, but this is the first one I have ever bagged," says Bob.

* *

Quite a few of the boys are advantaging themselves of the kind invitation of Harry Van Gelder, the shoe salesman, to visit his Estes avenue domicile, where the latch string of the ice box is ever out, and something cooling and refreshing always inside, they whisper.

JOHN MADDEN is sadly perplexed. Strolling in Illinois street, near Wells, he overheard an old cobbler singing as he tapped away with his hammer in his basement shop:

There was a tinker and a tailor,
And a soldier and a sailor,
And a swell that used to talk
about his mar and par;
And a butcher and a baker,
And a quiet little Quaker,
All courted little Jessie at the railroad bar.

That's the chorus, and that's all the old cobbler knew. John says it's been so many years since he heard the ditty he can't remember back—but it's much longer than 'way back when. Be that as it may, we should like to have the rest of the song. Is there any one among our readers that knows it?

Sauganash, one of our suburban garden spots, is receiving the attention of Victor R. Carlson, the farsighted carpenter, of 6100 North Mozart street. He plans to build a snug brick and stone six room house with hot water heat, tiled kitchen and bath, mechanical refrigeration, disappearing ironing board and all the other contrivances so dear to ye missus' heart. "Today," says Vic, "we can build everything into the home except the husband."

Dr. G. H. Carey, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Carey of 1519 Fargo avenue, a graduate of Northwestern university, has accepted an appointment to the department of dentistry in the school of medicine of the Shantung Christian university in China.

Robert Idem, an elderly man of Norwegian birth, is an elevator operator in the Federal Life building at 168 North Michigan avenue—one of the unknown rank and file of a great city. So he was to us until Tuesday afternoon, when we stepped in to his lift. We carried an evening paper. "How's George?" was his greeting, and the note of solicitude in his voice was unmistakable. "About the same," we said. He shook his head. "What a pity—a finer gentleman never lived."

100 YULE TREES ARE ON WAY FOR NORTH SIDE FETE

Giant Firs Coming from Vermont Forest.

> "When Christmas time approached quite young trees were felled, sometimes trees which were neither so old nor so large as this Fir Tree, that never rested, but always wanted to go away. These young trees, which were almost the most beautiful, kept all their branches; they were put upon wagons, and horses dragged them away out of the wood.
> "'Where are they all going?' asked the Fir Tree.
> "'We know that!' chirped the Sparrows. . . . 'Oh! they are dressed up in the greatest pomp and splendor that can be imagined.'
>
> "'Perhaps I may be destined to tread this glorious path one day!' cried the Fir Tree rejoicingly. . . . 'If it were only Chistmas now. . . . If I were only among the pomp and splendor.'"
>
> —From "The Fir Tree," by Hans Christian Andersen.

BY ONEY FRED SWEET.

More than a hundred trees are now on the way from Canada and Vermont to take their place in THE TRIBUNE'S huge Christmas tree to be erected near the North avenue entrance in Lincoln park.

This announcement was made by Sam Chertok of Kramer Brothers and Mages, Christmas tree dealers, at the second round table discussion of experts on Christmas tree construction, illumination and decoration held in the English room at the Hotel Sherman.

W. R. Gray of the A. G. Zulfer company, also gave word that four trees, between thirty and forty feet in height, had been chopped down in their native Vermont and were now en route to Chicago for participation in THE TRIBUNE'S arrangement to add Yuletide cheer to folk on the north side.

Trees Here Dec. 10.

Gerhardt Meyne, head of the Meyne Construction company, again acting as chairman of the meeting of experts, advised Thomas F. Queenan, electrical engineer for the Lincoln park commissioners, that the trees

SEEK $25,000 NEXT YEAR FOR WAR MEMORIAL

Uptown Lions See Finished Plan This Week.

HARRY MEEK.
[S. Gordon Photo.]

Plans for a monument in memory of the men who sacrificed their lives in the World War, to be erected by the Uptown Lions club on the triangular plot of ground at the intersection of Broadway, Sheridan road and Montrose avenue, have been formed, Harry Meek, chairman of the committee in charge announced yesterday. A resolution for the establishment of the memorial was adopted by the club on Nov. 15, and since then the committee has been engaged in drawing up detailed plans.

The design for the memorial, which is being made by Jack Storey, will be completed this week. Members of the Lions committee in charge of the enterprise, in addition to Mr. Meek, chairman, are George F. Killinger, E. C. Harrell, Harold N. Snapp, and Edward C. Carleton, president of the club.

Seek $25,000 Next Year.

A drive for $25,000 to be raised by popular subscription has been started and will continue until Dec. 31, 1929. Mr. Snapp, who is assistant cashier of the Fidelity Trust and Savings bank, will serve as treasurer during the campaign. The Fidelity bank has been designated as depository of the funds. In the event $25,000 has not been obtained by the end of next year, all funds will be refunded to the contributors, while any surplus that may accrue from the drive will be paid over to the Cook county council of the American Legion for hospitalization purposes.

The monument, which will be erected on a plot of ground donated by the city, will be a shaft on which is mounted a miniature airplane, while on three faces of the shaft will stand replicas of a marine and a soldier in action, and a sailor standing at attention. The Lincoln park board has guaranteed perpetual care of the memorial.

Sponsor is Past President.

Mr. Meek, who originally sponsored the plan for a memorial, is the first charter member and a past president of the Uptown Lions club, and was also the founder of "Fathers' Day," held on the third Sunday of each June. He is a member of the North Shore post, American Legion.

J. H. Hudson, director of organization of the Illinois Chamber of Commerce, addressed the members of the club at the regular meeting Thursday noon, in the Sheridan Plaza hotel, Sheridan road and Wilson avenue. His subject was "Pulling Together."

RAVENSWOOD CHURCH PLANS YULE PAGEANT

Plans for the Christmas season are being made by Ravenswood Presbyterian church, 4300 North Hermitage avenue, of which the Rev. Frederick L. Selden is pastor.

Elaborate preparations are under way for its annual Christmas pageant to be presented on Dec. 22. The pageant was written and is being directed by Mrs. L. W. Almy, wife of the director of religious education of the church. She is assisted by Miss Lora M. Bell, director of music.

Among the persons who will take part are Miss Adelaide Hudson, Edward Koch, Russel Nelson, and Miss Dorothy Meader, as well as other members of the Forum and the Drama clubs of the church.

Under the auspices of the Woman's association a Christmas sale was held Thursday and Friday. The various booths containing foodstuffs and novelties reported good sales. A luncheon on Thursday and a dinner on Friday, followed by motion pictures, featured the sale.

Legal Fraternity Hears Judge David Tonight

Judge Joseph B. David will address a meeting of De Paul university, chapter of Nu Beta Epsilon, national legal fraternity, this evening at the Bismarck hotel. Reginald A. Barnett, chancellor of the chapter, has invited the alumni, members and pledges of the chapters at Northwestern university and Kent College of Law.

Checker Tournament.

A checker tournament in which children from the playgrounds of the Swift, McPherson, Hayt, and Budlong schools will participate will be started tomorrow.

BOY PICTURES WIN NORTH SIDE PRIZES

First prize of $5 in The Tribune's contest for amateur photographers was awarded this week to Mrs. Randolph Buche, 1290 Scott avenue, Hubbard Woods, for her "In the Garden" picture, showing Randolph Coleman. H. W. Vanzwoll, 6025 Kenmore avenue, won the second prize of $3 for "Dominoes," showing a game between Sheldon Vanzwoll and his dog, Rex. To Clarence J. Dolan, 1440 North Shore avenue, was awarded the third prize of $2 for a picture of his son, John Joseph Dolan, resembling a New Year card.

WHO SAID IT? When, Where and Why

The Tribune will pay $5 for each snappy quotation printed and $5 for the best answer. Send your answers and quotations to the Who Said It Editor, CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

WHO SAID:

1. Christmas comes but once a year?—Miss Warren Gaillard, box 51, Dahlonega, Ga.

2. Hold the fort, I am coming?—Catherine Hurtgen, 3811 60th street, Kenosha, Wis.

3. Once a lady, always careful?—(Repeated from two weeks ago. Does anybody know who said it?)

(Answers to the above quotations will appear two weeks from today. Answers to last week's quotations will be printed next Sunday.)

Answers

Following are the answers to quotations previously published:

Quotation—Begone, you are unfit to command. Go and put on petticoats.

Answer—During the war of 1812 Gen. William Henry Harrison was in command of the American army in the west. In May of 1813 he was besieged in Fort Meigs by a British army under Gen. Proctor and a body of Indians under Tecumseh, the great Shawnee chief who had been made a brigadier general in the British army. Some of Harrison's men were captured during a sortie and Proctor allowed the Indians to put them to death. When Tecumseh saw what was going on he rushed between his warriors and their prisoners with his tomahawk raised and stopped the slaughter. "Why do you permit this?" he demanded of Proctor. "I could not control the Indians," said Proctor. "Begone," cried Tecumseh, "you are not fit to command. Go home and put on petticoats."—Mrs. Lydia C. Gosch, 6448 North Claremont avenue, Chicago.

NOTE—Fort Meigs was built by Harrison at the Maumee rapids in northwestern Ohio in February, 1813, three months before the siege began on May 1. Proctor withdrew from the attack on May 9 after American reinforcement arrived at the fort. Tecumseh was killed at the battle of the Thames on Oct. 5, 1813, in which Harrison defeated the British.

Quotation—Off again, on again, gone again—Finnegan.

Answer—In 1897 Strickland Gillilan was city editor and most of the staff of the Richmond (Ind.) Palladium. There were a number of Irish railroad men in the town and Mr. Gillilan set to rhyme an incident related to him by his foreman, one Fitzgibbons. One day when news was scarce he handed in his verse as copy, thus arousing the ire of the printers, as it was in dialect and written on a piece of wrapping paper. The poem is entitled, "Finnigin (not Finnegan) to Flannigan."

Superintindint wuz Flannigan;
Boss av th' siction wuz Finnigin.
Whiniver th' kyars got offen th' thrack
An' muddled up things t' th' divil an' back,
Finnigin writ it t' Flannigan,
Afther th' wrick wuz all on agin.

With characteristic verbosity Finnigin evolved long reports covering a multitude of detail. This was opposed to Flannigan's standard of efficiency, so he admonished the section boss:

Don't do sich a sin agin;
Make 'em brief, Finnigin!

The next time some cars piled up, Finnigin, after clearing the wreck and starting things moving, proceeded to obey:

An' th' shmoky ol' lamp wuz burnin' bright
In Finnigin's shanty all that night.
Bilin' down his repoort, wuz Finnigin!
An' he writed this here: "Musther Flannigan:
Off agin, on agin,
Gone agin.—Finnigin.

—Lewis T. Ross, 4549 Van Buren street, Gary, Ind.

NOTE—"Finnigin to Flannigan" was published in Life later in 1897 and in 1910 was incorporated in a book of Gillilan's verse entitled "Including Finnigin." Gillilan was born in 1869 at Jackson, O. He is a well known writer and lecturer.

Quotation—I deny the allegation and defy the allegator.

Answer—Back in the '80s Edna Lyall wrote "We Two," the story of an atheist, Luke Raeburn. During a religious debate Raeburn takes his abusive opponent to task for wandering from the subject merely to indulge his personal spite. His adversary begins a vigorous protest with: "Mr. Chairman, I denounce my opponent as a liar. I deny the allegation and I scorn the allegator—"

He is interrupted by a shout of laughter, and Raeburn responds with: "My enemies have compared me with many obnoxiolus things, but never until tonight have I been called a crocodile."—John Hooks, 1325 West 72d street, Chicago.

NOTE—Edna Lyall was the pen name of Ada Ellen Bagley (1857-1903), an English novelist. "We Two" was published in 1884. Whether the expression originated with the author is difficult to determine. Other readers have attributed it to David Wilmot of Pennsylvania; John Finerty, former Chicago politician; and Edward Harrigan, author and comedian, who used the line in a comedy produced at the Theater Comique in New York City in 1878.

Loyola Chorus to Give Cantata Next Sunday

Rehearsals are being held daily by Loyola University Choral society for Maunder's cantata, "Bethlehem," which the society will present next Sunday night, Dec. 16, at the St. Ignatius auditorium, Loyola and Glenwood avenues.

Prize Offer for Amateur Photographers

The Metropolitan department of The Tribune will pay $5 each week for the best photograph taken by an amateur. It will pay $3 for the second best and $2 for the third.

Any scene, exterior or interior, around the home, may be entered in the contest; the boys building a snow fort in the back yard or baby taking his first steps; the old, gnarled oak against the gray skies of autumn, or an attractive nook in the living room.

Pictures should be addressed to the Metropolitan Editor of The Tribune Photo Contest. The name and address of the photographer should be written plainly on the back of the print, as well as the names of all persons in the picture. The contest is open only to amateurs and the editor will be the final judge of all entries. Theme, treatment, and clearness of the print will be taken into consideration.

No pictures will be returned.

Seek to Protect Pupils at Crowded Intersection

Le Moyne Parent-Teacher association is seeking to relieve the congestion at the intersection of Halsted street and Waveland avenue, which, its members declare, endangers the lives of the children attending the Le Moyne school, 851 Waveland avenue. Mrs. F. C. Dobson, president of the organization, reports that the organization now has 700 paid memberships, the largest number on record.

READY TO PRESS FINAL DEMAND FOR NEW SCHOOL

Arcadia Terrace Group to See Caldwell Thursday.

A committee under the leadership of James N. Kearns, president of the Arcadia Terrace Improvement association, and Ald. A. K. Mose of the 50th ward, representing the Arcadia Terrace district, will interview H. Wallace Caldwell, president of the board of education, Thursday, to endeavor to reach a definite decision concerning a school for the community. A petition containing the names of 2,500 residents of the Arcadia Terrace district will be brought to the attention of the school board president.

Other members of the committee are F. W. Wedgeworth, George Schmidt, A. Kruze, John Torp, Harry Moran and Henry Kurtz, former president of the association.

Cite Need of 500 Children.

Reasons for the urgent request being made for a new school in the area are outlined in the petition. It points out that there are more than 500 children of school age who are compelled to cross dangerous streets to attend greatly overcrowded schools outside of the district.

Mr. Kearns, president of the association, explained that there is not a safe outlet from the district on any side. The area is bounded by Western avenue on the east, Bryn Mawr avenues on the south, Lincoln avenue on the west and south and Peterson avenue on the north. The Rosehill cemetery prevents an outlet on the east, the president continued, while Peterson and Lincoln avenues are to be widened next year, which will result in dangerous crossings for the children. Bryn Mawr avenue is already a wide thoroughfare.

Crowded Schools Now Used.

The schools outside of the district that the students are required to attend are the De Witt Clinton, at Fairfield and Glenlake avenues, and the portable schools at Ardmore and Maplewood avenues. The Clinton school is greatly overcrowded, Mr. Kearns declared.

The petition, requesting consideration from the school authorities, has been circulated throughout the district during the last 10 days, following the report of Mr. Wedgeworth, financial secretary of the association, who obtained preliminary interviews from school officials. The result of his meetings disclosed that the school board was not averse to erecting schools on small tracts of land when such schools are needed. Twenty members of the association were in charge of circulating the petition.

North Shore Star Election.

North Shore Star will hold election of officers Thursday at the annual meeting in the Uptown temple, 941 Lawrence avenue.

WELLES PARK CLUB PLANS PROGRAMS

Activities for the coming months were planned at a meeting of the board of directors of the Welles Park Woman's club Tuesday at the home of Mrs. M. J. Klein, 2101 Lawrence avenue. VOICE of the NORTH SIDE

PRAISE FOR PARK BOARD.

Chicago, Nov. 27.—As a resident of Rogers Park I would like to take this means of commending the Ridge Park board on its contemplated plan for the establishment of small parks in the district. This community has long felt the need of more park facilities, particularly for the use of mothers and children in the warmer months, when daily airings of the infants is most essential.

The present facilities are totally inadequate, it being necessary to make use of the lake shore parks or the park at Rockwell and Lunt avenues. The parks along the shore are not suitable for this purpose, due to the great number of bathers in the summer months, while Indian Boundary park is not convenient to all residents of Rogers Park.

A plan whereby a small park might be established in each community of a given size seems most logical to me. Public spirited business men and improvement associations who are aiding the park commissioners in this endeavor are also worthy of applause.

GIVE IT A TRY.

Chicago, Dec. 3.—Recently, I have noticed in the Metropolitan section of THE TRIBUNE many items of interest—accounts of meetings of neighborhood clubs and organizations, etc., accompanied by photographs—and have wondered why our group has been overlooked. No reporter has happened to come our way. Should I write the editor of the Metropolitan section advising him of our activities?

CHURCH IS UP ON STILTS WAITING FOR MOVING MAN

Our Lady of Lourdes to Be Enlarged.

While Our Lady of Lourdes church, at Ashland and Leland avenues, is up on stilts ready to be moved across the street, services are being held by the Rev. Fr. J. M. Scanlon in the Rainbo auditorium.

REV. FR. SCANLON.

The historic old frame building, which housed the church in former days has been torn down to make way for the moving of the comparatively new structure which has been occupied since the year 1915.

The old building was bought in 1889 from the Chicago and North Western railroad and for a long time was the only Catholic church between Belmont and Calvary. The parish school was built in 1894 by the Rev. Fr. Francis M. Perry, and the new church was erected in 1914-'15 by Father Perry and Father Scanlon. Eight pastorates have branched out from it in these 39 years of its existence.

Church to Be Enlarged.

The church now seats 800 people, but in the process of moving it will be cut in half crosswise and lengthened by thirty feet to give it a capacity of 1,200. The move was forced by the widening of Ashland avenue at that point, which meant either allowing ten feet to be cut off the front of it or finding another location.

The parish owned the property on which the old church stood and bought lots south of it on Ashland. When the church is moved it will be turned halfway around to face on Leland avenue, where it now fronts on Ashland avenue.

The many and varied activities of the parishioners have not been curtailed by the temporary lack of a church. Besides the Sunday meetings at the Rainbo, all social activities and day services are held in the parish school.

Interest in Athletics.

Besides their sodalities, Saint Aloysius for boys, Saint Agnes for girls, the Blessed Virgin Sodality for young women and the Holy Family Sodality for married women, the church has a flourishing woman's club, and junior and senior Holy Name societies.

Their various athletic teams, football, baseball and basketball are entered in the church league. The choirs, directed by Mrs. Eheman, are well known throughout the city. Besides the mixed group of fifty voices there are two boys' choirs.

It is hoped that the church will be ready for reoccupancy sometime in the spring.

EVANSTON PLAY PROGRAM DRAWS EYES OF WORLD

Annual Attendance Over a Million.

national playground staff organizer, who had just completed two years work throughout the southern states and was then continuing his work in Blytheville, Ark. The beginning was small, with the superintendent doing most of the organization work under the direction of the parks and playgrounds committee and the commissioner of public works.

However, the popularity of the superintendent and his work quickly flourished so that the latest annual report of the bureau shows that he has a staff of fifty-two trained workers on full or part time.

JOSEPHINE COX.
[John D. Jones Photo]

[John D. Jones Photo]

Chief among those assistants are Charles T. Byrnes, director of men's and boys' activities, and Miss Josephine Cox, director of women's and girls' activities. There are also an office secretary, two assistant directors, an art director, an athletic supervisor, and another assigned to the handling of supplies and equipment, and the junior police activities. There is also a trained man and woman supervisor at each of the thirteen public parks and playgrounds during the summer months.

Attendance Totals 1,105,136.

This staff, according to the annual report, supervised the activities of 1,105,136 children and adults in the year around program of activities under six general classifications:

1. Summer playgrounds.
2. After school activities.
3. Boys' and girls' clubs.
4. Water sports and bathing beaches.
5. Adult recreation and training.
6. Outdoor winter sports.

During the summer period of eleven weeks there was a total of 251,211 children in attendance, from 4 years to 18 years old.

Children's athletics and sports included: playground ball, volley ball, horseshoes; newcomb, roller skating, bicycle races, coaster wagon races, scooter races, athletic badge tests, rope skipping, stilt walking, water carnival, mumblepeg contest, O'Leary contest, junior Olympics, Fourth of July celebration, rifle, archery.

Aesthetic activities included: poster making, pet shows, harmonica clubs, ukulele clubs, harmony clubs, story telling, story dramatization, health and safety plays, folk dancing, junior press activities, junior police activities, playground pageants, neighborhood celebrations, flower shows, and the closing circus for the season.

ANSHE EMES TO HOLD CHANUKAH PROGRAM TODAY

Celebration of Chanukah, or the feast of dedication, will take place this afternoon at Congregation Anshe Emes temple, Pine Grove avenue and Grace street. There will be presented plays and entertainment. This will be followed by the showing of films of the Holy Land, taken by Rabbi Philip A. Langh during his recent trip to Palestine and Egypt. Guests will include children of the north side.

Chanukah, or the feast of dedication, is being observed all week. It commemorates the victory of Judas Maccabbeus, who in the year 165, before the common era, freed Palestine from the oppression of the Syrians and rededicated the holy temple at Jerusalem.

The principal observance is the kindling of the lights of the menorah, or eight branched candlesticks. One flame is lit on the first night, and one is added each night, until on the last night, the menorah is ablaze with eight flames, hence another name by which the festival is also known, the feast of lights.

Rogers Park Realty Board Asks Sewers and Paving

Rogers Park Real Estate board has been circulating a petition requesting the construction of new sewers for the district east of Clark street and between Lawrence avenue and the city limits. The board is also urging the paving of streets in the Edgewater and Rogers Park districts before the laying of the new sewers. The petition has been indorsed by ten leading banks of the district.

100 YULE TREES ARE ON WAY FOR NORTH SIDE FETE

Giant Firs Are Coming from Vermont.

would be on the selected spot in Lincoln park by Dec. 10 ready for amalgamation into the one huge tree sixty-five feet high.

Several new faces were to be seen in the group at this week's Christmas tree discussion: Al Mages, Sam Chertok, and W. R. Gray, tree men; R. L. Bard of the Commonwealth Edison company; H. H. Lovell of the Illinois Bell Telephone company; C. W. Arnum of the Mutual Novelty Manufacturing company, and A. M. Ryckoff of the North Shore park district.

Mr. Lovell was not to be baffled by any problems of construction, for he has erected similar trees in Chicago for many years. He gave assurance that he would get busy with the ladder scaffolding and other requirements as soon as the trees were delivered.

Novel Decorations Shown.

Mr. Arnum brought along an assortment of icicle spangles which he said were the "life of a tree," reflecting colored lights like so many mirrors and giving the effect of thousands of stars.

N. J. Pausback of the Pausback Scenery company presented a display of sample ornaments designed to meet the requirements of trees of gigantic size. Among these was a modern idea in spangles, some of them ten inches in diameter and of various shapes and colors. Another decorative feature consisted of metal balls in all colors and sizes, each covered with silver sparklers.

J. F. Fisher of J. F. Fisher & Co., electrical contractors, held that, while he wishes to see this year's trees surpass all previous efforts in Christmas tree lighting and decoration, he also hoped to see it embody the features associated with the old-fashioned Christmas tree.

Three Other Trees.

In connection with the social programs at the tree Chairman Meyne suggested that it would be a splendid idea if the organizations — lodge, church, school, park playgrounds, etc. —that gather to sing carols place the pennants of their organizations so that they form a circle about the tree.

There are to be three other TRIBUNE Christmas trees—one in Grant park, one in the Midway plaisance, and one in Garfield park.

"Beau Brummel" to Strut His Stuff This Week at Senn High

George IV. was prince of Wales and Beau Brummel was prince of fashion and Wales bowed to him on all matters of clothes and propriety. The play shows the Beau's decline and final death in a dingy garret.

The dramatics class at Senn is divided into two groups—the Players, under Miss Tonnesen, and the Workers, under Miss Johanna Doniat.

The Players, as their name suggests, study drama from the acting angle and take parts in the plays given by the class twice each year. The Workers take charge of the production end, from designing scenery and costumes to scene shifting and the handling of lighting.

Have to Perfect Their Speech.

The play chosen for this semester was a particularly difficult one for both groups. The Players, besides having to learn the manners and idiosyncrasies of the period, had to perfect in some cases Irish and cockney dialects as well as the so very proper "dialect" of your true Englishman.

The Workers had to ferret out the authentic costumes of the time, the type of furniture and interior decoration used, along with their ordinary duties.

Senn lacks an asbestos curtain, so all scenery must be fireproof. With this in mind, the workers have concocted a mixture of asbestos and silicate of soda, which is daubed on screens and painted green for their trees and shrubbery. Some of them are made in geometrical designs, while others are rounded off.

The five different sets are so arranged that scenes may be shifted in less than five minutes by putting in an alcove where a door had been or transposing a fireplace and a window.

Even the drapes are reversible, the green ones used in Beau's dressing room being changed to rose colored ones for the ball scene by merely turning them around.

Three Girls Design Costumes.

Joe Futter is general stage manager for the production, assisted by Mary Ofweiler and Walter Larson. Olive Ainbinder, Violet Schwarz, and Evelyn Albert are in charge of the designing of costumes. Henry Glazer is managing the business end and Allen Julin is public relations man.

Two entirely different casts have been chosen by Miss Tonnesen to enact the play, one for Thursday night and one for Friday.

Don Briggs takes the part of the Beau on Thursday, with Henrietta Mangrum as Marianna, Marjory Replogle as Mrs. St. Aubyn, Clara Friend as the duchess of Farthingale, and Marion Burch as Mortimer, the loyal valet.

The same rôles are taken the next night by Sidney Slon, Carol Fried, Ernegene Cole, Charlotte Epple, and Ed Bieninghoven.

Both groups of the class witnessed a private showing of John Barrymore's movie of "Beau Brummel" as an aid in getting the atmosphere of the period as well as for inspiration for their own rendition.

The giving of their semester play is the high point in the activities of both sections of the class, enabling them to put into practice the theories they have worked out and to see in some practical way the goal of their apprenticeship in stage matters.

SPRING COMING; GARDENING CLUB IS ORGANIZED

In order to be fully organized before planting time in the spring a number of residents in the North Town district have organized the North Town Garden club, under the leadership of C. P. Stowell, landscape gardener.

The success of a similar organization in the Arcadia Terrace district made residents of North Town eager to take part in a movement that will aid them in the cultivation of their own gardens and the beautifying of the neighborhood. Mr. Stowell stresses the fact that winter is the time to lay the foundations for the successful garden of the spring and summer.

The last meeting of the club was held Wednesday, at which time three garden experts gave timely advice on the care of flowers. August Koch, garden expert of the Garfield park conservatory, has offered his services and advice to the club and will answer in writing any queries made on the subject of gardening.

Several individuals and merchants have already donated prizes, which are to be awarded to the owners of the best gardens in next summer's contest.

Wilmette Woman's Club Hears Address on Orient

At the Thursday morning meeting of the Wilmette Woman's club Mrs. Marguerite Harmon Bro., authority on the orient, spoke on "The Leavening Process of Education in China." Mrs. Bro and her husband spent six years in China. At one time Mr. Bro was principal of a large school for boys. "Porgy," the current play by Dorothy and Du Bose Heyward, was discussed during the drama hour. Mrs. George Lamb led the discussion. Mrs. Esther L. Harcourt, formerly of Northwestern's School of Speech, gave a dramatis reading from Booth Tarkington's "Monsieur Beaucaire," followed by Miss Phyllis Feingold, who gave several violin selections.

Mrs. Bessie Stuart Smith, past national vice president of the auxiliary and present membership chairman of the central area, upon her return from national executive committee meeting of the auxiliary at Indianapolis, Wednesday, reported that the Illinois auxiliary has 4,000 paid-up members for 1929, and it is the intention of state and county auxiliary officers to have Illinois reach the 100 per cent mark before the first of January.

Civil Service post, No. 678, through Michael J. Foley, adjutant, 406 City hall, gives notice that all ex-service men having civil service standing are invited to investigate the personnel of the post. The officers who will command the post for 1929, and who will be installed Tuesday, are: James E. Mangan, commander; John C. O'Brien, John F. Egan and Carl W. Strassburger, vice commanders; Vincent F. J. Schimanek, finance officer; John W. Durkin, sergeant-at-arms, and Michael J. Foley, adjutant.

Charles Levinson, past commander, and George Sugarman, post judge advocate, are reported to have won the nail driving contest of post members of Rogers Park post, No. 108, during the sojourn of post members at the CHICAGO TRIBUNE-Forty and Eight Convalescent camp last Sunday, when the Rogers Park boys inclosed McCormick house for the winter.

Under the direction of Fred W. Zei, commander, Lincoln Park post, No. 481, has an initiatory team which will initiate new members into American Legion posts throughout Cook county during the winter months. New members of Allen Federal post, No. 435, were the first legionnaires to view the work of the new degree team.

◆

Niles Township post, No. 134, formerly Morton Grove post, will install its newly elected officers at 7:30 o'clock Tuesday evening, following a dinner in the House of Niles, at Niles, Ill. The new officers are: Arnold J. Lindemann, commander; Dr. J. J. Mussil, Chester Mills, and Frank M. Boemmels, vice commanders; Harold W. Klehm, adjutant; B. H. Dahlwik, finance officer; Fred Huckelberry, chaplain; Chris Moeller, sergeant-at-arms; R. W. Nelson, historian; Martin Tierney, delegate, and Charles Wooster, judge advocate.

Ravenswood post, No. 149, is being represented at the Commanders' and Adjutants' conference at Bloomington today by a large delegation of post members and members of the auxiliary unit.

The 1929 officers of the auxiliary unit of Harold A. Taylor post, No. 47, are: Mrs. Mabel Staff, president; Mrs. Charlotte Toelcke, and Mrs. Ruth McIlveen, vice presidents; Miss Louise Cavanaugh, secretary; Mrs. Mary Enright, treasurer; Mrs. Mary McBride, chaplain; Mrs. Mary McNamara, Mrs. Stella Ries, sergeant at arms, and Mrs. Lila Kirby, assistant sergeant at arms.

The members of Van Buren post, No. 401, are organizing a drum and bugle corps. Commander Leon Hanna, D. S. C., announced the corps will be ready to play in the Memorial day parade.

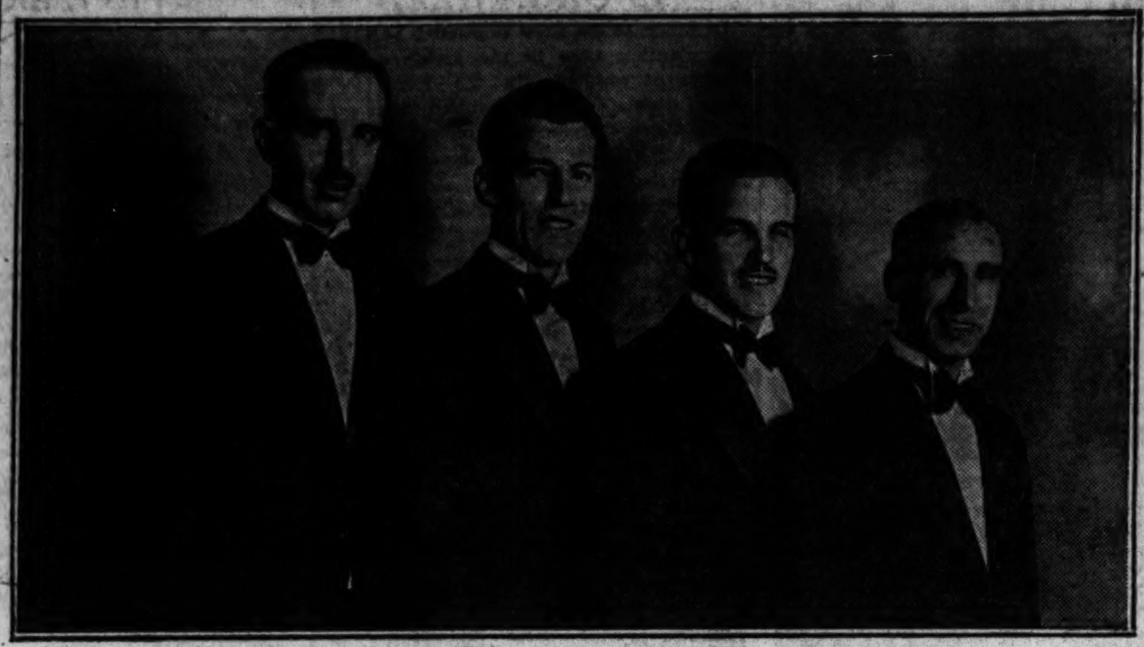
To the winner of the membership contest between Chicago Police post, No. 207, and Harold A. Taylor post, No. 47, Robert E. Casey, commander of the first district, has offered a prize. The race will last until time for the Rock Island convention and is on a gross membership basis.

THE FOUR LEGIONNAIRES



This quartet, known from coast to coast, has the distinction of being the official quartet of the Department of Illinois American Legion, as well as the National American Legion quartet. At the national convention held at Omaha in 1925 and at Philadelphia in 1926, Paris, 1927, and San Antonio, 1928, the quartet won the first prize in competition with other quartets from all over the country. The quartet is composed of Albert E. Price, tenor and past commander of Roseland post, No. 49; Herbert H. Blocker, second tenor, of Chicago Heights post, No. 131; Roland C. Osborn, baritone, of Roseland post, No. 49; Saul B. Kramer, bass, and past commander of Eaton-Priddy post, No. 111. The boys have done unusual work in building up the Illinois department of the American Legion.

Oldest Lutheran Church Observes 85th Birthday

The eighty-fifth anniversary of the founding of St. Paul's Lutheran church at 2335 Orchard street, the oldest Lutheran church in Chicago, was celebrated last Sunday with special services. The Little Symphony orchestra and an augmented choir played at the 10:30 services. Dr. D. Irion of Elmhurst and Dr. Louis W. Goebel of Chicago were the speakers.

Do You Know These Titles?

How much do you know about titles? If you were introduced to a señora and to a señorita, could you identify the unmarried one? This quiz is composed of fifty questions on titles of all sorts. Many of the interesting ones, abolished after the war, are restored in this quiz. Where the question asks the title of the ruler of a country which is now a republic, the old imperial title is the answer desired.

Credit yourself with two points for each correct answer. Then a score of 70 is fair, 80 is good, 90 is excellent, and if you score 100 you are a King of Quizzes!

ADOLPH QUASTHOFF, the florist, Mrs. Quasthoff, their son, Carl, and their daughter, Louise, have returned to their home at 5930 North Hermitage avenue, after a five months' tour of Cuba, the Canary islands and Europe, and report that everything the steamship folders say is true and that the trip was a success scenically and financially. "Did we have a good time? I'll say," echoed Mr. Quasthoff. "That's what we were in quest of."

Mr. and Mrs. Lester J. Lots of whoopee was in order, and every one had a good time. Brides these days surely can make lovely ice box cakes." That last is somewhat cryptic, but what follows isn't: "Thanks! They're ardent followers of yours and will grin with gusto over this if you've any room at all." Give it the best room we've got, Mr. Printer.

BOYS TO HOLD SPLASH PARTY FOR YULE FUND

The younger set around Chicago likes its swimming and it does not care to wait from season to season for the ice to disappear from Lake Michigan or even for the chill to depart. Alpha chapter of Phi Tau fraternity, an organization of boys of the northwest side, will give a splash party at the New Lawrence hotel at 7:30 Tuesday evening. Tickets are priced at 75 cents and all money above the expenses of the party will be turned into the Christmas charity fund of the fraternity, it was announced.

S. Robert Rauwolf, president of the fraternity, 3511 North Leavitt street, is handling orders for tickets.

13,000 YOUTHS WILL TAKE PART IN SCOUT SHOW

Jamboree to Be Held on Friday and Saturday.

The entire membership of the Chicago council of Boy Scouts, numbering more than 13,000, will participate in a spectacular jamboree Friday and Saturday nights at the Coliseum as a climax to the roundup that has been in progress since Oct. 1. An elaborate program of fourteen numbers has been arranged for the celebration, which more than 10,000 spectators are expected to attend. Rehearsals for the various acts are now being held in all parts of the city.

Inasmuch as the Chicago council is the largest in the world, the event is attracting not only national but international interest. Officers of the national council and local council, headed by Walter W. Head, national president of the Boy Scouts of America, and James E. West, chief scout executive of the national council, will attend the show.

Roundup Has Double Purpose.

The scout roundup idea was conceived for a twofold purpose: First, to fill up the ranks of the troops by "rounding up" new members. Secondly, it was held to encourage all members to advance a rank—tenderfeet to second class scouts, and second class scouts to the first class ranking.

In former years the membership of the Chicago council has shown a decrease during the winter months. That the roundup has been successful is indicated by the report of scout officials that more than 2,000 new scouts have been registered and that the total registration at present shows an increase of 700 members over any previous record. Ranking of the scouts has also increased to a point unequaled in former years, with 20 per cent of the total membership listed as first class scouts, 30 per cent as second class scouts, and the remainder as tenderfeet.

The roundup, which ended today, was so named to win the interest of the scouts; the setting of the western roundup was adopted. Scouts became cowpunchers, troops became ranch outfits, troop masters were ranch foremen, and the district and city chairmen were ranch and roundup bosses.

Pageant to Show Background.

The jamboree will be opened at 7:45 o'clock Friday and Saturday nights with a blare of trumpets announcing the entry of Mr. West and Mr. Head, accompanied by members of the Chicago council executive board. The first scene will be a pageant depicting "The Evolution of Scouting," unfolding by chapters the development from the time of the first crusaders, through the various stages of the knights of old, pilgrims, pioneers, minute men, the nation's defenders in the civil war, men of San Juan hill, the world war sailor and doughboy, and finally the scout of today.

Following this presentation, the grand entry of nearly 14,000 Boy Scouts will take place. In columns of fours, with flags flying and bands playing, the scouts will pour into the arena from three entrances. At a signal the army will rush from the arena to their seats.

The next act will be the investiture by the chief executive or the national president of all new scouts enrolled during the roundup. This will be followed by the presentation of awards to scouts who have advanced in ranking.

Will Demonstrate Work.

The remaining scenes will be demonstrations or exhibitions of scouting, including firemanship, first aid demonstrations, pioneering, sea scouting and other typical scout accomplishments. Two other pageants depicting the "Massacre of Fort Dearborn" and "The Scout Laws" will be given. The jamboree will be brought to a close with a grand finale showing the scouts of all nations and how they are bound together with brotherhood and friendliness. This part of the program is being arranged by the international scout bureau.

Alfred W. Stern is general chairman in charge of the show. He is assisted by the following ranch bosses: I. B. Yates, north shore ranch; Abe Jaffe, west side ranch; Donald Durfey, Calumet ranch; Lloyd Rohrke, south central ranch; R. L. Van Horn, south shore ranch; Henry Lasco, northwest ranch; R. E. Mayzack, southwest ranch, and R. A. Lucas, the Douglas ranch boss.

The roundup organization was headed by Gen. LeRoy T. Steward, chief scout of the Chicago council; Franklin Bradley, scout commissioner; Maurice H. Needham, publicity chairman; J. H. Douglas Jr., top-rider and chairman of the committee, and Mr. Stern.

OUTLINES VALUE OF SMALL PARKS TO COMMUNITIES

Secretary Shows 250,000 Visit North Side Spots.

Only a relatively small percentage of Chicago residents realize the importance of small parks in the life of people within the park communities, Carlos Ames, secretary of the Lincoln park commission, declares. Mr. Ames points out that although the large parks offer to the visitors more of a spectacle in their extensiveness and completeness, the recreation and play of the public making use of the facilities in these large parks is promiscuous, in that the great number of participants prevents any form of direct and personal supervision.

In the small parks it is possible to effect a more direct contact between the park supervisors and the visitors. The diversity of purposes for which the park buildings are utilized and the number of persons making use of the facilities are shown in a chart maintained by officials at each of the parks.

Operates Six Small Parks.

The Lincoln park commissioners have jurisdiction over six small parks, Chase, Hamlin, Stanton, Seward, Welles parks, and Lake Shore playground. Of this group Hamlin park is the largest and has the finest and most complete park house.

A chart on the activities at Hamlin park, just completed, illustrates the many purposes for which the park house will be used during December. Facilities in the building include two club rooms and two gymnasiums, one each for the men and the women, a playroom, an assembly hall, library and baby clinic.

The gymnasiums, the chart shows, have been engaged for nearly every hour during the day by organizations holding weekly meetings, including athletic clubs, civic clubs, fraternities, men's and women's athletic teams of various business and manufacturing concerns and other groups. In addition there are regular classes conducted by the park athletic supervisors. Twenty-one other organizations have contracted for the use of the gymnasiums during open hours in the schedule.

Club Meetings Every Day.

The club rooms are always in use, several organizations meeting in each of the rooms every day. For the month of December the chart shows that eighty-six organizations have reserved space for meetings. Various uses are made of the assembly hall. At the time the chart was drawn up nineteen activities were scheduled for the month, including seven Christmas parties, five dances, four orchestra rehearsals, one drama rehearsal, one piano recital, and an amateur show.

The baby clinic is open to mothers and infants on week days from 9 o'clock in the morning until 1 o'clock in the afternoon. Nurses and physicians give medical advice and instruction in the care of the babies. The library and playroom are available to the public at all times.

All of these facilities and the welfare work, including the baby clinic are free of charge to any resident of the community and are maintained by the park board.

Although the Lincoln park small park system is the smallest in the city, those of the west and south park commissions being greatest in number and facilities, officials of the north side park estimate that more than 250,000 persons make use of the six small parks each month.

Manas Torcon Is Elected North Shore Kiwanis Head

Manas Torcon was elected president of the North Shore Kiwanis club at the meeting of the organization Tuesday noon. Other officers selected for the coming year are Frank Wager, vice president; Leo Krueger, treasurer, and, as trustees, Robert A. Leitz, Otto Lorenz, Dewey Lutes, and Jack Randolph. Leland G. Hedges is retiring president of the club, which meets each week at the Chelsea hotel, Wilson avenue, near Sheridan road.

Dramatic Club to Give Play at Sanitarium

"Too Much Brown," a three act comedy, will be presented by "The 13 club," composed of thirteen young men of the the north and the northwest sides, next Saturday evening at the Chicago Tuberculosis institute at Naperville.

MISS MARIE WESTREY.

MISS HELEN BENINGHOFF.

The play has already been presented twice during the last week: On Wednesday at the St. Alphonsus athenaeum, when the general public was admitted, and on Friday before patients of the Chicago Tuberculosis sanitarium at Bryn Mawr and Crawford avenues.

Dramatic Club a Subsidiary.

Because the charter of "The 13 club" states that at no time will more than thirteen members be on the roster, a subsidiary dramatic club was formed so that plays in which both young men and women took part could be presented for charitable purposes.

Two plays a year are produced, one publicly to raise funds to pay expenses for the philanthropic presentations. Usually the plays are enacted at two or more hospitals.

H. Thomas Downing plays a principal rôle in "Too Much Brown." Joseph Murphy, who has acted in numerous amateur plays and, although rehearsing for the lead in "The Whole Town's Talking," presented recently by the Lake View High School Alumni association, when rehearsals for "The 13 club's" play were taking place, consented to undertake an important rôle in "Too Much Brown." Miss Helen Beninghoff and Miss Marie Westrey are playing principal feminine rôles.

Directed by D. M. Henderson.

Miss Theresa Deyette, Miss Margaret Cripe, Herbert Piske, Sam Vrablik and Alfred Robitaille are also in the cast. D. M. Henderson is the director.

Officers of the club are: [illegible] Beninghoff, president; Edwin [illegible], vice president, and H. Thomas Downing secretary and treasurer.

HIBBARD HIGH GROUPS HOLD JOINT FROLIC

Three hundred students of the Hibbard Junior high school, 3244 Ainslie street, took part in a frolic held in the auditorium of the school Wednesday afternoon and evening and Thursday evening. Those attending included members of the Girls' Glee club, Boys' Glee club, Harmonica club, Dancing club, Tumbling club, Needlework club, the Campfire Girls' club, Drum and Bugle corps and the orchestra.

The program consisted of ten scenes. Members of the faculty, who are sponsors of the various clubs and directed the frolic, were Catharine Landrigan, Alice Foy, Helen McBride, James A. Mason, Imogene C. Chandler, Dorothea D. Lammers, Mary H. Cleary, Lulu M. Parsons, and Samuel Edelcup.

N.U. DRAMA GROUP OFFERS PLAY IN CHINESE STYLE

"Little New Moon" to Be Staged This Week.

The Playshop, one of the producing units of the Northwestern university theater, is to produce a play called "Little New Moon" Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday evenings. The play was written by Mrs. Alice C. D. Riley, 1822 Sheridan road, Evanston, in Prof. T. B. Hinckley's class in playwriting in the school of speech, and is being produced largely by members of the university's staffs, working in cooperation with a number of townspeople.

The play is being done somewhat after the manner of the Chinese theater, with moderations necessary to make it acceptable to an American audience. It is being directed by Mrs. Charlotte Chorpenning of the school of speech, who is working in conjunction with the author to derive the best results. Dean Farnsworth, also of the school of speech, is doing the sets and staging the play.

Music Adapted to Play.

All Chinese drama has lyric episodes with a mixture of song and dialogue that give a semblance of our light opera. Since it is impossible to have music written expressly for the play because of the expense, the producers must use music already written and adapt it to the scenes. The entrance and dance effects are drawn from records of Rimsky-Korsakov, Cui, Glaznounow, Kreisler, and others. Two records of real Chinese music by a Chinese orchestra lend effectiveness to the general atmosphere.

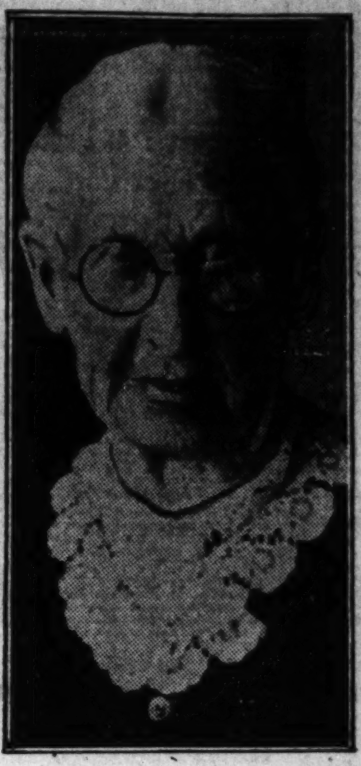
The love song has been set by Dorothy Riley Brown, who has also arranged a Chinese melody for the juggler's black magic. Further effects are produced by drums, an antique temple gong, and several smaller gongs. The work of the orchestra is under the direction of Mrs. Charles Max App of Evanston and Ralph Vorhis of the school of speech.

Figures in Production.

Key Wing, the heroine, and Prince Ling Wang, the hero, are played by Mrs. Ruth Broan Farnsworth and Barker Herr, respectively. Other important parts are being played by Sidney Spayde, J. Lincoln Gibson, and Wesley N. Yates. Evanston and Wilmette people who are working on the production are Mr. and Mrs. Charles Henderson, Wilmette, who are in the cast; Miss E. Louise Guernsey, who has done some creditable work in designing the costumes, which carry authentic Chinese designs; Mrs. Theresa Thomas, Evanston, who has turned her home over to the making of costumes; Ralph Skelton, Chicago, who is painting the more intricate designs on the costumes, and Mrs. Schultz Kranz, who is directing the dances. The dances are arranged by James Griffin, director of the Uptown theater and teacher of dancing, and Miss Agnes Beesmayer, physical director at New Trier High school.

The school of speech theater, another of the producing groups of the university theater, produced "Liliom," by Franz Molnar, last Thursday and Friday evenings at Annie May Swift hall on the Northwestern university campus.

TRAVELER



The fact that she is 92 years old does not keep Mrs. Mary J. Boyer at her home in New Castle, Pa. Recently she journeyed to Chicago to celebrate her birthday at the home of a daughter.

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

MAKES LONG TRIP TO CELEBRATE 92D BIRTHDAY

Mrs. Mary J. Boyer, 92 years old, recently made the trip from New Castle, Pa., to Chicago to spend her birthday anniversary with one of her daughters, Mrs. J. A. Huffman, 1435 Winona avenue. Mrs. Boyer, who will spend the winter in Chicago, has traveled extensively, having visited nearly every state in the Union, and until the last few years has made many of her travels unescorted.

Mother of nine children, the oldest of whom is 70 and the youngest 50, Mrs. Boyer has resided a greater part of her life in Pennsylvania, where she was born and educated. She was married in 1855.

Mrs. Boyer has 24 grandchildren, numerous great-grandchildren, and one great-great-grandchild. She regretted that in coming to Chicago on Nov. 3 she was unable to cast her ballot for Herbert Hoover, whom she greatly admires.

Parent-Teacher Group to Give Benefit Party

Members of the Robert Morris Parent-Teachers' association will be entertained by a play next Friday evening given in the school auditorium, Wilton and Barry streets. After the performance, women of the organization will serve refreshments, the proceeds to be used for a Christmas party which the association is sponsoring for children of the neighborhood. Mrs. Burt L. Erickson, 830 Oakdale, is president; Mrs. Moyne Myers, 2913 Burling street, vice president; and Mrs. George T. Geis, 3016 Seminary avenue, is secretary-treasurer of the association.

4 SISTERHOODS HEAR SPEECH ON FUTURE OF JEWS

"The Jewish Future in America" was the subject of an address by Dr. Solomon Freehof at the "Reciprocity day" program of the Beth Israel, Mizpah, North Shore Congregation Israel, and Sholom Temple sisterhoods, held at Temple Mizpah Tuesday afternoon.

Invocation by Rabbi Jacob Singer opened the program. An organ prelude, "Pomp and Circumstance," was played by Mrs. E. Berkenstadt Elgar. Greetings were extended by Mrs. S. B. Komaiko, president, Women of Mizpah; Rabbi Abram Hirschberg, Temple Sholom; Rabbi Felix A. Levy, Temple Emanuel; Rabbi S. Felix Mendelsohn.

Mrs. Otto Roth sang several vocal selections. Mrs. George G. Fox, president of the Illinois State Federation of Temple Sisterhoods, and Mrs. Harry J. Myerson, president of the conference of Jewish women's organizations, gave brief talks. Rabbi Louis Kopold pronounced the benediction.

DRAMATIC CLASS OF WALLER HIGH TO PRESENT PLAY

The dramatics class of Waller High school, 2007 Orchard street, will present "The Arrival of Kitty," by Norman Swartout, next Friday evening at St. Alphonsus athenæum, 1431 Wellington avenue.

Principal rôles will be taken by Miss Kathleen Burke, Miss Evelyn Gonnerman, Miss Dorothy Shuette, Lawrence Brewer, Frank Flannery, and Fred Hoddenbach.

The play is given under the direction of Miss Helene Smith and under the supervision of the dramatics teacher, Miss Ethel M. Ellis. Frank Flannery is business manager.

CLUB LEADER

MRS. CYRUS LOGAN GARNETT

Augna Enters, talented young dance-mime, is to give a program for the Drama club of Evanston at the Evanston Country club on Thursday next. Miss Enters presents compositions in dance forms. She not only arranges her dances: she designs and executes her brilliant costumes. Mrs. Cyrus Logan Garnett is president of the club.

THE CHUCKLE COLUMN

CHUCKLES WANTED.

The Tribune wants some smiles, chuckles, and hearty laughs for this column from the high school students of Chicago. Two dollars will be paid for each original contribution, joke, jingle, verse, or anecdote. Address them to the Metropolitan editor of The Tribune, Tribune Tower, Chicago.

Wife—I think men should share the housework with their wives.

Modern Hubby—Yes, I hate to see those selfish husbands who want to do it all themselves.

LILLIAN ROTTENBERG,
1947 S. Troy street.

Maid—The furniture man is here.

Mistress—I'll see him in a minute. Tell him to take a chair.

Maid—I did, but he said he would start with the piano and the radio.

WALTER MAYWALD,
5682 Emerald avenue.

Canvasser—Madam, will you donate something to the new hospital?

Mrs. Clancy (who has just had an argument)—Well, ye might take a look at Clancy. Maybe he'll do.

MRS. LOUIS SANGORRA,
2846 Arthington street.

Student—Why didn't you start for the whole show?

Roommate—Program said act 3 same as act 1.

HAROLD SINCLAIR,
939 North Hamlin avenue.

High School Graduate—Will you pay me what I'm worth?

Employer—I'll do better than that. I'll give you a small salary to start.

HOMER GIERMANN,
8138 South Morgan street.

He—I want to marry your daughter.

Father—Have you seen my wife?

He—Yes, but nevertheless I prefer your daughter.

SAM BLUEFARB,
1507 S. Hamlin avenue.

Neighbor—Your daughter talks a great deal, doesn't she?

Mother—Yes; I think she must have been vaccinated with a phonograph needle.

MARJORIE M. GILARD,
4521 North Mansfield avenue.

Sonny—Mother, is daddy still growing?

Mother—Why, no, son. What makes you ask that question?

Sonny—Because I can see the top of his head coming through his hair.

HAPPY SACHAR,
3443 West Roosevelt road.

Pete—Will you lend me five dollars for a month, old boy?

Bill—Listen, silly, what does a month old boy want with five dollars?

LUCILE SMITH,
841 Eastwood avenue.

Short—Do you know a student named Porter?

Meyer—Sure, used to sleep with him.

Short—Roommates?

Meyer—Naw, classmates.

JOSEPH GEOFAND,
1524 North Artesian avenue.

Tom—See that girl? Well, I was going to marry her until I found out how much she spent at the dressmaker's.

Dick—And then what?

Tom—Then I married the dressmaker.

ROBERT RICHARDSON,
1739 East 83d street.

Farmer Bentover—How long has your hired man been working for you?

Farmer Butler—About two hours.

Farmer Bentover—Why, I thought he had been there longer than that!

Farmer Butler—He has. He's been here two months.

WILLIAM McCANNA,
3321 Ravenswood avenue.

Freshie—Just think, mama, a poor worm provided the silk for my dress.

Mother—I'm shocked, Arabella, that you should speak so disrespectfully of your father.

I. DORFF,
822 North Ashland avenue.

Prison warden—Everybody here is taught a trade. What would you like to be?

Convict (brightening)—A traveling salesman.

ROBERT BUTLER,
823 Webster avenue.

Father, phoning to son at college—What's the matter? I hear that you are getting so that people can't live with you any more.

Son—No wonder, I have smallpox.

CARL MILNER,
6522 South Oakley avenue.

Little girl — Does your doll say "mama?"

Littler girl—O, no, she's one of these modern dolls. When you squeeze her she says "O, boy!"

DOT BELLIN,
1239 Ellsworth, Gary, Ind.

He—May I have the last dance with you?

She—You've just had it.

HELEN KOCH,
2107 South St. Louis avenue.

He—Let's kiss and make up.

She—If you're careful I won't have to.

STANLEY MacHATTON,
10733 Normal avenue.

Jack—Coach, I can't get my locker shut.

Coach—Take your shoes out.

CLARA BROMS,
278 Beach street, Highland Park, Ill.

Uncle—Do you know that your father is a gentleman?

Little girl—My father is not a gentleman. He's a policeman.

MARION FRILLING,
5544 Schubert avenue.

Prof.—What is a royal coffer?

Frosh—A king with a cold.

HARRY LIND,
5614 South Sangamon street.

Willie—Did Mr. Edison make the first talking machine?

Pa—No, my son, God made the first talking machine, but Edison made the first one that could be shut off.

JOSEPHINE STONE,
3139 Mango avenue.

Dentist—Will you take gas?

Patient, an absent minded motorist—Yes, and you'd better look at the oil, too.

ALICE BORGMEIER,
5100 North Long avenue.

He—Well, my father has a new wife to support.

She—How is that? Is he a bigamist?

He—No, but I just got married.

ANNA KAGEL,
5622 Emerald avenue.

He—Will you marry me?

She—For the last time, no!

He—Good; the next time you can't refuse.

ROBERT KOVEN,
5220 Woodlawn avenue.

She—What is the difference between a fiddler and a violinist?

He—The haircut.

EMMA REHLING,
3803 West 115th street.

Teacher—Johnny, what is steam?

Johnny—Water crazy with heat.

E. M.,
3106 N. Christiana avenue.

Co-ed—O, look, the players are all covered with mud. How will they ever get it off?

Another ditto—What do you think the scrub team is for?

ANN BUSINEK,
2326 West Cortez street.

Teacher—Where did you get that bump on your head?

Freshy—O, that's where a thought struck me.

ZYGMONT KALWAZINSKI,
2744 North Troy street.

Teacher—Did you study your English last night?

Freshman—Yes, an hour and a half.

Teacher—Well, the next time take your book with you; you left it on my desk all night.

RUTH BOROWSKY,
5436 Woodlawn avenue.

Son—Say, dad, remember the story you told me about the time you were expelled from high school?

Dad—Yes.

Son—Well, isn't it funny how history repeats itself?

RAY WITASKE,
4926 Newport avenue.

Ethel—What a lovely fur coat you have on! Your husband must have a better job now.

Anna—No; I have a better husband.

HELENE ZAGAC,

ELSTON AVENUE INDIAN PAGEANT TO OPEN DEC. 15

Doings of Billy Caldwell to Be Featured.

The opening day of the Indian pageant and street celebration of Mayfair has been set for Dec. 15, when a parade of horse-drawn vehicles, floats, and automobiles will be staged. The parade will be in two sections and all merchants of the district have been invited to join.

JAMES C. MORELAND.

M. F. M'MAHON.

A barbecue at 5601 Elston avenue will follow the parade. Refreshments, candy, and advertising specialties for the youngsters will be distributed. Starting at 9:30 o'clock in the evening a dance will be held at 5308 Lawrence avenue.

Fifteen business, improvement and social organizations of the Mayfair district have joined in arranging the pageant, the main theme of which will be the historical background of the district. Frank P. Murphy is general chairman of the celebration, assisted by Clarence P. Hillman, secretary and treasurer.

Heads of Committees.

James C. Moreland is chairman of the executive committee; T. Bertram McGrath, finance; Clarence P. Hillman, publicity; A. G. Erickson, program; George Eckhoff, parade, and George C. Wolff, entertainment.

General committee—M. J. Suerth, C. Hanson, R. K. Bowber, C. Thomas, E. Donath, and E. H. Hodel.

Mr. Murphy and Franklin S. Catlin have spent a great deal of time perusing old records at the Chicago Historical society concerning their district in an effort to obtain information which will enable them to reproduce the early times as accurately as possible.

In the records which they have uncovered the name of Billy Caldwell appears again and again in connection with the purchasing of the land along the north branch of the river from the Indians. Caldwell was instrumental in this and in the first settling of the land by white people. Incidents concerning him and the time in which he lived will be included in the pageant.

Billy Caldwell, or Sauganash, as he was called by the Potawatami Indians, was a half-breed Indian, born about 1780. His father was an Irish officer in the British army and his mother was reputed to be an extremely beautiful Indian girl.

Educated at Jesuit schools to speak both English and French, in addition to the Indian dialects which he already knew, Caldwell first is heard of in Chicago history in connection with his rescue of the women and children of the Kinzie family from massacre by marauding savages in 1812.

He is on record as a voter in the 1820's, and as clerk of election and justice of the peace of Peoria county. He is first heard of in connection with the land along the north branch of the Chicago river, now the Mayfair district, in 1829, when two and a half sections of land there were granted to him. This land is now Edgebrook forest preserve.

It is said that Caldwell was much interested in education and offered to buy books and clothes for any Indian children who would go to school in the district.

A tree planted at what is now the intersection of Caldwell avenue and Rogers avenue in 1816 still marks the old boundary of the old Fort Dearborn reservation. This land was held until 1833, when the Indians were forced to sell by the defeat of Black Hawk, and it was at the peace negotiations at this time that Caldwell was instrumental in getting the Indian chiefs to give up the land. He was paid $10,000 by the government for his work in this.

Had First Chicago Residence.

After this time Caldwell lived as a white man was one of the leading citizens of earliest Chicago. He occupied a house built for him at North State street and Chicago avenue, which is said to have been the first frame house erected for a residence in Chicago.

These early days of Caldwell as a citizen of Chicago marked the beginning of Elston avenue. He and Daniel Elston, landholder of the district, used to travel the old road which the latter finally built as a plank road, marking the real beginning of the street.

An old Boy Scout cabin now stands on the spot where Caldwell's later home was in that section, and business and residential districts have grown up on the land which was obtained from the Indians with the aid of Billy Caldwell.

The development of the district from that time was marked by the building of plank roads on Elston and Milwaukee avenues, with a toll gate at the junction of the two.

A forty-eight foot paved highway now marks the old road, but things as they were in Caldwell's day will be reproduced by the Mayfair pageant. Toll gates and the old toll gate house will be rebuilt for the pageant. Several old settlers of the district who remember the later days of the plank roads and toll gates will be on hand to show how they were operated.

CLASSMATES OF TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO

Eight classmates, all graduates of Concordia seminary, St. Louis, Mo., and now located in the Chicago area, celebrated their twenty-fifth anniversary in the ministry at the monthly meeting of the Lutheran Pastoral conference held at the Hotel Sherman Tuesday afternoon. CHEER CLUB TO GIVE THEATER BENEFIT FOR ITS YULE FUND

Feigenbutz Christmas Cheer club, an independent non-partisan charitable organization named for Ald. William H. Feigenbutz of the 45th ward because of his philanthropic work, is sponsoring a Christmas benefit show at the Belmont theater, Belmont at Lincoln, at midnight next Saturday.

ALD. FEIGENBUTZ.

Receipts will be used for the distribution of Christmas baskets in the Lake View district. Hundreds of needy families will receive well filled baskets of groceries through the Cheer club fund.

Pat O'Day, comedian, will head an elaborate stage show which will include most of the headliners at the Palace and State-Lake theaters, since the show is being backed in a measure by Keith-Albee-Orpheum circuit.

Arthur Hess is president of the Cheer club. Vice presidents are Stanley Armstrong, A. O. Caplan, William Fortmiller, and Paul Marskhausen. H. J. Clermont is treasurer, Leo A. Lerner is secretary, and B. O. Romin is financial secretary.

278 BOY PATROL MEMBERS TO BE GUESTS OF LIONS

North Center to Give a Party Dec. 20.

Members of the Northcenter Lions club have now turned their attention to the final feature of their Christmas activities program, a party for the patrol boys of all schools within the district bounded by Roscoe street, Lawrence avenue, Clark street, and the river. The first two events on the program, a charity boxing show on Nov. 19, followed by a charity theater party, of which E. E. Rockabrand was chairman, last Friday night, were decided successes, members of the club say.

E. E. ROCKABRAND.

The events already staged were held to obtain funds for the clubs' Christmas basket fund, while the party to be held Thursday, Dec. 20, is given annually for the junior policemen in appreciation of the service rendered to the community. The Lions will meet the patrol boys and transport them to Constellation temple, 3900 North Robey street, where they will be guests at a dinner and entertainment furnished by stars from the radio stations.

The schools included in the district of the Northcenter Lions club are: McPherson, Hamilton, St. Andrews, Audobon, Bell, St. Benedict's, Coonley, Ravenswood, Waters, Queen of Angels school, Pilgrim and Blaine schools. A total of 330 boys will be honored at the party, for which a large Christmas tree will be provided to add to the spirit of the gathering. As a conclusion to the program, each of the patrol boys will receive a helmet as a gift. The helmets are now on display in show windows of several stores in the district. Last year 278 boys were given gloves by the Lions.

Arthur C. Wiklund Is Chairman.

Arthur C. Wiklund is chairman of the committee in charge of arrangements for the police boys' party, and is being assisted by E. S. Price, Paul J. Volkman, F. O. Wermich, Charles E. Schick, Gus Rempas, and William Wolken.

Funds derived from the charity events already staged will be distributed as Christmas baskets containing food and clothing by a committee headed by Joe Wolken. Members of the committee are William Walker, Joe Helbach, Anthony Kreig, and Mr. Rempas.

Woman's Club of Church to Hear Talk on Decoration

The Woman's club of the People's church will meet tomorrow at 2 o'clock at the Uptown temple, 941 Lawrence avenue. Mrs. Vera Brady Shipman will give an illustrated lecture on "Making the Home Attractive" and the club sextet, directed by Mrs. E. W. Winn, will furnish a musical program.

Talks on Modern Poets.

Crystal Billings Ells spoke on "Modern Poets" at a meeting of the West Side Co-educational club held at Hotel Guyon Tuesday afternoon. Mrs. Nell Huckins played several piano solos.

SUNDAY, DECEMBER 9

R. H. L. . . . 9:15

THE Linebook is out, and its papa is going to pick his pick of the lucky contribs to be read in the "Air Line" tonight. So many people have bought the Line Book since last Tuesday that R. H. L. is quite sure they would like to hear a few of the excerpts read. 9:15 is the time, hound dogs or no hound dogs.

SYMPHONY 6:00

DR. FREDERICK STOCK, director of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, again presents his world famous organization and continues its series of Sunday evening radio concerts. The fullness of their huge ensemble and the most intricate of passages are brought to your presence at 6 o'clock tonight.

GOLDKETTE . . .

LIKE no other band is this one! Jean Goldkette and his W-G-N Dance Orchestra have taken all the squawks out of dance music and turned it into one of the most exciting forms of melody. Deep tones . . . ultra modern rhythm . . . fine arrangements, all belong to Goldkette. 1:30, 10:15 and 11:15.

JEAN GOLDKETTE

THEY NUMBER 1,000

The 100 Club has grown to large proportions! Particular radio listeners confine their listening to W-G-N until the hours of entertainment equal 100. Then they cut out the below coupon, fill it out and send for their membership certificate. The thousandth member is:

1000. Adeline Best, Chicago, Ill.
1001. Edward Gershanow, Chicago.
1002. Bertha Kugler, Chicago.
1003. Rosemary Nukos, Chicago.
1004. W. P. Clark, Chicago.
1005. Harry F. Wiggins, Chicago.
1006. Joe Redline, Green Bay, Wis.

I have listened to W-G-N for 100 hours exclusive of other stations. Please send me a certificate of membership in the 100 Club.

ROBERTS . . .

A FIT soloist to share the hour with Jean Goldkette is Frank Roberts, tenor. He is able to display a most unusual talent as he sings his interesting repertoire of semi-classical songs. Listen at 10:15.

PAT . . . . . .

PAT BARNES with a song, a laugh, and maybe a tear if you are not careful. 7 o'clock.

CHILDREN'S CONCERT 5:30

A CONCERT, that's what it is. It is a symphony concert planned and played for the children. Don't, however, assume that it is something undignified. Children enjoy it more because the lives of the composers and the occasion for the composition are explained in the announcements, showing that the composers are just nice men and women like us, and there is nothing odd about them. The concert at 5:30.

FOOTBALL

THE pro season ends with one of the hardest fought games of the season. The mighty Green Bay Packers swoop down on the Chicago Bears and will try to tumble them down the long white ladder at Wrigley field to end the season. No matter who gets tumbled, you will hear a play by play account of the struggle from W-G-N, 2:15.

Federal Radio

AMERICA'S FINEST SMALL RADIO
in every respect

As fitting additions to its exquisite line of quality radios—generally recognized as America's Finest—Federal has recently added the new "H" models—unusually compact A. C. Receivers—America's finest small radio.

Tho small in size, these new models carry on the Federal tradition for dependability, cabinet beauty, general performance and remarkable tone quality made possible by Federal's exclusive patented ortho-sonic feature. Only long telephone manufacturing experience could make possible such an outstanding product as Federal in an industry as new as Radio.

A home demonstration will be arranged without obligation.

Federal is a pioneer broadcaster as well as a pioneer radio manufacturer.

FEDERAL TRADE BODY MAY RULE SOON IN R. C. A.

Monopoly Case Still Is Pending.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 8.—In view of the recent decision of the Supreme court of the United States in refusing to review the so called tube case of the Radio Corporation of America against the receiver for the De Forest Radio company, some action is due in the near future by the federal trade commission.

The trade commission several years ago issued a complaint against the Radio Corporation of America, claiming among other things, that the corporation is a monopoly. That case has never been decided, but it is expected that the motion to dismiss the case, which is now pending before the commission, will be taken up shortly.

In addition to that original case the commission also has before it a complaint which it issued some months ago against the corporation, commonly called the tube complaint. This tube complaint is almost identical with the case in which the Supreme court refused to take further action.

Action Is Expected Soon.

In view of this situation, the commission is due to take action on its tube complaint against the corporation. It is possible that it will issue what is termed a "cease and desist order" against the corporation. That will end the case of the commission in the tube complaint. The corporation will have to obey the order inasmuch as the courts, including the highest court in the land, have already ordered the corporation to cease from what has been termed a wrongful practice.

The commission in its complaint against the Radio corporation in the tube case called attention to the so called "licensing agreements" which it entered into with a large number of radio manufacturers which enabled these manufacturers to use the patents held by the Radio corporation.

The commission makes no complaint on this agreement, but it does object to what is known as article 9 of the agreement, which makes it mandatory upon the manufacturers who have entered the agreement to equip their sets originally with vacuum tubes supplied by the Radio corporation. Up to the time of this agreement a manufacturer could equip his sets with any tubes he saw fit, or none. The commission claims that article 9 constitutes an unfair method of competition under section 5 of the federal trade commission act. This contention has been upheld in the courts, although the action was started by independent manufacturers and not by the trade commission.

May Affect Price of Tubes.

There has been a contention in some quarters that the decision of the Supreme court of the United States in refusing to review the decisions of the two lower courts in which the corporation was enjoined against the practice, that the price of radio tubes would be lowered as a consequnece.

The tubes sold by the Radio corporation are manufactured by the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company, and the General Electric company, and the original vacuum tube patents are said to have been held by these companies with the Radio corporation. However, the original patents have expired.

A decision was rendered against the Radio corporation first by the District court for the district of Delaware and later a decree was entered by the Circuit Court of Appeals for the third circuit, which decree restrained the corporation from carrying out the tube agreement. The corporation then asked the Supreme court to remove the injunction and hear the case on appeal. This was refused, which means that the injunction is permanent, and the corporation cannot now carry out that tube clause.

RADIO BOSSES CLAIM CHANGES PLEASE PUBLIC

In the first official word expressed on the subject, the federal radio commiesion contends that the reallocation of wave lengths which went into effect on Nov. 11, is a success.

"It was naturally expected that a large number of complaints and protests would flow into the commission's offices at Washington," the commission's announcement stated. "These complaints have materialized, but analysis of the letters reaching the commission shows that the complaints have been chiefly centered about five or six specific local cases of station time sharing or interference, while comparatively little general protest or complaint about the allocation has developed in contrast with what might have been expected from a radio audience numbering forty million of people.

"On the other hand it has been supposed that little or no favorable or approving comment would find its ways into the commission's mail, on the theory that pleased listeners would not take the trouble to write. Here again a surprise faced those thus predicting the human reaction, for several hundred telegrams and letters already received from all parts of the country, tell eloquently of the writers' appreciation of the relief afforded to radio listeners, and particularly to those whose locations away from the large cities force them to depend upon distant stations for their regular programs."

Player Works Squeeze Play to Score Grand Slam in Radio Bridge Game

The fifth of a series of twenty radio auction bridge games will be broadcast from W-G-N, The Chicago Tribune station on the Drake hotel, Tuesday at 3:30 p. m.

The contestants will be Mrs. Catherine A. Streeter of Hollywood, Cal., who not only has the highest standing as a teacher, but is a leader in practically all bridge activities in southern California, playing with Mr. Work against Mrs. Helen M. Hubbard of San Francisco, who, besides her prominence as a teacher, enjoys a national reputation as a solver of auction bridge problems, and Mr. Whitehead.

Following are the advance hands for game five:

Mr. Whitehead.

C—A, K, Q, J.

Followers of this season's radio bridge games, the latest of which was broadcast from W-G-N, the CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel, last Tuesday, are carrying away from each presentation a definite knowledge of how to recognize and handle one or more bridge situations which are muffed by the average player. In this week's game the demonstration was given by the play of Mrs. A. R. Coffin of Indianapolis, a championship player of the American Whist league. Her partner was E. J. Tobin of Chicago, also a league champion.

The hands were: Wilbur C. Whitehead, dealer, south: Spades, Q, 10, 3; hearts, 6, 5, 2; diamonds, K, Q, 9; clubs, K, Q, 10, 6. Mr. Tobin, west: Spades, J, 8; hearts, J, 9; diamonds, A, J, 5, 4, 2; clubs, 5, 4, 3, 2. Milton C. Work, north: Spades, 7, 6, 5, 2; hearts, 8, 3; diamonds, 8, 7, 6, 3; clubs, 9, 8, 7. Mrs. Coffin, east: Spades, A, K, 9, 4; hearts, A, K, Q, 10, 7, 4; diamonds, 10; clubs; A, J.

Mr. Whitehead, dealer, opened the bidding (first hand of rubber) with one club. Even though his club suit consisted of but four cards, his hand was too strong to pass.

Mr. Tobin, west, passed. Although his diamond suit was of five cards, it contained only one quick trick, which, without any high card support in side suits, is not sufficient for even a following or defensive bid. Mr. Work, north, with a Yarborough, of course had to pass.

Bids One Heart.

Mrs. Coffin, east, with a magnificent hand, bid one heart. There was nothing to be accomplished by a higher bid. Mrs. Coffin did not fear adverse bidding. In fact, she would have been glad to have the bidding forced up to a point where she could either make a profitable business double of the adverse bid or else entice a double of her own bid by gradually raising it.

However, Mr. Whitehead passed, as he had shown the full strength of his hand by his initial bid. Mr. Tobin also was forced to pass, although, holding but two cards of his partner's suit, he would have denied her suit had he been able to do so. The weakness of his diamond suit made a take-out bid impossible. Mr. Work also passed. Therefore Mrs. Coffin became the declarer, with her contract one heart.

Mr. Whitehead led out his king of clubs, the correct lead from a king-queen suit against a suit declaration; and Mr. Tobin spread his hand for dummy. From it Mrs. Coffin played the 2 of clubs; Mr. Work played the 7; and declarer won the trick with the ace.

Pausing a moment to plan the play of her hand, Mrs. Coffin could see an easy little slam, obtainable by ruffing her two small spades in dummy, after taking her ace and king, unless one of the adversaries held only one spade. These four tricks, her six solid trump tricks, dummy's ace of diamonds and her own ace of clubs would leave her only one loser, the jack of clubs.

Wants Grand Slam.

But Mrs. Coffin was not content with a small slam. She felt that a grand slam was possible, because the bidding had shown that the king-queen of diamonds must lay in Mr. Whitehead's, south's, hand. These two cards would form the only possible side quick trick which he must have held in order to bid clubs initially on a king-queen club suit. Mrs. Coffin therefore saw the opportunity for a "squeeze" play that would give her a grand slam.

Proceeding on this basis, Mrs. Coffin led her ace and king of spades to tricks two and three. Mr. Whitehead played the 3 and 10; dummy the 8 and jack; Mr. Work the 2 and 5. Mrs. Coffin continued with the 4 of spades; Mr. Whitehead dropped the queen, dummy trumped with the 9 of hearts; Mr. Work played the 6 of spades.

The fall of the queen of spades had made declarer's 9 of spades good; therefore there was no need to use dummy's second trump for ruffing. Accordingly declarer led Dummy's jack of hearts; Mr. Work played the 3; Mrs. Coffin overtook the jack with the queen; and Mr. Whitehead played the 2. Mrs. Coffin then led five straight heart tricks, with the purpose of forcing embarrassing discards from Mr. Whithead.

Thus at the beginning of the eleventh trick, declarer, east, was left with the good 9 of spades; the 10 of diamonds, and the jack of clubs. Mr. Whitehead, south, had been forced to discard down to his king, queen of diamonds and the good queen of clubs. Dummy retained the ace, jack of diamonds, and the 5 of clubs. Mr. Work held the 7 of spades and the 8, 7 of diamonds.

The Squeeze Works.

Declarer then led her good 9 of spades, which put Mr. Whitehead into difficulty. He was fairly certain that the declarer had the jack of clubs, since his partner had played th lowest of at least three clubs on the first trick, and had since discarded the 8 spot. Therefore, if he discarded his queen of clubs, he doubtless would present the closed hand with a trick. On the other hand, if he discarded a diamond, Dummy's ace and jack of diamonds would take the last two tricks. His only chance was the faint hope that his partner, Mr. Work, might hold the jack of clubs. Therefore Mr. Whitehead discarded the 5 of clubs; and Mr. Work played the 7 of spades.

Mrs. Coffin then led the jack of clubs, dashing Mr. Whitehead's hopes of breaking her grand slam. He was forced to discard his queen of diamonds; dummy discarded the jack of diamonds, and Mr. Work the 7.

Declarer then led her 10 of diamonds, winning this last trick with dummy's ace, and achieving a grand slam, with its bonus of 100 points. She also scored 90 for honors—four in her hand and fifth in partner's—and 63 for tricks.

After the play of the hand at auction bridge was concluded, Mr. Work devoted the rest of the broadcasting period to a discussion of its bidding at contract. He considered it a moderately close question as to whether south, the dealer, should bid one club or pass.

A Likely Look.

Quoting Mr. Work's own words: "Unquestionably more caution should be exercised in bidding four card suits in contract than in auction; but the south hand has what I might call a 'likely look.' King, queen, ten, even at the head of four, is a worth-while combination, and with a king, queen, nine in one suit, and queen, ten with one small in another, I believe the hand is too strong to pass even at contract. I would favor bidding one club, but I would not criticise a pass.

"West and north would pass, regardless of whether south bids or passes, and east under either condition would bid four hearts. East would count upon six tricks in the heart suit, the ace and king of spades, and the ace of clubs—nine tricks; she also has a fair chance of making another spade. It takes much less in the west hand to insure the extra trick than would justify west in jumping to four if east bid only three hearts. For example, a jack and ten of spades in the west hand would insure three spade tricks and game; therefore the soundness of the four heart bid cannot be questioned.

"Some players with west's hand would be tempted to overcall the four hearts with five diamonds, with the idea that it is proper to show an ace for slam purposes whenever the partner bids for game. In this case it would be most advantageous for east and west to go slamming, but with no other high cards to support the ace, west would not be justified in doing so. It is absurd to contend that it is possible to foresee and to bid for a slam every time a hand turns up with which one can be made."

THREE FAMOUS STARS ON KENT HOUR TONIGHT

The Atwater Kent Radio Hour tonight will be presented by three nationally known artists, Hulda Lashanska lyric soprano, Toscha Seidel, the Russian violinist, and Wilbur Evans, bass-baritone and winner of first place in a radio audition, last year. It will be heard over W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel.

The orchestra under the direction of Josef Pasternack will open the concert with the popular "Epithalamium" from Lohengrin which raises the curtain on the third act. Other orchestral numbers are the Adagietto, from L'Arlesienne Suite of Bizet, and Florindo, from the Carnival Venitien of Burgmein.

Mme. Lashanska, who has appeared as recitalist in every large city in the United States, will sing "Ever Since the Day," from Louise, considered the most beautiful in the whole range of modern opera, "On the Wings of Song," Maria's Weigenlied, "Over the Steppe," Wings of Night" and "The Sweetest Flower."

Seidel now in his thirtieth year, is a native of Odessa. His concert tours have taken him around the world. Seidel is opposed to modern music, his favorite composer being Brahms, whose "Hungarian Dance No. 1" will close the violin numbers.

Wilbur Evans made his operatic debut with the Philadelphia Operatic society in Martha since winning the 1927 autition. He will open his concert with "Solomon's Aria" from Gounod's Queen of Sheba, followed by Nocturne, Fields O'Ballyclare, Boots.

CINCINNATI WILL USE RADIO TO NAB CRIMINALS

Will Safeguard City with Wireless Net.

Cincinnati, O., Dec. 8.—Safeguarding the city by a radio net with which escaping criminals may be apprehended, is part of a scheme being worked out by Cincinnati city officials.

"The plans for the radio installation which is to be made by the city of Cincinnati are as yet not sufficiently developed for us to be able to state definitely just what will be done," G. C. Smith, executive assistant to Col. C. O. Sherrill, city manager of Cincinnati, stated.

"It is planned to erect a broadcasting station that will operate on a high frequency wave, probably the same wave as that used by Detroit. Receivers will be placed in all police and fire stations and, in addition, in all police automobiles, patrol wagons, and the like.

"The radio will not be used for fire service because the city already has a most complete installation for this work and improvements to the extent of over $100,000 are now planned in the fire telegraph department. Probably the greatest benefit of the radio will be noticed in connection with emergencies where it is necessary to muster a large force of men at one particular place, or where it is necessary to throw a net around some section of the city to prevent the escape of criminals.

"We have had several occurrences in the last few months where we would have been able to apprehend those responsible for criminal acts had we been able to spread such a net. With the ordinary police communication system, it is not possible to get in touch immediately with the men in the automobiles, and, of course, much of our patrolling is done with the officers in cars. We find that it is easier to cover beats in this way."

Use Loudspeaker to Shout Down Noisy Legislators

BRUSSELS, Dec. 8.—The Belgian parliament is making an effective use of the loud speaker. By means of its greatly magnified sound the president of the assembly is able to "shout down" practically any number of obstreperous legislators.

Inside the Loud Speaker

BY QUIN RYAN.

From the radio announcer's scrap book of his own verses:

LITTLE BLUE BOY.

The little brown pipe is covered with dust,
But tempting and true it lies;
And the little tin package is red with rust,
And its content withers and dries.
Time was when the little brown pipe was strong,
And tobacco befogged the air;
And that was the time when I thought it wrong,
And kissed them and put them there.

Ah, I'd the aroma of Indic isles
And the breath of the sultan's urn,
And I basked in the glow of the Lady's smiles—
But even tobacco worms turn.
Oh, the years are many, the years are long
Since they vanished in airy—No!
How vapid and vacant my sobbing song!—
'Twas only a week ago.

THEN THERE was this oddity, written in 1921:

FROM A FATHER'S DIARY.

1907.

April 1. Today is Helene's birthday, the dear!
Just six years old today.
I watch her as I write, her silly little books in her lap, studying the pictures, for we cannot induce her to become interested in reading.
An uncontrollable sprite, Helene!
Prattling in baby talk all the day.
Her dresses only to her knees, and her stockings terminating some inches below.
Helene's hair is bobbed, for she willed it so.
She would rather toddle about than sleep at night.
When Helene wants anything—and she wants everything—she cries and sulks irresistibly—and she gets it.
Sitting on men's laps promiscuously.

AND THEN, when "B. L. T." died—the famous originator of the Line o' Type or Two column, now conducted by "R. H. L.":

B. L. T.

The humming has ceased
In the small bare room
On the seventh floor,
And the soft low whistle
Is still today.
And the studied taps
On the Underwood.

And a heap of mail
Flows over the desk
And the pot of paste
And the shears . . .

And old Bill Byrne
The compositor
Is working today
On the classified ads.

In town and plain
One tells to one
A bit of news,
And then they stare
As if they'd heard
What never could be true. . . .

And editors
Of rural sheets
And editors
Of magazines
And folks with funny
Patronymics
And all who'd felt
His scourge of wit
Look grave
And all forgiving. . . .

And the "hell box" holds
Such words: "contrib,"
And the far famed "wheeze,"
"W. k." (well known),
"J. c." (justly celebrated),
"O. f." (old fashioned),
"In a manner of speaking,"
"On the o. h." (other hand),
"C. and u." (cruel and unusual),
"S. and c." (southern and congenial),
And the "valve handle wheeze,"
And "Small Town Stuff,"
And "Pomes You May Have Missed,"
And "How Cold the Nights are Getting" . . .

And the last "last line."
"You know the infallible sign of spring; father on the back porch, cleaning last fall's mud from his golf shoes."
Lingers a while
In the vanishing haze
Of the Pipesmoke Trail. . . .

WHEN BUILDING activities were resumed some years ago, after a long lull, there was "Bricks":

Oh, the tinkle of the bricks,
Yellow bricks!
I could ululate or how-l,
For today I heard a trowel
Acting murderous and fou-l
To some bricks!
Years ago we heard it yearly,
Driving people crazy—nearly—
Flitting, hitting, splitting merely;
And the tinkles and the chinkles
Gave the brow a pair of wrinkles,
Maybe six.
From the bricks, bricks, bricks, bricks,
Bricks, bricks, bricks,
From the sounding of the pounding
Of the bricks!

But today it seemed an anthem
As I heard a mason plant them—
Oh, the tinkles, I could chant them!—
Building bricks!
When the good old fashioned builders
Quit their quest for yens and guilders—
'Though the tinkling sound bewilders,
How it sticks!—
And resume, as builders orter—
Hauling yellow bricks and mortar,
Can't you see the rent hogs sorter
In a fix?
For it means the end is near
Of the landlord profiteer,
In a fix—oh, gee!
Yellow bricks, ah oui!
And the writing on the wall
Which will prophesy his fall,
Man, will look like this,
Simply this, I wis:

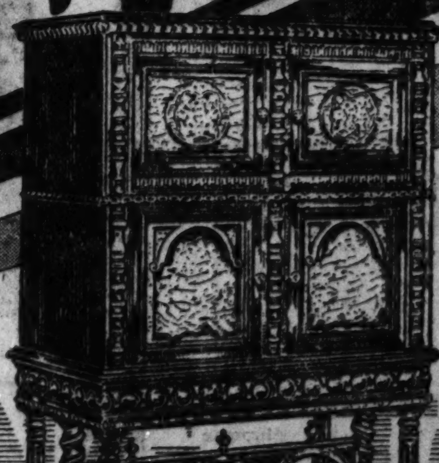
Davis A-C RADIO
DUO-DYNAMIC
PATENT APPLIED FOR



Beautifully carved, inlaid, Spanish type Cabinet, fitted with Davis Duo-Dynamic.

LIVING TONES

What the DUO-DYNAMIC is—

The Duo-Dynamic is a speaker construction with diaphragms arranged for rapid ibrations and slow vibrations separately, thereby eliminating the loss of very high or very low tones, delicate tones and overtones. Unlike other speakers, the Duo-Dynamic enables you to get all the tones, even when extremely high and extremely low tones are broadcast simultaneously.

Here is Radio at its best. Now you can hear those elusive tones hitherto lost to the radio listener. The exclusive Duo-Dynamic principle enables you to obtain realistic radio reception. You hear living, breathing voices—all of the band or orchestra, not merely part of it. Davis Radio engineering is truly revolutionary.

BIRCHWOOD BODY READY TO INDUCT NEW OFFICERS

Col. Lee Alexander Stone to Speak on Fair.

Officers of the Birchwood Improvement association, elected last month, will be installed at a meeting of the association on Wednesday night.

WILLIAM F. LIPPS.
[Walinger Photo.]

William F. Lipps, 2021 Jarvis avenue, will take the office of president. Other officers who will serve during 1929 are: J. C. Damler and W. T. Guilford, vice presidents; J. I. Laing, secretary; K. Ewing, assistant secretary; A. L. Busse, treasurer; and E. E. Marquis, chairman of the board of directors. New directors are: H. C. Adsit, J. V. Barracks, M. L. Kingsley, T. F. Meehan, F. P. Nepper, S. Sackheim, H. J. Ure, and Mrs. M. Osweiller.

Will Hear Talk on Fair.

Following the installation the association will hear an address by Col. Lee Alexander Stone, who will speak of the 1933 world's fair. The world's fair motion picture, "The March of a Century," will be exhibited in conjunction with the talk. Col. Stone is a writer, lecturer, and practicing physician and a veteran of the Spanish-American and world wars, in which he was an officer of the chemical warfare division.

Mr. Lipps, the president elect, has been connected with community and civic affairs for years, having been an alderman from 1905 to 1921, during which time he served as chairman of the railway terminal commission for three years. In addition to his new capacity, Mr. Lipps is at present chairman of the transportation committee of the West Ridge Improvement association.

Propose New Park.

To complete the meeting Wednesday night, members of the association will discuss plans for the establishment of a new park in the Birchwood district. The association has taken the matter up following the announcement of the Ridge Park board of its intention to create a park in the area.

Retiring officers of the organization include L. E. Langille, president; T. F. Meehan and E. E. Marquis, vice presidents. The district of the Birchwood Improvement association is bounded by Howard street, Ridge and Rogers avenues and the Chicago and Northwestern railway tracks.

CHECKER CHAMP PLAYS TUESDAY IN EXHIBITION

Newell W. Banks, checker champion of North America, will meet all comers at both checkers and chess in the Wilson Avenue Y. M. C. A. at 7:45 o'clock Tuesday night.

Mr. Banks will not only play all comers at checkers and chess, but at the same time will play four others at checkers while blindfolded. The moves will be called by number and Mr. Banks will keep in mind the moves on these four boards while he is at the same time playing the crowd at checkers and chess. The public is invited. There will be no charge for the exhibition.

Edgewater A. C. Has Mixed Card Party on Tuesday

The second mixed card party of the Edgewater Athletic club will be held Tuesday evening at the clubhouse, 5315 Sheridan road. Mrs. Lawrence F. Schmidt and Mrs. Hugh Lager are co-chairman in charge of the party. Mrs. W. J. Guyer is chairman of the woman's card committee. Members of the club are planning a New Year's eve party at the Edgewater Beach hotel. The committee in charge is composed of Dr. J. M. Nicholson, chairman; Gus Breuer, J. J. Barry, William C. Larson, and F. C. Enderlin Jr.

Hoellen Athletic Club Holds Annual Dance

Ald. John J. Hoellen of the 47th ward was head of the reception committee at the annual dance of the Hoellen Athletic club last night at Huntinghouse academy, Clark street and Wilson avenue. Ald. Hoellen, who is sponsor of the club, was assisted by members of the baseball team of the organization, which won Sweitzer Mid-City trophy after defeating some of the best teams in semi-pro circles.

Senn Parent-Teacher Body to Discuss High Courses

The effect of college requirements on high school courses will be discussed by the Nicholas Senn Parent-Teacher association in an afternoon meeting Thursday at the high school, 5900 Glenwood avenue. Parents of junior high school students in the vicinity have been invited to attend.

Church Folks to Give Play.

"In Old Vienna" will be presented by the Young People's society of Bethany Evangelical Lutheran church on Tuesday and Wednesday nights at the church, Cullom avenue and Paulina street.

Her subject was "Give the Child a Square Deal." Children of the second and third grades gave a short program for their parents.

MASONS SELECT NEW HEAD OF THEIR HOSPITAL

Announcement is made of the appointment of Dr. Thomas Ritchie Ponton as superintendent of the Illinois Masonic hospital, 836 Wellington avenue. The new superintendent, in addition to wide experience in medicine and the management of hospitals, is a writer of note. He comes here direct from eight years' work in visiting and surveying hospitals for the American College of Surgeons. This work brought him in close contact with every type of hospital in the United States and Canada.

One of his outstanding achievements was the building up of the Hollywood, Cal., hospital. He supervised the erection of this institution as a 150 bed hospital and later increased its capacity to 300 beds by the erection of an addition. He remained as superintendent of the Hollywood hospital from May 1, 1924, to Oct. 1, 1927.

FIGHTS TO BUILD SUPERHIGHWAY INTO SUBURBS

Transportation Leader Heads Movement.

If the west side builds a double deck superhighway from the loop to the city limits at Austin boulevard, Oak Park and River Forest, the two big villages to the west want the road extended on through their territory to the Des Plaines river.

George L. Bruckert, who has just been elected president of the Western Suburbs Transportation association, announced he would lead the movement to extend the proposed highway. He will get in touch with the West Parks board, which is pushing the speedway idea. The two villages are growing so fast that the need of fast transportation to the loop is becoming more pressing daily, he said.

Seek to Improve Bus Service.

The association has also begun a vigerous fight to better the transportation in Oak Park. This may result in the establishment of additional bus lines to compete with the two companies now operating in the village, according to officers of the association.

One company now runs busses on Oak Park and Ridgeland avenues from Lake street south. The other company operates on the two main crosstown avenues from Lake street north. If one desires to go from the north to the south side of the village, it is necessary to pay two fares and to change at Lake street.

The association has made repeated efforts during the last year to bring about unification of these two companies. Floyd E. Barmeier, who served as president of the association last year, said that despite repeated pleas both companies had refused to consolidate or coöperate in any way.

Declare Condition Absurd.

Paul E. Zimmerman, president of the Oak Park Trust and Savings bank, and F. L. Simmons denounced the present condition as ridiculous and absurd at the recent meeting of the association. Mr. Simmons urged the establishment of competing bus lines. He told how the present systems were handicapping the village and mentioned the long distances which high school pupils from some parts of the villages have to go to their studies.

B. M. Johnston, attorney for the association, also urged new bus lines and promised to do all he could to aid the new officers in installing them if they decide on such a move.

Besides Mr. Bruckert, the new officers are: F. L. Simmons, vice president; B. M. Johnston, secretary; and Col. Arthur D. Rehm, treasurer.

PRESENT AWARDS TO LEADING PLAYGROUNDS

Herman J. Fisher, director of recreation for the board of education (left), presented certificates Tuesday to directors of five west side playgrounds which led in activities during the year. Woman directors receiving the awards: Left to right—Miss Zora Squire, Mozart playground, third place; Miss Eunice Jackson, Henry playground, second place; Miss Edna Gohl, Avondale playground, first place; Mrs. M. Albright, Emmet playground, fourth place, and Miss Helen O'Malley, Ryerson playground, fifth place. Other men, left to right: Gust Elste, Emmet; H. Meyer, Ryerson; W. Mayhercy, Avondale, and John Mack, Henry.

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Series of Plays Given by Trinity High Seniors

The senior class of Trinity High school in River Forest gave three one act plays in the school auditorium Friday evening. The plays were "Six Who Pass," "Sir David Wears a Crown" and "Knave of Hearts." The players were trained by Miss Carolyn Searles. A large crowd was present.

FIVE WEST SIDE PLAYGROUNDS WIN ALL AWARDS

Get Certificates for Leading in Activities.

Avondale playground, 2945 North Sawyer avenue, was named the most active of Chicago board of education playgrounds at a meeting of the directors held at the Lake Shore playground Tuesday afternoon. A certificate stating that this playground had made the most points for activity was awarded to the two directors, Miss Edna Gohl and William Mayhercy. Four other west side playgrounds received awards for placing from second to fifth in the rating.

Henry playground, 4250 North St. Louis avenue, directed by Miss Eunice Jackson and John Mack, took second place; Miss Zora Squire received the award for Mozart playground, 2200 North Hamlin avenue, which took third place. Emmet playground, 5500 West Madison street, placed fourth. This playground is directed by Mrs. M. Albright and Gust Elste. Fifth place was given to Ryerson playground, 610 North Lawndale avenue, represented by Miss Helen O'Malley and H. Meyer.

Awards Based on Points.

The awards were based on a point system, which included a calculation of the amount of activity, the type of work done and the number of competitive matches engaged. Sportsmanship and methods of play and direction are also taken into consideration when making the awards.

There are sixty-four playgrounds operating in connection with the public schools of the city under the guidance of Herman J. Fisher, director of the bureau of recreation. Activity is continued throughout the year, and everything from wrestling matches to checkers is included in the work. Walter J. Sonnenleiter is supervisor of the playgrounds.

Many Winter Activities.

Skating is held in most of the playgrounds, which are flooded for the winter; basketball matches are held in those shelter houses which have gymnasiums, and activity including wood carving and other indoor recreations take place all winter long in the houses.

BY ONEY FRED SWEET.

More than a hundred Christmas trees are now on the way from Canada and Vermont to take their place in THE TRIBUNE'S huge Christmas tree to be erected at the Washington boulevard entrance in Garfield park.

This announcement was made by Sam Chertok of Kramer Brothers and Mages, Christmas tree dealers, at the second round table discussion of experts on Christmas tree construction, illumination and decoration held in the English room at the Hotel Sherman.

W. R. Gray of the A. G. Zulfer Co., also gave the word that four trees, between thirty and forty feet in height, had been chopped down in their native Vermont and were now en route to Chicago for participation in THE TRIBUNE'S arrangement to add Yuletide cheer to folk on the west side.

FOUR NEW PARKS BEING RUSHED ON NORTHWEST SIDE

Improvements in Progress at Eight Others.

With eight neighborhood parks already in use and four more now being completed, the northwest park district has become the largest and most active of the smaller districts in Chicago within the last year.

As a result of a large campaign of construction and improvement with the advent of a new administration last summer, new buildings and new recreational features are being installed in almost every old park in addition to the work on the new sites.

The parks are all in the district between Harlem avenue on the west, Kedzie avenue on the east, North avenue on the south, and Belmont avenue on the north, and are so arranged that every one in the district has access to a park and recreation center a few blocks from his home.

Report Big Attendance.

People of the northwest side use these parks far more than any large city park, and attendances recorded by the board are in excess of those in any other system, the officials say. Numbers of northwest side people ranging from 63,000 in Rutherford-Sayre park to 533,000 in Black Hawk park make the parks the centers of community activity on the northwest side.

Every type of activity, from reducing classes for women to indoor baseball leagues for boys and girls, is offered in the parks, and the most modern and complete equipment is being installed in them, according to E. Brekke, superintendent.

Jacob A. Riis park, 6400 Fullerton avenue, is being improved to the greatest extent. A golf course has been laid out there, green clay tennis courts are ready, a new field house is under construction, toboggan slides have been built, and to cap the group of improvements there, a ski jump, the only one in Chicago, has been built. The park has been landscaped and is ready for both summer and winter activity. There will be flooded ground in all the parks for skating.

Other Sites Prepared.

A site at Oak Park and Barry avenues has been purchased and is now being landscaped and made ready for the construction of a fieldhouse, as has a site at Lockwood avenue and Drummond place.

Almira playground, 3545 Wabansia avenue, has just been improved and new playground equipment installed. Four houses adjoining the site have been purchased and are to be torn down to make room for an enlarged playground.

A wading pool, tennis courts, and a new building are to be erected at another new site at Bloomingdale and Moody avenues. Wading pools with cluster lamps around them and showers are being built at all the parks.

Ground has already been broken for a new administration building for the district at Black Hawk park; there will also be a new building at Kelvyn park, 2700 Kostner avenue, and a new playground at Rutherford-Sayre park, 6851 Belden avenue.

Fence, lighting equipment, and the other improvements in all the parks will be ready in spring and the busy summer season will find thousands of youngsters of the northwest side in the parks at all hours of the day. Programs for their activities are now being planned.

Used by Organizations.

A feature of the northwest district is the free use of the grounds and rooms of the buildings by neighborhood organizations of all kinds. Assembly halls, kitchens, clubrooms, and gymnasiums are used constantly by various groups and by the classes conducted at the parks.

Basketball, volley ball, indoor baseball, wrestling and many other forms of indoor activity have been arranged under the direction of Frank M. Kalteaux, director of recreation, and attendances far in excess of last year's are expected.

Joseph F. Gubbins is president of the board; Albert E. Bennett, vice president; E. Brekke, secretary; A. E. Brucker, treasurer, and William J. Mannion, attorney. William Rieger and Oscar C. Johnson are commissioners.

CHURCH GROUP PRESENTS "QUALITY STREET"

The cast of "Quality Street," presented Friday evening by the King class of the Second Presbyterian church of Oak Park. Seated, left to right: Miss Marianne Manning, director; Miss Grace Alden, Miss Mildred Fesler, Stuart Taylor, Miss Margaret Campbell, Miss Miriam Le Gros, and Miss Josephine Russell. Standing, left to right: Hugo Le Gros, Miss Marie Leavenworth, Miss Janet Cuthbertson, and Howard Whammond.

Barrie Play Presented by Church Class

"Quality Street," a play by Sir James M. Barrie, was presented by King Klass of Second Presbyterian church of Oak Park on Friday night at the Nineteenth Century house, Forest avenue and Ontario street.

The play was directed by Miss Marianne Manning, who is coach of the Children's Civic theater and has staged a number of successful church programs during the last year.

Miss Margaret Campbell interpreted the leading part of Miss Phoebe Throssel. Having studied dramatic art in London, Miss Campbell has recently opened a school of that character in Oak Park.

A description of each scene was given by Miss Manning, who appeared between scenes in costume, this feature adding greatly to the understanding and enjoyment of the play. Musical numbers between acts were given by a trio composed of members of the faculty of the Welge School of Music, Miss Gladys Welge, violinist; James Hudson, clarinetist, and Mrs. Miriam Le Gros, pianist.

The supporting cast, made up of young people of the church, was as follows: Josephine Russell, Hugo Le Gros, Marie Leavenworth, Grace Alden, Mildred Fesler, Janet Cuthbertson, Milton Sellhorn, Jean Ferguson, Don Blanchard, Miriam Le Gros, Howard Whammond, Stuart Taylor, and Dosset Reid.

Ten children who performed in the play were: Dorothy Bodin, Sally Pearson, Barbara Bert, Winifred Holtkamp, Dorothy Decker, Mary Louise Decker, Robert Massey, Donald Massey, Robert Pierson, and Robert Miller.

A number of prominent Oak Park residents were sponsors for the group.

CATHOLIC ORDER TO HOLD BOXING SHOW TOMORROW

The West Side Associated Courts of Catholic Order of Foresters will conduct an athletic stag at Our Lady of Sorrows hall, Albany avenue and Jackson boulevard, at 8 o'clock tomorrow night. The program will consist of four amateur boxing matches staged by the Garfield Physical Training club and a musical program furnished by some of the Foresters.

Arrangements are also being made for a huge Christmas party to be held at the Majestic ballroom, 5300 West Madison street, next Sunday afternoon. There will be a show for the benefit of the children as well as the adults, according to Thomas R. Heaney, state chief ranger of Illinois. Christmas gifts will be given to the children.

2,500 ARE EXPECTED AT ALUMNI FROLIC AT HARRISON HIGH

Mrs. George Laadt, 5423 West Van Buren street, has been placed in charge of arrangements for a program to be presented by the Harrison Alumni association to be held at Harrison High school Jan. 16.

MRS. GEORGE LAADT.

The program is to be called the "alumni frolic" and will be attended by numbers of former Harrison students. Music, dramatic sketches, dialogues, and other forms of entertainment are planned. A dance will be held in the school gymnasium following the program.

Although the frolic is more than a month in the future, tickets are already on sale and it is expected that more than 2,500 Harrison alumni and students will have purchased tickets before the night of the performance. R. A. Ginsburg, president of the association, is in charge of ticket sales.

ALDERMAN SEES NEW ERA COMING TO 22D WARD

Streets Long Dormant Take on Life.

"Greater progress has been made in the 22d ward and this part of the west side during the last six months than for some years previous," states Alderman Joseph Cepek.

ALD. CEPAK.

Business has livened up, improvements in the streets and in buildings have taken place, structures which will be an asset to the west side are either under construction or being planned, and neighborhood organizations are working more than ever for the betterment of the district, according to Mr. Cepak.

New Court to Be Stimulus.

Foremost among the new assets for the district in the neighborhood of 26th street is the new Cook County Criminal Court building which is almost completed at 26th street and California avenue. The completion of this building, which will be within a few months, will stimulate that part of 26th street which has been practically dormant for years, Mr. Cepak believes.

It will be necessary for criminal lawyers to have convenient offices on the west side, and many employes of the court will find it advisable to move into the neighborhood, he says. A large increase in property values on the street already has taken place.

Neighborhood Is Changing.

Residential streets have taken on an appearance of activity during the last few months and stacks of bricks and cement testify that things are happening. The district, which was for many years a neighborhood almost solely of small residences, is changing, and old buildings are being remodeled and enlarged by the dozens, while many apartment houses are springing up on the boulevards.

What were once one story homes are becoming two flat houses, the enlarging process being in most cases the raising of the old structure and building another floor under it.

Civic and social clubs, such as the 26th Street Business Men's association, the Clifton Taxpayers' association, and the Sawyer Taxpayers' association, are doing much to promote business and improvements. Better paving and lighting are among their accomplishments, Mr. Cepak says, and efforts to make 31st street a car line are now being made. Success in this movement is hoped for soon.

Bridge Near Completion.

The bridge over Crawford avenue at 31st street is almost completed and will be ready for traffic within a few months. This will form a link between this district and the south side and will be one of the big factors in its future growth, Mr. Cepak states. Land values and business are sure to benefit, he points out.

Men of this district succeeded in having the bridge constructed after more than ten years of agitation. The 26th Street association and civic organizations, such as the Lawndale Lions' club, are given credit for success in this as well as for numerous other community improvements.

The building of a large theater at 26th street and Spaulding avenue is expected in a few months. The entire half block of stores has been bought by the theater company and construction already is being planned.

CHRIST CHURCH GIVES CHRISTMAS PAGEANT TONIGHT

Sixty-seven members of Christ English Evangelical church, Long avenue and Le Moyne street, will perform in a Christmas pageant to be given at the church tonight. Many scenes connected with the birth of Christ will be shown, including the manger scene.

Music for the pageant will be given by T. Lams at the organ. Miss Clara Heartel is in charge of the pageant, assisted by Miss B. Hansen, Miss A. Ehlers, and Mrs. Stockholm, who will handle the costumes.

Another performance will be given Dec. 23.

Musical and Tea

A musical program and tea will be given for women of the west side at the Jewish People's institute, 3500 Douglas boulevard, at 3 o'clock Wednesday afternoon.

Daughters of Zion to Hold Honor Luncheon.

BY VIRGINIA SCHMITZ.

Up in the nursery a pink cheeked, curly haired youngster coos and laughs, all oblivious to the fact that his 17 year old mother died just as many months ago as he is old.

Life is a joyous adventure for him from morning until night. His sheltered world knows only gentle hands, kind hearts, and smiling faces.

He is one of many in the Daughters of Zion Infant Home and Day nursery, at 1441 Wicker Park avenue. Let's take a peek.

Milton and Rosalind are building houses out of blocks and some of the older children are looking at books or playing games. Leo has been out in the park so he must wash his face and hands before he can get out the kiddie car.

Presently they all group around the story lady, Miss Sarah Raber, and are engrossed in the tale of Jack and the beanstalk and the Mother Goose rhymes.

"Read it again," cries Rosalind, as soon as one story is finished.

"Read it again," chorus the rest of the children.

Leo Curious About Picture.

After the second reading little Leo wants to know all about the picture.

"What is the little girl doing?" he asks. And then, "Well, why is she doing that?" and "Where does she come from?" and "Why hasn't she got a dog?"

The questions are finally answered to his satisfaction and the story hour is over.

Any child, no matter how young, in fact, most of them are taken when they are but a few days old, if of Jewish parentage, may come into the Infant home.

Most of them are orphans, some have only a father or mother who cannot support them. And those in the day nursery are children whose families cannot give them the attention and care they need. One child's mother works all day, another is ill, and a third has too many small brothers and sister to receive the proper nourishment and supervision.

Children of all races and religions are accepted in this section of the work, mostly from families in the neighborhood. The older children who are attending school come at about 3 o'clock.

Play Is Supervised.

The program for the day children as well as the permanent ones begins with breakfast. Then there are play hours supervised by a kindergarten teacher, Miss Bertha Koven, until 11. Sometimes they play in the park across from the home, but if the weather is inclement they remain indoors.

Then comes luncheon, the story hour, and for the younger children, their nap, and more play and instruction.

"We have a good many cases of undernourished children," said Mrs. M. V. Lewis, who is in charge of the home, "so our food is carefully selected to build them back to health and strength."

There are 24 permanent and forty day children, which equals the present capacity of the home. Hundreds have to be turned away each month because there isn't room for them.

The Daughters of Zion, who founded the home, are raising funds to complete their new building, which, fronting on Hirsch boulevard, runs from California to Fairfield avenue, and will have a capacity of 500 children.

Luncheon to Boost Fund.

On Monday, Dec. 17, they will hold their honor luncheon in the Gold room of the Congress hotel as the final step in their campaign for funds.

Mrs. Edwin Romberg is president of the organization. Mrs. F. Marko, secretary; Mrs. Philip Lyons is chairman of the financial committee, with Mrs. Luis Katz as treasurer, and Mrs. Harry Lewis, financial secretary.

Auxiliaries affiliated with the club are the Logan Square, Humboldt, Siegel, Senior, Fox, Albany Park, Midwest, Benjamin, Henry Davis, Midwest Junior, Humboldt Junior, Siegel Junior, and South Side.

The building will cost more than $250,000 when completed. About half the amount has already been obtained, and the group is making every effort to go over the top at the honor luncheon.

M'KINLEY HIGH COURTESY CODE HAS 11 RULES

"Thank you," "please," and "beg pardon" are words frequently heard at McKinley High school since a courtesy campaign was launched. Codes of suggestions to the impolite and weekly bulletins on courtesy are being distributed to the students. It is expected by the teachers in charge that this form of education will help to a great degree in molding character. It is planned to emphasize courtesy at the school not only during a short campaign, but for the entire school year.

Eleven rules for students of McKinley have been established as the creed of the courteous. Courtesy should be practiced in the corridors, classrooms, and study rooms, say the first three rules. Locking arms in the halls and running in them are outlawed, as well as slamming doors, interrupting classes, or breaking silence in the study halls.

Prompt and orderly coming and going to and from classes and a display of respect for teachers and classmates are emphasized. Undivided attention to teachers during instruction will be expected at all times in the future, the code states, and paper wads, rubber bands, and other devices for classroom warfare are on the blacklist.

Despite the fact that the campaign was opened only last week, decided improvement in conduct is reported. Crowding and shouting in corridors have been noticeably diminished.

STORY HOUR AT INFANT HOME AND NURSERY

"Read it again!" cry the children at the Daughters of Zion Infant Home and Day nursery, 1441 Wicker Park avenue, whenever Miss Sarah Rober finishes reading of Jack and the Beanstalk or a Mother Goose rhyme. But first they have to examine each picture and ask a dozen questions about it.

100 YULE TREES ARE ON WAY FOR WEST SIDE FETE

Giant Firs Are Coming from Vermont.

West Chicago park commissioners that the trees would be on the selected spot in Garfield park by Dec. 10 ready for amalgamation into the one huge tree sixty-five feet high.

Several new faces were to be seen in the group at this week's Christmas tree discussion. Al Mages, Sam Chertok, and W. R. Gray—tree men; R. L. Bard of the Commonwealth Edison company; H. H. Lovell of the Illinois Bell Telephone company; C. W. Arnum of the Mutual Novelty Manufacturing company, and A. M. Ryckoff of the North Shore park district.

Mr. Lovell was not to be baffled by any problems of construction, for he has erected similar trees in Chicago for many years. He gave assurance that he would get busy with the ladder scaffolding and other requirements as soon as the trees were delivered.

Novel Decorations Shown.

Mr. Arnum brought along an assortment of icicle spangles which he said were the "life of a tree," reflecting colored lights like so many mirrors and giving the effect of thousands of stars.

N. J. Pausback of the Pausback Scenery company presented a display of sample ornaments designed to meet the requirements of trees of gigantic size. Among these was a modern idea in spangles, some of them ten inches in diameter, and of various shapes and colors. Another decorative feature consisted of metal balls in all colors and sizes, each covered with silver sparkles.

J. F. Fisher of J. F. Fisher & Co., electrical contractors, held that while he wished to see this year's trees surpass all previous efforts in Christmas tree lighting and decoration, he also hoped to see it embody the features associated with the old fashioned Christmas tree.

Yule Programs Assured.

In connection with the social programs at the tree Chairman Meyne suggested that it would be a splendid idea if the organizations—lodge, church, school, park playgrounds, etc.—that gather to sing carols place the pennants of their organization so that they form a circle about the tree.

William H. Schultz, playground director for the west parks, says appropriate programs will be arranged to take place about the big tree.

There are to be three other TRIBUNE Christmas trees—one in Grant park, one in the Midway plaisance, and one in Lincoln park.

AUSTIN SENIORS PONDER CHOICE OF VOCATIONS

Realizing that the days of school life for them are drawing to a close, the seniors and juniors of Austin High school have been devoting much of their attention lately to vocations.

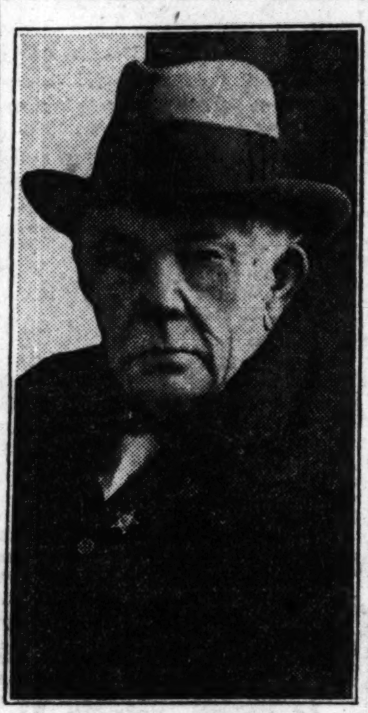
Addresses by authorities on vocations have been made to the classes at special assemblies. Edward Rynearson, director of vocational guidance of the public schools of Pittsburgh, Pa., was one of these speakers. Miss Anna S. Davis, director of vocational guidance in the Chicago public schools, talked to them on the necessity of selecting one's vocation early in life.

Men and women who have won high places in Chicago's industries have been invited to address special groups on the advantages of the businesses and trades in which they are interested.

Ebinger School Radio Fund Increased by Card Party

Proceeds from a card party given by the Ebinger Parent-Teacher association last night will be used to swell the fund with which a radio will be purchased for the school. Bridge, five hundred, and bunco were played at the affair which was given at Schneiders' hall, 6713 Olmsted avenue. Many of the prizes were donated to the ways and means committee, of which Mrs. I. Engel is chairman.

ACTIVE AT 97



F. W. SEYMOUR.

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

F. W. Seymour, 97, of 614 South Eighth avenue, Maywood, tells an interesting story of the historic periods of the United States before and after the civil war. Mr. Seymour, who was a Union soldier during the war, carried the Stars and Stripes for one of the regiments that marched with Sherman to the sea and he is said to have been the first Union man to carry the flag into Atlanta, Ga., on that famous journey through confederate territory.

Mr. Seymour was born in Herkimer county, New York, April 14, 1831. He moved to southern Michigan with his parents when there was no railroad west of Detroit. In 1852 he joined a group of men who crossed the western plains in a wagon train to reach California and returned by the popular route of that period, the Isthmus of Pnama, around New York and by train to Michigan.

Mr. Seymour now is in the best health and, according to his friends and neighbors, he is as active as a man of 70.

JEWISH THEATER GROUP SEEKING MORE CHILDREN

An appeal for more members of the Children's Theater group of the Jewish People's institute has been sent out by Miss Frances Lewinthal, director. Rehearsals on the big play of the year are to begin shortly, according to Miss Lewinthal, and more members are needed before the play can be finally selected. One of two plays tentatively selected will be given.

The major parts in either of the two, Miss Lewinthal said, are boys' parts, and she is issuing a call especially to boys between 11 and 16 years old.

There are already 17 members in this group, which is probably the only theater group in Chicago composed entirely of children giving plays especially interesting to children of school age.

NORWOOD PARK CITIZENS' BODY HOLDS PARTY

Norwood Park Citizens' association, one of the most active community bodies on the northwest side, surpassed itself last night in an effort to provide a good time for people of all dispositions and ages at a gala "ladies' night" celebration held at the Norwood Park Masonic temple at Nina and East Circle avenues.

"Mars One Hundred Years Hence" was the title of a skit presented by the program committee under the direction of W. A. Wolschlag, chairman. Prizes were given for the games of bridge, five hundred, and bunco which took place after the stage show.

An orchestra provided dance music for the younger set and furnished the accompaniment for community singing which took place later. Refreshments were served.

TWO FULL CASTS GIVE 'LONGLEGS' AT AUSTIN HIGH

Pupils Make Costumes and Scenery.

Josephine Allin and Marjorie Welsch took the part of Judy Abbot, the feminine lead in "Daddy Longlegs," which was presented by the Little theater of Austin high school at the school last night and Friday night. Entirely different casts performed on the two evenings.

Arthur Salopoulos and Edward Roth played the male lead, Jervis Pendleton, one for each performance. Others having leading parts were Claire Dale, May Belle Finn, Orrin Wais, George Fry, Virginia Wier, Betty Myers, Juliet Newman, Lois Jacob, Margaret McLaren, Grace Nelson, Virginia Overton and Esther Galbraith.

Advertise in Theater.

Charlotte Ray and Helen Lyon had charge of publicity for the play while Laura Sher and Robert Mould handled the advertising, the latter succeeding in having the ad flashed on the screens at a number of large theaters on the west side.

Costumes for the play were designed by Katherine Trumbull, chairman of the costume committee. Miss Esther Johnson, adviser, and Edward Lafferty, chairman of the art committee, had a large part in obtaining the scenic effects, posters and other art work.

The Little Theater was founded last spring by four girl students under the supervision of Miss Madeline Glynn, teacher of dramatics at the school, and has succeeded in making dramatics so popular at the school that restrictions on the number who take part in the work must now be made.

Study All Features of Theater.

A study of stage scenery, makeup, stage electrification, play selection, and all work connected with the producing of a play is made by the Little theater group. Forty-three girls and seventeen boys are members of the group.

Rehearsals for "Daddy Longlegs" have been held for two school periods daily since the beginning of the semester, the two casts working together in making a finished work of the presentation.

PORTAGE PARK LEGION TO HOLD YULETIDE "SING"

Community "sings" have recently been inaugurated by Portage Park post, No. 183. The first venture was so successful that plans are under way to give a Christmas "sing." This "sing" will in all probability be held around the great Christmas tree in Portage Park where thousands from the northwest side will congregate.

Post No. 183 last year stood first in the state in relief work. Without giving a single dollar in cash to any person it aided, the post spent more than $2,300 in relief work for coal and food. The actual money expended by the post for relief has always been more than two-thirds of the post's total receipts from all sources.

CHOOSES EARLY

BERTHA SOKOLOW.

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Athletics is what Bertha Sokolow likes better than any other diversion. She likes it so well that she intends to become a gymnasium teacher. Bertha lives at 1506 South Albany avenue and is in the eighth grade at Pope school, Albany avenue and 19th street.

Bertha expects to enter Marshall High school in February, and, although it is a long way off, hopes to complete her education and athletic training at Chicago Normal college.

But Bertha's whole attention is not given to volley balls or Indian clubs, for she is a lover of music and plays the violin.

NORWOOD PARK GROUP SEEKING 2,000 MEMBERS

Keen competition between the north and south sides of Norwood Park has developed in a membership drive being conducted by the Norwood Park Citizens' association. Two thousand members will be their goal.

The town is divided into precincts, with a man in charge of each to go over the entire territory and persuade each household to join the association.

Kenneth W. Duncan is chairman of the north division, with Edward C. Schumann, William W. Wolschag, Harry A. Varnell, J. P. Aggerbeck, J. P. Jepsen, and Harry H. Hanks assisting him.

John L. Steffen is chairman of the south side team and is assisted by C. S. Schneider, R. S. Rouland, Elmer H. Carr, A. Goldman, O. E. Hesse, Andrew Youngberg, and Charles A. Miller.

RIVER FOREST GROUP BUILDS PISTOL RANGE

Fits Up Indoor Gallery, Hopes for Another.

Since the loss of their pistol range recently was a severe one to policemen and business men of River Forest, they are already busy fitting out a new indoor range. The old one, in Keystone field, had to be removed when the field was improved and used for other purposes by the owner.

The River Forest Commercial association is fitting out a temporary range on the second floor of a building at Lake street and Ashland avenue. Otto Luhman, member of the association and owner of the building, volunteered to provide the space.

Col. W. H. Chenoweth is head of a committee now working with Carl Soderlin, chief of police, on the installing of equipment. The new range is to be modelled after one in Oak Park where business men and policemen perfect their skill with the pistol. The colonel has also been authorized to submit a plan for the construction of an outdoor range, 60 feet long and ten feet wide, to be completed some time in the future.

Officers for 1929 will be elected by the association at this month's meeting, and a nominating committee appointed by President Rossman is working on a slate. The committee includes W. W. Meyer, chairman; E. A. Anderson, Louis J. Cross, Otto Lunham, and Dr. John B. Lyon. The new officers will be installed at a dinner meeting in January.

MOVIE AIDS FUND FOR DES PLAINES SCOUT BUILDING

Des Plaines Girl and Boy Scout camp building fund for the scout camp at Rice Lake, Wis., has been increased through a benefit performance of the movie, "Win That Girl," at the Des Plaines theater. The camp site was purchased by Charles F. Loesch of Hawthorne lodge, Des Plaines, and was turned over to the Boy and Girl Scouts of the Des Plaines district. The grounds have already been improved to the extent of a central building and a lodge hall, and expenses of complete outfitting are being defrayed from several other activities in which the boys and girls are participating.

Boy Scouts' Mothers Are Guests at Banquet

Mother of Boy Scouts in Troop No. 852, Unity Evangelical church, were guests at the Scouts' sixth annual banquet last Friday in the church. Jessie Lauderdale, scout master, and several of the boys made addresses and an exhibition of scout craft was given the mothers. The committee in charge included Louis Roeth, Earl Swanson, Louis Nettlehorst, Martin E. Johnson and Evir Viehe Naess.

IRVING PARK "Y" DINNER STARTS MEMBER DRIVE

A dinner given Wednesday evening by the Irving Park boulevard department of the Young Men's Christian association served as a starter in launching a campaign for the renewal of their charter members' memberships as well as obtaining new memberships.

Ralph H. Beasley is chairman of the drive and S. O. Stone, William L. Runzel, John J. Visser, and Sten W. Benson will assist him. This committee has obtained the coöperation of fifteen men as captains in the men's group and five boys who will be the leaders in the boys' division.

A prize will be given to each individual who obtains ten or more members. The winning teams will be awarded prizes in both the men's and boys' sections. A full privilege membership entitles the member to the use of the gymnasium and its equipment.

Irving Park Sorosis Group Gives Benefit Card Party

A benefit card and bunco party was given Wednesday night by the junior auxiliary of the Irving Park Sorosis club at the Mayfair fieldhouse. The proceeds will go to the ex-service department of the seventh district, of which Mrs. Ole Jensen is chairman. Miss Lucille Spikings, chairman of the social committee of the junior auxiliary, was in charge of all arrangements.

VERDUN BISHOP AND PARTY TO BE GUESTS OF VETS

Luncheon to Be Given in Loop Hotel Tomorrow.

Monseigneur Ginisty, the bishop of Verdun, France, and his party, Commandant Nocton, member of the municipal council of Verdun; M. Ernest Guy, secretary general of the Verdun Memorial at Douamont, and L'Abbé Lambard, member of the municipal council of St. Mihiel, will be the honor guests at a luncheon in the Louis XVI. room of Hotel Sherman at noon tomorrow.

Coöperating with Advertising Men's post No. 38 in welcoming these distinguished visitors are the citizens' reception committee, Gen. Abel Davis, chairman; committees from the state and county headquarters of the American Legion: the 33d Division War Veterans' association, and the Advertising council of the Chicago Association of Commerce. Other guests who will greet this French delegation include the French consul, the British consul, the Italian consul, the Belgian consul, and a representative of the Alliance Française.

La Boutique Nationale des Eight Chapeaux at Forty Femmes, the counterpart to the American Legion auxiliary of Le Societe des Forty Hommes et Eight Chevaux to the American Legion, will hold a meeting at 8 o'clock Wednesday evening at the Elinor club in the Stevens building. The purpose of the meeting of the Cook county salon of the Eight and Forty will be to carry out the slogan of the organization, "Fun, fellowship and service." Cards, refreshments and prizes will be on the program for the evening.

The officers of the Cook county salon for 1929 are: Mrs. A. A. Pantelis, le petit chapeau; Mrs. Grace Thayer and Mrs. Laura Curtis, les demi-petite chapeaux; Mrs. M. Caldow, la petite concierge; Mrs. B. Burton, la petite archiviste; Mrs. G. M. Kellogg, le petite aumonier, and Mrs. P. K. Crawford, le petite surintendante.

Lillian Craske Leavitt of 2016 Sedgwick street, Chicago, asks if any Chicago legionnaires know of the whereabouts of William and Harry Whiffen, plasterers, who resided in Chicago during the war, they notify her. The information is desired for a Michigan ex-service man who asks to find these two relatives of a deceased comrade of his.

Mrs. Bessie Stuart Smith, past national vice president of the auxiliary and present membership chairman of the central area, upon her return from national executive committee meeting of the auxiliary at Indianapolis, Wednesday, reported that the Illinois auxiliary has 4,000 paid-up members for 1929, and it is the intention of state and county auxiliary officers to have Illinois reach the 100 per cent mark before the first of January.

Civil Service post, No. 678, through Michael J. Foley, adjutant, 406 City hall, gives notice that all ex-service men having civil service standing are invited to investigate the personnel of the post. The officers who will command the post for 1929, and who will be installed Tuesday, are: James E. Mangan, commander; John C. O'Brien, John F. Egan and Carl W. Strassburger, vice commanders; Vincent F. J. Schimanek, finance officer; John W. Durkin, sergeant-at-arms, and Michael J. Foley, adjutant.

Chicago Police post, No. 207, and Chicago Firemen's post, No. 669, are in a membership race until Dec. 31, 1929, for a trophy donated by Edward Clamage, past county commander.

The Cook county council of the American Legion auxiliary, composed of delegates of seventy-three units, has elected the following officers for 1929: Mrs. M. Mucklestone, president; Mrs. Glenn Suthers and Mrs. C. A. Rogers, vice presidents; Mrs. W. F. Kempski, treasurer; Mrs. Edward Clamage, historian, and Mrs. Ruth Lange, sergeant-at-arms.

The Legionnaires at state headquarters, Bloomington, are hosts today to numerous commanders and adjutants of Cook county posts. These post executives are in Bloomington attending the annual commanders' and adjutants' conference.

The Cook County council has organized for a membership drive throughout the county for weeks to come. Joseph F. Novotny, vice commander of the council, is chairman of the membership committee, and the committee members are:

Ray C. Ambler, Surface Lines post, No. 154; Clyde D. Burton, Illinois Central post, No. 241; Arthur ("Jack") Poorman, Chicago Heights post, No. 131; J. Harry Moore, Berwyn post, No. 422; Fred Pretzie, Allied post, No. 266; Harold E. Sullivan, Daniel C. Gibbons post, No. 269, and Edward Geonhardt, Des Plaines post, No. 36. The task of this committee is to gain a 25 per cent increase in membership for 1929 over the mark established in 1928. They are well on the way to a 35,000 Legion membership in Cook county.

The date of the next "wreck" of Voiture 220 of the Forty and Eight, which was set for Saturday, has been changed to Thursday night and will be held at the Hotel La Salle. Chef de Gare Charles Roth has assigned the membership chairmanship to Chef de Train Henry Gano.

Every ex-service man confined to hospitals in Illinois will receive numerous gifts at Christmas, these gifts being distributed by a joint committee of members of the American Legion and the auxiliary. Among the Cook county hospitals where gifts will be distributed are Edward Hines Jr. hospital, Marine hospital, the Municipal Tuberculosis sanitarium.

Riverside post, No. 488, will hold its annual installation of officers Monday evening at the Riverside town hall. Lawrence E. McGann, national vice commander, and William A. Schlupp, commander of the fifth district, will be guests of the post.

A quantity of Christmas tree ornaments, donated by the children of the public and parochial schools of Forest Park, have been delivered to the patients at the United States Veterans' hospital at Dwight, Ill., by William A. Schlupp and members of Forest Park post, No. 414.

The new officers of Palatine post, No. 690, elected Monday, are as follows: Fred W. Hunnerberg, commander; Dr. W. McLaughlin, adjutant; Mortimer Fosket, finance officer; Herman Deverman, vice commander; William Mair, Ralph Hilderbrandt, and Paul D. Wilson, executive committee. The post has petitioned the village trustees of Palatine to paint the town name and direction signs on all water towers and high buildings in the town so that air mail flyers and commercial aviators can get their bearings when nearing Palatine.

The 1929 officers of Berwyn post, No. 422, installed by William A. Schlupp, commander of the Fifth district, are: Frank O. Rettig, commander; Frank Tobias, senior vice commander; Dale P. Williams, junior vice commander; Ralph Low, adjutant; J. G. Aiken, finance officer; Leonard Walsh, sergeant-at-arms; John Rawlings, historian, and Willard Pease, Ed Collins, Tom Preece, Carl Anderson, John Hyman, George Prentice, Henry Bastlin, Leo Peterson, executive committee.

THE FOUR LEGIONNAIRES

This quartet, known from coast to coast, has the distinction of being the official quartet of the Department of Illinois American Legion, as well as the National American Legion quartet. At the national convention held at Omaha in 1925 and at Philadelphia in 1926, Paris, 1927, and San Antonio, 1928, the quartet won the first prize in competition with other quartets from all over the country. The quartet is composed of Albert E. Price, tenor and past commander of Roseland post, No. 49; Herbert H. Blocker, second tenor, of Chicago Heights post, No. 131; Roland C. Osborn, baritone, of Roseland post, No. 49; Saul B. Kramer, bass, and past commander of Eaton-Priddy post, No. 111. The boys have done unusual work in building up the Illinois department of the American Legion.

PARK RIDGE GIRLS DRESS DOLLS FOR POOR KIDS' YULE

Baby dolls, lady dolls, and dolls of all nations are to be presented to the youngsters at James Spaulding School for Crippled Children this Christmas by the Camp Fire Girls of Park Ridge.

Under the direction of their leader, Mrs. Frank Spencely Hayles, 501 Vine avenue, the girls are busily putting the finishing touches on the work which will give these other children a happy Christmas. The junior group, under the supervision of Miss Helen Lasky, eighth grade teacher in the Park Ridge public school, has confined its work to the League of Nations dolls. The dolls dressed by these 10 year olds have been displayed in the windows of the Park Ridge Peoples and Merchants bank for a week.

Games, puzzles, socks, and mittens will also be given to the children by these Camp Fire Girls. Other charitable work of theirs has included the sending of baskets of fruit and candy regularly to the Home for Incurables, 5535 Ellis avenue, Chicago.

The Litahni group displayed its talent in a play entitled "Live Ads," which was given at the Community house Friday evening. The girls are also helping the Park Ridge Christmas seal committee in preparing tuberculosis seal leaflets for mailing.

NURSES' LEGION INSTALLS NEW STAFF TUESDAY

MRS. ANN STAHL.

The Jane A. Delano American Legion post, No. 185, composed of war nurses, will hold a meeting and installation of officers Tuesday evening at the Nurses' club, 116 South Michigan avenue. Commander George Middleton of the third district of the Legion, will conduct the installation ceremonies. The new officers are Mrs. Ann Stahl, commander; Miss Mary Crisman, first vice commander; Miss Grace Bradley, second vice commander, and Miss Martha Rohrbech, adjutant.

WHO SAID IT? When, Where and Why

The Tribune will pay $5 for each snappy quotation printed and $5 for the best answer. Send your answers and quotations to the Who Said It Editor, CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

WHO SAID:

1. Christmas comes but once a year?—Miss Warren Gaillard, box 51, Dahlonega, Ga.

2. Hold the fort, I am coming?—Catherine Hurtgen, 3811 60th street, Kenosha, Wis.

3. Once a lady, always careful?—(Repeated from two weeks ago. Does anybody know who said it?)

(Answers to the above quotations will appear two weeks from today. Answers to last week's quotations will be printed next Sunday.)

Answers

Following are the answers to quotations previously published:

Quotation—Begone, you are unfit to command. Go and put on petticoats.

Answer—During the war of 1812 Gen. William Henry Harrison was in command of the American army in the west. In May of 1813 he was besieged in Fort Meigs by a British army under Gen. Proctor and a body of Indians under Tecumseh, the great Shawnee chief who had been made a brigadier general in the British army. Some of Harrison's men were captured during a sortie and Proctor allowed the Indians to put them to death. When Tecumseh saw what was going on he rushed between his warriors and their prisoners with his tomahawk raised and stopped the slaughter. "Why do you permit this?" he demanded of Proctor. "I could not control the Indians," said Proctor. "Begone," cried Tecumseh, "you are not fit to command. Go home and put on petticoats."—Mrs. Lydia C. Gosch, 6448 North Claremont avenue, Chicago.

NOTE—Fort Meigs was built by Harrison at the Maumee rapids in northwestern Ohio in February, 1813, three months before the siege began on May 1. Proctor withdrew from the attack on May 9 after American reinforcement arrived at the fort. Tecumseh was killed at the battle of the Thames on Oct. 5, 1813, in which Harrison defeated the British.

Quotation—Off again, on again, gone again—Finnegan.

Answer—In 1897 Strickland Gillilan was city editor and most of the staff of the Richmond (Ind.) Palladium. There were a number of Irish railroad men in the town and Mr. Gillilan set to rhyme an incident related to him by his foreman, one Fitzgibbons. One day when news was scarce he handed in his verse as copy, thus arousing the ire of the printers, as it was in dialect and written on a piece of wrapping paper. The poem is entitled, "Finnigin (not Finnegan) to Flannigan."

Superintindint wuz Flannigan;
Boss av th' siction wuz Finnigin.
Whiniver th' kyars got offen th' thrack
An' muddled up things t' th' divil an' back,
Finnigin writ it t' Flannigan,
Afther th' wrick wuz all on agin.

With characteristic verbosity Finnigin evolved long reports covering a multitude of detail. This was opposed to Flannigan's standard of efficiency, so he admonished the section boss:

Don't do sich a sin agin;
Make 'em brief, Finnigin!

The next time some cars piled up, Finnigin, after clearing the wreck and starting things moving, proceeded to obey:

An' th' shmoky ol' lamp wuz burnin' bright
In Finnigin's shanty all that night.
Bilin' down his repoort, wuz Finnigin!
An' he writed this here: "Musther Flannigan:
Off agin, on agin,
Gone agin.—Finnigin."

—Lewis T. Ross, 4549 Van Buren street, Gary, Ind.

NOTE—"Finnigin to Flannigan" was published in Life later in 1897 and in 1910 was incorporated in a book of Gillilan's verse entitled "Including Finnigin." Gillilan was born in 1869 at Jackson, O. He is a well known writer and lecturer.

Quotation—I deny the allegation and defy the allegator.

Answer—Back in the '80s Edna Lyall wrote "We Two," the story of an atheist, Luke Raeburn. During a religious debate Raeburn takes his abusive opponent to task for wandering from the subject merely to indulge his personal spite. His adversary begins a vigorous protest with: "Mr. Chairman, I denounce my opponent as a liar. I deny the allegation and I scorn the allegator—"

He is interrupted by a shout of laughter, and Raeburn responds with: "My enemies have compared me with many obnoxious things, but never until tonight have I been called a crocodile."—John Hooks, 1325 West 72d street, Chicago.

NOTE—Edna Lyall was the pen name of Ada Ellen Bagley (1857-1903), an English novelist. "We Two" was published in 1884. Whether the expression originated with the author is difficult to determine. Other readers have attributed it to David Wilmot of Pennsylvania; John Finerty, former Chicago politician; and Edward Harrigan, author and comedian, who used the line in a comedy produced at the Theater Comique in New York City in 1878.

PARENT-TEACHER GROUP ARRANGES FATHERS' NIGHT

Work in helping with the education of their children and educating mothers in giving the children the best possible care is being done by the Joseph Lovett Parent-Teacher association. An extensive program, in which many of their problems will be taken up, has been planned by the women for the winter months. Lectures by men and women on various phases of education are being heard at meetings of the association.

A fathers' night is planned for the meeting of Dec. 14. A discussion of problems, followed by a lecture and a social hour, is the regular routine of the association's meetings.

Officers are Mrs. G. F. Ernsting, president; Mrs. Robert Plome, first vice president; Miss M. Sugrue, second vice president; Mrs. S. Small, recording secretary; Mrs. G. Houtsinger, financial secretary; Mrs. Homer Kirkpatrick, corresponding secretary, and Miss M. Krumpacker, treasurer.

13,000 YOUTHS WILL TAKE PART IN SCOUT SHOW

Jamboree to Be Held on Friday and Saturday.

The entire membership of the Chicago council of Boy Scouts, numbering more than 13,000, will participate in a spectacular jamboree Friday and Saturday nights at the Coliseum as a climax to the roundup that has been in progress since Oct. 1. An elaborate program of fourteen numbers has been arranged for the celebration, which more than 10,000 spectators are expected to attend. Rehearsals for the various acts are now being held in all parts of the city.

Inasmuch as the Chicago council is the largest in the world, the event is attracting not only national but international interest. Officers of the national council and local council, headed by Walter W. Head, national president of the Boy Scouts of America, and James E. West, chief scout executive of the national council, will attend the show.

Pageant to Show Background.

The jamboree will be opened at 7:45 o'clock Friday and Saturday nights with a blare of trumpets announcing the entry of Mr. West and Mr. Head, accompanied by members of the Chicago council executive board. The first scene will be a pageant depicting "The Evolution of Scouting," unfolding by chapters the development from the time of the first crusaders, through the various stages of the knights of old, pilgrims, pioneers, minute men, the nation's defenders in the civil war, men of San Juan hill, the world war sailor and doughboy, and finally the scout of today.

Following this presentation, the grand entry of nearly 14,000 Boy Scouts will take place. In columns of fours, with flags flying and bands playing, the scouts will pour into the arena from three entrances. At a signal the army will rush from the arena to their seats.

The next act will be the investiture by the chief executive or the national president of all new scouts enrolled during the roundup. This will be followed by the presentation of awards to scouts who have advanced in ranking.

Will Demonstrate Work.

The remaining scenes will be demonstrations or exhibitions of scouting, including firemanship, first aid demonstrations, pioneering, sea scouting and other typical scout accomplishments. Two other pageants depicting the "Massacre of Fort Dearborn" and and "The Scout Laws" will be given. The jamboree will be brought to a close with a grand finale showing the scouts of all nations and how they are bound together with brotherhood and friendliness. This part of the program is being arranged by the international scout bureau.

Alfred W. Stern is general chairman in charge of the show He is assisted by the following ranch bosses: I. B. Yates, north shore ranch; Abe Jaffe, west side ranch; Donald Durfey, Calumet ranch; Lloyd Rohrke, south central ranch; R. L. Van Horn, south shore ranch; Henry Lasco, northwest ranch; R. E. Maysack, southwest ranch, and R. A. Lucas, the Douglas ranch boss.

The roundup organization was headed by Gen. LeRoy T. Steward, chief scout of the Chicago council; Franklin Bradley, scout commissioner; Maurice H. Needham, publicity chairman; J. H. Douglas Jr., top-rider and chairman of the committee, and Mr. Stern.

Science and Religion Topic of Forum Meeting Tonight

"The Real Issue Between Science and Religion" will be the subject of a lecture by Prof. A. Eustace Haydon at the West Town forum meeting tonight at the Washington Boulevard temple, Washington boulevard and Karlov avenue. Prof. Haydon, who is in the department of comparative religion at the University of Chicago, is said to be particularly well equipped to present this topic. Questions from the audience will follow the lecture.

Awards Made to West Side Photographers

Mrs. William Krause, 134 Berteau avenue, Elmhurst, won first prize of $5 this week in The Tribune's contest for amateur photographers of the west side with "School Days," a picture of Henry Swisher and Maurine Simmon of Emden, Mo. The second prize of $3 was awarded to Helen Berbert, 1528 North Long avenue, for "Pals," Harry Thaw and his dog, Rhea del Ray. "My Home in June," a picture by Helene Miller, 222 Lake avenue, Park Ridge, won the third prize of $2.

THESE CHILDREN AVOID TIRESOME PIANO PRACTICE

Lawson Pupils Learn with Cardboard.

The old time, much dreaded piano lesson has passed away for one group since the introduction of a new way to learn to play the instrument. Instead of the boy or girl going to a piano teacher once a week for an hour of practicing tedious exercises and scales, 18 pupils of Lawson school, 1256 South Homan avenue, learn to play all in one room with one piano.

And they really learn, too, according to Miss Barbara Taylor, one of the teachers in charge of the work.

The new system employs just one piano, which is used to test what the youngsters have learned. Preceding this test each pupil has a cardboard keyboard and an instruction book in front of him. He learns the fingering, how to hold his hands, and how to play by use of the strip of cardboard, and does not touch the real piano until he knows the piece.

Asserts Skill Equals Old Way.

In the way little Isabelle Marks practices moving her fingers up and down the keyboard in the correct way for playing "America," and after she has learned this, she is invited by Miss Taylor to try it out on the piano. Isabelle then plays "America" with no less skill, said Miss Taylor, than some one who had been learning it on the piano for an equal length of time—but, most important, Isabelle had lots more fun learning it and does it without tedious practice. The elimination of the latter is the best thing about the new system, according to Miss Taylor.

The children do not use notes, but learn by ear. They sing the songs, and learn to place their fingers on the key corresponding to the note sung, and in this way know how a song goes before they realize it.

Learn Without Knowing It.

Miss Taylor said they really are not conscious of the fact that they are working at the music, since it is interesting and does not involve elements which they do not like.

Classes in piano are held after school at Lawson, and there are three such already organized, having eighteen children in each. Classes, besides Miss Taylor's, are led by Miss A. R. Livingston and Mrs. Rose M. Robinson.

Prize Offer for Amateur Photographers

The Metropolitan department of The Tribune will pay $5 each week for the best photograph taken by an amateur. It will pay $3 for the second best and $2 for the third.

Any scene, exterior or interior, around the home, may be entered in the contest; the boys building a snow fort in the back yard or baby taking his first steps; the old, gnarled oak against the gray skies of autumn, or an attractive nook in the living room.

Pictures should be addressed to the Metropolitan Editor of The Tribune Photo Contest. The name and address of the photographer should be written plainly on the back of the print, as well as the names of all persons in the picture. The contest is open only to amateurs and the editor will be the final judge of all entries. Theme, treatment, and clearness of the print will be taken into consideration.

No pictures will be returned.

VOICE of the WEST SIDE

RECALLS OLD ELSTON TRAIL.

Chicago, Nov. 28.—In last Sunday's TRIBUNE I noticed an article in the Metropolitan section concerning a pageant which is soon to be given in celebrating the widening and paving of Elston avenue between Lawrence avenue and Milwaukee avenue.

Due to the notoriety of this old wagon track road of late it may be of interest to state that the writer and her sister still have in their possession an old certificate [No. 29] which entitled our father [N. A. Kindberg] one full share, worth $100 in the "Elston and Wheeling Gravel Road company," as it was then known. This was made out the 25th day of January, 1869, duly signed and attested by John H. Clybourne, secretary, and F. D. Clarke, president. The capital stock of the road was $50,000.

In regard to Amos J. Snell, who became the principal owner and operator of the road after Mr. N. P. Loberg, I wish to say that we have a large photograph of Mr. Snell, which was given to father by Mrs. Henrietta Snell herself, a short time after her husband was murdered in 1888.

[MRS.] GERTRUDE L. JOHNSON.

YOU'RE WELCOME.

Chicago, Dec. 8.—I want to thank you on behalf of the business men of this district for your coöperation in helping us secure many much needed improvements out here during the last few months. Articles in your paper have given added impetus and done a good deal toward influencing the city authorities in granting our requests. Your paper has helped us to get street repairs, added police protection, flood lights over safety islands on Madison street, and has tended to arouse greater interests in community affairs among the people in this neighborhood. JAMES O. O'KEEFE,
President, Garfield Park club.

START DIGGING FOR $550,000 LIONS BUILDING

Northwest Club Members See Finish Sept. 1.

More than 100 northwest side business men and women stood in the snow for more than an hour Tuesday morning to witness the ground-breaking for the new Lions club building to be erected by the Northwest Lions club. The building, which will stand at the northwest corner of North and Kostner avenues, is being constructed at an approximate cost of $550,000.

A building corporation composed of members of the club and business men of North avenue and the neighborhood is erecting the structure, which will not only be the first Lions club building in Chicago, but will serve as a social and civic center for the northwest district.

President Turns First Shovel.

William J. Sievert, president of the corporation, turned the first shovel of dirt at the ceremony. E. C. Schneider is first vice president; Julius A. Alcock, second vice president; Max Greenberg, third vice president; C. J. Peeples, secretary; and Charles E. Scheubert, treasurer. There are in addition eleven subscribers serving as a board of directors.

William J. Arnold is field manager of the corporation and had charge of all the preliminary organization work. The work began in 1926 when the organization received a charter and business men bought stock in the building. Shattuck & Layer are architects.

Many recreation facilities will be included in the structure, among which will be sixteen bowling alleys and ten billiard tables. Six stores will face on North avenue where the main entrance leading into a large ballroom will be.

Meeting Halls on Second Floor.

There will be lodge and meeting halls on the second floor which will be available for the meetings of various northwest side organizations. The Lions club meeting room and clubrooms will occupy part of the third floor of the building.

A fully equipped athletic club will occupy the remainer of this floor. A large gymnasium, handball courts, card rooms, showers, steam baths, and rest rooms will be included on this floor, which will be the athletic center of the district. It is expected that the building will be ready for occupancy by Sept. 1, 1929.

revolutionizing an industry in which there is more than $2,000,000,000 invested?" Well, Mr. Gibson, we used up two regular handkerchiefs and the spare in the upper left coat pocket on Al Jolson's "Singing Fool" and the lacrimosity was so unanimous that at the end of the performance McVicker's looked like the roof had sprung a leak. Personally we think the talkies will go big and, if Al's voice holds out, will revolutionize the umbrella industry.

A pedestrian a day is being hit by automobiles in Irving Park boulevard between Crawford and Cicero avenues. High speed and disregard of traffic laws are responsible. A survey disclosed that 80 per cent of drivers ignore a stop sign at Keeler avenue. Business men have protested to the Albany Park police.

Mr. and Mrs. Lester J. Brons of 1032 South Oak Park avenue, Oak Park, we are advised by special air mail delivery, "had their Rogers Park friends—the Cuneys, the Jackwerths, the Walthouses, and the Carpenters—out for some poker and darn good ice box cake. Lots of whoopee was in order and every one had a good time. Brides these days can surely make lovely ice box cake." That last is somewhat cryptic, but what follows isn't: "Thanks! They're ardent followers of yours and will grin with gusto over this if you've any room at all." Give it the best room we've got, Mr. Printer.

* *

Harry Simon, the lace curtain expert of the Boston Store, and noted citrus fruit connoisseur, is indulging exclusively in Arizona oranges these days in his home at 4537 Clifton avenue, we glean from the proprietor of the corner delicatessen. Harry is quoted as saying he prefers them to the California or Florida brands! Imagine!

* *

Sauganash, one of our suburban garden spots, is receiving the attention of Victor R. Carlson, the enterprising carpenter of 6100 Mozart street. He plans to build a snug brick and stone, six room house, with hot water heat, tiled kitchen and bath, mechanical refrigeration, disappearing ironing board and all the other contrivances so dear to ye missus' heart. "Today," says Vic, "we can build everything into the model home except the husband."

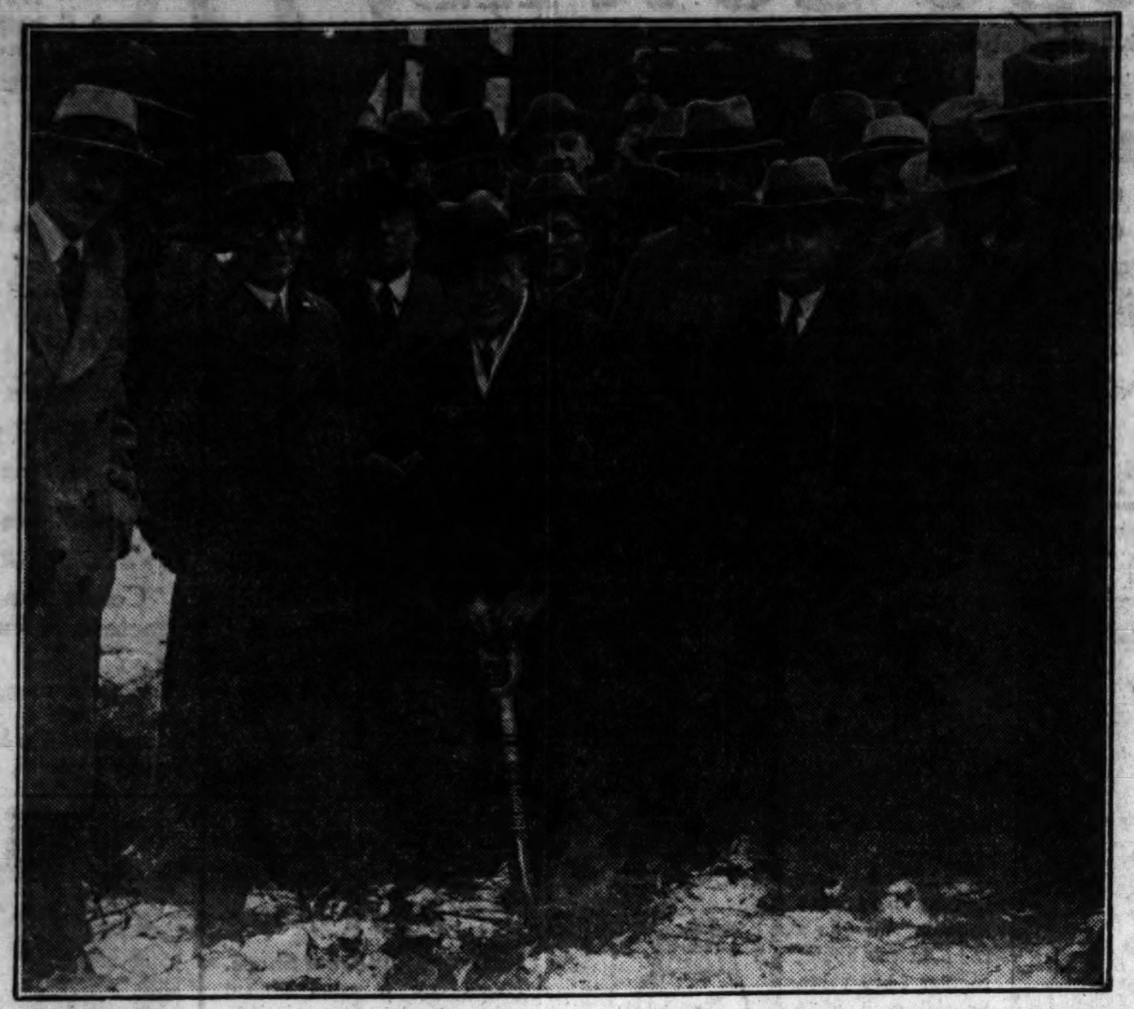
* *

John Simmons of 1411 North Monticello avenue; his daughter, and his granddaughter were all fitted with eyeglasses at one sitting and Robert Mortensen, the optician, of 3822 West North avenue, is justified, we believe, in his opinion that the Simmonses are as farsighted a family as this village boasts.

* *

Robert Idem, an elderly man of Norwegian birth, is an elevator operator in the Federal Life building at 168 North Michigan avenue—one of the unknown rank and file of a great city. So he was to us until Tuesday afternoon, when we stepped into his lift. We carried an evening paper. "How's George?" was his greeting, and the note of solicitude in his voice was unmistakeable. "About the same," we said. He shook his head. "What a pity; a finer gentleman never lived." The man in Buckingham palace would like that, we think.

HOLD CEREMONY FOR CLUB BUILDING



Members of the Northwest Lions club held a ground breaking ceremony this week at the site of their new clubhouse, North and Kostner avenues. In the front row: Julius A. Alcock, Max Greenberg, William J. Sievert, president, with shovel; Chris Rosengren, E. C. Schneider, and William J. Arnold. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

GARFIELD PARK CLUB ELECTS G. P. MADIGAN

New Officers to Be Installed Jan. 7.

George P. Madigan of Madigan Bros., 4030 West Madison street, was elected president of the Garfield Park club for the coming year at a meeting of the board of past presidents Monday. Mr. Madigan, who succeeds James O. O'Keefe, will be installed at the meeting of Jan. 7.

John I. MacGowan, assistant cashier of the Garfield State bank, was reelected as vice president, and Henry G. Kohl of the Equitable Insurance company was named by the board as secretary. Charles Opper of Baer Bros. and Brodie was elected treasurer.

Board of Directors.

The directors, all business men of the district, are William Druley, John M. Weilland, H. Weinstein, Walter Marquart, A. Marshak, J. W. Sixeas, R. A. Schweiwe, John Klieman, F. A. Augustine, W. L. Coughlin, and Delbert Clithero.

The board of past presidents is headed by C. B. Clemons and includes Ray Mudd, T. R. Heaney, Thomas Healy, Jack Fick, Jack Koberstine, Charles G. Smith, and A. R. Campbell.

The Garfield Park club, which has been a leading civic and social organization in the neighborhood of Madison street and Crawford avenue for fifteen years, includes most of the business men of this part of town among its members. It was through the efforts of the club that many large business houses were brought to the district, and the present place of Madison street among outlying shopping districts is due in good part to the work of the Garfield organization.

Brings Traffic Improvements.

Many improvements, such as the paving of the streets, the installing of flood lights over safety islands, and stop lights along Washington boulevard are credited to the club. Almost every movement for improvement from the sprinkling of the streets to the protection from robbery for the merchants is advanced through the club. It meets every Monday at noon for luncheon and usually a talk on some current topic by a prominent business or professional man. Each meeting is in charge of one or more firms included in the membership of the club.

ROOSEVELT BODY TO BOOST TRADE OF ITS MEMBERS

Plans to advertise the merchants among its members are being worked out by the Roosevelt Commercial association. Direct mail appeals to residents of the district are to be made by the association under the direction of J. W. Thompson, secretary and treasurer.

Many things have already been done for the advancement of business interests on the street. Work in regulating the ethics of merchants and establishing a one price code has been done, making this one of the few districts of the city to have such a system.

Street repairs in this part of the west side are obtained through the association, which has Roosevelt road from Kedzie avenue to Crawford avenue sprinkled twice daily and kept in good repair. The recent menace of cabs parked all around the intersection of Kedzie avenue and Roosevelt road to the disadvantage of merchants was recently dealt with by the association, which obtained a ruling from the police department limiting the number of cabs allowed to park at the corner before 4 o'clock in the afternoon.

Bright lights at the main corner of the street have been obtained by the association as well as at other points along Roosevelt road. There are now 225 merchants in the association.

St. Catherine's High to Give Benefit Party

On next Tuesday evening, the senior girls of St. Catherine's High school, will give a benefit card party in the school auditorium, 5600 Washington boulevard. The funds will go to St. Patrick's academy chapel.

MAYWOOD GROUP OPENS PAINTING, ART CRAFT SHOW

The Maywood group of the Austin, Oak Park, River Forest Art league has opened its exhibit, which will continue until Dec. 17. The paintings and craft work are being shown at 718 South Fifth avenue, Maywood.

Various clubs are acting as hostesses each afternoon and evening. The opening reception was in charge of the art department of the Twentieth Century club.

Artists of Maywood, Melrose Park, and Bellwood are represented in the exhibit. Clarence Donaldson is president of the Maywood group.

ELSTON AVENUE INDIAN PAGEANT TO OPEN DEC. 15

Doings of Billy Caldwell to Be Featured.

The opening day of the Indian pageant and street celebration of Mayfair has been set for Dec. 15, when a parade of horse-drawn vehicles, floats, and automobiles will be staged. The parade will be in two sections and all merchants of the district have been invited to join.

JAMES C. MORELAND.

M. F. M'MAHON.

A barbecue at 5601 Elston avenue will follow the parade. Refreshments, candy, and advertising specialties for the youngsters will be distributed. Starting at 9:30 o'clock in the evening a dance will be held at 5308 Lawrence avenue.

Fifteen business, improvement and social organizations of the Mayfair district have joined in arranging the pageant, the main theme of which will be the historical background of the district. Frank P. Murphy is general chairman of the celebration, assisted by Clarence P. Hillman, secretary and treasurer.

Heads of Committees.

James C. Moreland is chairman of the executive committee; T. Bertram McGrath, finance; Clarence P. Hillman, publicity; A. G. Erickson, program; George Eckhoff, parade, and George C. Wolff, entertainment.

General committee—M. J. Suerth, C. Hanson, R. K. Bowber, C. Thomas, E. Donath, and E. H. Hodel.

Mr. Murphy and Franklin S. Catlin have spent a great deal of time perusing old records at the Chicago Historical society concerning their district in an effort to obtain information which will enable them to reproduce the early times as accurately as possible.

In the records which they have uncovered the name of Billy Caldwell appears again and again in connection with the purchasing of the land along the north branch of the river from the Indians. Caldwell was instrumental in this and in the first settling of the land by white people. Incidents concerning him and the time in which he lived will be included in the pageant.

Billy Caldwell, or Sauganash, as he was called by the Potawatami In1dians, was a half-breed Indian, born about 1780. His father was an Irish officer in the British army and his mother was reputed to be an extremely beautiful Indian girl.

Educated at Jesuit schools to speak both English and French, in addition to the Indian dialects which he already knew, Caldwell first is heard of in Chicago history in connection with his rescue of the women and children of the Kinzie family from massacre by marauding savages in 1812.

He is on record as a voter in the 1820's, and as clerk of election and justice of the peace of Peoria county. He is first heard of in connection with the land along the north branch of the Chicago river, now the Mayfair district, in 1829, when two and a half sections of land there were granted to him. This land is now Edgebrook forest preserve.

It is said that Caldwell was much interested in education and offered to buy books and clothes for any Indian children who would go to school in the district.

A tree planted at what is now the intersection of Caldwell avenue and Rogers avenue in 1816 still marks the old boundary of the old Fort Dearborn reservation. This land was held until 1833, when the Indians were forced to sell by the defeat of Black Hawk, and it was at the peace negotiations at this time that Caldwell was instrumental in getting the Indian chiefs to give up the land. He was paid $10,000 by the government for his work in this.

Had First Chicago Residence.

After this time Caldwell lived as a white man was one of the leading citizens of earliest Chicago. He occupied a house built for him at North State street and Chicago avenue, which is said to have been the first frame house erested for a residence in Chicago.

These early days of Caldwell as a citizen of Chicago marked the beginning of Elston avenue. He and Daniel Elston, landholder of the district, used to travel the old road which the latter finally built as a plank road, marking the real beginning of the street.

An old Boy Scout cabin now stands on the spot where Caldwell's later home was in that section, and business and residential districts have grown up on the land which was obtained from the Indians with the aid of Billy Caldwell.

The development of the district from that time was marked by the building of plank roads on Elston and Milwaukee avenues, with a toll gate at the junction of the two.

A forty-eight foot paved highway now marks the old road, but things as they were in Caldwell's day will be reproduced by the Mayfair pageant. Toll gates and the old toll gate house will be rebuilt for the pageant. Several old settlers of the district who remember the later days of the plank roads and toll gates will be on hand to show how they were operated.

THE CHUCKLE COLUMN

Wifie—I think men should share the housework with their wives.

Modern Hubby—Yes, I hate to see those selfish husbands who want to do it all themselves.

TWO BOOKS BY LATE L. J. BLOCK DUE THIS WEEK

Posthumous Volumes Prepared by Associate.

Dr. Louis J. Block, late principal emeritus of Marshall High school and noted poet, essayist, and musician, left a large volume of unprinted works at the time of his death last year and entrusted the printing of them to Max Batt, faculty adviser of student publications at the school. Mr. Batt, who has been working on Dr. Block's manuscripts, announced yesterday that the first two volumes will be off the press this week. They are being published by Kroch's book store.

DR. LOUIS J. BLOCK.

Includes Group of Sonnets.

The first volume edited by Mr. Batt is called "Poems and Dramatic Sketches," and the second is "Essays and Adventure in Art, Literature and Life." A collection of sonnets by Dr. Block, lyrical and narrative poems and dramatic sketches, including "The Escape," which was produced at the school last year, are in the first book. Articles previously published in such magazines as the Dial and the Sewanee Review, to which Dr. Block was a frequent contributor, are included in the second volume. A number of the sketches in this volume have been read before clubs and literary organizations in Chicago by Dr. Block.

An introduction to the first volume includes a brief summary of Dr. Block's life written by Mr. Batt. A number of illustrations will appear in the books. The books will be bound in sea green figured cloth.

A collection of letters from many notable figures in American letters sent to Dr. Block during his long career was recently exhibited in the library at Marshall. Letters from Oliver Wendell Holmes, James Russell Lowell, Edmund Clarence Stedman, David Swing, and many others were in the collection.

Active in Central Music Hall.

Dr. Block was one of the most active members of the old Central Music hall, at State and Randolph streets, which was the literary center of Chicago in the '80s and '90s.

His last book, "The Judge," was published in 1915. Others of his works are "Dramatic Sketches and Poems," 1891; "The New World and Other Verse," 1895; "Capricious," 1898; "Many Moods and Many Minds," 1906; "The World's Triumph," 1909.

Dramatic Club to Give Play at Sanitarium

"Too Much Brown," a three act comedy, will be presented by "The 13 club," composed of thirteen young men of the the north and the northwest sides, next Saturday evening at the Chicago Tuberculosis institute at Naperville.

MISS MARIE WESTREY.

MISS HELEN BENINGHOFF.

The play has already been presented twice during the last week: On Wednesday at the St. Alphonsus athenaeum, when the general public was admitted, and on Friday before patients of the Chicago Tuberculosis sanitarium at Bryn Mawr and Crawford avenues.

Dramatic Club a Subsidiary.

Because the charter of "The 13 club" states that at no time will more than thirteen members be on the roster, a subsidiary dramatic club was formed so that plays in which both young men and women took part could be presented for charitable purposes.

Two plays a year are produced, one publicly to raise funds to pay expenses for the philanthropic presentations. Usually the plays are enacted at two or more hospitals.

H. Thomas Downing plays a principal rôle in "Too Much Brown." Joseph Murphy, who has acted in numerous amateur plays and, although rehearsing for the lead in "The Whole Town's Talking," presented recently by the Lake View High School Alumni association, when rehearsals for "The 13 club's" play were taking place, consented to undertake an important rôle in "Too Much Brown." Miss Helen Beninghoff and Miss Marie Westrey are playing principal feminine rôles.

Directed by D. M. Henderson.

Miss Theresa Deyette, Miss Margaret Cripe, Herbert Piske, Sam Vrablik and Alfred Robitaille are also in the cast. D. M. Henderson is the director.

Officers of the club are: Alfred Beninghoff, president; Edwin Raddatz, vice president, and H. Thomas Downing secretary and treasurer.

the costumes, and Mrs. Schultz Kranz, who is directing the dances. The dances are arranged by James Griffin, director of the Uptown theater and teacher of dancing, and Miss Agnes Beesmayer, physical director at New Trier High school.

KINDERGARTEN CHILDREN HAVE YULE CHARITY

Give Toys for Unfortunate Youngsters.

Poor children of Chicago will not be without a merry Christmas as far as the youngsters of the Georgia Guard kindergarten of Park Ridge can prevent. They will distribute new and rejuvenated toys to the poor with the help of the welfare committee of Park Ridge.

Under the direction of their instructors, the children are painting and mending half worn toys which they bring from home. A few are bringing money to buy playthings and some bring new toys. The youngsters are also doing their bit toward filling Christmas dinner baskets for the unfortunate.

The Georgia Guard kindergarten is separated in two sections, one occupies a large playroom in the Park Ridge Community church and the other a similar schoolroom in the Methodist church. These locations give the children on each side of the railroad tracks access to a kindergarten.

Provided by School Trustees.

The Georgia Guard is a private kindergarten. Mrs. Samuel R. Guard, 718 Gardin street, has donated her services and insures it against loss as a memorial to her daughter, Georgia. Park Ridge public schools have been overcrowded and for this reason no kindergarten classes were added. Mrs. Guard is a member of the public school board of Park Ridge.

A new method of training is in use at the kindergarten. It is called the method of self control for little children. Miss Stella Marie Pike of St. Charles, who is a graduate of the Pestalozzi-Froebel Teachers college in Chicago, supervises the two kindergartens with Mrs. Guard.

No "Bad" Children There.

One of the features of the new teaching system is the development of self reliance. No child is ever "good" or "bad" in the conversation of the teachers. An obedient youngster is praised for being "strong" while those who get into too much mischief or are inattentive are told that they are acting "weak." It is suggested to them that weakness of this sort is nothing to boast of and to be strong is a worthwhile achievement. The general result is usually a "strong" child, according to the teachers.

In explanation of the charitable work, the children were told that the toys are to be given to "little ones who are not as fortunate as you," thus attempting to put away all budding thoughts of snobbery and enlisting the youngsters in the plan of making others happy at Christmas time.

Sale Today to Be Benefit for Nuns' Work with Poor

A sale for the benefit of the Helpers of the Holy Souls, a community of nuns who work among the poor, will be held this afternoon and evening in assembly hall adjoining the convent. Miss Victoria Warnesson is general chairman, assisted by Mrs. Fred Parker in charge of the miscellaneous booth; Mrs. Marie L. Dupree, the aprons; Mrs. Edward J. Buckel, towels; Mrs. Thomas Cranston, lamps; Miss Anna Loftus, Miss Colletta Curran, groceries; Mrs. George Kobs, toys; Miss Loretta Carmody, the piety store; Mrs. J. M. Owen, candy, and Miss Ella Kennedy, the tearoom.

Parent-Teacher Meeting.

The Irving Park Parent-Teachers' association will hear Dr. Roy H. Brown, pastor of the Irving Park Presbyterian church, next Wednesday afternoon talking on "Some Thoughts About Christmas."

Do You Know These Titles?

How much do you know about titles? If you were introduced to a señora and to a señorita, could you identify the unmarried one? This quiz is composed of fifty questions on titles of all sorts. Many of the interesting ones, abolished after the war, are restored in this quiz. Where the question asks the title of the ruler of a country which is now a republic, the old imperial title is the answer desired.

Credit yourself with two points for each correct answer. Then a score of 70 is fair, 80 is good, 90 is excellent, and if you score 100 you are a King of Quizzes!

What title is or was borne by:
1—The heir to the British throne?
2—The heir to the throne of Russia?
3—The son of an emperor of Austria?
4—The daughter of a king of Spain?
5—The son of a czar?
6—The wife of an English earl?
7—The wife of an English marquis?
8—The English ruler of India?
9—The head of an Arabian tribe?
What title is or was borne by the ruler of:
10—Germany?
11—Russia?
12—Turkey?
13—Japan?
14—Venice?
What country is or was ruled over by:
15—The khedive?
16—The amir?
17—The shah?
18—The bey?
19—The inca?
To what country does each of the following titles belong:
20—Rajah?
21—Mandarin?
22—Sachem?
23—Margrave?
24—Samurai?
25—Hidalgo?
26—Effendi?
27—Stadholder?
28—Sagamore?
29—Pasha?
30—What title corresponds to miss in French?
31—In German?

STREET CLOSED FOR PLAY SPACE AT MORTON HIGH

New Gridiron to Be in Use Next Fall.

Athletics at Morton High school received a mighty stimulus recently when the Cicero board of trustees vacated 59th court from 24th to 25th streets as a public thoroughfare and turned the property over to the school board. This strip, which comprises 39,600 square feet of land, will form an integral part of the greater Morton athletic field, which, when completed, will consist of a football gridiron, soccer field, baseball diamond, track, hockey field, tennis courts, and complete athletic facilities for women.

During the last few years the high school board has been considering various plans for an extensive athletic plant adjacent to the high school, but it was found that the vacation of 59th court was essential to each of them. Now the school property consists of two city blocks bounded by Austin boulevard and 59th court and 24th and 25th streets. The school building, which fronts on Austin, is separated from the athletic field by 59th court.

Property Owners Agree.

In order to start proceedings for the acquisition of the street, the high school board circulated a statement among property owners contiguous to the thoroughfare waiving their rights to its use as a public way. They all signed.

Backed by the unanimous support of these people, John J. Sherlock, a member of the board, was appointed to obtain the street, drafted an ordinance prescribing the vacation of 59th court, and presented it to the Cicero board of trustees through Trustee Henry Langner. He showed that the street was used very little by traffic, that it was needed for the physical education of children in the district, and that its present condition was a hazard to the safety of school children. The town board adopted the ordinance.

Tentative plans show that the asphalt pavement will be removed within the next few weeks. With it out of the way, a football gridiron, running east and west, will be laid out on the north end of the field. It is believed that enough seats will be constructed to seat at least 5,000 people for football games next fall.

Present Facilities Crowded.

Under Morton's physical education system, which provides that each of the 4,500 students enrolled take part in some form of physical training or athletics daily, the two gymnasiums, swimming pool, the present athletic field, and the twenty acre tract leased from the C. B. & Q. railway are crowded all day long. More than 600 boys are out for intramural football and 1,000 for basketball.

In 1922 the present arrangement for sports was laid out. At that time the area was adequate for the school's needs, but during the last few years teams and gym classes have been handicaped for space.

JEWISH ORATORS STAGE CITY-WIDE CONTEST JAN. 17

An oratorical contest in which the principal Jewish community and social centers are to compete is planned for Jan. 17 at the Jewish People's playhouse, 3500 Douglas boulevard.

Invitations to the Jewish centers will be sent out this week, and each is being asked to select by elimination one speaker who will represent that group. It is expected that there will be 10 or 12 speakers.

Subjects of interest to Jewish people will be discussed. Each speaker is to select his subject from a list of ten given to him by Leo Kotin, who is in charge of the program.

Three best of the speakers will be selected by judges who will be Jewish leaders of Chicago, and these will form a team which will debate with a team representing Kansas City Young Men's Hebrew association.

This is the first oratorical contest ever carried out by these centers on so large a scale, according to Mr. Kotin.

KIWANIS CLUB OF WEST SIDE ELECTS FICK

Jack Fick, west side business man and first president of the Garfield Park club, was unanimously elected president of the West Side Kiwanis club at a meeting Tuesday noon. Two tickets were named by the nominating committee, and Mr. Fick headed both of them. Unanimously elected with him was George E. Hart, vice president.

H. A. Finhold was named as treasurer; and Lloyd Lord trustee. Directors of the club were elected as follows: Ed Shalek, B. W. Bowman, J. C. McCormack, J. N. Hostetter, S. B. Jones, Dr. Henry Merrill, and S. J. Pisternick. The secretary is to be appointed by the president within the next week.

The West Side Kiwanis group, which is one of the largest and most active in the city meets every Tuesday at the Midwest Athletic club. A good deal of work is done by the club, foremost among which is the sponsoring of a scout troop composed of blind boys of the west side.

CHICAGO AVENUE FETE TO TAKE ON CHRISTMAS AIR

Red and Green to Replace National Colors.

The second phase of Chicago avenue's street widening festival and business celebration will start next Sunday when the entire street from Cicero avenue to Laramie avenue will be decorated with green and red bunting, flags, wreaths, and signs of Christmas. The red, white, and blue decorations which have hung over the street for the last week will be taken down.

The festival is being held to celebrate the recent completion of Chicago avenue from Cicero to Laramie avenues as a widened and improved thoroughfare. Its width in this stretch was increased thirty feet. George B. Neff, secretary of the Chicago Avenue Business Men's association, is head of the committee in charge.

Boost Neighborhood Stores.

J. T. Bushonville, president, and Charles A. Paesch, treasurer, are helping to promote the pageant, which is expected to be a big factor in bringing people of the neighborhood to trade at their neighborhood stores and banks instead of going to the loop and other parts of the city.

P. Verschuur, A. S. Booth, L. A. Warner, J. D. Wolf, D. G. Barry, A. Wagner, C. Bach, W. Barry, W. F. Whitney, J. W. McKague, L. Jensen, J. Blaney, E. H. Olson, J. Handelsman, J. Van Bladel, and V. M. Patano have also been active in working for the success of the celebration.

They have prepared a number of features, among which is the bringing of Santa Claus to Chicago avenue where he will stay in various stores on different days during most of the month. Presents will be distributed by Santa to all children who come to see him accompanied by their parents.

Merchants to Give Prizes.

Continuing with new attractions all during the month, the celebration will be brought to a close just before Christmas when prizes to people of the neighborhood will be distributed by the merchants. Each merchant is awarding a prize to some purchaser, and there will be a separate drawing in each store. As each merchant is distributing his own tickets with purchases and will award his own prize, a contact between the people of the district and each member of the association instead of with the association as a whole will be established, Mr. Neff pointed out.

Another feature planned for next week is the opening of the Symphony theater, Chicago avenue and Cicero avenue, which will take place as part of the celebration.

The celebration was launched a week ago with a parade of floats and decorated automobiles in which all members of the association participated. Headed by a band, there was a line of march more than two blocks long.

Christmas Seal Playlet Offered for Programs

A five minute Christmas Seal playlet has been prepared by the Jack and Jill players for use on request by any organization that wishes it, as an aid to the Chicago Tuberculosis Institute's annual sale of Christmas seals. "Sour Milk Turned Sweet" is its title and only two actors take part in it. The younger actors of the group have arranged another health play, "Pirate Percy and the Slovenly Sloop," which may be obtained for performance also on the asking.

Party Aids Girl School.

The Park Ridge Woman's club juniors held a card and bunco party Friday evening at the home of Miss Adeline Paulsen, 508 Knight avenue, Park Ridge. The proceeds of this party will go to the Park Ridge School for Girls.

TEMPLE JUDEA PLAYERS WIN CURTAIN CALLS

Offer 'Seventh Heaven' of Austin Strong.

Repeated curtain calls were accorded the Temple players of Temple Judea, 1227 Independence boulevard, at their presentation of Austin Strong's "Seventh Heaven" in the temple auditorium last Sunday night.

Especially well received was the work of Julie K. M. Rubin, whose interpretation of Boul, the aged cab driver, aroused a good deal of laughter as well as commendation from the group of west side young people who witnessed the play. "As good as the movie," was the general comment on the work of Benson L. Baskin, as Chico; Sophie G. Shiffman, who played Diana; Syd Simons as Brissac, and Silvia Weisberg in her portrayal of Nana.

Members of the Cast.

Albert Haut played the Sewer Rat, Arlette was given by Sonia Simkin, and Jerome J. Greenberg played Pere Chevillon. Other players in the cast were Edwin Oman, Irving Cohen, Ephram Tapper, Joe Idelman, William Navid and Isabel Crane.

The Players are coached and directed by Walter A. Lyons. They are in their fifth season and give a play every month. "Laugh That Off," a farce comedy, will be the Players' presentation for January.

Sponsored by Dr. Sheppard Remington, the Players build their own settings and paint their own scenery under the direction of Mr. Greenberg, stage manager. Hannah Greenberg is secretary and treasurer of the organization; Shirley Brenner, publicity chairman; Ed Turch, custodian of properties and stage carpenter; Lester I. Goodman, electrician; Sidney R. Weisberg, librarian; Mitchell Porwancher and Edwin L. Oman, art and scenic staff, and Martin Plotnick, custodian.

Dance Follows Each Play.

Each play given by this group is followed by a dance in the hall of the temple. For many years one of the most successful of little theater groups, the Players' organization is not in any sense a school, according to Dr. Remington, but is proving a valuable educational influence for those of the west side interested in the theater.

THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE STATION on the Drake Hotel
416.4 Meters—720 Kilocycles

SUNDAY, DECEMBER 9

R. H. L. . . . 9:15

THE Linebook is out, and its papa is going to pick his pick of the lucky contribs to be read in the "Air Line" tonight. So many people have bought the Line Book since last Tuesday that R. H. L. is quite sure they would like to hear a few of the excerpts read. 9:15 is the time, hound dogs or no hound dogs.

SYMPHONY 6:00

DR. FREDERICK STOCK, director of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, again presents his world famous organization and continues its series of Sunday evening radio concerts. The fullness of their huge ensemble and the most intricate of passages are brought to your presence at 6 o'clock tonight.

GOLDKETTE . . .

LIKE no other band is this one! Jean Goldkette and his W-G-N Dance Orchestra have taken all the squawks out of dance music and turned it into one of the most exciting forms of melody. Deep tones . . . ultra modern rhythm . . . fine arrangements, all belong to Goldkette. 1:30, 10:15 and 11:15.

JEAN GOLDKETTE

THEY NUMBER 1,000

The 100 Club has grown to large proportions! Particular radio listeners confine their listening to W-G-N until the hours of entertainment equal 100. Then they cut out the below coupon, fill it out and send for their membership certificate. The thousandth member is:

1000. Adeline Best, Chicago, Ill.

1004. W. P. Clark, Chicago.
1005. Harry F. Wiggins, Chicago.
1006. Joe Redline, Green Bay, Wis.

I have listened to W-G-N for 100 hours exclusive of other stations. Please send me a certificate of membership in the 100 Club.

NAME ....

ADDRESS ....

CHILDREN'S CONCERT 5:30

A CONCERT, that's what it is. It is a symphony concert planned and played for the children. Don't, however, assume that it is something undignified. Children enjoy it more because the lives of the composers and the occasion for the composition are explained in the announcements, showing that the composers are just nice men and women like us, and there is nothing odd about them. The concert at 5:30.

FOOTBALL

THE pro season ends with one of the hardest fought games of the season. The mighty Green Bay Packers swoop down on the Chicago Bears and will try to tumble them down the long white ladder at Wrigley field to end the season. No matter who gets tumbled, you will hear a play by play account of the struggle from W-G-N, 2:15.

ROBERTS . . .

A FIT soloist to share the hour with Jean Goldkette is Frank Roberts, tenor. He is able to display a most unusual talent as he sings his interesting repertoire of semi-classical songs. Listen at 10:15.

PAT . . . . . .

PAT BARNES with a song, a laugh, and maybe a tear if you are not careful. 7 o'clock.

FEDERAL TRADE BODY MAY RULE SOON IN R. C. A.

Monopoly Case Still Is Pending.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 8.—In view of the recent decision of the Supreme court of the United States in refusing to review the so called tube case of the Radio Corporation of America against the receiver for the De Forest Radio company, some action is due in the near future by the federal trade commission.

The trade commission several years ago issued a complaint against the Radio Corporation of America, claiming among other things, that the corporation is a monopoly. That case has never been decided, but it is expected that the motion to dismiss the case, which is now pending before the commission, will be taken up shortly.

In addition to that original case the commission also has before it a complaint which it issued some months ago against the corporation, commonly called the tube complaint. This tube complaint is almost identical with the case in which the Supreme court refused to take further action.

Action Is Expected Soon.

In view of this situation, the commission is due to take action on its tube complaint against the corporation. It is possible that it will issue what is termed a "cease and desist order" against the corporation. That will end the case of the commission in the tube complaint. The corporation will have to obey the order inasmuch as the courts, including the highest court in the land, have already ordered the corporation to cease from what has been termed a wrongful practice.

The commission in its complaint against the Radio corporation in the tube case called attention to the so called "licensing agreements" which it entered into with a large number of radio manufacturers which enabled these manufacturers to use the patents held by the Radio corporation.

The commission makes no complaint on this agreement, but it does object to what is known as article 9 of the agreement, which makes it mandatory upon the manufacturers who have entered the agreement to equip their sets originally with vacuum tubes supplied by the Radio corporation. Up to the time of this agreement a manufacturer could equip his sets with any tubes he saw fit, or none. The commission claims that article 9 constitutes an unfair method of competition under section 5 of the federal trade commission act. This contention has been upheld in the courts, although the action was started by independent manufacturers and not by the trade commission.

May Affect Price of Tubes.

There has been a contention in some quarters that the decision of the Supreme court of the United States in refusing to review the decisions of the two lower courts in which the corporation was enjoined against the practice that the price of radio tubes would be lowered as a consequnece.

The tubes sold by the Radio corporation are manufactured by the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company, and the General Electric company, and the original vacuum tube patents are said to have been held by these companies with the Radio corporation. However, the original patents have expired.

A decision was rendered against the Radio corporation first by the District court for the district of Delaware and later a decree was entered by the Circuit Court of Appeals for the third circuit, which decree restrained the corporation from carrying out the tube agreement. The corporation then asked the Supreme court to remove the injunction and hear the case on appeal. This was refused, which means that the injunction is permanent, and the corporation cannot now carry out that tube clause.

LITHUANIAN TENOR ON W-G-N TOMORROW NIGHT

Joseph Bobrovich, Lithuanian-American tenor, appears on the program of W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel, tomorrow night at 9:30. Bobrovich was born in Lithuania, and after graduating with honors from the Petrograd Conservatore of Music he studied under the famous Gabel. He accepted an invitation to join the Imperial Opera of Moscow, where he sang until he was forced to flee the bolshevik revolution in Russia to Turkey. He proceeded to Greece and later to France, where he sang on the Riviera.

While on concert tours of the United States Bobrovich attracted much attention from critics in every city, winning favorable comment from all. He has a beautiful, well trained tenor voice, tinged with sadness throughout its extensive range.

Club to Hear Author.

Harry Franck, author of "A Vagabond Journey Around the World," will lecture before members of the Nineteenth Century Woman's club of Oak Park tomorrow. Mr. Franck will talk on "South America, the Awakening Giant."

Player Works Squeeze Play to Score Grand Slam in Radio Bridge Game

The fifth of a series of twenty radio auction bridge games will be broadcast from W-G-N, The Chicago Tribune station on the Drake hotel, Tuesday at 3:30 p. m.

The contestants will be Mrs. Catherine A. Streeter of Hollywood, Cal., who not only has the highest standing as a teacher, but is a leader in practically all bridge activities in southern California, playing with Mr. Work against Mrs. Helen M. Hubbard of San Francisco, who, besides her prominence as a teacher, enjoys a national reputation as a solver of auction bridge problems, and Mr. Whitehead.

Following are the advance hands for game five:

Mr. Whitehead.

Followers of this season's radio bridge games, the latest of which was broadcast from W-G-N, the CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel, last Tuesday, are carrying away from each presentation a definite knowledge of how to recognize and handle one or more bridge situations which are muffed by the average player. In this week's game the demonstration was given by the play of Mrs. A. R. Coffin of Indianapolis, a championship player of the American Whist league. Her partner was E. J. Tobin of Chicago, also a league champion.

The hands were: Wilbur C. Whitehead, dealer, south: Spades, Q, 10, 3; hearts, 6, 5, 2; diamonds, K, Q, 9; clubs, K, Q, 10, 6. Mr. Tobin, west: Spades, J, 8; hearts, J, 9; diamonds, A, J, 5, 4, 2; clubs, 5, 4, 3, 2. Milton C. Work, north: Spades, 7, 6, 5, 2; hearts, 8, 3; diamonds, 8, 7, 6, 3; clubs, 9, 8, 7. Mrs. Coffin, east: Spades, A, K, 9, 4; hearts, A, K, Q, 10, 7, 4; diamonds, 10; clubs; A, J.

Mr. Whitehead, dealer, opened the bidding (first hand of rubber) with one club. Even though his club suit consisted of but four cards, his hand was too strong to pass.

Mr. Tobin, west, passed. Although his diamond suit was of five cards, it contained only one quick trick, which, without any high card support in side suits, is not sufficient for even a following or defensive bid. Mr. Work, north, with a Yarborough, of course had to pass.

Bids One Heart.

Mrs. Coffin, east, with a magnificent hand, bid one heart. There was nothing to be accomplished by a higher bid. Mrs. Coffin did not fear adverse bidding. In fact, she would have been glad to have the bidding forced up to a point where she could either make a profitable business double of the adverse bid or else entice a double of her own bid by gradually raising it.

However, Mr. Whitehead passed, as he had shown the full strength of his hand by his initial bid. Mr. Tobin also was forced to pass, although, holding but two cards of his partner's suit, he would have denied her suit had he been able to do so. The weakness of his diamond suit made a take-out bid impossible. Mr. Work also passed. Therefore Mrs. Coffin became the declarer, with her contract one heart.

Mr. Whitehead led out his king of clubs, the correct lead from a king-queen suit against a suit declaration; and Mr. Tobin spread his hand for dummy. From it Mrs. Coffin played the 2 of clubs; Mr. Work played the 7; and declarer won the trick with the ace.

Pausing a moment to plan the play of her hand, Mrs. Coffin could see an easy little slam, obtainable by ruffing her two small spades in dummy, after taking her ace and king, unless one of the adversaries held only one spade. These four tricks, her six solid trump tricks, dummy's ace of diamonds and her own ace of clubs would leave her only one loser, the jack of clubs.

Wants Grand Slam.

But Mrs. Coffin was not content with a small slam. She felt that a grand slam was possible, because the bidding had shown that the king-queen of diamonds must lay in Mr. Whitehead's, south's, hand. These two cards would form the only possible side quick trick which he must have held in order to bid clubs initially on a king-queen club suit. Mrs. Coffin therefore saw the opportunity for a "squeeze" play that would give her a grand slam.

Proceeding on this basis, Mrs. Coffin led her ace and king of spades to tricks two and three. Mr. Whitehead played the 3 and 10; dummy the 8 and jack; Mr. Work the 2 and 5. Mrs. Coffin continued with the 4 of spades; Mr. Whitehead dropped the queen, dummy trumped with the 9 of hearts; Mr. Work played the 6 of spades.

The fall of the queen of spades had made declarer's 9 of spades good; therefore there was no need to use dummy's second trump for ruffing. Accordingly declarer led Dummy's jack of hearts; Mr. Work played the 3; Mrs. Coffin overtook the jack with the queen; and Mr. Whitehead played the 2. Mrs. Coffin then led five straight heart tricks, with the purpose of forcing embarrassing discards from Mr. Whithead.

Thus at the beginning of the eleventh trick, declarer, east, was left with the good 9 of spades; the 10 of diamonds, and the jack of clubs. Mr. Whitehead, south, had been forced to discard down to his king, queen of diamonds and the good queen of clubs. Dummy retained the ace, jack of diamonds, and the 5 of clubs. Mr. Work held the 7 of spades and the 8, 7 of diamonds.

The Squeeze Works.

Declarer then led her good 9 of spades, which put Mr. Whitehead into difficulty. He was fairly certain that the declarer had the jack of clubs, since his partner had played th lowest of at least three clubs on the first trick, and had since discarded the 8 spot. Therefore, if he discarded his queen of clubs, he doubtless would present the closed hand with a trick. On the other hand, if he discarded a diamond, Dummy's ace and jack of diamonds would take the last two tricks. His only chance was the faint hope that his partner, Mr. Work, might hold the jack of clubs. Therefore Mr. Whitehead discarded the 5 of clubs; and Mr. Work played the 7 of spades.

Mrs. Coffin then led the jack or clubs, dashing Mr. Whitehead's hopes of breaking her grand slam. He was forced to discard his queen of diamonds; dummy discarded the jack of diamonds, and Mr. Work the 7.

Declarer then led her 10 of diamonds, winning this last trick with dummy's ace, and achieving a grand slam, with its bonus of 100 points. She also scored 90 for honors—four in her hand and fifth in partner's—and 63 for tricks.

After the play of the hand at auction bridge was concluded, Mr. Work devoted the rest of the broadcasting period to a discussion of its bidding at contract. He considered it a moderately close question as to whether south, the dealer, should bid one club or pass.

A Likely Look.

Quoting Mr. Work's own words: "Unquestionably more caution should be exercised in bidding four card suits in contract than in auction; but the south hand has what I might call a 'likely look.' King, queen, ten, even at the head of four, is a worth-while combination, and with a king, queen, nine in one suit, and queen, ten with one small in another, I believe the hand is too strong to pass even at contract. I would favor bidding one club, but I would not criticise a pass.

"West and north would pass, regardless of whether south bids or passes, and east under either condition would bid four hearts. East would count upon six tricks in the heart suit, the ace and king of spades, and the ace of clubs—nine tricks; she also has a fair chance of making another spade. It takes much less in the west hand to insure the extra trick than would justify west in jumping to four if east bid only three hearts. For example, a jack and ten of spades in the west hand would insure three spade tricks and game; therefore the soundness of the four heart bid cannot be questioned.

"Some players with west's hand would be tempted to overcall the four hearts with five diamonds, with the idea that it is proper to show an ace for slam purposes whenever the partner bids for game. In this case it would be most advantageous for east and west to go slamming, but with no other high cards to support the ace, west would not be justified in doing so. It is absurd to contend that it is possible to foresee and to bid for a slam every time a hand turns up with which one can be made."

THREE FAMOUS STARS ON KENT HOUR TONIGHT

The Atwater Kent Radio Hour tonight will be presented by three nationally known artists, Hulda Lashanska lyric soprano, Toscha Seidel, the Russian violinist, and Wilbur Evans, bass-baritone and winner of first place in a radio audition, last year. It will be heard over W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel.

The orchestra under the direction of Josef Pasternack will open the concert with the popular "Epithalamium" from Lohengrin which raises the curtain on the third act. Other orchestral numbers are the Adagietto, from L'Arlesienne Suite of Bizet, and Florindo, from the Carnival Venitien of Burgmein.

Mme. Lashanska, who has appeared as recitalist in every large city in the United States, will sing "Ever Since the Day," from Louise, considered the most beautiful in the whole range of modern opera, "On the Wings of Song," Maria's Weigenlied, "Over the Steppe," Wings of Night" and "The Sweetest Flower."

Seidel now in his thirtieth year, is a native of Odessa. His concert tours have taken him around the world. Seidel is opposed to modern music, his favorite composer being Brahms, whose "Hungarian Dance No. 1" will close the violin numbers.

Wilbur Evans made his operatic debut with the Philadelphia Operatic society in Martha since winning the 1927 autition. He will open his concert with "Solomon's Aria" from Guonod's Queen of Sheba, followed by Nocturne, Fields O'Ballyclare, Boots.

Dutch Appropriate Funds for Short Wave Station

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 8.—The Dutch government has provided in its budget for an appropriation of $150,000 for the construction of a short wave radio station for communication with America.

CINCINNATI WILL USE RADIO TO NAB CRIMINALS

Will Safeguard City with Wireless Net.

Cincinnati, O., Dec. 8.—Safeguarding the city by a radio net with which escaping criminals may be apprehended, is part of a scheme being worked out by Cincinnati city officials.

"The plans for the radio installation which is to be made by the city of Cincinnati are as yet not sufficiently developed for us to be able to state definitely just what will be done," G. C. Smith, executive assistant to Col. C. O. Sherrill, city manager of Cincinnati, stated.

'It is planned to erect a broadcasting station that will operate on a high frequency wave, probably the same wave as that used by Detroit. Receivers will be placed in all police and fire stations and, in addition, in all police automobiles, patrol wagons, and the like.

"The radio will not be used for fire service because the city already has a most complete installation for this work and improvements to the extent of over $100,000 are now planned in the fire telegraph department. Probably the greatest benefit of the radio will be noticed in connection with emergencies where it is necessary to muster a large force of men at one particular place, or where it is necessary to throw a net around some section of the city to prevent the escape of criminals.

"We have had several occurrences in the last few months where we would have been able to apprehend those responsible for criminal acts had we been able to spread such a net. With the ordinary police communication system, it is not possible to get in touch immediately with the men in the automobiles, and, of course, much of our patrolling is done with the officers in cars. We find that it is easier to cover beats in this way."

Just six years old today.
I watch her as I write, her silly little books in her lap, studying the pictures, for we cannot induce her to become interested in reading.
An uncontrollable sprite, Helene!

WHEN BUILDING activities were resumed some years ago, after a long lull, there was "Bricks":

Oh, the tinkle of the bricks,
Yellow bricks!
I could ululate or how-l,
For today I heard a trowel
Acting murderous and fou-l
To some bricks!
Years ago we heard it yearly,
Driving people crazy—nearly—
Flitting, hitting, splitting merely;
And the tinkles and the chinkles
Gave the brow a pair of wrinkles,
Maybe six.
From the bricks, bricks, bricks, bricks,
Bricks, bricks, bricks,

From the sounding of the pounding
Of the bricks!

But today it seemed an anthem
As I heard a mason plant them—
Oh, the tinkles, I could chant them!—
Building bricks!
When the good old fashioned builders
Quit their quest for yens and guilders—
'Though the tinkling sound bewilders,
How it sticks!—
And resume, as builders orter—
Hauling yellow bricks and mortar,
Can't you see the rent hogs sorter
In a fix?
For it means the end is near
Of the landlord profiteer.
In a fix- oh, gee!
Yellow bricks, ah oui!
And the writing on the wall
Which will prophesy his fall,
Man, will look like this,
Simply this, I wis:

U. OF C. STUDIES EIGHT HOUR DAY FOR HOUSEWIFE

Home Management Conference On Tomorrow.

Experts in home economics, industrial engineers, society women, club women and home-makers will participate in a clinic on the "problems of the household manager" tomorrow afternoon and evening at Ida Noyes hall of the University of Chicago. The conference, organized by the university's department of home economics, of which Miss Katherine Blunt is chairman, is the second to be held, and was decided upon because of the success of the original conference last year on "problems of the household buyer."

Tomorrow's conference will be an effort to ascertain whether improved methods, modeled on industrial efficiency studies, can lighten the task of the average home maker. An attempt to determine whether an eight hour day for the home manager is practicable will be made. But it is emphasized by Miss Blunt that all suggestions will be based on common sense, and not on impractical considerations of what is theortically possible.

Coöperating with the University of Chicago in this conference will be the Chicago Woman's aid, Chicago Woman's club, Illinois Federation of Women's clubs, Illinois Home Economics association, Illinois League of Women Voters, and the Woman's City club of Chicago.

Leading Women Assist.

Prominent Chicago women, members of the university's citizens' committee of the department of home economics, also are assisting with the conference. The members of the committee are: Mrs. Robert McCormick Adams, Mrs. Wilhelm L. Baum, Mrs. Hubbard Carpenter, Mrs. William E. Casselberry Jr., Mrs. Walter T. Fisher, Mrs. William L. Hodgkins, Mrs. James M. Hopkins, Mrs. Edward R. Litsinger, Mrs. William S. Monroe, Mrs. James W. Morrisson, Miss Harriet Stuart, Mrs. Gustavus F. Swift, Mrs. Harry Lord Wells.

Miss Blunt will preside at the opening session of the conference at 2:30 o'clock, and Mrs. Baum wil preside at the evening meeting, which opens at 8 o'clock. An invitation has been extended to every one interested to attend.

The chief speaker at the afternoon meeting will be Miss Hildegarde Kneeland of the United States bureau of home economics, department of agriculture, Washington, D. C., who will speak on "The Home Maker's Use of Time." Miss Kneeland has been making an extensive study of actual household tasks in typical families, and the first results of her study will be given to the conference. She has approached the task on the basis of general practice of home makers she has studied in their homes, and her discussion will be centered on the development of the best possible methods she has observed.

Expert Is Mother of Eleven.

In the evening session, Mrs. Lillian Gilbreth, characterized by Miss Blunt as one of the most interesting women in the country, will speak on "Job Analysis and Personality Analysis in Household Management." Mrs. Gilbreth, mother of eleven children, despite the duties of managing such a large family, has found time to become one of the country's leading authorities in industrial efficiency.

She was associated with her husband in this work, and following his death became the director of the system he had devised. Recently she was granted an honorary degree in engineering by the University of Michigan. She is the author of several books on home problems, based on her experience with her own family.

Mrs. Gilbreth will discuss the possibilities of using efficiency methods in home making, developed by her industrial time and motion studies, but modified by her housekeeping experience.

Discussion of the address of Miss Kneeland will be led by M. Attie Souder, home management specialist, University of Illinois; Mrs. Edward Dwight Pomeroy, president of the Vocational Supervision league, and Lillian Kemp, director of the School of Domestic Arts and Science. Francis Turzicky, executive secretary the American Society of Czecho-Slovakian Engineers; Mrs. Katharine Dummer Fisher, of the citizens' committee; Mrs. Mary K. Heiner of the University of Chicago; Mrs. Wilbur E. Fribley, chairman of the American home division, Illinois Federation of Women's clubs, will open the discussion on Mrs. Gilbreth's address.

Based on Home Conditions.

"It is important to have women engaged in a study of their household affairs in a scientific attitude," Miss Blunt said in explaining the purpose of the conference. "The stimulus of ideas from practical women doing their daily job is of great assistance to the department in pointing to the practical questions which should be considered in our teaching and which should shape our study and research. At no time in this conference do we assume to shape our suggestions on the basis of theory or laboratory performance impossible in the home, but we attempt to reach conclusions entirely on actual conditions and problems."

Hold All Day Meeting on Public Welfare.

Members of the Chicago Lawn Women's club were hostesses at an all day public welfare meeting Tuesday held by the Third Congressional district group of women's clubs at the Chicago Lawn Masonic temple, 62d place and Homan avenue.

Mrs. J. A. Whipple, president of the Chicago Lawn club, welcomed the guests and gave a review of the work of the organization. The response was made by Mrs. Herbert Dix, treasurer of the Third District club. She congratulated Mrs. Whipple on the work her club was doing and hoped that the work would be continued.

Winnifred Huck Speaks.

Winnifred Mason Huck, former congresswoman from Illinois, was the principal speaker. Her talk consisted of personal experiences that she acquired while serving a voluntary sentence in an Ohio prison some time ago under an assumed name.

Other speakers are: Mrs. John W. Blacklidge, state chairman of public welfare; Mrs. Fred D. Marters, first vice president of the 10th district of women's clubs, who spoke on "Court Work"; Mrs. Anna Kaberman, state chairman of community service and motion pictures; Mrs. Harriet Maddock, district chairman, who spoke of the work being done at the Park Ridge Home for Girls; Mrs. Thomas Curtin, district chairman, who spoke on the junior membership problem; Mrs. Fred J Nichols, district chairman, who spoke on the work being done for the world war veterans; Mrs. Henry S. Mason, state chairman; Mrs. Herbert E. Pratt, state vice chairman, who spoke on public health and child welfare.

Club Chorus Sings.

A musical program was furnished by the Chicago Lawn Women's club chorus, under the direction of Estelle L. Pershing. Catherine Bly Utesch was the soprano soloist and was accompanied by Helen Seward Blank.

The Chicago Lawn Women's club was organized in June, 1908, with 69 members. The group was an outgrowth of a community musical club that had been meeting together for many years. Fourteen members of that musical organization are still active in the work of the club and have acted as officers and committee chairmen for many years.

Women's League Starts Parliamentary Law Study

The first of a series of ten lessons in parliamentary law, under the direction of Mrs. Fred Patterson, was given Wednesday at a meeting of the Sixth Ward League of Women Voters in the assembly rooms of Woodlawn Baptist church, 62d street and University avenue. A report on the state convention of the Illinois League of Women Voters, which was held last month in Moline, followed.

Grace Evangelical Women Open Bazaar Wednesday

Woman members of Grace Evangelical church will hold a two day Christmas bazaar next Wednesday and Thursday in the social rooms of the church, 60th street and Albany avenue. Articles suitable for holiday gifts will be sold throughout both days and dinner will be served on both evenings from 6 until 8 o'clock.

Indian Council to Meet with L. Brackett Bishops

Mr. and Mrs. L. Brackett Bishop, 4329 Drexel boulevard, will extend the hospitality of their home this evening to members of the Grand Council Fire of American Indians, the membership of which comprises representatives of fifteen different Indian tribes and palefaces. Mr. Bishop is a member of the organization.

OUR TOWN

Paragraphs Anent the Passing Throng.

BY FRED PASLEY.

WE have two interesting events to chronicle: (1) Roderick H. O'Connor, the attorney, of 8120 Oglesby avenue, is now the youngest grandfather in the village, 37 summers, and still right spry. The cause of the excitement is one month old and is Edmund Carl O'Connor, son of Edmund Carter O'Connor, our asbestos expert, 1610 Granville avenue. (2) Mrs. Julia Rogers of 7412 Kimbark avenue is a great-grandma; Mr. and Mrs. William J. Rogers of Homewood are grandparents for the first time, and the proud father and mother are Mr. and Mrs. Porter Rogers of that same delectable suburb. It's a boy, named for its daddy.

* *

Helen Nafe, the popular Hyde Park girl, is doing well in New York, we hear. She is playing a part in "Jarnegan" and also heads the Indian and Golden Girl dances later at the Mirador night club. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Nafe of 4842 Blackstone avenue. Mr. Nafe is the prescription druggist at 1400 East 47th street.

* *

Herbert Heale of 1208 West 64th place and his good wife, Gladys, started out the other evening to go calling, but found all their friends on the point of going calling themselves, and so returned home to find those selfsame friends in complete possession. They had come to shower Mrs. Heale with gifts and well wishes on the last birthday she says she will ever have. Tut, tut, Mrs. Heale.

* *

Friends and relatives point with merited pride to nine year old Elroy Golding of 7008 Paxton avenue, who plays classical compositions on the piano with the ease of a maestro. He recently gave a recital at the American Conservatory of Music, 71st street and Merrill avenue.

Plans are now under way, we are glad to report, by the aviation committee of the south end chamber of commerce to put a sign on the roof of the Fenger High school for the guidance of aviators. It will read "Roseland," with an arrow indicating the nearest landing field, at 63d street and Cicero avenue.

* *

HOWARD H. SMITH, the financial wizard of the Dashiell Motor company, is preparing to move into the handsome eight room home at 70th street and Constance avenue he recently purchased from John A. Jennings.

John Madden is sorely preplexed. Strolling in Illinois street, near Wells, he overheard an old cobbler singing as he tapped away with his hammer in his basement shop:

There was a tinker and a tailor,
And a soldier and a sailor,
And a swell that used to talk
about his mar and par;
And a butcher and a baker,
And a quiet little Quaker,
All courted little Jessie at the railroad bar.

That's the chorus and that's all that the old cobbler knew. John says it's been so many years since he heard the ditty he can't remember back—but it's much longer than 'way back when. Be that as it may, we should like to have the rest of the song. Is there any one among our readers who knows it?

MR. J. B. GIBSON, publicity director at the Hawthorne works of the Western Electric company, sends the editor a charming letter, which begins: "My dear Mr. Pasley: What do you think personally of the talkies, a development which gives evidence of revolutionizing an industry in which there is more than $2,000,000,000 invested?" Well, Mr. Gibson, we used up two regular handkerchifs and the spare in the upper left coat pocket on Al Jolson's "Singing Fool" and the lacrimosity was so unanimous that at the end of the performance McVicker's looked like the roof had sprung a leak. Personally, we think the talkies will go big and if Al's voice holds out will revolutionize the umbrella industry.

The genial Nick Gouwens, part owner of the Roseland Auto Wreckers, and Mrs. Gouwens are on a two weeks' motor tour of Tennessee, Kentucky and points south. Nick's last words were, "Well, I hope I don't have to call on any one in my line of business while I'm away."

YULE PARTY GUESTS TO BE DRESSED AS MOTHER GOOSE FOLK

Mrs. P. A. Gray, chairman of the luncheon committee of the Woodlawn Woman's club and Mrs. Bertram Collins, vice chairman, have been giving a series of parties for members of their committee. Mrs. Collins gave a bridge party last week, and Mrs. Gray has issued invitations to a novel Christmas luncheon to be given at her home Dec. 17. It will be a character party. Mrs. Gray will represent Mrs. Santa Claus and Mrs. Collins will be Mother Goose. The members of the committee will represent characters from Mother Goose rhymes.

CHURCH GROUP SPECIALIZES IN RELIGIOUS PLAYS

Morgan Park Club to Have Busy Season.

Since there is a growing demand among church people for religious dramas, either in the one act form, which is becoming popular for Sunday evening services, or in the three act plays that entertain an audience for an entire evening, the Dramatic club of the Morgan Park Methodist church, 110th street and Longwood drive, is devoting itself largely to this type of play.

The group, which was formed last summer, was organized as a definite step toward coördinating the dramatic and social activities with the spiritual phase of the church. The purpose of the organization is to present to the church congregation and to the residents of the community the best religious and secular drama by instructing talented young people of the church in stage technique.

Hear Lecture Each Month.

The developing and training of these young folks will be in charge of Mrs. W. H. Hubbird, director, and Mrs. Earl G. Darfler, assistant director. The work will be carried on by monthly meetings, which will be held on the first Monday of each month, when the members of the organization will hear a series of lectures on the various phases of stage technique. Later, classes will be formed in such subjects as arouse sufficient interest.

"St. Claudia," a play based on the story of the resurrection, was first given on Easter Sunday at the church and repeated for the visiting preachers and laymen of the Rock River conference.

"And He Came to His Father," a one act play based on the story of the prodigal son, was the most recent presentation of the group. This play won a prize in last year's Drama league contest, and was presented at both Blue Island and Morgan Park and is scheduled to be given by the same players at many other communities during the coming winter months.

Working on Christmas Play.

The players are rehearsing for the presentation of "Bethlehem Inn," which will be given at the church as part of the Sunday evening service on the night of Dec. 23. They are also working on a mystery play that will be presented early in January.

Janet Walker was elected president of the organization at a recent meeting. Other officers of the club are: Frank Jewett, vice president; Merle Reynolds, treasurer, and Meriam Connerton, secretary.

NURSES' LEGION INSTALLS NEW STAFF TUESDAY

MRS. ANN STAHL.

The Jane A. Delano American Legion post, No. 185, composed of war nurses, will hold a meeting and installation of officers Tuesday evening at the Nurses' club, 116 South Michigan avenue. Commander George Middleton of the third district of the Legion, will conduct the installation ceremonies. The new officers are Mrs. Ann Stahl, commander; Miss Mary Crisman, first vice commander; Miss Grace Bradley, second vice commander, and Miss Martha Rohrbech, adjutant.

SURVEY SHOWS HOW I. C. TRAINS DELAY TRAFFIC

South Shore Group Backs Up Depression Plea.

C. C. FLETCHER.

To continue their efforts toward demanding an ordinance that would compel the Illinois Central railroad to depress its tracks throughout the south shore area, representatives of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce made public yesterday the results of a survey of the traffic conditions at two of the principal crossings last Monday, the day of heaviest traffic.

The survey was made at 71st street and Jeffery avenue and the 71st street and Stony Island avenue intersections, and statistics taken between 5:45 and 7 o'clock last Monday evening follow:

Item—	Stony Island avenue.	Jeffery avenue.
Number of cars passing intersection	2,500	905
Number of cars stopped from one to ten minutes	642	332
Number of times streets closed to traffic	24	24
Total minutes streets closed to traffic	40	40
Number of street cars passing intersections	139	....
Estimated number of automobile passengers delayed	1,600	800
Number of street cars delayed	35	....
Estimated number of street car passengers delayed	2,800	....

Halted Third of Time.

The survey disclosed that traffic was at a standstill for more than one-third of the hour and fifteen minutes that it was under observation and that at these two intersections alone more than 5,200 persons besides pedestrians were delayed on their north and south bound journeys. The survey also tells the story of how these 5,200 persons lost more than 400 hours of their time on their ride to or from home.

The committee pointed out that three other crossings, Yates avenue, 75th street and 79th street, the conditions are the almost the same as the ones made by the survey. In regard to the Yates avenue intersection, E. J. Ryan, 71st street merchant, reported that traffic is frequently delayed not only at Yates avenue, but the condition affects the traffic on South Shore drive north of 71st street and as far north as 69th street.

Asserts Merchants are Harmed.

"During the hour between 5 and 6 o'clock," said Mr. Ryan, "it is almost impossible to cross Yates avenue without a delay of from one to ten minutes. We are finding that in many cases it affects the business of the merchants on 71st street because motorists avoid that intersection in their desire to get away from the delay that is inevitable at the crossing."

C. C. Fletcher, president of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce, commented upon the condition that will arise when the contemplated boulevard system to the Indiana state line is completed and traffic over Jeffery avenue has increased tenfold.

"The congestion of traffic at the intersection of Jeffery avenue and 71st street," said Mr. Fletcher, "is heavy now. But the congestion of today is in no proportion to the congestion after the south park board completes its work of widening and resurfacing Jeffery avenue and make it a part of the direct connection to the far south side and the Indiana state line.

Asserts Whole City Is Affected.

"This problem of depression is one that should concern, not only the people of the south shore, who are particularly interested in this problem because of the increasing danger to life in the community, but it should also concern every citizen in Chicago who finds it necessary to travel through the southeastern part of the city.

"We hope that the south park board will complete the contemplated work on Jeffery avenue in a short time, but we also hope that by that time the ordinance that will compel the Illinois Central railroad to depress its tracks will have been passed and the depression effected."

Morgan L. Fitch, chairman of the committee that presented the plea of the chamber last week to the track elevation committee of the city council, summed up the condition in his talk to a number of the members of the Chamber of Commerce.

"We wish to present this condition in all fairness to the owners of the Illinois Central railroad and to the officials of the city of Chicago," he said. "We believe that the depression of the tracks involves only a question of time and we see no reason why it should not be completed at an early date and in this way give the people of our territory assurance that they are in no danger when they wish to cross at one of the intersections.

Predicts Crisis for Future.

"With the increase in population of the area it will some day be necessary to provide some new arrangement of street crossing or insufficient transportation service or the complete blocking of automobile and pedestrian traffic at certain hours of the day will be the only result.

"We trust that our report, which included the survey, that was made Thursday to the council committee will bring about a solution to the entire problem. If there is any other practical solution we shall be glad to consider it, but after years of debate among ourselves and with the officials of the railroad we can see no other. We appreciate fully the advantages which the Illinois Central affords to the residents of the south shore district, but we believe that public utilities should and must recognize the conditions of the people and communities they serve."

LOOKS BACKWARD

JOHN A. CARROLL.

John A. Carroll, president of the Hyde Park National bank, remembers Lake Park avenue as an old wagon road along which cattle were driven to the old stockyards at 31st street.

JOHN A. CARROLL REVIEWS GAINS OF HYDE PARK

Increase in Stores at Hand, He Asserts.

An interesting story of the gradual but steady growth of the village that was known 35 years ago throughout the country as Hyde Park to the community that is recognized today as being one of the most thriving in the city is told by John A. Carroll, president of the Hyde Park National bank, 53d street and Lake Park avenue.

The village, Mr. Carroll says, before it became part of the city, was considered the largest in the world, and was made up of a conservative stock of New England folk who liked the quiet atmosphere of the territory that was so near the noisy downtown district.

Mr. Carroll recalls that Lake Park avenue, one of today's heavily traversed thoroughfares, was an old wagon road, and was used mainly by persons who wished to drive their cattle to the old stock yards, then located at 31st street.

55th Street a Dividing Line.

When the territory south of 55th street, which was part of the old village, consisted mostly of farm land and cabbage plots, the territory north of 55th street contained the mansions of the wealthy.

Rumor that a world's fair would be promoted in Hyde Park in 1890 brought the real estate men and builders rushing to the community to reap the profits that were expected to be made through the building of apartment buildings and hotels to accomodate the million persons who would visit the city during the year of the fair.

Mr. Carroll, therefore, points out that many of the historic features of the village disappeared the year of the fair and in their places arose the huge hotels still to be seen on Hyde Park boulevard. The family mansions also gave way to the large apartment buildings that housed the bulk of the fair visitors.

Inevitable Slowing after Fair.

Prosperity reached a high point during the fair, said Mr. Carroll, and the slack in real estate activity that came immediately after the fair was inevitable. This slack did not last long, and a few years later, the many persons who had been visitors to the fair and had decided that it was the best place to live in, had created the demand for more buildings and builders began to erect three story structures that were filled as soon as they were completed.

Since that time there has been no slack in real estate activity and, according to a report from the Chicago Mortgage Bankers' association, Hyde Park has a smaller percentage of vacancies than any other community. Mr. Carroll also cited a report that showed that vacant property was scarce, but that the demand for building sites is active.

Isolation Counted as Asset.

The natural boundaries of the community, Jackson park on the south, Washington park on the west and the lake on the east, isolate Hyde Park from the rest of the city. It is this fact that makes many persons regard it as the ideal residence district. The boundaries are sufficient to keep undesirables from coming into the community, thus tending to safeguard the value of the property in the territory.

Another feature that draws thousands of persons to reside in Hyde Park is the fact that the Illinois Central railroad spent more than a hundred million dollars to electrify the trains and today persons who live in Hyde Park can reach the loop in seven minutes.

"The only thing that I find lacking in the community," said Mr. Carroll, "is the fact there are not sufficient large stores to accommodate the personal and home needs of the thousands of residents in the neighborhood. This is due, I believe, to the fact that the outer drive and the Illinois Central railroad have brought the large stores of the loop almost to our door and therefore there is no necessity for large stores in Hyde Park. I have heard, however, that a large downtown store is planning to open a branch in the community, and I know that within the next few months many of the chain stores will open branches in the stores that are being erected on Lake Park avenue today."

100 YULE TREES ARE ON WAY FOR SOUTH SIDE FETE

Giant Firs Coming from Vermont Forest.

"When Christmas time approached quite young trees were felled, sometimes trees which were neither so old nor so large as this Fir Tree, that never rested, but always wanted to go away. These young trees, which were almost the most beautiful, kept all their branches; they were put upon wagons and horses dragged them away out of the wood.

"'Where are they all going?' asked the Fir Tree.

"'We know that!' chirped the Sparrows. . . . 'Oh! they are dressed up in the greatest pomp and splendor that can be imagined.'

"'. . . Perhaps I may be destined to tread this glorious path one day!' cried the Fir Tree rejoicingly. . . . 'If it were only Christmas now. . . . If I were only among the pomp and splendor.'"

—From "The Fir Tree," by Hans Christian Andersen.

BY ONEY FRED SWEET.

More than a hundred Christmas trees are now on the way from Canada and Vermont to take their place in THE TRIBUNE's huge Christmas tree to be erected at the Midway Plaisance in front of the Fountain of Time.

This announcement was made by Sam Chertok, of Kramer Brothers and Mages, Christmas tree dealers, at the second round table discussion of experts on Christmas tree construction, illumination and decoration held in the English room at the Hotel Sherman.

W. R. Gray of the A. G. Zulfer company, also gave the word that four trees, between thirty and forty feet in height, had been chopped down in their native Vermont and were now en route to Chicago for participation in THE TRIBUNE's arrangement to add Yuletide cheer to folk on the south side.

Trees Here Dec. 10.

Gerhardt Meyne, head of the Meyne Construction company, again acting chairman of the meeting of experts, advised W. E. Bell, mechanical and electrical engineer for the south park commissioners, that the trees would be on the selected spot in the Midway Plaisance by Dec. 10, ready for amalgamation into the one huge tree sixty-five feet high.

Several new faces were to be seen in the group at this week's Christmas tree discussion. Al Mages, Sam Chertok and W. R. Gray—tree men; R. L. Bard of the Commonwealth Edison company; H. H. Lovell of the Illinois Bell Telephone company; C. W. Arnum, of the Mutual Novelty Manufacturing company, and A. M. Ryckoff of the North Shore park district.

Mr. Lovell was not to be baffled by any problems of construction for he has erected similar trees in Chicago for many years. He gave assurance that he would get busy with the ladder scaffolding and other requirements as soon as the trees were delivered.

Mr. Arnum brought along an assortment of icicle spangles which he said were the "life of a tree," reflecting colored lights like so many mirrors and giving the effect of thousands of stars.

New Idea in Decoration.

N. J. Pausback of the Pausback Scenery company presented a display of sample ornaments designed to meet the requirements of trees of gigantic size. Among these was a modern idea in spangles, some of them ten inches in diameter, and of various shapes and colors. Another decorative feature consisted of metal balls in all colors and sizes, each covered with silver sparkles.

J. F. Fisher of J. F. Fisher & Co., electrical contractors held that while he wished to see this year's trees surpass all previous efforts in lighting and decoration, he also hoped to see it embody the features associated with the old fashioned Christmas tree.

In connection with the social program at the tree, Chairman Meyne suggested that it would be splendid idea if the organizations—lodge, church, school, park, playground, etc.—that gather to sing carrols, place the pennants of their organization so that they form a circle about the tree.

There are to be three other TRIBUNE Christmas trees—one in Grant park, one in Garfield park and another in Lincoln park.

Church Women's Club Opens Social Season

Bridge, five hundred, and bunco was played at the first large card party of the season given by the women's club of St. Cajetan church in the St. Margaret hall, 99th and Throop streets, last Wednesday evening. The proceeds of the party will be used for the benefit of the St. Cajetan church, 112th street and Artesian avenue. The Rev. Daniel E. Murphy is the pastor.

Hyde Park Lions to Hear Mrs. Charles Dalrymple

Mrs. Charles R. Dalrymple, president of All Illinois Society of Fine Arts, will be the principal speaker at the weekly meeting of the Hyde Park Lion's club next Tuesday at the Cooper-Carlton hotel. Mrs. Arthur J. O'Neil, vice president of the society of fine arts, will also make an address on art.

Poetess Reads Own Verse to Mothers' Round Table

Mrs. Maurice Britain Rothrock, 6648 Woodlawn avenue, entertained the members of the Woodlawn Mothers' Round Table by reading a group of her own poems from her book, "Autumn Garlands," at a meeting Wednesday afternoon in the clubrooms of the First Presbyterian church, 64th street and Kimbark avenue.

NEWSIE ENTERS OIL PAINTING IN ART EXHIBITION

Hopes Eventually to Study in Europe.

As Frankie Mysliwy sold THE TRIBUNE to the steel workers and the business men of East Chicago, Ind., he couldn't forget the fascination of the drawing lessons he had had in night school. Even the necessity of helping his father, a steel molder, support a big family and the suggestions of his relatives that he stick to practical ambitions could not erase from his memory the joy of putting pencil to drawing paper.

FRANKIE MISLIWY.

And because he couldn't forget, there is included in an exhibition being held by the Polish Arts club at Ashland avenue and Division street an oil painting signed "Frankie, '28." The painting is called "Tatry." It is of a mountain in Poland, which he has never seen, but which was described to him by his art teacher.

Frankie is 19 years old and lives at 4851 Magoun avenue, East Chicago.

Discouraged by Mother at First.

Eventually he confided to his mother something about wanting to take some art lessons from a Polish teacher in East Chicago.

"No, that's not for you, Frankie," she said.

With brushes and oils, Frankie shut himself into his room for a few days. Then he invited the folks in to see what he had done. The folks invited the neighbors in. Maybe it would be all right for him to take art lessons, they agreed.

Right away Frankie arranged with Martin Volpa, Polish decorator, artist, and teacher, for the instruction he had yearned for. That was thirteen months ago.

Young Mysliwy's painting is done largely from his imagination. He paints things his teacher describes to him. There was "Tatry," for instance. And now he's painting a stampede of cattle.

Makes Use of Kodak Picture.

An exception, though, is the picture reproduced on this page. It is of a scene on the Little Calumet river, near his home, Frankie said. He made a kodak picture of the place. Next day he went back with paints, brushes, and an easel. He painted in most of the background and the trees on the spot that day. Then, with his kodak picture, he completed the picture in his bedroom studio at home, he said.

He told of helping his teacher to decorate the new St. Stanislaus church in East Chicago. And with pride he told of a portrait of St. Catherine, painted by him, which hangs in St. Catherine's hospital, East Chicago.

Although he has sold THE TRIBUNE for more than ten years, Frankie has had many other jobs. He has ushered in a movie theater. Recently he served for six months as a butcher. He has done odd jobs of sign painting.

Once he took up boxing and believed he was making a fighter of himself. But about two years ago he got into the ring with Mickey Patrick, and when the socking was over Frankie did not look so fresh as a crocus. He'd better give up his ambition to be a "pug," his mother suggested, and he did.

Quit High School After Month.

Frankie hasn't had much general "schooling."

"I went to high school a month," he explained. "But they didn't talk about anything but sports. I decided it wouldn't do me much good."

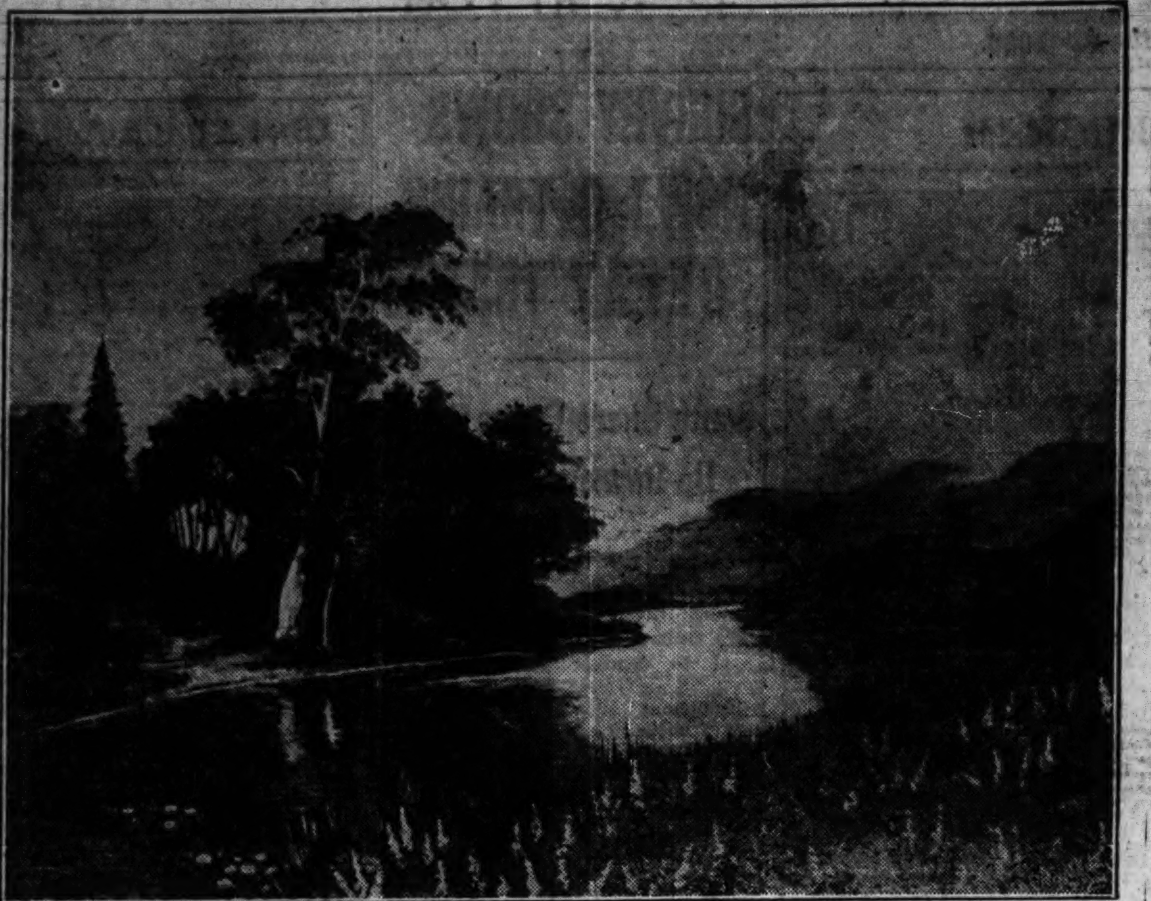
Frankie's future is all filled with hope—the hope of becoming an artist.

"You see, things are better at home now," he said. "My younger brother's working, and my sister got married a month ago. There are seven of us, and my father and mother adopted an orphan so things haven't been easy. They won't need me so much now, and I've got some money in the bank.

"I've made some money out of my paintings, but not much. Sometime ago a man came from Gary, looked at one of my paintings, and offered me $35 for it. But I'd worked on it seventy-five hours, and I thought it ought to be worth $2 an hour. I told him I wouldn't take less than $150, and he went away. Sometimes I take an order before I start painting and paint what the customer wants. Maybe it'll be a California mountain scene. I write away to the railroads for booklets and use the pictures in them for things like that."

With the money he is determined to earn somehow he expects sometime this winter to enroll for a course at the Art institute. And beyond that is his goal of studying in Europe.

NEWSBOY PAINTS BEAUTY SPOT



This picture of a spot on the Little Calumet river was painted by Frankie Mysliwy, 19 years old, newsboy at East Chicago, Ind. Frankie has been an art student thirteen months. One of his paintings is included in an exhibition of the Polish Arts club.

HOMES REVEAL NATURAL BEAUTY OF FLOSSMOOR

Business District Meets Architectural Standard.

That the Chicago region possesses beauty spots for suburban development which cannot fully be appreciated until the homes appear is given demonstration in the modern south side suburb of Flossmoor.

While the Illinois Central started a village on the site of Flossmoor some twenty years back, it was not until five or six years ago that Chicagoans in any great number sought the location, with its rolling hills and patches of woods, as an ideal place from which to commute.

Today the setting or artistic houses, each requiring, under the zoning law, at least a quarter of an acre per home, presents a picture of charm that causes the discoverer of Flossmoor to wonder why the location was not chosen by commuters at a much earlier date.

Former Site of Summer Homes.

Distance, of course, afforded a handicap to development in the old days. Flossmoor is twenty-four miles from the loop. In the past it was a favorite spot for several wealthy Chicagoans who built summer homes there. The lay of the country made it a golfer's paradise. In the adjacent neighborhood are the Flossmoor, Idlewild, Ravinsloe, Calumet, and Olympia Fields golf clubs.

Electrification of the Illinois Central brought forty-four trains a day to the spot and a time schedule that brings it "close to the loop." New homes, ranging in price from $12,000 to $50,000, began to appear among the hills. The owners, in most instances, went in for period architecture—French, Italian, colonial, Spanish, English.

There is a community house, also fitting architecturally into the delightful landscape, where community church services are held every Sunday. An addition to the grade school, built a few years ago, was erected this last fall; a bus conveys the children to and from the building.

Business Street Building Up.

The Flossmoor State bank recently opened in its new home. A new civic center building is under construction. Thus Flossmoor's new business street, careful to retain the same high class of architecture as the dwellings, is coming into being.

Nature has done much for Flossmoor. The architect has found it a paradise for putting into practice his most artistic ideas. The result is a distinctive new south side suburb of unusual charm.

WEALTH IN STAMPS

CALUMET WOMEN HEAR ADDRESS ON WORLD AFFAIRS

Organization Dedicates New Flag.

Members of the Chicago Calumet Women's club presented and dedicated a new flag to the organization and listened to an address on international relations by Mrs. Ralph Webster at a meeting Monday afternoon at the Bessemer park field house, 89th street and South Chicago avenue.

Mrs. Veresta Fisher, president of the club, made the speech that dedicated the new flag, and also made a few remarks regarding international relations.

The group was organized in 1912 by Mrs. Laura E. R. Fischer, who is still one of the active members of the organization. More than 200 women compose the membership of the club today.

Each week the members listen to a speaker on education, art, literature, citizenship, or new books, and after the speaker has completed her address, the members take part in a discussion of the subject.

The organization helps to maintain the South Chicago hospital, the Chicago Women's shelter, and contributes a great deal to the Travelers' Aid fund.

Other officers of the organization are: Mrs. Fred Buckmaster, secretary, and Mrs. Albert Berg, treasurer.

Famed Philatelist

Twenty years ago, a young schoolboy took an interest in stamps and like many youngsters before, him started a stamp collection. That small collection has grown to be the most complete collection of Holland stamps in the world, and the collector, Dr. C. W. Hennan, 7602 Paxton avenue, was recently offered $150,000 for it.

Dr. Hennan has traveled all over the world in his searches for rare specimens. Original proofs from old plates, original etchings from rare stamps, diagrams showing differences in Holland stamps of different dates are all recorded in the 62 volumes that make up the famous collection.

Although Dr. Hennan remains in Chicago to practice medicine, his stamps are continually traveling around the globe to proclaim him one of the great stamp collectors of the age. The collection has won forty gold medals at international stamp exhibitions during the last ten years. The stamps are now being shown at Melbourne, Australia, and Dr. Hennan has just received a cablegram informing him that his collection took the highest honors at the exhibition.

Pound Party Helps Fill Baskets for Christmas

Each member of St. Dorothy circle of Daughters of Isabella who attended the meeting Thursday evening at 7931 South Park avenue, brought a pound or more of some staple food article to aid in packing the Christmas baskets the organization will give to the poor during the holiday week. The group will also hold a Christmas party for the children of the community.

VOICE of the SOUTH SIDE

HE'S IN AGREEMENT.

Chicago, Dec. 5.—I read with great interest of the Illinois Central railroad track depression movement in last Sunday's metropolitan section and as a resident of the south shore community that will benefit by the movement I agree with Morgan L. Fitch, chairman of the committee that presented the plea to the track elevation committee of the city council, who said conditions have come to the point where at least one life a week is lost unnecessarily. It is my belief the Illinois Central railroad officials would consider the cost of depressing their tracks small if by doing so the safety of the south shore residents would be assured. RICHARD MARTIN.

AN EXPLANATION.

Chicago, Dec. 5.—In the Voice of the South Side an article recently appeared wherein the south park commissioners were taken to task for their failure to improve Jeffery avenue. Perhaps a word of explanation will clarify to the citizens of the south side the position of the south park commissioners: Our board did not seek the control of Jeffery avenue; on the other hand the board was importuned by the residents of the street to assume control of the thoroughfare. It took over this control with the understanding that the entire street would be improved by special assessment.

The commissioners now have engineers in the field making a survey of existing conditions. As soon as this survey is completed and the proper estimates prepared a public hearing will be held, and the residents on the street will be given an opportunity to either approve or disapprove of the special assessment proceedings. In view of the fact that the permanent improvement plans are so near at hand the commissioners do not feel justified in spending any large amount of money upon the maintenance of the old pavement.

GEORGE T. DONOGHUE,
General Superintendent.

NIGHT SCHOOL IN ENGLEWOOD TO GIVE PLAY

Under the direction of Ralph J. Halperin, the members of the Englewood night school will present their semester play, "Sure Fire," next Wednesday and Thursday evenings in the school auditorium, 62d street and Stewart avenue.

Early reports from the ticket sale committee indicate that the house on both evenings of the presentation will be well filled. The proceeds will be used to buy new lighting equipment to be used by both the day and evening dramatic classes. According to Margariete Steffel, student business manager, candy will be sold on both evenings and the proceeds from this sale will also be turned into the fund for new lighting equipment.

The players are: Lester Podewell, John Van Osch, Carl Mayer, Celia Kosovske, Ruth Sorensen, Edward Damstra, Edgar Troyer, Joseph Vallens, Marion Blackman, Virginia McKay, Arthur Albertson, Bruce Smith, Bessie Baer, Elizabeth Cogswell, James Nust, Anne Glaze, Mare E. Purcell, Charles Geisler and Howard Rooney.

Sinai Players Present Two Stage Offerings

35TH BIRTHDAY CELEBRATED BY WOMEN'S CLUB

Bryn Mawr Members Present Two Plays.

Members of the Bryn Mawr Women's club celebrated its thirty-fifth anniversary last Monday with an all day meeting and party luncheon in the clubrooms of the Bryn Mawr Community church, 70th street and Jeffery avenue.

During the afternoon, two plays were presented by the members under the direction of Mrs. George E. Q. Johnson, one of the well known dramatic leaders on the south side and a member of the organization. "The Grapes Hang High," by Mrs. Chauncy Palmer Smith, and "Sparkling Lucia," by Irene Jean Crandall, were the plays. The following members took parts: Mrs. A. W. Neilson, Alice Toole, Mrs. H. M. Paddon, Mrs. G. Gordon Fox, Mrs. John T. Stehle, Mrs. Carlie Smith, Mrs. Lewis Thomas and Mrs. Lowell Hait.

Throughout the day the annual ex-service men's sale was held. Articles which patients at Edward Hines Jr. hospital had made were sold among the members to the amount of $250.

$1,000 for Vet's Christmas.

According to Mrs. John Howatt, chairman of the committee in charge of coöperation with war veterans, more than $1,000 will be spent this year in providing these service men with necessities. Last Christmas bathrobes were presented to the boys by the club and this year they will again be given articles which will satisfy some personal need.

On Feb. 5 a card and bunco party will be held, the proceeds to be turned into the fund that pays for the work among war veterans.

The Bryn Mawr Women's club was organized in 1893 during the World's Fair by six residents of the community, who first met with the idea of discussing topics of the day and doing sewing for charity.

With the great increases in population of the community came the steady growth of the club until today, thirty-five years after its first meeting, more than 400 Bryn Mawr women take an active part in the many and varied functions of the club.

Two years ago the junior auxiliary was organized among daughters of the members and they are now meeting as a separate group, presided over by Miss Josephine Winburn, 6822 Jeffery avenue, and actively interested in the mother clubs and many philonthropies.

Maintains Community Center.

One of the most enterprising of these is the South Chicago Community center, 92d and Brandon avenue, which the group organized and has maintained for many years.

More than 250 children are given professional instruction in dramatics, manual training, and sewing at this institution, and it has done a great deal to keep the children of this poor community off the streets and teach them good citizenship and good morals. Children who have not yet attained school age and who are sons and daughters of working mothers are given attention and care throughout the day at the center.

Next Saturday afternoon they will give their annual Christmas party for the community.

Through the employés of the institution the Bryn Mawr club has become acquainted with the needy families of the district and has contributed hundreds of dollars' worth of food and clothing to these poor people. Throughout the winter months coal is also provided for them, and during the holiday season many of the members present baskets of food to the families.

Mrs. Bronson Heads Club.

Mrs. W. T. Bronson, 6800 Ridgeland avenue, is president of the organization and Mrs. R. B. Anthony, 1541 East 68th place, and Mrs. E. S. Pfau, 730 Constance avenue are vice presidents.

The following persons are chairmen of the committees in charge of the various branches of the club's programs: Mrs. R. R. Lumsden, American citizenship; Mrs. O. E. Robinson, American home; Mrs. M. L. Spaulding, art; Mrs. H. V. Cork, civil service; Mrs. R. H. Beard, community service; Mrs. E. C. White, conservation; Mrs. C. O. Melick, education; Mrs. J. C. Flannagan, international relations; Mrs. A. C. H. Esser, law enforcement; Mrs. W. Miller, legislation; Mrs. H. L. Huddleston, literature and library extension; Mrs. H. A. Biossat, music; Mrs. R. G. Lowry, public health and child welfare; Mrs. G. Osgood, public welfare; Mrs. E. G. Rowe, Illinois Club Women's world; Mrs. E. Qualkinbush, junior membership; and Mrs. John Howatt, coöperation with war veterans.

Auxiliary to Meet.

Woodlawn auxiliary of the Oakhaven Old People's home will meet for luncheon tomorrow at the home of Mrs. John Dillon, 6507 Ellis avenue.

The Long Narrow Foot

Feet of this type are supple and stretchy. Ordinary types of shoes are seldom comfortable, for they usually prove too full through the waist and instep, allowing the foot to work forward, cramping the toes, slipping at the heel.

If you have a narrow foot, wear WILBUR COON ARCH FITTERS They are available as long as size 12, and in widths from AAAA to EEE.

CHILD ORCHESTRA OF YALE SCHOOL PLAYS FIRST TIME

The new fourteen piece orchestra of Yale school made its initial appearance last Wednesday when it played "Our Boys" as part of the program for the Yale Parent-Teacher association meeting held in the school auditorium, 70th street and Yale avenue.

The orchestra was organized four weeks ago by Mrs. George A. Jones, a member of the Parent-Teacher association, and has rehearsed only four times, she said. The musical group is composed of children below the sixth grade.

Members of the orchestra are: Albert McKey, Eleanor Jones, Walter Dietzman, Evelyn Chedister, Morris Finder, Myrtle Riley, Myra Murphy, Anne Ruurs, Phillip Waterman, Cleaver Brinkerhoff, William Ruurs, George Walter Jones and Donald Bouchard.

Mrs. J. N. Phelps, principal, was the principal speaker of the meeting and her subject was, "The Value of Parent-Teacher Work."

Other numbers on the program were presented by the children of the first grade, who gave the rhythm musical "Dear Santa Claus," and the leading solos were sung by Bobby Thompson and Vivian Schubert. The children of room 203 presented "The Closed Gate," a one act play. The members of the cast were: Edith Bennet, Eleanor Conly, Lloyd Armour, Bernice Futterer, Irene Nelson, Helen Modden, Sophie Alterman, Clement Guthrie, Kenneth Bucus, Robert Meister, Evelyn Chedister and Keith Bleming.

Historic Washington Is Topic of Talk to Club

The Park Manor Woman's club will hold an all day session next Tuesday in the parish house of Park Manor Methodist Episcopal church, 70th street and South Park manor. Mrs. William F. Mulvihill, 7141 Eberhart avenue, will preside at both the board and business meetings. Luncheon will be served at noon by the Ladies' Aid society of the church, followed by a talk on historic Washington, given by Mrs. W. L. Brown. Mrs. B. W. Beadell, 6457 Indiana avenue, is program director.

Discuss Child Safety.

"Children's Safety" was the subject of a discussion at a meeting of the Ruggles Parent-Teacher association Thursday in the auditorium of the school, 78th street and Calumet avenue.

WOMEN'S GROUP TO HEAR TALK ON INSURANCE

Mrs. Lorraine L. Ferrer, manager of the women's department of the assured estate division of the National Bank of the Republic will speak on "What Every Woman Should Know About Insurance" at the third of the 1928-29 series of financial discussions for Hyde Park women next Thursday afternoon at the University Bank hall, 1354 East 54th street.

Mrs. Ferrer is a director of the Association of Chicago Bank Women, was formerly manager of the women's department of the Mutual Life Insurance company, and, according to Mrs. Ella S. Stewart, who is in charge of the discussions, she is well qualified to talk on the subject she has chosen.

At the social hour that follows the discussion, Mrs. Norris L. Libbetts, 5616 Kenwood avenue, and Mrs. Eric W. Stubbs, 5554 Woodlawn avenue, president of the Hyde Park League of Women Voters, will be in charge of serving the refreshments and entertainment. They will be assisted by Mrs. Edgar B. Tolman Jr., 5525 Blackstone avenue; Mrs. Richard W. Watkins, 5608 Kenwood avenue; Mrs. M. E. Carey, 5552 Kenwood avenue, and Mrs. J. W. Algar, 8130 Evans avenue.

Hirsch Parent-Teachers to Hear Christmas Carols

The Parent-Teacher association of the Hirsch Junior High school will meet at the school, 7740 Ingleside avenue, Thursday afternoon. A program of Christmas carols will be given under the direction of Miss Helen Feder. Miss Adah F. Whitcomb will speak on "Books and the School Library."

EXPECT S. R. O. SIGNS AT PLAY IN MORGAN PARK

High School Club to Give "Hurry, Hurry, Hurry."

Under the direction of Mrs. Harriet Arthur Hecht, director and coach, the Delta Chi players of Morgan Park high school are speeding up rehearsals for the presentation of their play, "Hurry, Hurry, Hurry," on Dec. 13 and 14 in the school auditorium, 110th street and Hermosa avenue.

Past performances given by the players have placed them in high favor among the students of the school and residents of the community, and the advance sale of tickets indicates well filled houses on the nights of the play.

Jack Haliday, leading man, was reared in the show business. His mother was an actress and his father a stage manager for a traveling stock company, and Jack was born on the road. His instruction in acting began when he was a small child.

Club Membership Restricted.

The Delta Chi players were organized three years ago and have a membership of thirty-five students. The club is so popular that, in order to facilitate instruction and participation, the membership is restricted to those students who have ability in acting. A tryout for the club is held every semester.

Their course of instruction consists of the presentation of one act plays from time to time at school assembly programs and community festivals. No text books are used, and the fine points of acting, such as voice, stage entrance and exit, and proper gestures are pointed out by Mrs. Hecht during rehearsals for the one act plays.

Attend Plays in Loop.

The group supplements this form of instruction by attending a play at one of the loop theaters every month.

A different cast will be used each night of the presentation, and a committee of five dramatic instructors will choose the all star cast which will be listed in the school publication the day after the plays are presented.

The players are: Clayton Stafford, Jack Haliday, Morrin Smith, Lyman Gilbert, Willard Morton, William Pierce, Robert Bruce, Anthony Mrozek, Christopher Murray, Henry Barbour, Maurene Frey, Evelyn Johnson, Winnifred Wright, Olive Whitford, Vera Pitkin, Ruth Dujardin, Marion Faulbaum, and Helen Rypkema.

Players in "Hurry, Hurry, Hurry"

These four students of Morgan Park High school will play principal roles in "Hurry, Hurry, Hurry," to be presented Dec. 13 and 14 by the Delta Chi players. Seated: Maurene Frey and Jack Haliday. Standing: Winifred Wright and Robert Bruce. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

South Shore Woman's Club to Hold Charity Party

Preparations are being made by the South Shore Woman's club for its annual charity luncheon and card party, to be held at noon Friday in the Windsor Shore club, 7526 Yates avenue. Mrs. C. F. Greene, chairman of the ways and means committee, has charge and is assisted by Mrs. Frank Hogberg, president, 2825 East 76th street; Mrs. C. W. Henman, vice president, 7602 Paxton avenue, and Mrs. J. F. Stumple, social chairman, 7516 Jeffery avenue. Charities include Washington Home for Crippled Children, and the Borderland School in Oak Forest.

Hold Benefit Movie.

The Oglesby Parent-Teacher association gave its annual movie show benefit Wednesday and Thursday evenings at the Cosmopolitan theater, 7938 South Halsted street. The proceeds were used to swell the charity fund of the organization.

The information is desired for a Michigan ex-service man who asks to find these two relatives of a deceased comrade of his.

Mrs. Bessie Stuart Smith, past national vice president of the auxiliary and present membership chairman of the central area, upon her return from national executive committee meeting of the auxiliary at Indianapolis, Wednesday, reported that the Illinois auxiliary has 4,000 paid-up members for 1929, and it is the intention of state and county auxiliary officers to have Illinois reach the 100 per cent mark before the first of January.

Civil Service post, No. 678, through Michael J. Foley, adjutant, 406 City hall, gives notice that all ex-service men having civil service standing are invited to investigate the personnel of the post. The officers who will command the post for 1929, and who will be installed Tuesday, are: James E. Mangan, commander; John C. O'Brien, John F. Egan and Carl W. Strassburger, vice commanders; Vincent F. J. Schimanek, finance officer; John W. Durkin, sergeant-at-arms, and Michael J. Foley, adjutant.

THE FOUR LEGIONNAIRES

This quartet, known from coast to coast, has the distinction of being the official quartet of the Department of Illinois American Legion, as well as the National American Legion quartet. At the national convention held at Omaha in 1925 and at Philadelphia in 1926, Paris, 1927, and San Antonio, 1928, the quartet won the first prize in competition with other quartets from all over the country. The quartet is composed of Albert E. Price, tenor and past commander of Roseland post, No. 49; Herbert H. Blocker, second tenor, of Chicago Heights post, No. 131; Roland C. Osborn, baritone, of Roseland post, No. 49; Saul B. Kramer, bass, and past commander of Eaton-Priddy post, No. 111. The boys have done unusual work in building up the Illinois department of the American Legion.

WHO SAID:

1. Christmas comes but once a year?—Miss Warren Gaillard, box 51, Dahlonega, Ga.
2. Hold the fort, I am coming?—Catherine Hurtgen, 3811 60th street, Kenosha, Wis.
3. Once a lady, always careful?—(Repeated from two weeks ago. Does anybody know who said it?)

(Answers to the above quotations will appear two weeks from today. Answers to last week's quotations will be printed next Sunday.)

Answers

Following are the answers to quotations previously published:

Quotation—Begone, you are unfit to command. Go and put on petticoats.

Answer—During the war of 1812 Gen. William Henry Harrison was in command of the American army in the west. In May of 1813 he was besieged in Fort Meigs by a British army under Gen. Proctor and a body of Indians under Tecumseh, the great Shawnee chief who had been made a brigadier general in the British army. Some of Harrison's men were captured during a sortie and Proctor allowed the Indians to put them to death. When Tecumseh saw what was going on he rushed between his warriors and their prisoners with his tomahawk raised and stopped the slaughter. "Why do you permit this?" he demanded of Proctor. "I could not control the Indians," said Proctor. "Begone," cried Tecumseh, "you are not fit to command. Go home and put on petticoats."—Mrs. Lydia C. Gosch, 6448 North Claremont avenue, Chicago.

NOTE—Fort Meigs was built by Harrison at the Maumee rapids in northwestern Ohio in February, 1813, three months before the siege began on May 1. Proctor withdrew from the attack on May 9 after American reinforcement arrived at the fort. Tecumseh was killed at the battle of the Thames on Oct. 5, 1813, in which Harrison defeated the British.

Quotation—Off again, on again, gone again—Finnegan.

Answer—In 1897 Strickland Gillilan was city editor and most of the staff of the Richmond (Ind.) Palladium. There were a number of Irish railroad men in the town and Mr. Gillilan set to rhyme an incident related to him by his foreman, one Fitzgibbons. One day when news was scarce he handed in his verse as copy, thus arousing the ire of the printers, as it was in dialect and written on a piece of wrapping paper. The poem is entitled, "Finnigin (not Finnegan) to Flannigan."

Superintindint wuz Flannigan;
Boss av th' siction wuz Finnigin.
Whiniver th' kyars got offen th' thrack
An' muddled up things t' th' divil an' back,
Finnigin writ it t' Flannigan,
Afther th' wrick wuz all on agin.

With characteristic verbosity Finnigin evolved long reports covering a multitude of detail. This was opposed to Flannigan's standard of efficiency, so he admonished the section boss:

Don't do sich a sin agin;
Make 'em brief, Finnigin!

The next time some cars piled up, Finnigin, after clearing the wreck and starting things moving, proceeded to obey:

An' th' shmoky ol' lamp wuz burnin' bright
In Finnigin's shanty all that night.
Bilin' down his repoort, wuz Finnigin!
An' he writed this here: "Musther Flannigan:
Off agin, on agin,
Gone agin.—Finnigin.

—Lewis T. Ross, 4549 Van Buren street, Gary, Ind.

NOTE—"Finnigin to Flannigan" was published in Life later in 1897 and in 1910 was incorporated in a book of Gillilan's verse entitled "Including Finnigin." Gillilan was born in 1869 at Jackson, O. He is a well known writer and lecturer.

Quotation—I deny the allegation and defy the allegator.

Answer—Back in the '80s Edna Lyall wrote "We Two," the story of an atheist, Luke Raeburn. During a religious debate Raeburn takes his abusive opponent to task for wandering from the subject merely to indulge his personal spite. His adversary begins a vigorous protest with: "Mr. Chairman, I denounce my opponent as a liar. I deny the allegation and I scorn the allegator—"

He is interrupted by a shout of laughter, and Raeburn responds with: "My enemies have compared me with many obnoxioius things, but never until tonight have I been called a crocodile."—John Hooks, 1325 West 72d street, Chicago.

NOTE—Edna Lyall was the pen name of Ada Ellen Bagley (1857-1903), an English novelist. "We Two" was published in 1884. Whether the expression originated with the author is difficult to determine. Other readers have attributed it to David Wilmot of Pennsylvania; John Finerty, former Chicago politician; and Edward Harrigan, author and comedian, who used the line in a comedy produced at the Theater Comique in New York City in 1878.

13,000 YOUTHS WILL TAKE PART IN SCOUT SHOW

Jamboree to Be Held on Friday and Saturday.

The entire membership of the Chicago council of Boy Scouts, numbering more than 13,000, will participate in a spectacular jamboree Friday and Saturday nights at the Coliseum as a climax to the roundup that has been in progress since Oct. 1. An elaborate program of fourteen numbers has been arranged for the celebration, which more than 10,000 spectators are expected to attend. Rehearsals for the various acts are now being held in all parts of the city.

Inasmuch as the Chicago council is the largest in the world, the event is attracting not only national but international interest. Officers of the national council and local council, headed by Walter W. Head, national president of the Boy Scouts of America, and James E. West, chief scout executive of the national council, will attend the show.

Pageant to Show Background.

The jamboree will be opened at 7:45 o'clock Friday and Saturday nights with a blare of trumpets announcing the entry of Mr. West and Mr. Head, accompanied by members of the Chicago council executive board. The first scene will be a pageant depicting "The Evolution of Scouting," unfolding by chapters the development from the time of the first crusaders, through the various stages of the knights of old, pilgrims, pioneers, minute men, the nation's defenders in the civil war, men of San Juan hill, the world war sailor and doughboy, and finally the scout of today.

Following this presentation, the grand entry of nearly 14,000 Boy Scouts will take place. In columns of fours, with flags flying and bands playing, the scouts will pour into the arena from three entrances. At a signal the army will rush from the arena to their seats.

The next act will be the investiture by the chief executive or the national president of all new scouts enrolled during the roundup. This will be followed by the presentation of awards to scouts who have advanced in ranking.

Will Demonstrate Work.

The remaining scenes will be demonstrations or exhibitions of scouting, including firemanship, first aid demonstrations, pioneering, sea scouting and other typical scout accomplishments. Two other pageants depicting the "Massacre of Fort Dearborn" and "The Scout Laws" will be given. The jamboree will be brought to a close with a grand finale showing the scouts of all nations and how they are bound together with brotherhood and friendliness. This part of the program is being arranged by the international scout bureau.

Alfred W. Stern is general chairman in charge of the show. He is assisted by the following ranch bosses: I. B. Yates, north shore ranch; Abe Jaffe, west side ranch; Donald Durfey, Calumet ranch; Lloyd Rohrke, south central ranch; R. L. Van Horn, south shore ranch; Henry Lasco, northwest ranch; R. E. Maysack, southwest ranch, and R. A. Lucas, the Douglas ranch boss.

[ANSWERS ON PAGE FIVE.]

Prize Offer for Amateur Photographers

The Metropolitan department of The Tribune will pay $5 each week for the best photograph taken by an amateur. It will pay $3 for the second best and $2 for the third.

Any scene, exterior or interior, around the home, may be entered in the contest; the boys building a snow fort in the back yard or baby taking his first steps; the old, gnarled oak against the gray skies of autumn, or an attractive nook in the living room.

Pictures should be addressed to the Metropolitan Editor of The Tribune Photo Contest. The name and address of the photographer should be written plainly on the back of the print, as well as the names of all persons in the picture. The contest is open only to amateurs and the editor will be the final judge of all entries. Theme, treatment, and clearness of the print will be taken into consideration.

No pictures will be returned.

NICE AND OTHERWISE.

The Man with an Artistic Soul—Were all the people you met there artistic?

RECALLS HICKOK, JAMES GANG AND LINCOLN SLAYING

So. Sider Compares Bad Men, Past and Present.

A story of the picturesque frontier days in the west, when the gun was the law and men shot from the hip, is told by Lew Rothschild, 83 year old resident of the Cooper-Carlton hotel, who was personally acquainted with such personages as Wild Bill Hickok, Jesse and Frank James, Calamity Jane, and Tom Neelis, bad man of Kansas City. Mr. Rothschild believes he is one of the few living men who were present at the assassination of Abraham Lincoln.

"I shall never forget that night in Ford's theater," said Mr. Rothschild. "I recall that a shot rang out and some one shouted, 'The President has been killed!' The next thing I saw was John Wilkes Booth, the assassin, jumping from the President's box. As he fell on the stage he flashed a dagger and cried, 'Sic semper tyrannis!' A horrified cry went up from the audience and panic followed. Every one was kept in the block, which had been surrounded by military police, until 3 o'clock the next morning."

Recalls Booth as Fanatic.

Booth, prior to Lincoln's assassination, was a frequent customer in the clothing store where Mr. Rothschild was employed as a salesman, he said. He remembers Booth as a fanatical young person, who talked too much and always seemed queer.

It was in the days of 1869 to 1871 that Mr. Rothschild made the acquaintance of Wild Bill Hickok, who was then marshal of Abilene, Kas. Mr. Rothschild at that time was proprietor of the clothing store in the town and became a good friend of Wild Bill. He remembers the day when four drunken cowboys, as a result of Wild Bill's order to stop being rowdy, threatened the marshal's life and were shot down with their guns drawn. Mr. Rothschild, however, says that Wild Bill never shot any one unless he had to.

Ridiculed $100 a Night.

He also recalls that he met Wild Bill in Hartford, Conn., when that frontiersman was calling theatrical producers "darn fools" for paying him $100 a night for putting on a shooting exhibition. Mr. Rothschild invited Hickok to his home for dinner, and while he was seated at the dinner table he appeared to be uncomfortable and kept his head down throughout the meal like "a bashful school boy." After the dinner he told Mr. Rothschild that never again would he sit at the same table with eastern women, because they were so different from the women he knew out west.

Women of Abilene did not "high hat" Calamity Jane, the two gun woman of the west, Mr. Rothschild said. He recalls that the "bad woman" never had any intimate friends among either men or women, but townswomen meeting her on the street always had a friendly "Howdy, Jane," for her, and her greeting was correspondingly friendly. It is just probable, said Mr. Rothschild, that Jane's idea of fighting her own battles made it unsafe to "high hat" her. She dressed like a man, chewed tobacco like one, and was quick as any man with her gun.

Tells of Buffalo Bill.

Buffalo Bill was another of Rothschild's early acquaintances. He spoke of him as a protégé of Hickok and told a story of how the two became great friends after Bill championed young Cody while he was being made the butt of several cowboys' jokes.

Mr. Rothschild met the James gang in Smithville, Kas., when he stopped at that town to visit a merchant friend. He was introduced to Jesse and Frank James, Bob Ford, the man who later shot and killed Jesse, and Cole Younger in the back room of the merchant's store. During the years that followed the members of the gang and Mr. Rothschild became great friends, and he expressed the thought that they were far less dangerous than modern big city bandits.

"They never took a mean advantage of any one," he asserted, "and I believe that a woman wearing a million dollars' worth of diamonds might have passed Jesse James unmolested."

SUNDAY, DECEMBER 9

R.H.L. . . . 9:15

THE Linebook is out, and its papa is going to pick his pick of the lucky contribs to be read in the "Air Line" tonight. So many people have bought the Line Book since last Tuesday that R. H. L. is quite sure they would like to hear a few of the excerpts read. 9:15 is the time, hound dogs or no hound dogs.

SYMPHONY 6:00

DR. FREDERICK STOCK, director of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, again presents his world famous organization and continues its series of Sunday evening radio concerts. The fullness of their huge ensemble and the most intricate of passages are brought to your presence at 6 o'clock tonight.

GOLDKETTE . . .

LIKE no other band is this one! Jean Goldkette and his W-G-N Dance Orchestra have taken all the squawks out of dance music and turned it into one of the most exciting forms of melody. Deep tones . . . ultra modern rhythm . . . fine arrangements, all belong to Goldkette. 1:30, 10:15 and 11:15.

CHILDREN'S CONCERT 5:30

A CONCERT, that's what it is. It is a symphony concert planned and played for the children. Don't, however, assume that it is something undignified. Children enjoy it more because the lives of the composers and the occasion for the composition are explained in the announcements, showing that the composers are just nice men and women like us, and there is nothing odd about them. The concert at 5:30.

FOOTBALL

THE pro season ends with one of the hardest fought games of the season. The mighty Green Bay Packers swoop down on the Chicago Bears and will try to tumble them down the long white ladder at Wrigley field to end the season. No matter who gets tumbled, you will hear a play by play account of the struggle from W-G-N, 2:15.

ROBERTS . . .

A FIT soloist to share the hour with Jean Goldkette is Frank Roberts, tenor. He is able to display a most unusual talent as he sings his interesting repertoire of semi-classical songs. Listen at 10:15.

FEDERAL TRADE BODY MAY RULE SOON IN R. C. A.

Monopoly Case Still Is Pending.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 8.—In view of the recent decision of the Supreme court of the United States in refusing to review the so called tube case of the Radio Corporation of America against the receiver for the De Forest Radio company, some action is due in the near future by the federal trade commission.

The trade commission several years ago issued a complaint against the Radio Corporation of America, claiming among other things, that the corporation is a monopoly. That case has never been decided, but it is expected that the motion to dismiss the case, which is now pending before the commission, will be taken up shortly.

In addition to that original case the commission also has before it a complaint which it issued some months ago against the corporation, commonly called the tube complaint. This tube complaint is almost identical with the case in which the Supreme court refused to take further action.

Action Is Expected Soon.

In view of this situation, the commission is due to take action on its tube complaint against the corporation. It is possible that it will issue what is termed a "cease and desist order" against the corporation. That will end the case of the commission in the tube complaint. The corporation will have to obey the order inasmuch as the courts, including the highest court in the land, have already ordered the corporation to cease from what has been termed a wrongful practice.

The commission in its complaint against the Radio corporation in the tube case called attention to the so called "licensing agreements" which it entered into with a large number of radio manufacturers which enabled these manufacturers to use the patents held by the Radio corporation.

The commission makes no complaint on this agreement, but it does object to what is known as article 9 of the agreement, which makes it mandatory upon the manufacturers who have entered the agreement to equip their sets originally with vacuum tubes supplied by the Radio corporation. Up to the time of this agreement a manufacturer could equip his sets with any tubes he saw fit, or none. The commission claims that article 9 constitutes an unfair method of competition under section 5 of the federal trade commission act. This contention has been upheld in the courts, although the action was started by independent manufacturers and not by the trade commission.

May Affect Price of Tubes.

There has been a contention in some quarters that the decision of the Supreme court of the United States in refusing to review the decisions of the two lower courts in which the corporation was enjoined against the practice, that the price of radio tubes would be lowered as a consequnece.

The tubes sold by the Radio corporation are manufactured by the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company, and the General Electric company, and the original vacuum tube patents are said to have been held by these companies with the Radio corporation. However, the original patents have expired.

A decision was rendered against the Radio corporation first by the District court for the district of Delaware and later a decree was entered by the Circuit Court of Appeals for the third circuit, which decree restrained the corporation from carrying out the tube agreement. The corporation then asked the Supreme court to remove the injunction and hear the case on appeal. This was refused, which means that the injunction is permanent, and the corporation cannot now carry out that tube clause.

LITHUANIAN TENOR ON W-G-N TOMORROW NIGHT

Joseph Bobrovich, Lithuanian-American tenor, appears on the program of W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel, tomorrow night at 9:30. Bobrovich was born in Lithuania, and after graduating with honors from the Petrograd Conservatore of Music he studied under the famous Gabel. He accepted an invitation to join the Imperial Opera of Moscow, where he sang until he was forced to flee the bolshevik revolution in Russia to Turkey. He proceeded to Greece and later to France, where he sang on the Riviera.

While on concert tours of the United States Bobrovich attracted much attention from critics in every city, winning favorable comment from all. He has a beautiful, well trained tenor voice, tinged with sadness throughout its extensive range.

Club Board to Meet.

Player Works Squeeze Play to Score Grand Slam in Radio Bridge Game

The fifth of a series of twenty radio auction bridge games will be broadcast from W-G-N, The Chicago Tribune station on the Drake hotel, Tuesday at 3:30 p. m.

The contestants will be Mrs. Catherine A. Streeter of Hollywood, Cal., who not only has the highest standing as a teacher, but is a leader in practically all bridge activities in southern California, playing with Mr. Work against Mrs. Helen M. Hubbard of San Francisco, who, besides her prominence as a teacher, enjoys a national reputation as a solver of auction bridge problems, and Mr. Whitehead.

Following are the advance hands for game five:

Mr. Whitehead.

C—A, K, Q, J.

Followers of this season's radio bridge games, the latest of which was broadcast from W-G-N, the CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel, last Tuesday, are carrying away from each presentation a definite knowledge of how to recognize and handle one or more bridge situations which are muffed by the average player. In this week's game the demonstration was given by the play of Mrs. A. R. Coffin of Indianapolis, a championship player of the American Whist league. Her partner was E. J. Tobin of Chicago, also a league champion.

The hands were: Wilbur C. Whitehead, dealer, south: Spades, Q, 10, 3; hearts, 6, 5, 2; diamonds, K, Q, 9; clubs, K, Q, 10, 6. Mr. Tobin, west: Spades, J, 8; hearts, J, 9; diamonds, A, J, 5, 4, 2; clubs, 5, 4, 3, 2. Milton C. Work, north: Spades, 7, 6, 5, 2; hearts, 8, 3; diamonds, 8, 7, 6, 3; clubs, 9, 8, 7. Mrs. Coffin, east: Spades, A, K, 9, 4; hearts, A, K, Q, 10, 7, 4; diamonds, 10; clubs; A, J.

Mr. Whitehead, dealer, opened the bidding (first hand of rubber) with one club. Even though his club suit consisted of but four cards, his hand was too strong to pass.

Mr. Tobin, west, passed. Although his diamond suit was of five cards, it contained only one quick trick, which, without any high card support in side suits, is not sufficient for even a following or defensive bid. Mr. Work, north, with a Yarborough, of course had to pass.

Bids One Heart.

Mrs. Coffin, east, with a magnificent hand, bid one heart. There was nothing to be accomplished by a higher bid. Mrs. Coffin did not fear adverse bidding. In fact, she would have been glad to have the bidding forced up to a point where she could either make a profitable business double of the adverse bid or else entice a double of her own bid by gradually raising it.

However, Mr. Whitehead passed, as he had shown the full strength of his hand by his initial bid. Mr. Tobin also was forced to pass, although, holding but two cards of his partner's suit, he would have denied her suit had he been able to do so. The weakness of his diamond suit made a take-out bid impossible. Mr. Work also passed. Therefore Mrs. Coffin became the declarer, with her contract one heart.

Mr. Whitehead led out his king of clubs, the correct lead from a king-queen suit against a suit declaration; and Mr. Tobin spread his hand for dummy. From it Mrs. Coffin played the 2 of clubs; Mr. Work played the 7; and declarer won the trick with the ace.

Pausing a moment to plan the play of her hand, Mrs. Coffin could see an easy little slam, obtainable by ruffing her two small spades in dummy, after taking her ace and king, unless one of the adversaries held only one spade. These four tricks, her six solid trump tricks, dummy's ace of diamonds and her own ace of clubs would leave her only one loser, the jack of clubs.

Wants Grand Slam.

But Mrs. Coffin was not content with a small slam. She felt that a grand slam was possible, because the bidding had shown that the king-queen of diamonds must lay in Mr. Whitehead's, south's, hand. These two cards would form the only possible side quick trick which he must have held in order to bid clubs initially on a king-queen club suit. Mrs. Coffin therefore saw the opportunity for a "squeeze" play that would give her a grand slam.

Proceeding on this basis, Mrs. Coffin led her ace and king of spades to tricks two and three. Mr. Whitehead played the 3 and 10; dummy the 8 and jack; Mr. Work the 2 and 5. Mrs. Coffin continued with the 4 of spades; Mr. Whitehead dropped the queen, dummy trumped with the 9 of hearts; Mr. Work played the 6 of spades.

The fall of the queen of spades had made declarer's 9 of spades good; therefore there was no need to use dummy's second trump for ruffing. Accordingly declarer led Dummy's jack of hearts; Mr. Work played the 3; Mrs. Coffin overtook the jack with the queen; and Mr. Whitehead played the 2. Mrs. Coffin then led five straight heart tricks, with the purpose of forcing embarrassing discards from Mr. Whithead.

Thus at the beginning of the eleventh trick, declarer, east, was left with the good 9 of spades; the 10 of diamonds, and the jack of clubs. Mr. Whitehead, south, had been forced to discard down to his king, queen of diamonds and the good queen of clubs. Dummy retained the ace, jack of diamonds, and the 5 of clubs. Mr. Work held the 7 of spades and the 8, 7 of diamonds.

The Squeeze Works.

Declarer then led her good 9 of spades, which put Mr. Whitehead into difficulty.* He was fairly certain that the declarer had the jack of clubs, since his partner had played th lowest of at least three clubs on the first trick, and had since discarded the 8 spot. Therefore, if he discarded his queen of clubs, he doubtless would present the closed hand with a trick. On the other hand, if he discarded a diamond, Dummy's ace and jack of diamonds would take the last two tricks. His only chance was the faint hope that his partner, Mr. Work, might hold the jack of clubs. Therefore Mr. Whitehead discarded the 5 of clubs; and Mr. Work played the 7 of spades.

Mrs. Coffin then led the jack or clubs, dashing Mr. Whitehead's hopes of breaking her grand slam. He was forced to discard his queen of diamonds; dummy discarded the jack of diamonds, and Mr. Work the 7.

Declarer then led her 10 of diamonds, winning this last trick with dummy's ace, and achieving a grand slam, with its bonus of 100 points. She also scored 90 for honors—four in her hand and fifth in partner's—and 63 for tricks.

After the play of the hand at auction bridge was concluded, Mr. Work devoted the rest of the broadcasting period to a discussion of its bidding at contract. He considered it a moderately close question as to whether south, the dealer, should bid one club or pass.

A Likely Look.

Quoting Mr. Work's own words: "Unquestionably more caution should be exercised in bidding four card suits in contract than in auction; but the south hand has what I might call a 'likely look.' King, queen, ten, even at the head of four, is a worth-while combination, and with a king, queen, nine in one suit, and queen, ten with one small in another, I believe the hand is too strong to pass even at contract. I would favor bidding one club, but I would not criticise a pass.

"West and north would pass, regardless of whether south bids or passes, and east under either condition would bid four hearts. East would count upon six tricks in the heart suit, the ace and king of spades, and the ace of clubs—nine tricks; she also has a fair chance of making another spade. It takes much less in the west hand to insure the extra trick than would justify west in jumping to four if east bid only three hearts. For example, a jack and ten of spades in the west hand would insure three spade tricks and game; therefore the soundness of the four heart bid cannot be questioned.

"Some players with west's hand would be tempted to overcall the four hearts with five diamonds, with the idea that it is proper to show an ace for slam purposes whenever the partner bids for game. In this case it would be most advantageous for east and west to go slamming, but with no other high cards to support the ace, west would not be justified in doing so. It is absurd to contend that it is possible to foresee and to bid for a slam every time a hand turns up with which one can be made."

THREE FAMOUS STARS ON KENT HOUR TONIGHT

The Atwater Kent Radio Hour tonight will be presented by three nationally known artists, Hulda Lashanska lyric soprano, Toscha Seidel, the Russian violinist, and Wilbur Evans, bass-baritone and winner of first place in a radio audition, last year. It will be heard over W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel.

The orchestra under the direction of Josef Pasternack will open the concert with the popular "Epithalamium" from Lohengrin which raises the curtain on the third act. Other orchestral numbers are the Adagietto, from L'Arlesienne Suite of Bizet, and Florindo, from the Carnival Venitien of Burgmein.

Mme. Lashanska, who has appeared as recitalist in every large city in the United States, will sing "Ever Since the Day," from Louise, considered the most beautiful in the whole range of modern opera, "On the Wings of Song," Maria's Weigenlied, "Over the Steppe," Wings of Night" and "The Sweetest Flower."

Seidel now in his thirtieth year, is a native of Odessa. His concert tours have taken him around the world. Seidel is opposed to modern music, his favorite composer being Brahms, whose "Hungarian Dance No. 1" will close the violin numbers.

Wilbur Evans made his operatic debut with the Philadelphia Operatic society in Martha since winning the 1927 autition. He will open his concert with "Solomon's Aria" from Guonod's Queen of Sheba, followed by Nocturne, Fields O'Ballyclare, Boots.

Dutch Appropriate Funds for Short Wave Station

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 8.—The Dutch government has provided in its budget for an appropriation of $150,000 for the construction of a short wave radio station for communication with America.

CINCINNATI WILL USE RADIO TO NAB CRIMINALS

Will Safeguard City with Wireless Net.

Cincinnati, O., Dec. 8.—Safeguarding the city by a radio net with which escaping criminals may be apprehended, is part of a scheme being worked out by Cincinnati city officials.

"The plans for the radio installation which is to be made by the city of Cincinnati are as yet not sufficiently developed for us to be able to state definitely just what will be done," G. C. Smith, executive assistant to Col. C. O. Sherrill, city manager of Cincinnati, stated.

'It is planned to erect a broadcasting station that will operate on a high frequency wave, probably the same wave as that used by Detroit. Receivers will be placed in all police and fire stations and, in addition, in all police automobiles, patrol wagons, and the like.

"The radio will not be used for fire service because the city already has a most complete installation for this work and improvements to the extent of over $100,000 are now planned in the fire telegraph department. Probably the greatest benefit of the radio will be noticed in connection with emergencies where it is necessary to muster a large force of men at one particular place, or where it is necessary to throw a net around some section of the city to prevent the escape of criminals.

"We have had several occurrences in the last few months where we would have been able to apprehend those responsible for criminal acts had we been able to spread such a net. With the ordinary police communication system, it is not possible to get in touch immediately with the men in the automobiles, and, of course, much of our patrolling is done with the officers in cars. We find that it is easier to cover beats in this way."

Inside the Loud Speaker

BY QUIN RYAN.

From the radio announcer's scrap book of his own verses:

THEN THERE was this oddity, written in 1921:

FROM A FATHER'S DIARY.

1907.

April 1. Today is Helene's birthday, the dear!
Just six years old today.
I watch her as I write, her silly little books in her lap, studying the pictures, for we cannot induce her to become interested in reading.
An uncontrollable sprite, Helene!
Prattling in baby talk all the day.
Her dresses only to her knees, and her stockings terminating some inches below.
Helene's hair is bobbed, for she willed it so.
She would rather toddle about than sleep at night.
When Helene wants anything—and she wants everything—she cries and sulks irresistibly—and she gets it.
Sitting on men's laps promiscuously.
Helene, the dear!

WHEN BUILDING activities were resumed some years ago, after a long lull, there was "Bricks":

Oh, the tinkle of the bricks,
Yellow bricks!
I could ululate or how-l,
For today I heard a trowel
Acting murderous and fou-l
To some bricks!
Years ago we heard it yearly,
Driving people crazy—nearly—
Flitting, hitting, splitting merely;
And the tinkles and the chinkles
Gave the brow a pair of wrinkles,
Maybe six.

From the bricks, bricks, bricks, bricks,
Bricks, bricks, bricks,
From the sounding of the pounding
Of the bricks!

But today it seemed an anthem
As I heard a mason plant them—
Oh, the tinkles, I could chant them!—
Building bricks!
When the good old fashioned builders
Quit their quest for yens and guilders—
'Though the tinkling sound bewilders,
How it sticks!—
And resume, as builders order—
Hauling yellow bricks and mortar,
Can't you see the rent hogs sorter
In a fix?

For it means the end is near
Of the landlord profiteer.
In a fix—oh, gee!
Yellow bricks, ah oui!
And the writing on the wall
Which will prophesy his fall,
Man, will look like this,
Simply this, I wis:

Federal Radio
AMERICA'S FINEST SMALL RADIO
in every respect
As fitting additions to its exquisite line of quality radios—generally recognized as America's Finest—Federal has recently added the new "H" models—unusually compact A. C. Receivers—America's finest small radio.
The small in size, these new models carry on the Federal tradition for dependability, cabinet beauty, general performance and remarkable tone quality made possible by Federal's exclusive patented ortho-sonic feature. Only long telephone manufacturing experience could make possible such an outstanding product as Federal in an industry as new as Radio.
A home demonstration will be arranged without obligation.
Federal is a pioneer broadcaster as well as a pioneer radio manufacturer.

Davis
A-C RADIO
DUO-DYNAMIC
PATENT APPLIED FOR LIVIN ONES
Beautifully carved, inlaid, Spanish type Cabinet, fitted with Davis Duo-Dynamic.
What the DUO-DYNAMIC is—
The Duo-Dynamic is a speaker construction with diaphragms arranged for rapid vibrations and slow vibrations separately, thereby eliminating the loss of very high or very low tones, delicate tones and overtones. Unlike other speakers, the Duo-Dynamic enables you to get all the tones even when extremely high and extremely low tones are broadcast simultaneously.
Here is Radio at its best. Now you can hear those elusive tones hitherto lost to the radio listener. The exclusive Duo-Dynamic principle enables you to obtain realistic radio reception. You hear living, breathing voices—all of the band or orchestra, not merely part of it. Davis Radio engineering is truly revolutionary.
BEAUTIFUL CABINETS
Modern in every respect, designed to conform to artistic and refined taste, these cabinets are in keeping with the ideals of foremost home furnishing experts.
A Davis Model for Every Purse—Liberal Terms
Davis Radios are reasonable in price. Any Davis dealer will arrange terms to suit you.

PECANS FOR CHRISTMAS

Wholesale Prices
Direct from Growers.

This year, buy fresh Pecans direct from the orchards. There are still a lot of 1926 and 1927 Pecans [grief pecans] in the hands of retailers. Texas Pecans are noted for their superior flavor and good keeping qualities. They are better this year than usual. Pecans are a food, not a luxury. Nutritive value considered, they are less expensive than butter, eggs, bacon or ham. An ideal health food for both adults and growing children. At these low prices you can use them generously for baking bread, cakes, cookies; for salad dressings, candy and salting. Encourage children to eat them freely. Order direct from us and save money and be assured of fresh nuts direct from the orchard.

Wholesale Delivered Prices by Prepaid Express.

Six sizes to choose from: Small size runs 120 to 140 pecans to the pound; medium size, 100 to 120 to the pound; large size, 80 to 100 to the pound; extra large, 70 to 80 to the pound; jumbo, 55 to 70 to the pound; super jumbo, 35 to 55 to the pound.

WANTED—MALE HELP.

Salesmen, Solicitors, Etc.

AUTOMOBILE SALESMEN,

ATTENTION.

HERE'S AN ALL WINTER JOB.

Mr. L. has sold automobiles for ten years. Three months ago his firm went broke and he was out. He came with us and for the month of December we will pay him over $500.

Mr. M. has averaged ninety dollars a week including bonus ever since he joined this organization. He previously sold a well known car handled on the South Side.

The manager of this branch was in the automobile business over twenty years. The sales manager had a car agency in Milwaukee, the business manager was in the service department of a large Detroit factory. Automobile men seem to fit into this business.

This is an all the year around business. December is our biggest month. Men are never laid off because of slack season. The earnings in January are as good as June. That makes it easier on the whole family, doesn't it? It's tough on the folks when work isn't steady.

The work offers opportunity for advancement. Every manager in our vast organization has worked his way up. Under this Chicago branch alone we have fourteen division branches and in the past few months have promoted twenty-one men to managerial positions.

As this ad was being written, Mr. G., a former carpenter phoned that he had averaged $21 a day so far this week. He made $550 last month and in the first two years with us saved $8,400.

For the month of October, eighteen salesmen in one office in this Chicago territory averaged $270 per man for the entire selling force. Is there any other force of men anywhere earning such an average.

Last week a doctor earned $125, an electrician $102, a truck driver $138, a washing machine salesman $161, a farmer $92, a machinist $69, a preacher $89. Every walk of life is successfully represented in this organization.

Any man who will start with us, do as we tell him, work hard, use his head, will make a minimum of $75 per week and can make two or three times that amount.

The work is pleasant, the business dignified and the position permanent. This office was established in one room in this building five years ago. We now occupy the entire second floor and a part of two others, and men who started with us 6 years ago are still on the job.

Our company is a sixteen million dollar corporation with branches in all principal cities. Our product is advertised in magazines of national circulation and is one that has a field as wide as that of the automobile.

Men between 25 and 45, with or without previous selling experience, honest, good appearing, and willing to work, will be agreeably surprised at the genuineness of the opportunity if they will call and get the particulars any time Monday. If out of town, write.

J. D. GALLAGHER, ROOM NO. 202,

REAL ESTATE SALESMEN.

If you are not making the money that you would like to make, come to our North Shore office and let us talk with you.

Our new SALESMEN'S CO-OPERATIVE SYSTEM is actually making money for the salesmen as well as for us.

We realize that many of the real estate salesmen heretofore have not been making the money they wished. We have solved the problem. Our salesmen last month had the biggest month of the year. Talk with our salesmen as well as with us and you will be thoroughly convinced that it pays you in dollars and cents to be connected with an old, established company of high standing, with a waiting clientele, with property located on the very best rapid transit and with a company that has a SALESMEN'S CO-OPERATIVE SYSTEM perfected.

At this time we have room for two high grade experienced men and three inexperienced men and we can put those men "in the money."

SALESMEN.

This advertisement has never appeared before. It offers a genuine opportunity on an entirely new proposition.

The A. W. Shaw Co., the largest publishers of business literature in the world, is marketing today for the first time a new service that is sold to retail merchants and industrial executives. This represents the result of 15 years' research work in the retail and industrial fields. This undoubtedly is the greatest service that has ever been offered to American business men.

In this connection we require the services of 15 high grade salesmen who have had actual experience calling on merchants and executives to cover this territory.

We want men with actual sales experience, preferably those who have sold intangibles. To those who qualify we will pay a starting salary and liberal commission with wonderful opportunity for quick advancement. For interview see A. C. Croft, 660 Cass-st., Chgo.

SALESMEN.

Men, 20-40 years. Must be forceful, of good appearance, and able to finance themselves for 30 days. If you are accustomed to making $5,000-$8,000 yearly it will pay you to investigate. A clean, dignified business with unlimited possibilities. Even a moderate start will insure $50-$100 per week. From those who are successful we shall choose division managers. Not Real Estate, Insurance, or Books. Apply 328 S. Wells, Room 1214. Open evenings until 9.

A BETTER POSITION FOR SALESWOMEN

is now open at Bartlett's, where only the highest type of men and women are accepted for sales work. Applicants must be over 25 yrs. of age, be well recommended and willing to follow instructions. Our saleswomen are especially trained by veteran executives, who give you full co-operation and help beginners close sales. A position here is permanent, with every opportunity for advancement to the right people. Thirty years in business at the same address means thousands of satisfied customers and repeat sales, which means steady work for salespeople. Even beginners without sales experience will be put on salary and commission if they qualify for our standard of service and can convince us that they sincerely want to succeed with a successful firm. Apply in person Monday, 10 a. m. to 5:30 p. m., to employment department.

REAL ESTATE LOANS.

SECOND MORTGAGE LOANS

The best suggestion we can make to any property owner who desires a second mortgage is to shop around at half a dozen or more places to be convinced that the rates charged by the Chicago Morris Plan Bank as agent are not only the bedrock rates, but they are at least 25% lower. You may observe that there are some very low rates quoted but attached to the rate are certain rather rigid requirements, and if you cannot meet these requirements the rate goes up.

The rates charged by the Chicago Morris Plan Bank as agent are flat: that is to say 6% interest and a commission which figures out at:

$35 per $1,000 for 1 year.
65 per $1,000 for 2 years.
90 per $1,000 for 3 years.

Salesman Distributor
NEW YORK CORPORATION WANTS PRODUCER.

Repeat business assured. $1,000 required for stock of fast moving merchandise. Our proposition will stand most rigid investigation. Our field manager will work with the man we pick one week to get him organized, turning over a live wire salesman we now have on the territory and a plan for your continued operations.

Man wanted will net $6,000 per annum and will increase as we grow.

Here is your opportunity to be connected permanently with a nationally known organization, get into an active field where the product is rather new but has been tried and received cordially, where the possibilities for a big distrbution are proven facts, where you are under exclusive contract with a young live wire organization. Many nice established accounts.

Territory, state of Illinois to start. If you are between the ages of 25 and 40—having ability to hire and train Specialty Salesman, have successfully sold Specialty lines for at least five years, ready to start January 1st or sooner, write in detail stating all your qualifications.

Only those who write will be considered. Information received will be treated confidentially. A. Obstfeld, Hotel Morrison.

STUDEBAKER'S PRE-CHRISTMAS CLEARANCE

SHREWD BUYERS

See Our Great Values Today!

The specials offered below are considerably UNDERPRICED and will be sold immediately at our low figures.

No matter what you buy, you get the benefit of the famous Studebaker Used Car Pledge that guarantees 5 days' free driving trial.

STUDEBAKER SEDAN. Special 6 that we sincerely believe is an exceptional value. The finish is as bright as a new dollar, and the upholstery is expensive mohair. The tires have little mileage and the equipment includes Irving shutter front, heater, spare tire, bumpers, etc. This is an ideal car for the winter. Only $185.

DODGE SEDAN. Easily worth twice the price we are asking. Has excellent performance and many valuable extras. This car will positively not remain long at $225.

BUICK TOURING. This is probably the best open car buy in Chicago. It's in dandy mechanical shape and the appearance will please you. Reduced special for this clearance to $145.

DURANT SEDAN. Equipped with heater, bumpers, trunk, spare tire, etc. Has a good running motor. It's priced at $145, but is certainly worth a whole lot more.

REO SEDAN. Equipped with heater, trunk, bumpers, etc. Attractive original finish; runs like clock work. One of our best buys at $245.

WILLYS-KNIGHT CLUB SEDAN. Equipped with trunk, snubbers, bumpers, etc. The performance is smooth and quiet. For $195 this Willys-Knight cannot be duplicated anywhere.

STUDEBAKER BROUGHAM. Special 6 that will give you excellent satisfaction. Has handsome upholstery, nice original finish and the extras are heater, trunk, bumpers, spare tire, etc. Runs well. Today, $165.

AUBURN SEDAN. Here is a late model straight 8 that we've priced at $685 for quick sale. It has 4 whl. brakes, snubbers, Balcrank bumpers, etc. The motor could not be improved, and this Auburn is the last word for classy appearance. See it at once.

BUICK VICTORIA. Recent 4 pass. coupe with 4 whl. brakes, driving light, spare tire, bumpers, snubbers, heater, etc. A thorough inspection and demonstration will prove conclusively that this Buick actually looks and runs like a brand new car. A real buy at $585.

STEARNS-KNIGHT BROUGHAM. Unusually clean throughout. Traded in at a low price and we're willing to pass on the saving to you. Has excellent tires and the equipment includes spotlight, bumpers, shutter front, spare tire etc. Dandy mohair upholstery. A remarkable buy at $685.

STUDEBAKER COMMANDER. At $885 we don't believe there's a new or used car anywhere to equal this recent 5 pass. sedan. Was only owned a short period and it was in storage 50% of the time, while the family was in Europe. Now it will give new car satisfaction. Expensive mohair upholstery, beautiful finish and tires are excellent; 4 whl. brakes, snubbers, bumpers, spare tire, etc.

NASH COACH. A prominent business man left it with us to sell and told us to apply the sales price on the purchase of a new Studebaker "8." We're anxious to make immediate delivery on his new car, so we marked this Nash at a low figure, so it will be disposed of immediately. Appearance is attractive and the motor is A1; 4 whl. brakes and many extras. Today, $485.

HUPMOBILE SEDAN. This Hup is a beauty. Compare it with Hupmobile selling for $250 more and you'll find they do not equal this car. Finish is a pretty blue; equipped with 4 whl. brakes, snubbers, spare tire, etc. Clearance price is $485.

ESSEX COACH. 1927, that we believe is the best Essex value in Chicago. It's a beauty and the engine is smooth and quiet. Shutter front, snubbers, bumpers, spare tire, etc. You can make a big saving at our price on $485.

OLDSMOBILE SEDAN. Only driven a short time and now it will give new car satisfaction. 4 whl. brakes, trunk, snubbers, bumpers, spare tire, etc. Has excellent rubber; worth considerably more than our special price of $495.

PACKARD ROADSTER. Late model straight "8" that's as snappy and attractive looking car as you'll find on the Chicago streets. The motor is smooth and powerful. The car was traded in by a South Shore sportsman and after a personal examination you'll agree he kept it in topnotch condition. 4 whl. brakes, windshield wings, snubbers, bumpers, spare tire, etc. Today, $859.

STUDEBAKER DICTATOR. Here is a remarkable buy. It's a late model 5 pass. sedan. A well known attorney owned this in conjunction with two other cars, so he gave this Dictator very little mileage. It's absolutely like new today. Equipped with 4 whl. brakes, snubbers, spare tire, bumpers, etc. Special for $795.

WEEK'S BUILDING TOPS YEAR AGO, FIGURES SHOW

New York, Dec. 8.—(AP)—Large construction projects that reached the proposed stage last week showed a substantial increase in money value, compared with the corresponding week a year ago, McGraw-Hill Construction Daily reports. The total was $86,350,000 for the whole country, against $65,520,000 in the corresponding 1927 week. A gain in public projects, chiefly road construction, offset a decline in commercial building.

Contracts awarded in the United States on heavy construction and engineering projects in the first eleven months of 1928 totaled $3,341,488,000, against $2,875,922,000 for the corresponding 1927 period, Engineering News-Record reports. November contracts totaled $806,209,000, which compares with $257,322,000 in November, 1927.

DRY GOODS.

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—(AP)—Chambrays were advanced a half cent a yard. The largest eastern lines of cotton and part wool blankets were opened for the fall at deductions varying from 2½ to 10 per cent. The demand for the day was quiet. Burlap resales to Calcutta market was the chief feature of the week, local trading being quiet. Wool goods stiffened in price a little. Silk goods were in moderate demand for spring, novelties leading.

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

Comparatively little interest was taken by the local grain traders in outside markets yesterday. Wheat traders continue decidedly mixed in their views, and a majority of operators are not inclined to make a decided stand on either side until there are developments of a decided character or the market gets out of the rut in which it has been for the last four months. The disposition on the part of pit traders is to take the selling side on all upturns, feeling that there will be sufficient hedging pressure from the northwest and scattered liquidation to bring about a lower range. Price changes in outside markes for the day were not sufficient to cause a change in views on the part of local professionals.

With a continuation of favorable weather corn traders are inclined to look for an increase in the movement of cash grain from the country, and while the producers have shown a tendency for some time past to hold back grain on the breaks, there is a feeling that larger arrivals will be witnessed in the immediate future and the extent of the demand will to a large extent determine the trend of futures.

Milling and baking tests made by the Dominion Grain Research laboratory and the Canadian wheat pool confirm findings that the No. 4 and No. 5 grades of Manitobas this year make a very good baking quality of flour. The frost damage was largely external. However, the pool finds that the No. 6 grade does not make a good quality of flour. It is pointed out that the discount in the price of the lower grades of wheat is due to the large supply. It is said that many mills are including an unusually large proportion of the No. 4 and No. 5 grade in their mix in recognition of the exceptionally good milling quality.

Imports of Canadian wheat in bond by American mills for grinding into flour for export for the period of July 1 to Nov. 17 aggregate 8,709,000 bu, compared with 5,576,000 bu last year.

First trade in cash grain in the new board of trade was made by Lamson well was chief inspector. The grain corporation, a car of No. 3 white oats selling at 46¾c.

There was less corn available in the United States on Dec. 1 this year than in 1927, according to an analysis of the Nat C. Murray-Clement Curtis company report on consumption. Consumption to Dec. 1 from the new crop was 435,000,000 bu, or 50,000,000 bu in excess of the previous year, while the total crop and carryover at the beginning of the season was only 47,000,000 bu larger.

Visible supply of wheat in Canada in all positions on Nov. 30, exclusive of stocks in farmers' hands, is estimated at 191,200,000 bu. Deliveries at interior points in the three provinces to date aggregate 363,158,000 bu.

Amongst the numerous relics discovered in the old Board of Trade building was an official sample of No. 2 hard winter wheat which was inspected by the state grain department about 25 years ago, when J. E. Bidwell was chief inspector. The grain was in excellent condition.

Export demand for wheat at the seaboard continues to be reported as light, but there is much more business passing than is being claimed, according to intimations received from Winnipeg. Liberal quantities of Manitobas have been taken of late by both Atlantic and Pacific ports. No. 3 Manitoba in Liverpool was quoted yesterday at equal to $1.45½ per bu, or 3⅝c over Duluth No. 1 northern.

Government final estimate on the 1928 crops will be given to the trade next Thursday at 3 p. m. Chicago time. The estimate on winter wheat acreage for the 1929 crop will be issued on Dec. 19 at 2 p. m. Chicago time.

Hogs on the week-end session held firm at the recent upturn, with the price range close to the narrowest point on record. Extreme top and general average prices were only 10c apart, at $8.90 and $8.80, respectively. Offerings cleared quickly and only 2,000 pen holders were left at the close. With the exception of the extreme top which stands 10c under the previous week, hogs are largely in line with a week ago.

Considering the immense supply of hogs unloaded on the market this week, prices held up remarkably well, the week's general average at $8.70 comparing with $8.60 last week, with $8.45 a year ago and with $11.75 two years ago. Arrivals at 235,700 were largest since last February.

Weights were heavier, the week's estimate at 235 lbs, comparing with 234 lbs, a week ago and with 228 lbs a year ago, when corn was not as plentiful as this year. Outsiders took only 12 per cent of arrivals, against 15 per cent last week and 27 per cent a year ago. There was a decline of 1@2c in fresh pork loins, which are selling 4@9c under a month ago.

Cattle receipts last week at 58,700 were only moderate for this time of the year, but carried a liberal number of cheaper grades, which helped to pull the week's general average price down to $12.95 against $13.55 the previous week and $13.75 a year ago. Cattle receipts so far this month are running smaller than a year ago. The December total in 1927 was smallest for the month since 1898. Prime 1,330 lb steers topped at $17.50, with 993 lbs yearlings at $17.25, against $17.85 for steers and $17.75 for yearlings last week.

Lamb Market Advances.

Lamb prices advanced during the week, in face of the largest supplies since week ending Nov. 3. The week's general average price at $13.70 stands highest since the middle of September, comparing with $13.25 the previous week and $13.85 a year ago. Aged sheep averaged $6.25, highest since middle of August. Top fed western lambs reached $14.50; natives, $14.40; yearlings, $12.00; two year old wethers, $9.50, and old ewes, $7.50. An advance of 1@2c in fresh lamb did much to offset the increase in receipts.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 24,000 cattle, 60,000 hogs, and 30,000 sheep, against 24,651 cattle, 59,055 hogs, and 28,801 sheep, a week ago, and 21,515 cattle, 68,204 hogs, and 23,901 sheep, the corresponding day a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 50,000 cattle, 200,000 hogs, and 100,000 sheep, against 58,758 cattle, 230,441 hogs, and 95,731 sheep a year ago.

The Chicago Tribune is setting new circulation records every month and . . . more than ever is able to do your want ad job alone!

NEVER in all its history has Chicago Tribune circulation, daily and Sunday, gone rocketing upward as it is soaring now. From 825,000 daily in September—a new circulation record for American standard size newspapers—the Tribune's daily circulation leaped to 841,000 in October—another record. And in November it soared still higher to the amazing figure of 857,000

DAILY NET PAID

The Tribune's Sunday circulation, after notching an all-time high of 1,207,000 in November, on the first Sunday in December surged upward to more than

1,250,000

SUNDAY NET PAID

And it's going higher week by week!

Every new Tribune reader means another prospect for your want ad. Long known as Chicago's most productive want ad medium, the Tribune now pays out so well that Chicago gives it more want advertising than all the other newspapers combined! More than ever, the Tribune is able to do your want ad job alone. Whatever you want, call Superior 0100—Adtaker—and let the World's Greatest Want Ad medium produce for you!
